I would advise under God, as his servant, that United Brethren everywhere take the Christian Cynosure, because it is raised up of God to battle against what has been truthfully called the devil's most powerful engine to drag the churches down from Christ. A reader of the Cynosure becomes acquainted with the best men and women in the different denominations, and it is a great pleasure to read the letters of such men as Pres. Blanchard, J. P. Stoddard, H. H. Hinman and many other excellent Christian men and women that are the instruments in the hands of God to shake the powers of darkness. Spirit seems to commune with spirit, and you can feel the glory of God in the soul. When the Lord's reform work moves and when we walk with the Lord as we should and have our moral character fashioned more and more after the character of Jesus Christ on all questions of moral reform, we may look for the showers of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

CYRUS SMITH.

PITH AND POINT.

THE TRICK-SHOW LODGE.

Without a meal I can endure,
But not without the Cynosure.
It verily appears to me
That other such tom-foolery,
As practiced by Freemasonry
No other eyes did ever see.
Boys, sticks for horses ride around,
And dogs that chase their tails are found;
These things are foolish, it is true,
But things more foolish, Masons do.
Bibs are for babies, not for men,
And why should men be babies then?
But better be like boys or dogs,
Or wallow in the mud like hogs,
Than thus to let their manhood down,
Playing buffoon in every town.

SEND ME ALL YOU CAN.

I am doing all I can in this work. I have distributed over ten thousand pages of tracts, one hundred Weed pamphlets, beside papers and other books the last year. I gave the Rehoboth Congregational Sabbath-school nine Anti-masonic books. They were six months considering whether to take them or not, and in the mean time one of their church members joined the Masons. I could distribute 25,000 pages of tracts in 1884 if I had them.

Z. GRAVES.

[With the above are $10 for more books and two copies of the Cynosure, one to give away. That is business that will tell in time powerfully against Masonry. Who will equal it?]

A PERSONAL TESTIMONY.

I am surprised at the stupid indifference of many toward the secrecy of our times. When we look around our community and ask, is every man safe? is any one for whom Christ died living without God? it is a thought of unutterable grief that soon their opportunity to repent will be forever gone. It is fifty-five years since I had the evidence of pardoned sins. O that I had been more faithful!

J. E. P.

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON IV.—January 27, 1884.—Living as in God's sight. Jas. 4:7-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up. Jas. 4:10.

"Submit yourselves therefore to God." The duty here enjoined is that of entire acquiescence in the arrangements of God, whether in His providence or grace. Al these are for our good, and submission to them is required by the spirit of true humility. The object of the command here, and in the succeeding injunctions to particular duties, is to show them how they might obtain the grace which God is willing to bestow, and how they might overcome the evils against which the apostle had been endeavoring to guard them. The true method of doing this is by submitting ourselves in all things to God.—Barnes.

"Therefore." Because this submission implies the humility to which God gives grace (ver. 6). For then Christ, who conquered the Tempter, will fight for us, and in Him we shall be conquerors, because (1) we are "found in Him," and no one can pluck us out of His hand and the Father's (John 10:28 seq.); (2) He does not allow any temptation to be overpowering (1 Cor. 10:13); (3) His strength is made perfect in our weakness (2 Cor. 12:9).—Cook.

"He will draw nigh to you." Will manifest His presence and love in our hearts, wifl treat us as friends, will dwell within us by His Holy Spirit, teaching and guiding us, and conforming our hearts and lives to His. Nothing in this world can survive the test of separation and silence. If you wish to keep what is yours this hour, see that in some way or other you set it always before you. Live near it: let it never be out of your sight; hold constant communion with it. Dread separation; dread distance and time; they are the murderers of friendship; they freeze up hearts; they kill love, though it be deep and true.—Dr. Morgan Dix.

"Cleanse your hands." The heart is the seat of motives and intentions—that by which we devise anything; the hands the instruments by which we execute our purposes. The hands here are represented as defiled by blood, or by acts of iniquity. To wash or cleanse the hands was therefore emblematic of putting away transgression (Matt. 27:24. Comp. Deut. 21:6; Ps. 26:6).—Barnes.

"Ye double-minded." Who were undecided whether they would submit to God or live in their sins, and therefore were living in sin, and needed a new heart.—Peloubet.

"Speak not evil one of another." The bitter root of this iniquity is that wicked self-love that dwells in us. Every man is naturally his own grand idol, would be esteemed and honored by any means; and to magnify that idol self, kills the good name and esteem of others in sacrifice to it. It is the devil's delight to be pleased with evil speakings. The Syrian calls him an eater of slanders or calumnies.—Bp. Leighton.

"Speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law." Not merely the specific precept, "Judge not" (Matt. 7:1), but identical with "the royal law" (Jas. 2:8), which embraces all—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Such a violation of the spirit of the "great commandment," is in fact a censure of the law itself which is summed up in these words.—Cook.

"If thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law." Those who are most ready to condemn others are least careful themselves to keep the law in its large and loving spirit. Fault-finders with others are almost never good workers in the Church. They break God's law of love more in condemning others, than do those whom they condemn.—Peloubet.

"There is one lawgiver (and judge," Rev. Ver.). There is but one who has a right to give law. The reference here is undoubtedly to the Lord Jesus Christ, the great Legislator of the Church. This, too, is a most important and vital principle, though one that has been most imperfectly understood and acted upon. The tendency everywhere has been to enact other laws than those appointed by Christ—the laws of synods and councils—and to claim that Christians are bound to observe them, and should be punished if they do not. But it is a fundamental principle in Christianity, that no laws are binding on the conscience but those which Christ has ordained, and that all attempts to make other laws pertaining to religion binding on the conscience, is a usurpation of his prerogatives.—Barnes.

"To him that knoweth to do good," etc. This conclusion is most naturally understood to refer to the universal notoriety of the shortness of human life. The particular meaning then would be, "that he who knows what sort of views he should take in regard to the future, and how he should form his plans in view of the uncertainty of life, and still does not do it, but goes on recklessly, forming his plans boastingly, and confident of success, is guilty of sin against God." Still, the proposition will admit of a more general application. It is universally true that if a man knows what is right and does not do it, he is guilty of sin. No man can be released from the obligation to do good in this world to the extent of his ability; no one should desire to be.—Barnes. The general principle illustrated by the particular example just discussed is here stated: knowledge without practice is imputed to a man as great and presumptuous sin. St. James reverts to the principle with which he started. Nothing more injures the soul than wasted impressions. Feelings exhaust themselves and evaporate, if not embodied in practice. As we will not act except we feel, so if we do not act out our feelings, we shall soon cease to feel.—Jamieson.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

Submission to God is the only perfect Liberty.

1. A man can not be a lodge slave, nor a rum and tobacco slave, after he has entirely submitted to God. God commands this full submission because He loves us, for He knows that without this complete surrender of ourselves to Him Satan will still have a hold on us.

2. Said a distinguished temperance worker, "I find it well-nigh useless to try to convert men from the slavery of strong drink unless I convert them to Christ first." Rev. Geo. H. Vibbert states that of the six men who first signed the Washingtonian pledge only two stood firm. Father Mathew persuaded 500,000 men to take the pledge, but of these 400,000 went back to their cups.

3. President Finney joined the lodge when a young man and unconverted. But when he became a Christian he left forever its false worship. "I was completely converted from the lodge to Christ," he afterwards wrote. And this has been the experience of many others delivered by Christ from the bondage of their wicked oaths.

4. We must resist the devil whatever form he takes. He may come in the form of a pie or pudding sauce flavored with wine or brandy, and offered us with loving hands with not a thought of the mischief it may do. Or he may come in the form of a secret temperance society which you are urged to join. These are his wiles to deceive, but the Bible tells us we ought not to be ignorant of them.

5. Christians who live very near to God are said to walk with Him. When walking with a dear friend we try to avoid saying or doing what that friend dislikes. The habit of smoking and chewing, so offensive to the good and pure-minded everywhere, must be offensive to the pure and holy Jesus.

6. We cannot draw nigh to God and walk with the licentious, the profane and the worldly. Every Christian who joins the lodge must call such men brothers, must associate with them and seek their advantage; but "whosoever will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."

In other days there was none of the light now shed on subjects of reform. The foolish and wicked secrets of Masonry had not been revealed, nor had doctors and scientific men united to condemn rum and tobacco. Let us remember that according to the light we have, so is our responsibility.

Light from the Word.

Who alone can give liberty to the captives? Gal. 5:1. Who alone are truly free? Ps. 119:45. What ancient worthy walked with God? Gen. 5:24. What is necessary before two can walk together? Amos 3:3. What does Christ say of the servant who knew his Lord's will and did it not? Luke 12:47.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS

Published by the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO		NO. PAGES
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
20	Masonic Murder, by Elder T. R. Baird	2
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
25	Character and symbols of Freemasonry, Illustrated	2
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
32	Origin, Obligation and Expenses of the Grange	4
33	Hon. Wm H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men Say about Freemasonry	2
35	Objections to Masonry, by a Seceding Mason	4
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German)	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	2
43	Affidavit that Masonry is revealed, by J. O. Doesburg and others	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
46	Nos. 17, 18 and 19 combined, by Prof. Cervin (Swedish)	16
47	Rich Murders and Secret Societies	4

STRAWS.

In the report of the Mormon missions in the Sandwich Islands, published by the church to-day, a membership of 3,600 is shown. The King was present at the September conference. The church owns a large sugar plantation, and the mission is flourishing.

Andrew Carnegie has questioned the employes in the Edgar Thompson Steel Works as to the reasons why so few of them owned land or houses. Learning that land was held at exorbitant rates, he has offered to buy large tracts of land, sell it in small lots at cost, and even to start a co-operative store for the benefit of the laboring men.

The largest cable yet laid across the Mississippi river is the one just placed in position by the Postal Telegraph Company, which promises to begin sending messages from St. Louis to the east by the end of this month. The cable was 3,400 feet long, weighed 16,000 pounds, and measured eight inches in diameter.

Judge Black had one of those "ears for music" that cannot tell one tune from another. Once he heard his daughter Becky, who is a fine pianist, play a piece that pleased him, and inquired its title. She replied that it was "Lucy Neal," and the Judge ever after declared it to be his favorite. Whenever Becky would be playing for visitors the Judge would say, "Now Becky, give us my favorite, "Lucy Neal," and Becky, slyly winking at the guests, would play "Old Dan Tucker," or "Old Hundred." As she concluded, the Judge would tip back in his chair and exclaim: "That's my favorite!" and would wonder what the people were laughing at.

The latest fish story comes from Louisiana. Recently, it reads, a gentleman traveling was overtaken by a storm and suddenly almost felled to the ground by a catfish that struck him on the head. In a moment he was literally pelted with the fishes, so that his horse ran away and he was in great danger. Several thousand of the fishes were rained down in this way, and it was finally discovered that a whirlwind had scooped them up, carried them off, and hurled them again upon the ground.

A summary of the railway building in the United States for the past twelve months shows that 6,000 miles of main track was laid, at an approximate cost of $165,000,000, making the total miles of railway in the country to date 120,000. The construction during 1882, the largest in the history of the country, was 11,600 miles. The year before it was 9,800 miles. The States and territories which lead in construction this year are as follows: Montana, 413; Dakota, 409; New York, 375; Pennsylvania, 339; Ohio, 326; Mississippi, 305. New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware, Nevada, and Wyoming were the only States and territories in which no new road was built.

Mr. Emerson's loss of memory during the last years of his life, combined with his abstraction, troubled him seriously, as is well known. One day his daughter saw him walk back into the house which he had just quitted, and begin looking for something. He could not tell her the name of it, and she had to continue assisting in the search without knowing for what she looked. Suddenly her father turned and said, "Oh! it is that thing that people take away and never bring back." "Umbrella!" exclaimed Miss Emerson, running for it. The philosopher took it, laughing, and walked off content.

As to railroad progress in Mexico, the New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "The English were twenty years in building 263 miles of railroad from Vera Cruz to the capital. The Americans have built 2,500 miles of railroad on Mexican territory within five years. The Central Company alone has constructed 1,400 miles at different points, and the Mexican National about 900 miles. The subsidy granted these companies will average $11,000 in round numbers per mile. It results then, that the present administration has paid these two companies the enormous sum for 2,000 miles of road, of $22,000,000. It is probable that more than 1,000 miles of road has been built by Mexican and other companies during the same period, and which enjoy the same or even greater subsidies. To the above sum must be added $11,000,000 more. This total of $33,000,000 has in a great measure been paid in cash."

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

No Physician Need Hesitate.

Dr. S. V. CLEVENGER, Chicago, Ill., says: "Horsford's Acid Phosphate should be made official. It is the most eligible form for the administration of phosphorus, and no physician need hesitate to order it on his own perscription blanks."

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other standard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.75
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Conn., J. L. Barlow of Willimantic.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Kansas, P. S. Feemster, Pearlette.
Missouri, M. N. Butler of Albany.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
Michigan, H. A. Day, Parma.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Vermont, O. C. Bailey.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

S. E. Starry, Clarence, Iowa.
Jas. Furguson, " "
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Promise City, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan,
W. M. Love, Baker, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perrry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D. A. Richards Clarkville Mich

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

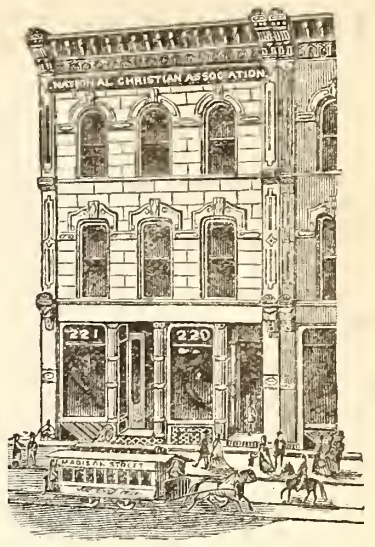
Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeek and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheatou, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Presbyterian church, Hoopeston, Ill.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

NOTICE.

Persons write occasionally, saying, "I sent a remittance so and so, but the tag on my paper it not changed." Such inquiries are proper, and the explanation is this: when a subscription is received it is entered at once on the book and the letter filed for future reference if needed, but the printed mailing list is not changed until a sufficient number are received to require the printing of a new list. If but few subscriptions are received, the change may be delayed for a month or more, but when the list fills up rapidly it requires frequent revision. If the date on your paper is not changed within four weeks after you remit it is the safest way to drop a card to this office

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H. Ross and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS.

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas. C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres., B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesuey, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas. J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins.

Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1884.

A GOOD BEGINNING

has been made by the friends of the anti-lodge reform in self-denying, personal efforts for their paper. Seldom, if ever, have the responses been so numerous and hearty. Nobody will deny that this is a good work that should be kept up as much as possible throughout the year; but especially at this season are efforts for the list of the Cynosure successful, and they should be continued with zeal and determination as long as possible. Remember that our cause—that every good cause—prevails only by steady, PERSISTENT, PERSONAL EFFORT.

AN EASY TASK.

To get two month's subscribers for 25 cents will be not found a difficult work, if you fail in securing a yearly subscription. Each copy of the Cynosure is equal to an ordinary pamphlet of 80 pages. Eight such pamphlets for a quarter of a dollar is not extravagance by far. Let every reader of this paper present this matter to his neighbors.

INGERSOLL VS. THE COMMON LAW.

This singular man in a late labored speech at Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C., holds this language:

"Unfortunately for us our fathers adopted the Common Law of England—a law poisoned by kingly prerogative," etc., etc.

Now the doctrine universally held and taught by books and courts, if we have understood plain English, is, that the Common Law, which is an English body of decisions, has evermore been held to have taken its origin from the customs of the people, including the verdicts of early juries. As composed of such "free customs" or "ancient liberties" it is distinguished from "the civil code" which originated in the Pandects, or Rescripts of Emperors, collected and codified by the Emperor Justinian. The Common Law was also sharply distinguished from the Canon or Ecclesiastical Law, which originated in convents and from priests.

Mr. Ingersoll's hatred of the Common Law doubtless springs from his hatred of the Christian religion, which is part and parcel of that Common Law. He has no hatred of priest-craft or priests, as such; if he had, he would denounce Masonry, which is crawling with "priests," "high," and "grand high priests." It is "our High Priest," Christ, whom he hates—the only priest who wore no robes, worked with his hands for a living, and "took on himself the form of a servant.

COMING DESOLATIONS.

"And coming events cast their shadows before."

Palestine was a garden; Carmel waved with unnumbered vineyards, and Lebanon nodded with cedars.

"No rural sights alone but rural sounds Charm and delight."—Cowper.

The land groaned with abundance, "flowed with milk and honey;" bleating with flocks, lowing with herds, and singing with the sweet and drowsy hum of bees. Like our Rocky Mountains, the trees were on hill-tops. But wearying with puritanic religion, and led by priests who followed the people, as poor old Cameron said he did, "always a leetle ahead," the swarming population fled nightly to the lodge-worship in their "high places," till every hill was a haram, and every grove a brothel. "And all went merry as a marriage bell." But God was "in the shadow of the dim unknown;" and he said to an old prophet, "Set thy face against the mountains of Israel, and prophesy against them."

The prophet obeyed and cried out to the astonished multitudes sweeping by: "Ye mountains of Israel. Thus saith the Lord to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys. In all your dwelling places the cities shall be laid waste, and the high places shall be desolate; your idols be broken and cease, your images cut down, and your works abolished." The busy crowd heard with pity and astonishment; some boys threw mud at him, and well-dressed priests with ladies on their arms, grinned a quiet approbation at the mob.

Go to that Palestine to-day. The muttering monk and cringing native, the pilgrim beggar and the wandering Arab roam over or crouch on Carmel; and the jackal and wild goat climb the steeps of Lebanon unstartled by the axe of the forester.

This is the pictured future of the United States if the accursed lodge system is not destroyed.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

TEMPERANCE AT THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.

In the prairies of Illinois before a heavy rain we have seen water rising in spouts out of the earth to meet what is soon to fall from the skies. The Washington papers, moved by instinct to supply the popular demand, are springing up with temperance paragraphs: "License," "Liquor," "Distillers," etc., etc. Thus, the Star, Jan. 4, gives: "What was done yesterday in 'Conference on the Liquor License.' 'The Commissioners said they would have to make an advance on the retail men of at least $50 per annum; making their license $150, and the wholesale dealers $100 per annum; and these will probably be the amounts recommended in the bill presented to Congress by the Commissioners.'"

The Post of to-day, Jan. 5, in an article headed "Relief for Distillers," gives, in detail, the bill to be presented next week by Mr. Willis, of Kentucky, to extend the time in which whiskey may lie in warehouses without paying any tax two years from Dec. 1, 1883 where taxes were due at that date, and, thereafter, two years from the time when the taxes shall fall due. Suppose some one next introduces a bill "for the relief of farmers," giving them two years' grace beyond the time when their taxes fall due.

The Commissioner said to a Star reporter that so closely are they organized, that "If you rap a liquor-dealer here in Washington, you will hear a squeal from California." Of course their organization is secret.

The Post says that the Kentucky and Ohio members interested in liquor are confident their Whisky Extension bill will carry, though some Democrats will vote against it.

Meantime there are encouraging tokens on the temperance side, as the following from the Star, Jan. 3, indicates:

"A TEMPERANCE NEW YEAR.

"'There has been very little drinking this New Year,' said a prominent importer to a Star reporter. 'Usually we sell a great deal of champagne, sherry, catawba, and other wines for the New Year receptions, but this year the sales have been very light—at least twenty per cent. lighter than last year.'

"'How do you account for this,' asked the reporter.

"'Oh, it's brought about by this big cry of temperance, which is being raised all over the country, I suppose. It is getting so now that people are ashamed to offer wine to a caller, and if it is offered a man feels that he is staking his reputation by accepting it. Ladies who have wine on their private table every day are afraid to have it on New Years, because of the stigma that temperance people attach to it; and men who are steady drinkers will refuse wine at a reception on a plea of temperance. Why, I was making a few calls New Year, and at but one place was I offered a glass of wine, and there the lady offered it with a sort of apologetic air. A man who I know to be a hard drinker—a man who gets on long sprees, happened there at the same time and got himself in high favor by refusing the wine and asking for water. No, there was not near as much liquor sold this year as usual—that is not for the New Year receptions. Chocolate, tea, and coffee were served nearly everywhere.'"

But, on the contrary, Secretary Frelinghuysen furnished liquors at his New Year's reception; and the Post represents Attorney-General Brewster as going into a New Orleans court too drunk to be decent, and dictating to the judge on the bench, as men in liquor do. (See Washington Post, Jan. 5, editorial.)

The Critic says, Jan. 5, that Commissioner Dudley (of Pensions) had up some of his clerks "for dissipating at night, so that they were unfit for work." He did not discharge them, and the rascals went and reported that the Commissioner had formed a temperance society and a church in the Pension Department. These are but specimens from the daily metropolitan press here. And it is to be hoped that these ground-springs of temperance agitation betoken a coming rain of prohibition. J. B.

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

Lincoln Hall has been engaged for the American and Prohibition convention here Feb. 20–22. The committee are filling the programme with the ablest speakers. I called to-day on two Senators, but found both out. In the car coming from the Capitol, which was full of M. C.'s, the talk was Prohibition, PROHIBITION, PROHIBITION.

THE CLERK reports among the House expenses thirteen and a half dozen spittoons, cost $357.50, a fearful amount of tobacco spitting. I was through the Hall of the House to-day just after adjournment. The Hall was full, one-half smoking.

OUR CONSUL at Liverpool reports to the Secretary of State, 1882, that while the timber imported from the United States has increased over 1881, the falling off of American tobacco, at that port, amounted to $314,294.

THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE reports among the expenses of Congress paid last year: Trip of committee down the Mississippi to examine improvements, four thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven dollars; and silk sashes for funerals cost nine dollars each. Lawyers for Star-Route trials cost the country from five thousand dollars to thirty-one thousand each. While bonded whisky seems likely to escape taxes for two full years or more.

HON. FERDINAND SCHUMACHER, of Akron, Ohio, writes Senator Pomeroy that, though he has sickness in his family, he will be present at the Washington Convention, Feb. 20–22. This news is very inspiriting. Mr. Schumacher was the late Prohibition candidate for Governor of Ohio, when the prohibitory amendment received, our readers will remember, some three hundred thousand votes.

"O where was Roderick then;
One blast upon his bugle-horn
Were worth a thousand men."

Mr. Schumacher never belonged to the lodge, and he declares out and out for the fusion of Americans and Prohibitionists.

PROF. BAILEY receives almost daily subscriptions to the stock of the American Publishing Company. They are, of course, a majority of them subscribers to the Cynosure. It will, perhaps, be necessary to put the Cynosure upon a joint stock basis. It is time that the friends of a religious paper looked the certain fact in the face that the new paper will be apt, like the new broom, to sweep clean; and remember, too, that when Morgan Anti-masonry became solely political it soon died.

—The spicy bit of poetry on the 6th page should have been credited to J. M. Henderson, Swanwick, Ill.

—Bro. Hinman is at present giving his attention to getting subscriptions to the stock of the Washington publishing company. He expects to return soon to Baltimore and Philadelphia, in which cities and their suburbs he is confident of doing much more good work than has yet been accomplished.

—The latest word from Bro. J. P. Stoddard says that on leaving the railway station at Dale, N. Y., he endeavored to get to Bro. F. W. Capwell's home a mile away; but after useless struggles in the unbroken snow, from two to ten feet deep, he gave up the attempt until nearly two days later a road was dug out.

—One donation to the Washington building fund re sembles the widow's mite. May a like blessing attend it. Bro. J. F. Galloway of Florida, who has endured much for his testimony for Christ, has a young orange grove just beginning to bear. He sent a barrel of fine fruit (about one-third the crop) to Washington to be sold for the building there. Such an instance of self-denial should not lose its effect. Let it stir up thousands to a generous emulation.

—The Inter Ocean answering the inquiry why ladies are not admitted by Freemasonry says: "Ladies were excluded from the order because in its early history none but men could follow the Masonic craft, and actual workmen were admitted, and the force of custom debars them still." The Inter Ocean is too modest, altogether too modest for the truth. The force of custom has no notion of prevailing, for not one in fifty Freemasons is an "actual workman" in genuine masonry. The editor is ashamed of the fact in the case.

—The Baptist Weekly is dumb upon the lodge question, but has the courage to commend a Presbyterian minister for refusing to give up his church to a Grand Army funeral parade, thus: "The Rev. Dr. Chamberlain of the Classon Avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, has evoked some bad feeling in the Grand Army of the Republic by refusing to have a funeral in his church last Sunday, which would have interrupted the exercises of the Sunday-school. The death occurred early in the week, and, as is very common, the funeral was appointed for Sunday to insure a large parade. This, however, the inclement weather put a veto on. Dr. Chamberlain will have the thanks of many Christians for opposing these demonstrations on the Lord's day."

—An organization of grocers' clerks has been formed at New York, called the A. B. C. Union, the object of which is to systematically rob their employers. One of the rules of the association is that each member shall by fair means or foul possess himself of $125 a month and deposit it with Christian Kroze, of Brooklyn, who acted as treasurer. The members were to be given $250 from the funds of the society at the end of the year if they wished to go into business, and, if sick, were to be paid two dollars a day. The Retail Grocers' Union has caused the arrest of Kroze and a number of clerks. It is said that Kroze had received $7,000 from the members.

—Five members of the Ku-Klux Klan on trial in Georgia have confessed their guilt in open court, but asserted that two other prisoners on trial were innocent. The evidence in regard to the two has not been heard. The others were sentenced to two years' imprisonment each in the Albany, N. Y., Penitentiary, and a fine of $500 each was imposed.

—In the case of the New Orleans National Bank against the postoffice authorities, who refuse to deliver mail, claiming that it properly belonged to the lottery company, Judge Pardee decided Saturday that the bank was entitled to free and full use of the mails and refused to dissolve the injunction obtained by the bank.

AN APPEAL.

To Gideon T. Stewart, Chairman of the National Committee of the Prohibition Home-Protection party, and to all leaders of the Prohibition movement throughout the United States and Canada men and women.

RESPECTED FRIENDS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:—After much consultation and correspondence, the undersigned issue a notice from the City of Washington, D. C., for three "American and Prohibition Conventions," to be held; one in Washington, Feb. 20th; another in Northampton, Mass., near April 1st; another in Ohio in the month of May; to be followed and crowned by a general convention in Chicago, in June next.

Since our call issued, we have received the Chicago Lever, with Mr. Stewart's exceedingly able addres, suggesting simply Prohibition meetings in towns and counties at the time of our Washington gathering, Feb. 20th to 22d.

We suggest that the American and Prohibition parties should unite in this series of popular conventions, for the following among other cogent reasons:

1. The name "American party" is justly and exceedingly popular. It is a general, not a special and particular name, and its platform embraces all our national interests, and the questions now agitated, excepting only woman suffrage, which will doubtless be considered by the approaching conventions.

2. The American party is, and has been intensely prohibition from the first; and though it is small, having waited for the "Solid South" to be broken and ground up between the Republican and Democratic millstones, measures are now being taken to push it to the front. In many localities, this young party has put all other parties into a dead minority already.

3. But the strongest argument for uniting these two parties is found in the secret society question. Hon. Henry Wilson, an able politician, and Vice President of the United States, Charles Jewett, the great apostle of prohibition, and John B. Gough, the tutelan genius of temperance oratory, all three belonged to secret temperance orders and all were disgusted with them. Wilson moved to lodge to publish its secret ritual; Jewett, in a volume, urges their demolition, and Gough refus to wear their regalia. The church of the United Brethren in Christ, with an enrolled membership of one hundred and sixty-nine thousand, by its book, excludes secret societies from fellowship. The United Presbyterians, a strong and learned body; the Wesleyans with an able paper, and large printing-house; the earnest Free Methodists; with Dunkers, Mennonites, several yearly meetings of Friend Quakers, some Scandinavian sects, and a large proportion of the firm and decided Hollanders,—all these and other fragments and individual churches cannot be brought into a prohibition party, unless its secrecy is dropped. They all occupy the same ground against organized secrecy as opposed to the example of Christ. And surely their prayers and votes are neeessary to carry prohibition.

Besides these churches, there is a National Christian Association opposed to secret societies, incorporated under the laws of Illinois and owning "headquarters" in Chicago and Washington. This body was organized in Pittsburgh fifteen years ago; and now, besides denominational organs, there are papers started to advocate its reform in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Pennsylvania, and New Hampshire. And an "American Publishing Company" has just been organized and incorporated, under the laws of West Virginia, and located in Washington, to start a new paper at our national capital. Now, every one who reads this writing will see at once, that prohibition cannot afford to lose the co-operation of these anti-secret organized and chartered masses, for the sake of keeping up a system of secret lodges which the great prohibition leaders, Wilson, Jewett, Gough, etc., have condemned. Since the death of Henry Wilson and Charles Jewett, the formation of the "Prohibition Home Protection Party" strengthens their arguments against secretism an hundred fold; for no party can long exist, part secret and part open.

4. Another conclusive argument for our union is, that Prohibitionists who belong to secret orders are in secret, and, in some cases, sworn alliance with saloonists, brewers, and distillers, who belong to the same orders. The Grand Master of Massachusetts Masons, we are told, is the chief liquor manufacturer in that State. The chief of the great Milwaukee Brewers' Association, is, or was lately, a Freemason; and we never have seen a saloonist who was opposed to the lodge. What prohibition has most to fear in our next general election, is the drawing off of the two old parties. Now in the Chicago convention which formed the Prohibition party, the large Iowa delegation were kept from joining by Hon. J. B. Grinnell, an ardent defender of the lodge, on the plea that the Republican party was good enough Prohibition party! And in our judgment the secret wing of the Prohibition army cannot be relied on, but will largely desert to the old parties on the day of election. It is certain that Prohibitionists who are Masons, and so are in lodge-allianee with Masonic saloonists and distillers, will desert to their secret brotherhoods just as truly as they respect their secret oaths and obligations.

5. We are assured by leading colored men in Baltimore, and elsewhere, that they will pray for and cooperate in our Washington convention. They see that the secret orders are absorbing their wages and starving their families and churches; and they begin to see that secrecy, which is good for the Ku-Klux is bad for the colored people, and if prohibition is ever to receive the colored vote, they must be shown that the secret lodges and the saloons are twin institutions, and Ku-Klux institutions at that.

6. We close with the fact stated by Hon. Gideon T. Stewart in his "National Address," that Governor St. John of Kansas, was "Shot down from behind by ballots from his own party ranks, and then pronounced unpopular, and kicked aside by party leaders!" Now we happen to know that the party leaders who "kicked aside" St. John were Freemasons, whose names, many of them we could give; and in "shooting down" St. John they but kept their oaths to their Masonic brothers who are saloonists, brewers and distillers, as O'Donnell kept his oath in shooting down Carey. And, as all true reformers harmonize, and are one at bottom, in the name of thousands of good men and women, we hope that November, 1884, will bring Prohibition voters to the polls in one united phalanx, certain of victory then, or at the next Federal election.

SAMUEL C. POMEROY.
MILTON FORD.
J. P. STODDARD.
H. H. HINMAN.
E. D. BAILEY.
J. BLANCHARD.

THE WASHINGTON PROGRAMME.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8, 1884.

The charter for the new publishing company came to-day. Friends everywhere will be interested in the document and hence we copy it for publication as follows:

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION.

State of West Virginia. The American Publishing Company, of Washington, D. C. I, Randolph Stalwaker, Jr., Secretary of State of West Virginia, hereby certify that an agreement duly acknowledged and accompanied by the proper affidavits, has been this day delivered to me, which agreement is in the words and figures following: The undersigned agree to become a corporation by the name of the American Publishing Company of Washington., D. C., for the purpose of printing and publishing a newspaper and other printed matter and periodicals in the city of Washington, D. C., which corporation shall keep its principal office or place of business at the city of Washington, in the county of Washington, and District of Columbia, and is to expire on the 20th day of December, 1933. And for the purpose of forming the said corporation we have subscribed the sum of $1,000 to the capital thereof, and have paid in on said subscriptions the sum of $100, and desire the privilege of increasing the said capital by the sale of additional shares from time to time to $100,000 in all (or any less sum). The capital so subscribed is divided into shares of $25 each, which are held by the undersigned as follows: (Here occur the names of the incorporators). And the capital to be hereafter sold is to be divided into shares of the like amount. Given under our hands the second day of January, 1884.

S. C. POMEROY,
MILTON FORD,
E. D. BAILEY,
H. H. HINMAN,
JOSEPH BOWES.

WHEREFORE, The corporators named in said agreement, and who have signed the same, and their successors and assigns, are hereby declared to be from this date until the 20th day of Dec., 1933, a corporation, by the name and for the purpose set forth in said agreement. Given under my hand and the great seal of the said State, at the city of Wheeling, this seventh day of January, 1884.

Signed, RANDOLPH STALWAKER, JR.,
Secretary of State.

As all the incorporators had to be present to acknowledge the application we had to leave brother Gibson off, as he is in Iowa just now, hence only five incorporators appear in place of seven as at first proposed. We have been pressing the subscriptions to stock by letters and circulars, as fast as possible, but everything now awaits the arrival of the money from the friends who are going to furnish it. Our next step will be to meet, formally accept the charter, organize and vote to increase the capital to $25,000. This opens the way for subscriptions and is the usual method of incorporating here. Subscriptions and money are already arriving and our correspondence shows a hearty and, so far as we know, unanimous approval of the measures adopted. Happy event would it be if the February convention should find here a building paid for and a newspaper established on a substantial basis. It is possible to accomplish this if we all "have a mind."

But we are not content with working for the corporation alone. We are all doing our very best in writing for the convention Feb. 20th. A correspondent to-day inquires if that is to be the regular annual convention at which nominations, etc., will be made. It will. It is proposed to hold this convention as if it were the only one this year. Everybody must come, for it will be the most important convention yet held. The others to be held subsequently are more in the nature of ratification meetings. The one proposed for Chicago, it is hoped, will catch the enthusiasm of all that precede it. It will be able to correct any missteps preceding and to complete the organization for the campaign in the fall. The programme is a bold one and must be executed with the same courage and faith by which it was conceived.

E. D. BAILEY.

LITERARY.

An anecdotal paper on Gustave Courbet, the eccentric French artist and communist, will be contributed to the February Century by Titus Munson Coan. Among the illustrations will be a full-page copy of Courbet's famous painting, "The Musician," which was conspicuous among the Courbet paintings at the recent Bartholdi Loan Exhibition; and a picture of the scene in the Place Vendome when Courbet and his men were pulling down the Vendome column.

The St. Nicholas Magazine for January is a rare number for the excellence of its illustrations, and its attractive stories by Mrs. Jackson, Louisa M. Alcott, H. H. Boyeson and Mayne Reid. Published by the Century Co., New York.

The Sidereal Messenger, one of the very few periodicals devoted especially to Astronomy, is published at Northfield College, Minnesota, where a fine observatory was established a few years since. The Messenger is conducted by Prof. Payne, director of the observatory. The leading article discusses the unusual and brilliant sunset phenomenon which has been for weeks observed with wonder in all parts of the world. The theories of different astronomers is to be presented, this first article presenting some interesting observations on the effect of meteoric showers. "Tools of the Astronomer," "Comet 'B,' 1881," "Common Theory of the Solar Corona," are other articles.

The Faith Missionary of Oberlin has letters and reports from the several faith missions in Bulgaria, India and South America that are worth a wide attention among American Christians. The Missionary states that Mr. Walkins of Guadaljara, Mexico, who was a while since engaged in independent mission work, has joined the M. E. church South. There is reliable information also that he is a Freemason.

The English Illustrated Magazine has some attractions for January that will be appreciated. A portrait and sketch of Matthew Arnold, the English critic who is now lecturing in this country. Like Oscar Wilde and Mgr. Capel, Arnold finds himself like a prophet without honor except in his own country. A sketch of Dartmoor, well illustrated, also of the "Piano Forte and its Precursors," precede a little history of the fall of the last Napoleon and the self-sacrifice of his Marshal Bazaine, who was afterward courtmartialed for the disaster at Metz. This is from the entertaining pen of the renowned war correspondent Archibald Forbes. Prof. Geike writes on "Rivers and River Gorges." MacMillan and Co., New York.

Of the irreligion which characterizes the new edition of the Encyclopedia Brittanica the Christian Instructor has this timely criticism: "After a somewhat careful examination of the religious articles, and the scientific articles bearing upon religion, in the work as far as issued, we are quite prepared to accord with the judgment of it lately pronounced by Principal Dawson. He has characterized it as 'a publication which, instead of its proper role as a repertory of facts, has become a strong partisan, stating extreme and unproved speculations as if they were the conclusions of science.' As to the biblical articles, it is but just to say that they are in general furnished by Kuenen, Wellhausen, Robertson Smith and men of their school, or by authors in greater or less degree sympathizing with them. To say that these men represent the religious thought of the English speaking world at this time is to say what is notoriously incorrect. They have but a very small following in this country and are greatly in the minority in Great Britain and the Provinces. Yet here is a standard work that is almost entirely controlled by the views of a comparatively small number of men, and these in no way superior in scholarship, in science or theology to their orthodox contemporaries, who vastly outnumber them. The protest against such presumption and injustice should have been made so earnest by orthodox Christians, generally, that its potency would have been long ere this felt and respected by the publishers of this great work. We have been astonished at the little attention that has been given to the matter by the religious press in general. The poison is being widely disseminated through this channel, and its evil influence is all the greater because it is contained in the pages of what is regarded as a standard work."

—To suppress the unnatural practice of binding the feet, the Church Missionary Society of England have decided to exclude all Chinese girls from Christian instruction unless the parents consent to unbind their feet.

THE HOME.

OH, SPEED THE WORK.

Oh, speed the work of gathering souls,
For night is coming on—
The night in which no one can work,
A night of awful gloom!
A night with not one ray of light
To guide the wanderer home;
For mercy's wing is folded then,
And sealed the book of doom.

Then speed the work of gathering souls,
Ye workmen of the Lord;
Oh, speed, nor spend your strength for naught!
Soon He will grant reward
To all who labor cheerfully
Amidst the weal and woe,
Amid the thorns which pierce and tear,
Amidst the scoffing foe.

Oh, speed, yea, speed the work of love!
The warning must be given,
And God calls all to swell the cry
Who hope to rest in heaven.
They cannot rest in that sweet home,
Whose brows have never here
Been dampened by the toil for souls,
And furrowed by its care.

Look up to God, and plead His grace
To water well the seed;
For all our sowing will be in vain
If unsupplied this need.
Oh, workmen, one and all, toil on;
The shining mansions wait;
The Master longs to call us home,
And close each pearly gate.

But honest souls are still unwarned
And children wandering far,
With anguished prayers, then, toil we on,
Lest our robes spotted are
With blood of souls we might have saved.
Oh, we must swell the call,
Or share the fate of those distressed,
On whom His wrath shall fall.

—Selected.

THE LIFE THAT MAKES CONVERTS.

Christ himself has given a definition of a Christian. He said, "If a man loves me, he will keep my words." At another time he declared, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." Here is the test and touchstone of Christian character. A personal love for a personal Saviour underlies all genuine purity. That heart love must be attested by the daily life. Obedience to Christ is the highest evidence of faith in Christ, and without such faith the soul is lost.

What "words" are to be kept? Are they limited to such specific commands as "Come unto me," "Take up the cross and follow me," "Go preach my Gospel," "Feed my sheep," and similar short directions? Comprehensive and vital as are such brief injunctions, I do not understand that they exhaust the idea conveyed by "My words." We ought to enlarge the meaning of this expression until it takes in the whole scope of his wonderful teachings of self-denial, truthfulness, honesty, humanity, purity of heart, sympathy with the suffering, and submission to the Father's will. When Jesus bound the towel about his waist, and stooped down and washed the soiled feet of a dozen Jewish peasants, he taught us how a man can become greatest by becoming "a servant of all." Dr. Muhlenberg gave a beautiful illustration of obedience to his Master when he once took up a tray of dishes in St. Luke's hospital and carried them down to the kitchen. Some one meeting him, and protesting against his doing such menial work, he quickly said, "What am I but a waiter in the Lord's hotel?"

Christ's treatment of the penitent woman teaches us how to pity the fallen, and to restore such in the spirit of meekness. His command, "always to pray and never to faint," is the true foundation of the prayer meeting, and its best inspiration. His golden precept to do unto others just as we would that others should do unto us is the law of all social justice, all commercial integrity, and all personal intercourse. Christ demands the strictest and holiest morality. No one has any claim to true holiness who belittles or breaks those commandments which govern our intercourse with each other. It is the hideous disparity between some people's flaming talk about their spiritual attainments, and the hard facts of their daily conduct, that so disgusts and repels their unconverted associates.

On the heart side Christianity is love to a personal Redeemer and Guide. On the life side it is simple and conscientious obedience to his commandments. Where such piety is visible it is felt; it answers the scoffs of the skeptic, it furnishes the mightiest argument in behalf of the Gospel; it is the most powerful witness for Christ; it is more eloquent and convincing than any pulpit discourse; it is the strongest attraction to a religious life; it is mighty in its awakening and converting power among men of the world. As soon as we who "call ourselves Christians" reach this Christ-likeness in daily conduct, there will be no more complaint of the lack of conversions. Spurgeon remarked at his last communion season that, of the sixteen who had joined his church, two had been converted by his preaching, and the other fourteen had been converted through the efforts of the members of his church. I will venture to say that these fourteen were more influenced—under God—by what those church members did than by anything they said. There must have been a great deal of Christ's "words" in their conduct, or else they never would have led fourteen sinners to become followers of Jesus.—Theodore Cuyler.

LOWER THE LIFE-BOAT.

We have read somewhere of a ship captain who passed a dismantled vessel that was sinking in mid ocean. He saw the signals of distress, he heard the shrieks of men and women crowding its deck; yet he held on his course, though officers and men implored him to stop, and offered, at the risk of their lives, to rescue the people from the sinking ship. His vessel was freighted with a costly cargo, destined for a port where it was in great demand. Another vessel had sailed the same day, laden with a similar cargo, for the same port. Could he reach his destination a single day in advance, he would make enormous profits. Should his vessel be outsailed, another would gather in the wealth he coveted.

He sailed on. The ill-fated bark went down with its cargo of human life. He reached the port in time; he reaped the golden harvest; he bought the silence of those who witnessed his heartless deed; he ranked high in business circles; but he lived and died a miserable man. The memory of his crime tortured him by day, and haunted his dreams by night. When storms swept the coast near by his princely mansion, he fancied he could hear in the wail of the winds, the wild shrieks of the men and women he had abandoned to their fate. Often he would start from his sleep with the command on his lips to "Lower the boat," only to feel the cold sweat of mortal agony on his brow, and the sharp tooth of remorse in his heart. The sight of the ocean became a reproach; for it was the sepulchre of those his selfishness had slain; and the sigh that its distant surges brought to his ear seemed an accusing voice proclaiming his guilt. He sought a hiding-place in solitude; but the memory of that sinking ship peopled his quiet retreat with spectral forms, and haunted him back to the thoroughfares of life. His deed had passed beyond recall. The victims of his avarice were buried where no sounding line could reveal the mystery of that missing ship; his secret was safe in his own heart; but like the sting of the worm that "dieth not," he found no relief from its ceaseless pain. He must bear with him through time and to eternity the memory of his inhuman deed.

Other men are sailing over the ocean of life, with their ships freighted with costly merchandise. Other vessels are foundered on the deep. The storms of passion or misfortune sweep the track of many a vessel, leaving it a helpless hulk upon the sea of life. The cry of human hearts, desperate amid their pains and perils, are going up for help. Sorrowing ones are on life's ocean, with hearts and lives made desolate by the death of loved ones, reaching out their hands in mute appeal for sympathy and help. Boys and girls are tossing on that stormy sea, with no hearts to love them, and no hands to guide their erring steps aright. Young men are on that ocean; helpless moral wrecks, at the mercy of every gust of appetite and passion, drifting hopelessly on, unless some one sends a life-boat for their relief. Women, old and withered, and young and fair, are looking out for help beneath a lowering sky, and across a stormy sea. Some, alone in life, are struggling feebly in the depths of poverty; and some, torn from the moorings of virtue by ruthless hands, have been abandoned to the unfeeling winds and waves of human life, without hope, unless some friends, tender and strong, shall lead them to Him who alone can say, "Thy sins which are many, are forgiven thee." From men and women, hungry, sick, and dying, the cry is ever going up for help. From men and women, feeding on the Dead Sea fruit of vicious pleasure, yielding the ashes of bitter pain, the cry for help is ever heard. From Christian and from heathen lands the voice of humanity, in tones of deep despair, is sending forth its cry; and Christ has laid, not on angels, but on men, the commission of their relief. His life was spent in doing good; and that example he has left as a sacred legacy to those who would follow in his steps. We are not living for ourselves alone; but every human being, whether in the depths of sorrow, shrouded by ignorance, or sinking in the sea of sin, has a claim upon us strong as that the dying thief had on the dying Saviour.—Texas Advocate.

FAITH.

It is said that one day when Bonaparte was reviewing some troops, the bridle of his horse slipped from his hand, and the horse galloped off. A common soldier ran, and laying hold of the bridle, brought back the horse to the Emperor's hand, when he said to the man:

"Well done, Captain."

"Of what regiment, sire?" enquired the soldier.

"Of the Guards," answered Napoleon, pleased with his instant belief in his word.

The Emperor rode off; the soldier threw down his musket, and, though he had no epaulettes on his shoulders, no sword by his side, or any other mark of advancement, he ran and joined the staff of commanding officers. They laughed at him, and said, "What have you to do here?"

"I am Captain of the Guards," he replied.

They were amazed, but he said, "The Emperor has said so, therefore I am."

In like manner, though the Word of God ("He that believeth hath everlasting life") is not confirmed by the feelings of the believer, he ought to take the Word of God as true, because he said it, and thus honor him as a God of truth, and rejoice with joy unspeakable.—Sel.

CLING TO THE RIGHT.

There is nothing more certain than that right will triumph at last, and triumph eternally; and it is equally certain that wrong is destined to utter and everlasting overthrow.

Whoever ties his boat to a sinking ship will go down; and whoever links himself with wrong is sure, eventually, to encounter overthrow. There may be temporary prosperity, there will be final defeat; there may be present success, but there will be eternal ruin. Hence they consult their wisdom and their safety, who cling to the right at whatever cost; not through stubbornness of will, but through steadfastness of faith, and honesty of conscience.

How brief the scene of trial will seem when the struggle is over; how light the afflictions, when the eternal weight of glory shall dawn upon the church of God; how unworthy of notice will seem all the sufferings of the present time when compared with the crowns, the joys, the raptures, which shall reward the ransomed of the Lord.

Let the servants of God take courage; their conflicts are brief, and they war against a defeated foe. The Captain of their salvation has gone before, and on every battle-field he has overcome and scattered all their enemies. The day of his victory is at hand. Then shall right be triumphant, and those who have clung to the right shall triumph with it forever.—Safeguard.

ENOCH WALKED WITH GOD.—Sinners walk from God; they go in a contrary direction; they are opposed to his requirements; they refuse to listen to his call. But believers walk with God; in conversation, they turn to God; in justification, they are accepted before God; in sanctification, they conform to the will of God, and then they walk with God. His precepts are their rule, his ways are their delight, his glory is their aim, and fellowship with himself is their source of satisfaction. They communicate with God, place their confidence in God, expect every blessing from God, and strive to imitate the character of God. They walk with him in filial love, as their Father; in holy intercourse, as their friend; and in grateful obedience, as their covenant God. They walk with God in faith, believing his promises. They walk with God in hope, expecting his communication. They walk with God in love, enjoying his gracious presence and blessings. To walk with God is their honor, the proof of their reconciliation, and the evidence of their adoption. Walking with God on earth, they will rest with God in heaven.—Rev. James Smith.

Man is greater than a world, than systems of worlds; there is more mystery in the union of soul with the physical than in the creation of a universe.

Religion is using everything for God, but many men dedicate business to the devil, and politics to the devil, and shove religion into the cracks and crevices of time, and make it the hypocritical outcrawling of their leisure and laziness.—Sel.

Zeal without knowledge is more profitable than knowledge without zeal.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE STAR.

BY "AUNT CARRIE."

Beautiful star
Up in heaven so blue,
Why do you shine so bright
All the years through?

I shone first to show
Where the Saviour was born,
When the angels sang "Peace"
To the shepherds at morn.

And now I am shining
To show you the way,
And all little children,
Who with Jesus would stay,

To the bright, happy home
He has gone to prepare;
For he wants the dear children
All to be there.

CAUGHT IN AN AVALANCHE.

High up in a narrow valley in Switzerland, almost entirely shut in by great rocky cliffs, was a little chalet where Widow Jutta and her three boys lived.

They were very poor, owning a patch of meadow only, its thin, rocky soil scarcely sufficient to keep two or three cows. Their home was of the poorest description, the walls loose stones filled in with moss, and the projecting roof large sheets of pine bark laid over poles and weighed down by heavy stones, while a large square hole in the top answered both for a window and chimney.

Tables and bedsteads were unknown luxuries, as stumps were substituted for the former and bark covered with hay for the latter.

But they were strong and hardy, and had never been accustomed to anything different; and the boys, in summer especially, lived a free, joyous life, their merry "jodel" often waking sweet echoes among the rocky cliffs. Johann, the eldest, a lad of sixteen, was their chief reliance, as he was already quite a skillful hunter, following the sly chamois to its haunts on snow-clad peaks, where it seemed impossible that a human foot could tread.

Fredrich and Francois were several years younger; but they helped their mother weave baskets, and in summer filled them with Alpine strawberries, which she carried on her head to the nearest market-town and sold. Yet they were often reduced to great want during the long, cold winters, in spite of every precaution to lay in supplies.

In the autumn of 1874 a great misfortune befell this family in the death of their cows by the murrain; and this season was followed by an unusually severe winter. Early in November there came such a heavy fall of snow that all communication was cut off with the next town, while on the heights above it accumulated to an astonishing depth.

They used their supplies of food very sparingly, hoping each day a change would come, when a little sunshine and warmth would form a crust over the surface of the snow sufficient to bear the boy's weight. But the cold continued extreme, and, shadowed by high mountains, the wintry sun had little power.

It was a sad, anxious little group that gathered day after day around the table, more and more scantily spread. Widow Jutta was a good, Christian woman, and she prayed earnestly for help in their extremity and patience to endure without murmuring, as fresh falls of snow were constantly piling up the fine, powdery flakes, already nearly even with the gable.

Johann saw with alarm how feeble his mother was growing, and, feeling that he must do something before his own strength was exhausted, he climbed to the opening by the ridgepole, and looked about him.

The hut stood high up on the side of the mountain, and although the steep slopes near by had but three or four feet of snow, he knew that it had accumulated to the depth of twelve or fifteen in the valley through which he must go to reach help.

But the lives of those dear to him depended upon the effort, and he resolved to try. As he was about to descend into the hut and tell his mother his determination, Fredrich joined him and said, "Don't you think we two could get as far as Hans Graffle's hut? He's a good hunter and sure to have a chamois or two in store. He'd let us have something to keep us alive till the thaw comes."

"I had just made up my mind to go," replied Johann. "I suppose if you went with me we could bring back a bigger load. Still I don't like to have you take the risk."

"It would be greater for you alone. We could help each other. If you go, Johann, I go with you."

"Then we had better start at once, before another storm comes."

They told their mother of their plan and bade her not to worry if they did not return that night. Then they fastened snow-hoops on their shoes, made of the tough branches of fir trees, interlaced with strong cord, their broad surface helping to sustain them on the top of the snow.

It was early in the morning when they began their perilous journey. Their mother saw them depart with a sinking heart, but she knew it was their duty and could not hold them back. The air was very cold, and almost at the first step they sank into the soft snow to their waists; but they helped each other up on the rocks and climbed along narrow icy ledges where the least slip would throw them down steep precipices to sure destruction. Yet for six hours they pushed forward, knowing that to stop and rest would be certain death, as sleep would instantly overcome them. At last they saw the smoke curling up from Hans Graffle's hut. Cheered by the prospect of rest and food, they gave a loud "jodel," which brought the old hunter to the top of his roof to see who could be approaching. Great was his amazement when he recognized the boys. He gave them a hearty welcome as he drew them up to the blazing log fire and relieved them of their cold, wet garments. Then he placed food and milk before them.

After the poor famished boys had satisfied their hunger they told him of their destitution and said they had come to beg for some provisions to take back to their imprisoned mother and little Francois; Johann, with manly independence, promising to work for Hans the next summer to pay for the help now rendered. The old hunter readily consented to give them all they could carry.

The next day was quite mild, and he advised them to wait over, as a night's freezing would make a sufficient crust to bear their weight, and they could return with much less fatigue. They followed his adviee, but Johann was so anxious about his mother he insisted upon starting very early the second morning.

They fastened their bag of provisions on a long pole and Johann placed one end on his shoulder, while Fredrich followed holding the other, and, with their Alpine stoeks in their hands, they started rapidly forward, thankful to find that the snow yielded but little to the pressure of their broad hoops.

Hans Graffle mounted his roof again and watched the little figures, till, just before turning the point of a projecting cliff, the boys, seeing him, gave a loud parting shout. Alas! the vibration in the air caused by that merry, thoughtless cheer, set a great avalanche in motion down the steep precipice over their heads. At first there was a low rumbling sound, instantly increasing in volume and intensity, and, looking up, they saw the great white cloud rushing upon them.

There was no escape, and, dropping their burden, they clasped their arms about each other and sank down buried beneath forty feet of the cold, white mass.

The old man heard the thundering sound and saw the poor boys drop upon their knees, but could do nothing to help them, for he knew too well what swift and sure destruction lay in the path of the terrible avalanche.

Well aware that they would be dead ere he could rescue them from that depth of snow, if they had not been instantly killed, he exerted all his efforts to save those still left in the cottage far up the desolate valley. After a long and perilous walk he succeeded in finding the spot, but a sad sight there greeted him.

Little Francois was asleep on the rough bed, upon which his mother had piled all the clothing to keep him warm. She was sitting by the cold hearth as lifeless as the white embers lying upon it; yet a happy smile still rested on her face, for upon her lap lay the old Bible, and her finger yet pointed to the verse, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

When for her the portals had opened Hans could not tell, but he thought they would scarcely have closed ere she was joined by the ransomed spirits of her boys.

It was a bitter awakening for little Francois, but the kind hunter took him to his own home, and adopted him as his son.

It was not until late in the spring that the deep snowdrift made by the great avalanche melted away, and the bodies of the two brothers were found with their arms still locked about each other.

A rough wooden cross now marks the spot, with their names and the date of their death rudely carved upon it, that cross being only one of many that I passed one lovely summer day on my way over the Tete-Noir to Chamouni, each marking some sad record of man's vain struggle with the long, bitter winter in those wild mountain passes.—Christian Union.

TEMPERANCE.

BEER A TEMPERANCE DRINK.

Victor Tissat has published a most interesting and instructive book: "Les Prussians en Allemange." In the course of it are many allusions to the habits of the Germans in drinking beer, and some sharp and graphic descriptions of the effects of this habit upon them. The author is no temperance man in our sensc of the word, and perhaps never heard of the temperancc cause.

In the course of his journey through Germany he came to Bavaria, as celebrated for its beer as Munich is for its works of art, and for the dissoluteness of its court. There are in the vicinity of Munich three or four monasteries, famous for the good beer produced by the monks. To one of these, Dettlesbach, Mons. Tissat made a visit. He says: "I rang. A brother introduced me into the drinking-room where people are served who pay; the monks give beer to the poor. The profit on beer is the only revenue of the convent. * * * In the room was a picture of Gambrinus (King of Beer) in all his pomp, raising in one hand his pot of beer. * * * Over the door was the inscription, 'Beer makes Alive, Brandy Kills.' A door opens and the Prior enters bidding him welcome: 'Soyes le bienvenue,' and conversation commences on beer: 'Your beer is exquise, Reverend Father; it's velvet.'

" 'Yes, it's because we do not know chemistry; we do not know how to adulterate beer. True beer is no longer drunk in Germany. Adulteration came to us from France. If you will go with me I will take you to the library where I will prove to you what I say. The beer of France was formerly as famous as that of Germany.'

"They came to the library—a vast hall with books piled up to the ceiling. The Prior took down one of them entitled, 'Livre des Metiers' (Book of Trades), and showed me an article, 'Statuts des brasseurs Parisiens' (Laws of the Brewers of Paris). In this rosin was expressly mentioned as employed in making beer. This was an old book, written in old Freneh, many of the words being now obsolete.

"The Prior asks: 'Are you convinced now?'

" 'Perfectly. I only regret that the laws against rosin are not in force to-day, for it is evident that in the beer we drink now in France there is more rosin than hops.'

" 'And here, sir, in Germany, in the noble country of Gambrinus, they put in only the roots of boxwood. Formerly beer was employed as a remedy; it is often a poison now.' "

Monsieur Tissat is driving about Munich in a fiacre; he says: "The only vehicles which follow each other almost without interruption are brewers' carts, and other great carts coming from the railway station, loaded with broken beer-glasses, which show the number of hocks that the Munichois breok over each other's heads has not diminished. They say in Germany of a citizen of Munich: 'He is a bierfass (a beer cask), when he rises in the morning, and a fassbier (a cask of beer) when he goes to bed.' " As to the effects of beer M. Tissat says:

"The Germans in general are blockheads (lourdands); the most stupid among them are the Bavarians. * * * The Swede, Oxenstiem, has described the Munichois by these words: 'He is a creature who drinks more than he can carry; a cask containing more than it seems to do. The excess of food and drink overflows among these people, upon the whole body. They are great eaters, gluttons. They breakfast until noon and dine until supper. Apoplexy and indigestion carry them off. What a huge thing, enormechose, a Bavarian is, at rest, sleeping, well stuffed! He is a vast mass of flesh, like a man pre-historical, a mastodon-man, * * * who ought to live side by side with mammoths, plesiosauri, ichthyosauri, creeping on the belly!'

"The Cardinal Perron said: 'You will at once know a German before a glass of beer into which a fly has fallen. An Italian will send away the glass; the Frenehman will take out the fly; the German will swallow the beer with the fly.' 'In the old beer-shops, full of tobaeco-smoke, and very dirty, is seen the true Munichois. Beer is his element, as water is that of the fish. Beer is to him the substitute for milk, soup and bread. When the price of beer rises, there are bierkraval—beer revolutions; when the beer is bad, there are popular revolts against the brewers. They allow no trifling with beer. In 1844 the people broke the windows of the king's palace because the price of beer had risen a half penny. They were obliged to make many cavalry charges upon the mob, and to fire upon the 'Royal Beer House.'

"A Vienna journal said: 'Beer is the Alpha and Omega of existence in Bavaria; it plays in political, social and religious affairs, a more considerable part than roast beef does in England. The worship of Gambrinus is pushed so far that they feed the newly-born on beer; and among this short-legged people, an increase in its pricc produces terrible explosions. A rise in the price of beer of a kreutzer is of great importance to a Munichois, who consumes upon an average from eight in the morning to ten at night, six to seven quarts of beer, and the one kreutzer makes 72 francs—$14.40 a year. * * * The brewers of Munich are almost all millionairc; they have their fine equipages with two horses.'

"There are many sorts of beer: The slavator bier, the bockbier, the weissbier, the winterbier; which are sold at stated periods. When either of these beers is ready for customers, the newspapers of Munich announce the fact solemnly more than a month in advance. Bockbier is a thick, syrupy drink. Two glasses are enough to intoxi cate an infidel. At the Royal Beer House they sell the Bouck in an old shed from 9 o'clock to 1. They dispute the entrance to it with their fists. Traveling fiddlers mounted on beer casks scrape the Bockwalzer. Very soon men and women are whirling in a bacchanal round, screaming at the top of their voices:

'Ha! Ha! Ha!
O Jerum, Jerum!
Jerum!'

"This beer that the Bavarians guzzle from morning to night makes them fat, dull, cross, brutal. In the beer-shops the conversation turns generally on eating; they devour and drink more than they talk. It is an incessant play of jaws; one would think they were moved by steam-power. When there is too much alcohol in the beer the stranger is likely to be insulted."

There are many books on Germany, notably the "Voyage Au Pays Des Milliards," in which the same or even worse things are said of the effects upon the people of beer drinking. Beer renders those who drink it fat, dull, cross, and more or less brutal. The manufacture and sale of it are forbidden in Maine under heavy penalties of fine and imprisonment.—Neal Dow.

VICTORY FOR TEMPERANCE.

WICHITA, Kan., Jan 8.—All the saloons in this city, over thirty in number, closed to-day by concerted action of their keepers, who, it is understood, have gone out of the business for good.

Temperance legislation is popular in the new counties of Texas. A few weeks ago Falls county was carried by the no-license party by a vote of 173 to 17; and in Shelby county the vote stood in favor of no license 713 to 187.

"It is of very little account what men think of us, but it is of great importance what God thinks of us."

[Continued from 5th page.]

At 7 o'clock the house was well filled, some 50 or 60 being present. Bro. Gaylord, trustee, took charge of the door and the boys. After prayer by a friend, I commenced the lecture with the statement, that I had not come to impose upon any man or class of men. All that I wished was to look at the subject before us fairly and squarely. If during the evening I should make statements which any one thought were not true or overdrawn, I would give them a chance to say so at the close, and as I saw at least one Mason in the audience, it was his duty as a citizen to see that I represented Masonry fairly to the people.

I spoke for about an hour and a half. Good order was retained during this time. Closing, I said, "Now I will give any one a chance to speak or ask questions, reserving the right to reply. All eyes were turned toward Mr. S., who, I think, was the only Mason in the house. He kept his jewel. Mr. Gaylord broke the silence, saying that he should like to hear the other side of this question, still silence reigned supreme. I then said: "Mr. Mason, if you wish to vindicate your order, now is the time. I have made some pretty strong statements this evening; if you keep silent you are virtually revealing secrets, which you have sworn to conceal, by admitting the truth of what I have said." Still no response. I thanked the audience for their attention and we adjourned.

I was to have spoken here last evening, but owing to the severe storm the meeting was postponed. Bro. S. H. Halsey kindly invited me to stop with him until the storm subsided. I send you herewith his subscription for the Cynosure. In short, I feel encouraged to press forward. If God be for us who can be against us. Let us stand to the guns, friends, and the victory is ours.

W. B. STODDARD.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible]intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

AN AMERICAN IN DAKOTA.

Since leaving Ligonier, Ind., for the purpose of establishing my residence in Dickey Co., Dakota, one year ago last May, I have had no correspondence with the Cynosure; but I have not lost my interest in the work of reform. Since coming here I have carefully watched the progress of Anti-masonry in other States, and have been anxiously waiting to see some move toward organizing this territory for effective political work. I would like to see Dakota move along with the States in the campaign of 1884. I rejoice in the prospect of the Washington movement. The establishment of a political paper in Washington will doubtless add much to the progress of our work. I think the stock plan just the thing needed to insure success. I hope before the next campaign fairly opens some effort will be made to organize Dakota for warfare against secrecy and rum. In the mean time I will do what I can to circulate Anti-masonic literature by loaning books and handing out Cynosures. C. G. FAIT.

—A secret meeting of the Iowa Democratic leaders and members of the legislature at Des Moines decided to oppose prohibition, but will prepare a bill fixing the minimum license at $500. The Democrats will vote for any Republican to defeat Allison for the United States Senate.

THE CHURCHES.

—The new Free Methodist church on Dearborn, near 51st street, in this city, was to have been dedicated on Sabbath morning. Rev. Joseph Travis, editor of the Free Methodist, was announced as the officiating clergyman. This church has been established in a needy part of the city, and under the charge of brethren T. B. Arnold and C. S. Spalding, the present pastor, has been blessed of God since its establishment.

—The Wesleyan churches are reporting in their church paper revivals in Larwill, Ind.; Midland, Mich.; Carlyon, N. Y., and Lawrenee, Kans.

—Rev. A. T. McDill of the Christian Instructor, Philadelphia, has just returned to that city from a temporary sojourn in Colorado with his family on aecount of ill health. The change produeed satisfaetory results.

—Dr. Charles A. Stork, the leading professor of Gettysburg Theological Seminary, Pa., is dead.

—Rev. A. H. Harshaw, who is undertaking the Midland, the new United Presbyterian paper of St. Louis, has resigned the pastorate of the Second U. P. church, Pittsburgh, to enter upon the new work.

—A new Faith Home was dedicated lately in Columbus, Ohio, which is in charge of Mrs. Mary A. Clift. There are now twenty-two such institutions in this country and several in Europe. There were seventy-five persons at the dedication in Columbus, a number of whom had been healed by faith; and two interesting cases occurred during the meeting when deliverance from disease was given in answer to prayer.

—There are twelve Quarterly Meetings belonging to Iowa Yearly Meeting of Friends. There are also eighty-two established meetings in the States of Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Dakota, California, Oregon and Texas.

—The net gain of all Presbyterian churches in the foreign field was thirteen and one-fifth per cent. for the past year—an average of fifteen converts for every ordained missionary. "Do missions pay?"

—At the revival at Penn Meeting, Cass county, Mich., conducted by Harvey and Alice Bergmann, assisted by others, 140 professed conversion and sixty-four applied for membership.

—The mission work by the Rev. G. Constantine, independent missionary in Smyrna, has been quite successful in all its departments. In the Evangelical hall, over 10,000 people, it is stated, from Smyrna and different provinces of Turkey, have heard the Gospel preached in Greek. The tract and Bible work among them is in a flourishing condition. The receipts from all sourees were £379.

—In a letter from Japan, J. Hartzler speaks of the conversion of one of the natives of the peninsula of Corea, named Isuehon, a relative of the Corean king: "One of the circumstances which led to his conversion was a dream. He dreamed that a Japanese gentleman had come to him with a basket. In the basket was a book. It was a copy of the Bible. The man with the basket, pointing to the Bible, said to him: 'This is the book that will save your country.' This dream made a deep impression on the Corean's mind, and led him to study Christianity, and not long thereafter he became a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, and made a public profession of his faith."

GOOD REPORT FROM THE OUT-AND-OUT SABBATH-SCHOOL IN NORTHWEST CHICAGO.

EDITORS CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I intended to have written to you some time since about the distribution of the papers you gave me for our Sabbath-school. The school seemed as anxious to receive them as I was to give them. One gentleman who was in the school, who had formerly been a member of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Boston, Mass., and had often attended lodge in their beautiful temple (that has the nice drinking-saloon down-stairs), came to me after the close of school and asked if we had one of the papers left; said he did not get one but would like one very much. I want to say here that this gentleman's statement corroborates that made by Bro. Stoddard in regard to the saloon being in the Masonic building; more than this he says he thoroughly believes that any amount of young men have been invited (from labor to refreshment) from the lodge into this saloon and there made drunkards.

I was very much surprised the next week after giving out the Cynosure to find my school had fallen off over twenty-five per cent. The nearer we get to Christmas the more scholars we usually have in a Sabbath-school; and when I saw by giving out the Cynosure our school had decreased in number, I made up my mind we had injured some one, and as I believe the Cynosure to be on the side of God, I do not know of any one we could possibly have hurt unless he was siding with the devil.

These papers could not all have been read without some people getting light, and I hope and pray that this effort may be blest to some poor, struggling soul who is in bondage to these secret societies, and he be brought out into the glorious light of the Gospel and made a free man in Christ Jesus. Yours in Christian love,

WM. E. CATLIN.

FORMOSA AND THE MISSIONARY MACKAY.

The island of Formosa is on the eastern coast of China, separated from the mainland by a sound of about ninety miles in width. It is 250 miles long, and has a population of about three millions. A range of mountains, rising in some places to 12,000 feet divides the island longitudinally. The western portion is inhabited by Chinese, the eastern, by aboriginal, savage tribes of the Malay type. The English Presbyterian church has had, since 1865, a successful mission among the Chinese who occupy the southern part of the island. Until very recently, no attempt has been made to reach the aborigines with Christian instruction. Dr. Mackay made choice of the northern districts of Formosa and established himself at Tamsui, a town of some importance, with a British consulate and a large staff of Chinese officials. The surrounding country is very beautiful and fertile, and the climate, except in the rainy season, fairly healthy. The prevailing religion in Formosa, as in China proper, is Buddhism.

Whatever Dr. Mackay's first impressions of Formosa were, his first experiences were far from pleasant. It was the rainy season and his dwelling-place was a stable, with many a time a foot of water on the floor. So soon as he had learned enough of the language, he posted up the Ten Commandments on the door of his cabin. The literati took alarm, and denounced him as a spy, a deceiver, a necromancer—"a foreign devil." They took every means to insult him. Tact and pluck, however, won the day, and it was not long before he could rejoice over his "first convert"—Giam-Cheng-Hoa—his right hand man to this day. The plan of operations which Dr. Mackay then adopted, and which has been attended with such marvellous success, closely resembled that of the Great Teacher himself. As soon as he secured a following, he began to itinerate among the people accompanied by his disciple, to whom he thus imparted instruction of the most practical kind in "pastoral theology." But that was not all; he gave them improvised lectures in botany, geology, geography, anatomy, church history, and finally they were drilled in systematic theology. In four years he had built ten chapels, and placed them under the charge of as many native trained helpers. He had eight more students under training, seventy-five communicants and 500 natives attending Christian services. The next year he reported 160 communicants, and 1,000 natives had renounced idolatry and attended Christian worship. And so the work went on with increasing momentum, until December, 1879, when he left the island on a brief visit to his native land. At that date there were twenty chapels, 300 communicants, and upwards of 2,000 persons under religious instruction. Few missionaries have ever had it in their power to make such a record. Yet, the trophies which Dr. Mackay has won since his return to Formosa, two years ago, are still more remarkable. His official report for 1882 says: "We have now twenty-six native preachers and twenty-six chapels, 3,000 native Christians and 350 communicants!" Had we nothing more to add we should still have good reason to exclaim, "What hath God wrought!" But the half has not been told. What difficulties the missionary met with in all these years, what perils he encountered on land and water, how many hair-breadth escapes from storm and pestilence, and the assassin's dagger! How he established schools and hospitals, and how at length, through the munificence of the people of his native country, he lately placed a topstone on a stately college to accommodate fifty students, and furnished with all the appliances for a seat of learning which present circumstances require.

Later still, the astounding intelligence was flashed along the wire, "Two thousand aborigines have thrown away their idols and wish to follow the Lord of hosts!" "One village after another, peopled by the savage children of the mountain wilds, have come out as a body, and already sing our sweet hymns long in the night." "What a scene! What an outburst of song at the close of a marriage service, when they rendered, 'How sweet the name of Jesus sounds,' to one of their own wild mountain airs." "Give us," he adds, "$2,500 that we may erect ten churches. For God's sake don't refuse and don't delay. Pray, O pray for this work, that Jehovah Jesus may be glorified and souls saved."

[The Missionary Review draws from the success of this mission some valuable lessons, as follows:]

Few will read this brief sketch of Dr. Mackay's ten years' work in Formosa without some thoughts and queries pressing upon their minds: Why has God used this missionary so much more effectively than he has most others? What element of his own mind and character, or in his manner of working, has enabled this man to achieve such results? One thing is evident. He has been ready at all times to peril life for Christ and the Gospel. A second thing is evident. He has been absolutely free in choice of place and plan of working. No deputation or secretary has imposed a straight jacket. Responsibility for place, plan and manner of working has been his own, and he has met this responsibility directly, manfully, heroically; and God has blessed him, and prospered his work.

Let these two facts be duly studied, in case of Mackay and of Duff, in case of Moffatt and of Livingtone, and Judson, and, indeed, of all the most successful missionaries. If mission secretaries cannot find something better to do than to restrict the proper liberty of missionaries, oppose and thwart the action of their church courts, destroy all right feeling of responsibility, and thus obstruct and hinder their work; then let them go themselves to the heathen and test their pre-eminent abilities in the actual work. No missionary ever resisted the arbitrary and ruinous measures enforced in India by Rufus Anderson, with half the energy Rufus Anderson, himself being a missionary, would have resisted like arbitrary and ruinous measures attempted by another secretary. No missionary in India to-day, resists the attempt of John C. Lowrie to override his judgment and reverse the action of his church court, with more determined purpose than John C. Lowrie himself, if a missionary in India, would resist a like attempt by any secretary of a non-ecclesiastical mission Board.

THE GOSPEL IN JAPAN.

S. H. Cobb, missionary to Japan, writes to the Christian Intelligencer from Yokohama, under date of Nov. 7th last, news of the greatest importance if truly reported. He says:

"The story runs that Mr. Ito, formerly a cabinet minister, and high in the esteem and confidence of the Mikado and the government, has recently returned from a somewhat extended visit to Europe, whither he had been sent with some royal commission. Not long after his return he addressed a memorial to the Emperor and his cabinet, setting forth his views and observations in regard to Christianity, and the need that Japan should become Christian. Ito is not himself a Christian, but asserts that what he had seen of the influence of the Gospel in evangelical countries had convinced him that the Christian religion was true and was a blessing to a land. He had talked with Bismarck and the Emperor William on the subject, about whom he had been accustomed to think that they were Christians from policy, but whom he found to be sincere believers in the Gospel, and both of whom declared to him their opinion that what Japan needed more than anything else was to accept the Gospel, and urged him to use his influence with the Mikado and the members of the government to seriously consider the matter. To this statement Ito adds his own desire that the cabinet would study the Gospel, and find out what it really is. The story further runs that the cabinet was much impressed by the memorial of Mr. Ito, and agreed to give a serious study to the Gospel and its relations to Japan.

—Mr. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, the head of the largest store in the United States, has set a good example to the wealthy tax-payers and citizens of other cities by accepting the position of highway Commissioner. The streets of Philadelphia have long been in a bad condition, and he takes the office long enough to improve them.

—A machine has been invented at Pittsburg for manufacturing hob-nails, which has a capacity of one ton a day, and is operated by three men. The use of these machines will throw thousands of men out of employment.

All nervous and blood diseases are invariably cured by the use of Samaritan Nervine.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multidude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 831 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

NEVER FAILS.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

A SPECIFIC FOR Epilepsy, Spasms, Convulsions, Falling Sickness, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Syphillis, Scrofula, Kings Evil, Ugly Blood Diseases, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Sick Headache, Rheumatism, Nervous Weakness, Brain Worry, Blood Sores, Biliousness, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Kidney Troubles and Irregularities. $1.50.

Sample Testimonials.

"Samaritan Nervine is doing wonders."
Dr. J. O. McLemoin, Alexander City, Ala.
"I feel it my duty to recommend it."
Dr. D. F. Laughlin, Clyde, Kansas.
"It cured where physicians failed."
Rev. J. A. Edie, Beaver, Pa.

Correspondence freely answered.
For testimonials and circulars send stamp.
The Dr. S. A. Richmond Med. Co., St. Joseph, Mo,
Sold by all Druggists. (17)

WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY. Proprietor, Wheaton Ill.
General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best.
STRAW, BLACK, GOOSE, RASP BERRIES, GRAPES. and other Small Fruits.
Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS, WHEATON COLLEGE.

Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.
MRS. S. H NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in the schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.

An Honest Offer

If you are not enjoying good health we will on certain conditions send you ON TRIAL our Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, and if they fail to cure or greatly benefit you within a month we make no charge. Prices very low. They are the marvel of the age. 75,000 Cures made during 1883. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once

ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.
Send description of your Invention. L. BINGHAM.
Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

STEAM COOKED CEREALS.

Choicest Foods in the World, for Old and Young.

American Breakfast Cereals.

Selected grain, all hulls, cockle, and impurities removed. CRUSHED, STEAM COOKED AND DESICCATED. Patented. Prepared, as wanted, for the table, in ten minutes. Saving money. Saving fuel. Saving time. Saving waste. Saving health. Easy to digest, being already thoroughly cooked.

A. B. C. WHITE OATS. A. B. C. WHITE WHEAT.
A. B. C. BARLEY FOOD. A. B. C. MAIZE.
Ask for A. B. C. only. (Registered Trade-Mark.)
For sale by all Grocers. THE CEREALS M'F'G CO.,
Send for circulars. 83 MURRAY ST., NEW YORK.

LUCILE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

IT belongs to the class known as the religious novel. It is a love story written in the Pansy style, and so constructed as to teach sound moral and religious principles, in connection with quite an interesting narrative. Indeed, when the writer sat down to examine it, he commenced as a critic on the sharp lookout for blunders, but soon he became absorbed in the story, and forgot altogether his critical duties. He also noticed that when the members of his family commenced to read it, they had but little time for anything else until it was completed. Tried as a work of art by the practical test, it must be regarded as a success. Its influence will doubtless be good in correcting false views, and in helping the reader to sounder principles and to a better spirit. * * * Some may think some of the scenes depicted are not true to nature, but the critic would be likely to find, on inquiry, that the very incidents which he would select as unnatural are actual facts. "We often find that truth is stranger than fiction."—D. A. W. in the Christian Instructor.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

For sale by the

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MILL OWNERS SEND FOR PAMPHLET.

TURBINE WATER WHEELS ALCOTT'S

MANUFACT'D AT MOUNT HOLLY N.J.

"The Christian Statesman deserves a VERY LARGE CIRCULATION. It fills a place supplied by no other."—HON. JUDGE STRONG.

The Need of the Nation

Can only be supplied by an acknowledgement of Christ's authority and an acceptance of His Divine Law as the

BASIS OF NATIONAL LIFE.

To secure this, and maintain all existing Christian features of the American government, is the object of the National Reform Association, an organization undenominational in character, with a membership of many thousands, including leading ministers, educators, authors and jurists all over our nation.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN,

A large, elegantly printed sixteen-page journal, advocates the principles of this Association, and discusses all public questions in the light of the Christian religion. The Maintenance of our Sabbath Laws, and of the Christian Law of Marriage and Divorce, the use of the Bible in the Public Schools, the Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic, the Mormon Question, the Rights of the Indian and the Chinaman, receive constant attention in its columns. It gives thorough expositions of the International Bible Lessons, and their bearing on national questions is not overlooked. Price, $2.00 per year. Sample copies free. Address,

JOHN WAGNER PRITHARD,
1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN

"In its course has been manly and consistent, its editorials able, and its success, under the conditions of apathy and prejudice which surrounds the whole subject, marvelous."—THE REV. S. F. SCOVEL, PRESIDENT OF WOOSTER UNIVERSITY.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live, readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

II. EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. BUT EVERY SUBSCRIBER to the CYNOSURE who SENDS TO THE OFFICE $2.50 shall have both FOR THE YEAR.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.
For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

GARDEN AND FARM TOPICS

By PETER HENDERSON, is a New Book of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a Steel Portrait of the Author, embracing within its scope the following subjects: Popular Bulbs and their Culture.—Window Gardening, and Care of Plants in Rooms.—Propagation of Plants.— Rose Growing in Winter.—Green-house Structures, and Modes of Heating.—Formation and Renovation of Lawns.—Onion Growing.—How to Raise Cabbage and Cauliflower.—On the Growing and Preserving of Celery.—Strawberry Culture.—Root Crops for Farm Stock.—Culture of Alfalfa or Lucerne.—Manures and their Modes of Application.—Market Gardening around New York.—The Use of the Feet in Sowing and Planting.—Draining, etc.

Mailed on receipt of $1.50, and with which will be sent without charge, our handsomely illustrated MANUAL of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN," (132 pages) containing a colored plate of the new Rose "Sunset."

PETER HENDERSON & CO., SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

FARM NOTES.

AVOID FARM MORTGAGES.—Mr. H. A. Haigh gives the following wholesome advice on mortgages to farmers in the American Agriculturist:

Mortgages are necessary and beneficial in civilized society, but there are unpleasant features about them. They often enable a man to accomplish what he could not otherwise do, and they also often involve a man who would have been otherwise successful. They often enable a man to get out of trouble which he could not otherwise avoid, and they perhaps equally often make miserable a life which would have otherwise been happy. It is easy to get them on to the farm, but it is not always so easy to get them off. Farm mortgages are about the best investment that capital can find. Investors generally like them. They partake of the nature, permanence, and other substantial qualities of real property, but are relieved from many burdens imposed upon land.

Therefore:—1. Do not mortgage the farm unless it seems absolutely necessary. But, as a general rule is less valuable than a particular one, it may be well to specify by adding: 2. Do not mortgage to build a fine house. By so doing you will have to pay money for an investment which does not bring money. 3. Do not mortgage the farm to buy more land. Where there is absolute certainty that more can be made out of the land than the cost of the mortgage, this rule might not apply. But absolute certainty is rare, mistaken calculation is common. 4. Do not mortgage the farm unless you are sure of the continued fertility of its soil. Many persons borrow with an expectation of repayment based on an experience of the land's virginity only, which, on failing, may leave the land less productive, and the means of repayment thus be removed. In this way trouble begins which may result in the loss of the farm. Keep very clear of mortgages.

KEEPING UP THE FLESH OF CATTLE DURING WINTER—The farmer or breeder who most thoroughly understands how to prepare live stock for winter is he who makes it a point to get the largest possible amount of flesh upon the ribs during the summer. So he who best understands his business during winter is he who succeeds in maintaining all the flesh acquired during the summer, adding to this flesh as he can. Cattle that go into winter in good flesh, if suitably protected from storms and cold, and properly fed, are easily kept up to the summer standard till midwinter, and, with suitable attention, the same will prove true of the remainder, up to the appearance of grass. The warmth of the seven-twelfths of the year favors the interests of the feeder in the highest degree, both in the direction of putting on flesh, and retaining it; and it is only by inexcusable improvidence that the gain made during the larger and best part of the year is lost during the shorter and unfavorable half. It is bad economy to use corn for fuel, corn meal at $20 and oil cake at $35 per ton, but this is exactly what is done when any one by exposing cattle to a low temperature, at the same time endeavors to hold the summer's flesh during winter by the use of special foods.—National Live Stock Journal.

HOW TO TELL A COW'S AGE.—To tell a cow's age by her horns, count three for the tip down to the rings, and one year each for the most prominent rings, omitting the little ones. Some cow jockeys file these rings down smooth with the horn to make the cow look younger than she is, and thus deceive the raw purchaser, but the practical hand can generally tell better after the filing is done, as the rings are pictured on the horn. The teeth are also indicators of age, but, like the horns, there are conditions under which they are misleading. Cows that are bred young or are vicious by nature usually produce abnormal growths of horn, while those that live on sandy soil and crop close wear their teeth down. To our own taste the best test is the general appearance of the cow, especially the eye. In animals either well kept or young there is a freshness about their looks that proves them either young in fact or young in labor, and so far as actual usefulness is concerned it is immaterial which.—American Dairyman.

"Samaritan Nervine would be cheap at $100 a bottle. It cures fits." J. Sterling, Charleston, S. C. Only $1.50 per bottle, druggists.

HYPOCHONDRIA.

THE MYSTERIOUS ELEMENT IN THE MIND THAT AROUSES VAGUE APPREHENSIONS. WHAT ACTUALLY CAUSES IT.

The narrative below by a prominent scientist touches a subject of universal importance. Few people are free from the distressing evils which hypochondria brings. They come at all times and are fed by the very flame which they themselves start. They are a dread of coming derangement caused by present disorder and bring about more suicides than any other one thing. Their first approach should be carefully guarded.

Editors Herald:

It is seldom I appear in print, and I should not do so now did I not believe myself in possession of truths, the revelation of which will prove of inestimable value to many who may see these lines. Mine has been a trying experience. For many years I was conscious of a want of nerve tone. My mind seemed sluggish, and I felt a certain falling off in my natural condition of intellectual acuteness, activity and vigor. I presume this is the same way in which an innumerable number of other people feel, who, like myself, are physically below par, but like thousands of others I paid no attention to these annoying troubles, attributing them to overwork, and resorting to a glass of beer or a milk punch, which would for the time invigorate and relieve my weariness.

After awhile the stimulants commenced to disagree with my stomach, my weariness increased, and I was compelled to resort to other means to find relief. If a physician is suffering he invariably calls another physician to prescribe for him, as he cannot see himself as he sees others; so I called a physician and he advised me to try a little chemical food, or a bottle of hypophosphates. I took two or three bottles of the chemical food with no apparent benefit. My lassitude and indisposition seemed to increase, my food distressed me. I suffered from neuralgic pains in different parts of my body, my muscles became sore, my bowels were constipated, and my prospects for recovery were not very flattering. I stated my case to another physician, and he advised me to take five to ten drops of Magende's solution of morphine, two or three times a day, for the weakness and distress in my stomach, and a blue pill every other night to relieve the constipation. The morphine produced such a deathly nausea that I could not take it, and the blue pill failed to relieve my constipation.

In this condition I passed nearly a year, wholly unfit for business, while the effort to think was irksome and painful. My blood became impoverished, and I suffered from incapacity with an appalling sense of misery and general apprehension of coming evil. I passed sleepless nights and was troubled with irregular action of the heart, a constantly feverish condition and the most excruciating tortures in my stomach, living for days on rice water and gruel, and, indeed, the digestive functions seemed to be entirely destroyed.

It was natural that while in this condition I should become hypochondrical and fearful suggestions of self-destruction occasionally presented themselves. I experienced an insatiable desire for sleep, but on retiring would lie awake for a long time tormented with troubled reflections, and when at last I did fall into an uneasy slumber of short duration, it was disturbed by horrid dreams. In this condition I determined to take a trip to Europe, but in spite of all the attentions of physicians and change of scene and climate, I did not improve, and so returned home with no earthly hope of ever again being able to leave the house.

Among the numberous friends that called on me was one who had been afflicted somewhat similarly to myself, but who had been restored to perfect health. Upon his earnest recommendation I began the same treatment he had employed but with little hope of being benefited. At first I experienced little, if any, relief, except that it did not distress my stomach as other remedies or even food had done. I continued its use, however, and after the third bottle could see a marked change for the better, and now after the fifteenth bottle I am happy to state that I am again able to attend to my professional duties. I sleep well, nothing distresses me that I eat, I go from day to day without a feeling of weariness or pain; indeed, I am a well man, and wholly through the influence of H. H. Warner & Co.'s Tippecanoe. I consider this remedy as taking the highest possible rank in the treatment of all diseases marked by debility, loss of appetite, and all other symptoms of stomach and digestive disorders. It is overwhelmingly superior to the tonics, bitters, and dyspepsia cures of the day, and is certain to be so acknowledged by the public universally. Thousands of people to-day are going to premature graves with these serious diseases that I have above described, and to all such I would say: "Do not let your good judgment be governed by your prejudices, but give the above named remedy a fair and patient trial, and I believe you will not only be rewarded by a perfect restoration to health, but you will also be convinced that the medical profession does not possess all the knowledge there is embraced in medical science."

A. G. RICHARDS, M. D.,
468 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Elceta, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal: or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2 00

General Washington Opposed to Secret SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 50
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	26
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.

EZRA A. COOK, Publisher, 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE

311,000 references The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2 50; half Russia, $3. Postage, 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY. 10 books, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Teaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now in use. The whole lot for $11.48.

Single copy, postpaid, 10c, 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.

Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil
11 Newlyn House. [dren.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Susette.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
2 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwei.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bernie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Miss'n, Lit. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Hayfands.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
62 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Faithful.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer [Marched.
57 Hagalda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I.
61 Tempest Tost'd.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hops.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself.
72 Lyman.
73 Kennetb.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl
77 Margery Kramer's School-
78 The Quartette. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Lulu Preston's Trials and Triumphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror
86 Joe and Harry
86 Fred, the Backwood Boy.
87 Bloomfield Rock.
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 No Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Saunders.
93 Peg of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit; Frank Spencer's Rule of 109 The Harker Family. [Life.
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Thu's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
119 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Poll and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Fearndale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium;
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; John Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Telfourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Banyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Louis' School Days.
151 Blossom and blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Bruey.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips.
156 Digging a Grave with a Wine-glass. Little blind May
157 The Manor House Mystery. May's Sixpence.
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Job Luftou's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.
163 Little Faith. The Diver's Daughter.
164 Dora's boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe.
166 Dauesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear
168 Drift. [ful bondage
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list, Nos 96, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141, 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168, are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4; any 12 copies for $1; 10c each.

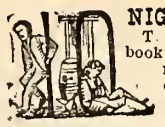
Reform Note Paper & Envelopes

This is good heavy paper, 5¾x8½ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scripture and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with at "ad" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,

13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.



Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.

Price postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches.

Published by EZRA A. COOK,

13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S. Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each; $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $8 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering. All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order, Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter. Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10½x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and Family Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible, Harmony of the Gospels, Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 1.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

Illustration of Style 4.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4, with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and hands—tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,

13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Established 1875.

DAVID C. COOK, Publisher of SUNDAY SCHOOL REQUISITES.

PUBLICATIONS:

Primary Grade. The Primary Teachers Quarterly. Illuminated Lessons. Primary Scholars Quarterly. Primary Weekly. Dew Drops. Little Learners Paper.

Juvenile Grade. Juvenile Teachers Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly (abridged). The Coral. Sabbath Home. Giant Killer. Truth Seekers.

Intermediate Grade. Intermediate Teachers Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly (abridged). Duplicate Lesson Leaf. The Sunday School Gem. The Young Folks Friend. Careful Builders. His Jewels. Sabbath School Weekly.

Advanced Grade. Advanced Teachers Quarterly. Advanced Scholars Quarterly. The Royal Road. Gracious Words. Our Own Sabbath School Paper. Conqueror's Herald. Weekly Magnet.

Bible Class Grade. Bible Class Teacher. Bible Class Scholar. Church and Home, (weekly). Church and Home, (semi-monthly).

Average combined circulation each issue over Three Million Five Hundred Thousand copies. Samples forwarded on application.

"I do not hesitate to commend them as far the best of any."—Rev. E. Corwin, D. D., Racine, Wis. "Their excellence can not be overestimated. Prices defy competition."—S. W. Hayes, Wheeling, Mo. "They give unbounded satisfaction."—J. L. Hodge, Oyer, Kan. "Superintendent ten years; have found no helps so good."—W. R. Davidson, Arabi, Ky. "Best publications in twenty years' experience."—L. B. Davis, Lodi, Mich. "The interest has increased fifty per cent."—J. L. Lassiter, Branchville, N. C. "Prospering gloriously; due to Cook's supplies."—T. A. Davison, Kellerville, Ill. "Our school is the best in this part of the country, and we owe it to your supplies."—Geo W. Finch, Auburn, Cal. "Doubled our school in a few weeks."—E. Timmerman, Jasper, N. Y. "School gaining every Sabbath."—Thos. Purvis, Sunderland, Ont. "School has grown nearly twice as large."—E. F. Wilson, Centre, Tex. "Our school has built up greatly."—J. M. Worth, West Salamanca, N. Y. "Better pleased than ever. We are having a precious revival."—Henry Cobb, Metropolis, Ill. "The Holy Spirit is blessing our school with a knowledge of the Word we never had before."—A. Hamilton, Stewartsville, Ont.

GOLDEN CENSER: "By far the cheapest publications for quality, quantity and frequency. Everything Evangelical, pure and helpful." CHAUTAUQUA DEMOCRAT: "When we mention his name in connection with any Sunday-school literature, it is sufficient guarantee of its excellence." CENTRAL METHODIST: "Whatever Mr. Cook puts his hand to is given life and energy." BOSTON CONGREGATIONALIST: "Mr. Cook advertises truthfully. 'Enormous saving to Sunday-schools.'" BALTIMORE METHODIST: "A leading, if not the largest publisher of Sunday-school supplies on this continent."

Publishing House Elgin Ill., Office and Store 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—Some surprise and no little comment was caused in the House by the introduction, by Mr. Reed, of Maine, of a resolution of inquiry, leveled at heads of departments, concerning alleged circulars asking contributions for political purposes. The true inwardness of this move lay in the fact that a Democratic leader was known to have a similar resolution couched in definite language and the Republican statesman from Maine took this manner of heading him off.

—Agent Llewellyn, with a delegation of Mescalero and Jicarila Indians, had a long interview with the Secretary of the Interior. The Jicarilas wanted to get permission to return to their old reservation in northern New Mexico. The Secretary would not give his consent.

—There is an unexpected interest manifested in the postal telegraph bill. It looks very much as though a measure of this kind will pass the Senate, at least. Senator Hill, of Colorado, will open the debate on the subject by a set speech. The Western Union lobby is on haud.

—Startling disclosures are made in regard to grave-robbing at Sycamore and Rochelle, near this city, and also in the pauper burying-ground at Jefferson. In a single raid the body-snatchers secured three of the pauper dead.

—Ten immigrants who arrived at Boston Tuesday, and shipped as seamen at Liverpool, will not be permitted to land. One is demented, another is partially paralyzed, and all of them have a very wretched appearance.

—At Frankfort, Ill., Thursday evening, Sam Wayne and R. E. Carter knocked at the door of Thomas Hummel's house. The latter and Wayne had agreed to play a joke on Carter, and upon Hummel receiving no reply to his questions as to who desired admittance, he opened the door and began firing blank cartridges at Carter, Wayne running off and laughing heartily. Carter, instead of taking to his heels, as was expected, pulled out his revolver and shot Hummel, wounding him mortally.

—George Jeffrey confessed at River Head, R. I., Thursday, that he killed his step-child by twisting its head first one way and then another until he broke his neck; that his only motive for the crime was that he hated it because it was not his, and that it prevented his wife from earning money for him.

—Saturday night, Jan. 5, on the plantatiou of W. G. Taylor, in Lenoir county, N. C., an entire family of negroes, Wm. Crook and wife and six children, burned to death. The weather that night was the coldest in twenty years. It is supposed a large fire was made before retiring and the house caught from brands rolling on the floor.

—The roof of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western round-house at Hoboken fell under the weight of snow Friday morning, killing one man and wrecking two locomotives.

—At a depth of 532 feet the Roanoke (Ill.) Mining Company struck a salt-water stream, from a gallon of which fluid a pint of prime salt can be produced. Saltworks will be established if further tests prove satisfactory.

—M. Waterman and Co., grain dealers, San Francisco, have failed for $1,500,000, with $800,000 available assets. There are fears that smaller houses are seriously affected, but money is plenty, and the banks are inclined to reuder assistance.

—The Zoological Socicty of Philadelphia refuses a gift of $50,000 on condition that one day each week their garden shall be free to the public.

—The body of Mrs. Longberry, who died of hunger and exposure, was found at Farmer City, Ill., Friday. The woman had given birth to a child before her death.

—Fire broke out in Proctor and Gamble's soap and candle works, the largest in Cincinnati. The buildings burned are the candle factory, a three story brick; the lard oil factory, three story stone; the soap and candle warehouse, two story stone, and the soap factory, a large four story brick. These are practically a total loss, with the machinery and a large quantity of stock.

—One Bilok is in prison at Decorah, Iowa, having caused the death of his wife by biting off her nose in a fit of passion.

—The Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia Railroad Company recorded a mortgage for $25,000,000 at Erie Thursday, in favor of the Philadelphia Fidelity, Insurance, Trust and Safe Deposit Company. The money will be used in extending its Western Pennsylvania and New York lines.

—The extensive dairy barns of Henry Wall, at Elgin, Ill., Jan. 7, were destroyed by fire together with their contents, consisting of hay, grain and forty-five cows. The fire was caused by the accidental overturning of a lamp in the hay-loft of one of the barns.

—The Clarence S. Bement, the largest iron ship ever built in America, was launched at Philadelphia Saturday, by the American Ship-building Company.

FOREIGN.

—Marquis Tseng asserts that the failure of England and Germany to interfere in the Tonquin imbroglio will probably result in China doubling, instead of abolishing, the tax on foreign commerce.

—An explosion in the Ferfay colliery at Arras, France, Saturday, killed seven men and wounded twelve. Five miners are missing.

—Leon Chotteau is coming to America to use his influence for the prevention of retaliatory measures against France, because of the pork prohibition.

—It has been ordered that Khartoum be evacuated, the powder destroyed, and the guns spiked. The Egyptian forces will be concentrated in the defense of Massowah and Suakim.

—At Vienna Thursday evening three men entered the shop of one Eisert, a money-changer, threw sand in his eycs, and attacked him. Eisert shouted for help, when his two children and their governess rushed to his assistance. A robber killed one of the children with an ax and fearfully wounded the other child and the goveruess. Eisert himself was mortally wounded. The men escaped with their plunder.

BUSINESS.

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

PAPER COVER, PRICE 75 cents.

The former price was 60 cents. We cannot send this book hereafter except upon receipt of 75 cents.

CYNOSURE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Received for week ending Jan. 12 from the following parties:

Geo B Hopkins, Rev C C Harrah, J W Pritchard, Rev D Thompson, Geo Carter, Rev J Excell, A C Palmer, Joseph Chapman, J Blanchard, E D Bailey, J P Stoddard (2), J F Helin, C Quick, J Walters, S Bushnell, Geo Millice, J F Ames, S A J Long, E Branch, W B Stoddard, Wm Lee, Mrs L Greene, Wm Moerdyk, Jas Stuart, J T Buckley, Sarah A Proctor, Mary E McPherson, J C Hetzel, J M Howard, W T Elliot D Yant, I Crawford, Joel M Oxley, Mrs P A Hatch, E D Olmsted, K A Orvis, Benj Rohrer, J C Heslet, R W Laughlin, H W Bryant, J F Browne, Rufina Fry, Geo Cobb, H A Orn, A N Boardman, Peter Oleson, J T Stevenson, W H Minton, T R Sheldon, Jas White, Rev J W Logue, W McNown, Mrs A E Tyler, S Austin, M C Ackerson, Rev C S Buck, C Powers, A C Lemm, Rev Joel Martin, W H Taylor, Rev W Mitchell, Rev H H George, Eld W H Pruett, John P Dops, G J Shoemaker.

FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE."

An exposition of the first three degrees of Freemasonry in every village! How can it be done? By sending to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer N. C. A., for a 32 page pamphlet, containing 40 illustrations with explanations, with the legal attestation of the pastmaster of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, as to the correctness of said exposition. We will send, postpaid, thirty (30) of these pamphlets for one dollar; sixty-five (65) for two dollars, and 165 for five dollars.

Edmund Ronayne says: "One of these pamphlets put in each family will do as much good as a public exposition would do."

Many have written: "Send a lecturer to our place, we need one very much.' This is often impossible, but the above plan is much better than no lecture; does not need a church or hall, which often cannot be had; and costs but a fraction of what a lecturer usually costs. Will you see to it that you have one of these lecturers, silent as sunlight and as powerful, in your town. If you cannot afford the dollar or five dollars yourself, you can soon collect from friends for this purpose the needed funds.

N. B. With each "Glance" will be sent an N. C. A. tract, and as the pamphlet gives an exposition of the ceremonies of the lodge the tract will give an exposition of the character of those ceremonies.

Not less than thirty sent on the above terms, and only to one address. Single copies 6 cents.

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures Nose, Throat, Lungs; full idea; 36p. ronte, cost free.

An Awful Responsibility.

EVERYBODY has something to say about consumption. We all deplore its terrible ravages, but only a few of us seem to have enough common sense to take the proper means of preventing it. It is as simple as "two and two are four," that Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, taken as a remedy for coughs, colds, difficult breathing, hoarseness, or any of the symptoms which pave the way for that terrible destroyer, will effect a radical and rapid cure of the ailment, and avert all danger. Whoever, under these circumstances, neglects to resort to the true specific, assumes a fearful responsibility. Sold by druggists.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

The Flesh Speedily Reunites

When obstinate sores are cleansed with Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Of druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, black ro brown, fifty cents.

Eminent Dr. J. J. Caldwell, Batltimore, Md., states: "I have used Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic largely in Debility, Febrile and Nervous Diseases, and I have found it one of the most reliable of nutrient tonics in use or to be found in pharmacy." (Take no other.) Of druggists.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary, the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

MARKET REPORTS.

	CHICAGO, Jan. 14, 1884.
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2		91½
No. 3		80
Rejected	74	76
Winter No 2		97½
Corn—No. 2		53¾
Rejected		45
Oats—No. 2		32¾
Rye—No. 2		58
Bran per ton		14 50
Flour—Winter	3 50	@6 00
Spring	2 25	@7 00
Hay—Timothy	6 00	@9 50
Prairie	4 00	@9 00
Lard per cwt		8 85
Mess pork per bbl		14 62
Butter, medium to best	18	@35
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	75	@2 20
Eggs		26
Potatoes per bus	30	39
Seeds—Timothy	1 15	@1 40
Clover	6 00	6 25
Flax		1 41
Broom corn	03	@ 07½
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Clear	42 00	@48 00
Common	11 00	@18 00
Shingles	2 50	@3 00
WOOL—Washed	22	@37
Unwashed	16	@26
LIVE STOCK—Cattle extra	6 50	@7 00
Good	5 75	@6 35
Medium	5 20	@5 70
Common	2 25	@4 75
Hogs	5 10	@6 25
Sheep	3 25	@4 35
NEW YORK MARKETS.
Flour	2 80	@6 50
Wheat—Winter	75	@1 12
Spring		@1 05½
Corn	50	@65
Oats	39	@44
Mess Pork		14 75
Lard		9 20
Eggs		30
Butter	10	@41
Wool	10	@45

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED.

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.

C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

WM. W. FARWELL

Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.

76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD

Attorney and Counselor at Law

79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

McShane Bell Foundry

Manufactnre those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogue sent free. Address H. McSHANE & Co., Baltimore, Md.

IT PAYS to sell our Hand Rubber Stamps. Samples free. FOLJAMBE & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

PATENTS NO PATENT! NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent FREE

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Send stamps for NEW LAWS. COL. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 18. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1884. WHOLE No. 717.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.
J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Editorial Correspondence—Washington Items; a Third Party..... 8
Joseph Cook..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Masonic Grand High Priest a name of Blasphemy..... 1
Short Sermon..... 2
A Slave Mother Burying her Child (Poetry)..... 2
A Duty at the Threshold of Reform..... 2
A Glaring Contradiction.. 2
Open Letter to Eld. Pruett 3
The South and its Problem..... 4
SELECTED:
Done with it..... 3
A Fearful Picture of Lodgery..... 3
REFORM NEWS:
From the General Agent; Reform Work in New Hampshire..... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Inskip and the Holiness Movement; Striking Evidence; Complicity with Evils; Temperance in Kansas; Robert Morris; Union in Christ; Pith and Point..... 5
Testimony Accumulating.. 4
A Good Letter..... 4
A New Helper..... 9
Pitiable..... 9
AMERICAN POLITICS:
Notice; An Inquiry..... 9
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
SHORT STORIES..... 7
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
LITERARY..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
Shipwreck..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

CHEAPEST AND BEST.

In the whole range of the literature of our reform there is nothing cheaper than the Cynosure. Compute the amount of reading in each number and multiply it by fifty-two, and the result will be a surprise that so much can be furnished for $2.00. No book or pamphlet provides so much in proportion to the cost. As for the variety and quality of their work, the writers for the Cynosure are among the best and most conscientious and intelligent Christians in the world. To surpass their work would be difficult. Let them be sustained by increasing the circulation of the paper by thousands.

If each one will add to his effort for a good cause the name of a new subscriber, enclosing $4.00 for both, the sender may have also his choice of the following valuable pamphlets:

1. The Batavia Convention pamphlet, with the great speeches on that occasion, illustrations of the Morgan Monument, etc.; or

2. Egypt in History and Prophecy; or, Pharaoh proclaiming God, by the celebrated Robert Patterson, from Hasting's Anti-infidel Library; or

3. The Anti-masonic Scrap Book, a new and enlarged edition now in press, containing all the tracts published by the N. C. A.; or

4. The Island of Madagascar; the excellent history written by Gen. J. W. Phelps and noticed in a late Cynosure.

5. Copies of any of the pamphlets sold by the N. C. A., to the amount of 25 cents.

A CLUB OF FIVE

trial subscribers (two months for 25 cents) will just now be a valuable accession to the Cynosure list. To every friend who will get one up and enclose the $1.25 and addresses plainly written we will send either of the documents mentioned above.

FOR A CLUB OF TEN the sender may choose any two from the above list.

Get the Cynosure circulated in your town. The lodge does not thrive where it is read.

The outcry against the Hungarians in the coke regions about Connellsville in south-western Pennsylvania would be only amusing, if we did not remember that a similar objection, howled about by Dennis Kearney, at last got enough of that peculiar and vicious influence which operates in politics and the lodge made the words, "The Chinese must go," a law of the land. If their opposers work in the caucus well they can make Congress tremble—and the Hungarians go. If antipathy would listen to reason it would do to suggest that a country that gave the world a Kossuth might give America many good citizens were they taken by the hand and taught our religion and laws. The objection against foreign immigrants is most reasonable when directed against the proselytes of Mormonism. It is a wonder that somebody has not proclaimed "The Mormons must go" long since. Let it be re-echoed till Congress shall hear, heed and act.

A story of considerable popularity and merit has been running for several months in the Century and has been issued in book form by the Harper's of New York. The anonymous author has treated the secret labor lodges with much severity, portraying them graphically in the work as convenient agencies for demagogues and tyrants of small caliber by which they can fill their own pockets at the expense of the over-confiding laborer. We know some such men in Chicago—too lazy to work for themselves they are diligent promoters of the labor lodges, and are very convenient officers for such societies. The author above-mentioned in reply to one who objected to these features of the story, writes: "If I could make one workingman see that, in joining a secret society which compels him by oath to give up his conscience and his children's bread to the caprice or ambition of any 'Master Workman' or 'Executive Council,' he is committing an act of folly whose consequences he cannot foresee, and placing himself in the power of an utterly irresponsible despotism, I should be better satisfied than if I should turn out what Mr. Shriver and Mr. Offitt would consider 'permanently valuable work.'" The brilliant writer thus approves a great principle which stands forever and invincibly opposed to the whole array of secret lodges. No man who has obligations to God, through the church, the family or the state has any right to swear himself into perpetual and blind obedience to an "irresponsible despotism."

The conviction of the Ku-Klux at Atlanta, Georgia, does not show the whole of the picture. Similar trials in South Carolina were carried on at almost the risk of life by the United States judge and district attorney. The latter was threatened in court and the judge received soon after a notice to pack up and leave. Both think the question of night-riding and brutal intimidation settled and are not greatly moved. But both Wade Hampton and Butler, well known as the leader in one of the most ferocious negro massacres, are bitterly hostile to the attorney for no conceivable reason but his prosecution of the Ku-Klux.

The fact that General Gordon, the English officer who is generally known by the sobriquet of "Chinese" Gordon, has been associated with Stanley in the internal development of Africa, is understood to have some bearing on the slave business. Gordon was with Baker when the slave trade was suppressed in upper Egypt. His services will be useful in the Stanley enterprise, and the immense influence gained by the latter over the tribes of the interior along the Congo is a promise of success. France wants the whole country now being developed by Stanley, but Portugal has a prior claim, but one which Christendom cannot afford to recognize, since it means a perpetuation of the slave trade and wars among the tribes, as well as the suppression of every effort to introduce Christianity and civilization. The Stanley movement will doubtless soon receive international recognition. Leopold of Belgium, is now its chief patron.

Later advices tell us that the appointment of General Gordon to Western Africa has been countermanded by the British government because of the popular demand for his services in the Soudan, his old field of action, against the hordes of the False Prophet. The successes of the latter are exciting much apprehension in Egypt. Radical cabinet changes and even a talk of the resignation of the Khedive are among the political effects, while great uneasiness among the Mohammedan population in Cairo and Alexandria is a source of apprehension. The advice of England, to abandon the Soudan while protecting the adjacent Red Sea ports, was adopted by the Khedive, but a modified plan may be adopted. Gordon urges that the territory west of the Nile only be given up to the victorious native tribes. The reports of a successful assault upon Khartoum by the False Prophet are already published but may be unfounded. Should it prove true this outbreak of Mohammedan fanaticism in central Africa will have a powerful effect upon the morbid fancies of that sect throughout the Eastern world, and the task of restraining its course will become doubly arduous.

THE MASONIC "GRAND HIGH PRIEST," A NAME OF BLASPHEMY.

BY REV. DAVID THOMPSON.

An inspired writer informs us what is the special duty of a High Priest in the following language: "Every High Priest taken from among men, is ordained for man in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins." That he may do this with Divine acceptance, we are further informed, that he must be called of God, as was Aaron. Heb. 5: 1, 4.

Now we would ask the Masonic Grand High Priest what gifts and sacrifices for sins does he offer to the Supreme Being? Are they human sacrifices, such as William Morgan and others? The Mormons, we are told, have a "Blood Atonement." Have they a Grand High Priest to make such an atonement? If such is his office, has he been called of God as was Aaron? Certain it is, God never appointed such sacrifices.

During the dark ages of paganism, human sacrifices were offered to Moloch, and other demons; for says Paul, "What the Gentiles sacrificed, they sacrificed to devils, and not to God, and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils." 1 Cor. 10: 20. The Christian's High Priest, as the anti-type of the priests under the law, "has appeared in the end of the world to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself," and "by one offering he hath forever perfected those that are sanctified," and with the much incense of his merits, he presents to Him who sits on the Throne, the prayers of his people. Rev. 8: 3. Our High Priest glorified his Father on earth, and finished the work which the Father gave him to do—he "finished transgression, made an end of sins, made reconciliation for iniquity and brought in everlasting righteousness," and the Father expressed himself as "well pleased for his righteousness because he magnified the law and made it honorable." He is the only Mediator between God and man, and no man cometh to the Father but by him. 1 Tim. 2: 5; John 14: 6.

Under the law of Moses, the stranger, or person not of the order of Aaron who would presume to offer sacrifice, was adjudged to death—he committed a capital offence. The Levites were to set up the Tabernacle, and take it down, during the journeys of the Israelites in the wilderness, and the stranger who officiously would presume to perform that service, was to be put to death. Num. 1: 51. The Sovereign Lawgiver of the universe said to Moses, "Thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they shall wait on their priest's office, and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death." Num. 3: 10. This solemn warning is reiterated as follows: "Thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for everything of the altar and within the vail, and ye shall serve; I have given your priest's office unto you as a service of gift, and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death." Num. 18: 7. These were not vain threatenings like the penalties of human laws which are often not executed. "Hath God said it, and shall he not do it? hath he spoken and shall he not make it good?" Read the doom of Korah, Dathan and Abiram and their company. For usurping the priest's office the earth opened and swallowed them up. Num. 16. For offering strange fire which the Lord commanded them not, Nadab and Abihu were consumed with fire. Lev. 10. The punishment of King Uzziah is recorded as a warning to presumptuous men, who might aspire to the priest's office without a Divine call to the same. He was smitten with leprosy and driven out of the Temple for his temerity in offering incense. 2 Chron. 26. Still another example of the Divine displeasure is recorded on Uzzah for invading the priest's office: notwithstanding his good intention, he was stricken dead for taking hold of the sacred Ark to keep it from being shaken on the cart. 2 Sam. 6:6, 7.

God reveals himself as a jealous God, even a consuming fire; and he declares that he will not give his glory to another, nor his praise to graven images. Isa. 42:8. Christ has a name above every name, and no mortal should usurp any of his names or titles. For any person to call himself Grand High Priest is to rob our glorious Mediator of one of his titles. That he does not punish the robber as he did Korah and his company is a display of his patience and forbearance. One day with him, however, is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

When the Masonic fraternity have "Grand High Priests," this title implies that they have subordinate priests. Who are they, and what is their function? Do they assist the Pontifex Maximus, or 'Grand High Priest" in offering sacrifice? Will any follower of Christ give this sacrilegious name to a poor worm of the dust, perhaps a profligate, or infidel? "Be not partaker of other men's sins" "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." "My soul come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly my honor be not thou united." Elihu would not give flattering titles unto men lest God should take him away. Job 32:21, 22.

If any Christian has accepted one of the titles of God's eternal Son, or if he has given it to a fellow mortal, let him humbly implore pardon and sin no more.

Monmouth, Ill.

SHORT SERMON.

TEXT:—Refuse profane and old wive's fables.

MY BRETHREN:—There is a certain tract of country upon this globe where the people revere a white elephant. They stand in awe of him; furnish him with a palace; feed him from off gold dishes; go to war for his possession, and, whenever he walks forth, bow before him even unto the earth. For, say they, the spirits of dead heroes have gone into him, and have made him divine.

There is also another region of the globe where folks stand in awe of a certain mysterious organization. They deem it the most ancient, the most honorable, and the most moral of all other organizations in the world, dating its origin from the very beginning of light. They bestow upon it almost all their offices, secular and divine; give it especial privileges before their courts; devote their newspapers to its praise; regard it as more sacred than the religion whose rites they observe; declare that the souls of great men, like Washington, Andrew Jackson and Andrew Johnson have gone into it; turn pale at times at the very mention of its name; hardly dare breathe its most sacred word; make strange gestures before it, etc., etc. In short, this organization, though the work of a set of knaves, is regarded as of more value even than the white elephant; and men therefore bow before it even unto the earth.

But my friends, we are told in Scripture that we must reject such old wive's fables. They are not fit for men, nor even for children. They are unseemly, indecent, despicable.

My friends, considering all the circumstances of the case, which do you regard as the greater degredation to humanity—the worship of the white elephant, or that which is paid to the Masonic lodge? Which is the most brutifying of the two worships? They who worship the elephant have never known any better, while those who honor the lodge, do so in direct violation of all the teachings of their sacred writings. They do not reject old wive's fables, but receive them; teach them, and practice them, in violation of their own professions of civil and religious obligation.

My brethren; all the pretenees of the lodge to sanctity, to piety, to honor, to morality, to virtue—are a mere "profane fable," uttered in the wantonness of infidel drunkenness and profanity. Even a Christian wife, however old and inane she might be, would disgrace herself by believing in such a fable as the Masonic lodge. The "oldest member" of this lodge, whose memory is so much revered when he comes to die, is not possessed of half the value of the conductor of a white elephant. The sacred monkey of India is more entitled to respect than such a man, for he has rejected the blood that was offered for his redemption, and bound himself over, under the penalty of his own blood, to do the bidding of a set of ringsters. The good that he pretended to do was in the name of the lodge, an old wife's fable, and not of Christ.

My friends, if you must indulge in "old wive's fables" as necessary to your spiritual comfort, I pray you, when you come to cast your vote for a President, or a preacher, or a teacher; when you claim to control me by the exercise of your right as a free man, then please be a free man, and never vote for a Freemason. SO MOTE IT BE.

THE SLAVE MOTHER BURYING HER CHILD.

BY REV. J. BLANCHARD.

[The following touching lines were written for Geo. W. Clark, the Liberty vocalist, while singing for Freedom in Cincinnati, nearly forty years ago.]

The slave mother leaned on her mattock full weary,
At the gray of the dawn, in that home of the dead,
While the tall city's shade made each green grave look dreary,
Tho' spangled with tears, which kind nature had shed,
But she recked not that cold dews were falling around her,
Tho' weary with toil, and tho' fainting for food,
For the last tie had broke which to feeling had bound her,
And chilled e'en the fondness for life in her blood.

Her children, as mothers love, once she had loved them,
But sold were they all, save that corpse by her side;
God saw all her fears for her child and removed them,
And her last pulse of hope, with her last babe had died;
O then, though she knew, when its young eyes first met her,
In language of smiles which the lips could not speak,
And she thought, that its safety in death were far better
Than the joy she had felt when it breathed on her cheek.

And she prayed, as she turned to her strange task, preparing
The shroudless and coffinless rest for her child;
That soon her torn breast, her babe's rest might be sharing,
Her heart no more wrung, and her brain no more wild,
And she said, tho' around her damp vapors aspirant,
Rose chill from the moist turf which covered the grave;
That earth was less cold, than the heart of a tyrant,
And death far less drear than the life of a slave.

A DUTY AT THE THRESHOLD OF REFORM.

BY AN OLD CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER.

"Men ought always to pray and not to faint." Luke 18:1.

The term "men" is generic. It means every individual of the human race, of course every friend of the reform. It means you, each individual, name by name.

"Ought" is a word with an infinite depth of meaning. Behind it and in it is God. It is the point of contact between God and men. It grasps the whole being and relations of man. God is such, his holiness, goodness, wisdom, greatness, eternity and power; his relations to men are such, maker, redeemer, saviour and sanctifier; his work is such, the salvation, sanctification and glorification of men; man is such, his ruin, weakness, dependence and need; sin and death are such, Satan and the world are such, man's relation to God is such, made in his likeness, in a limited sense of a common nature, a co-worker with God in expelling sin and saving souls, that it fills the word ought with an awful meaning. It makes constant prayer a vital indispensable necessity. Without it the whole system of grace stops. God's work in and through human instruments is at an end, and sin and Satan, death and hell run riot.

Men OUGHT always to pray and not to faint. Not simply repeat words of petition. It is a work for which men must be qualified. They must have a new nature and become like God. They must have God in them, working in them and through them. The great ends God has in view must be the ends for which they struggle and pray. God's glory, the destruction of sin and Satan, eternal triumph over death and hell, perfect victory over all that offends God or injures men. They must have a faith that laughs at impossibilities, a faith that trusts, and works, and prays in the dark as well as in the light. They must pray as dictated by the Holy Spirit that God will give the very things they ask. Such is the work of prayer man should engage in.

Men OUGHT always to pray. This is the divine plan. It is founded in the deepest wisdom and mightiest love. God's love can proceed in no other way. While God is the infinite source of goodness and power, and man is utterly dependent and weak, and God must work in and through and by him; and while Satan, the world, and flesh and sin are mighty and terrible to overthrow and vanquish them, men must always pray. When this divine instrumentality ceases God's work stops. When it proceeds in full vigor, it goes forward in the face of all opposition from earth or hell.

"Men ought always to pray and not to faint." Oh! how many and mighty are the causes of fainting; Jesus knew it, saw it, felt it, or he would never have given the direction. We dwell in tabernacles of flesh, and the flesh is heavy; Moses felt its weight. His hands were heavy. Aaron and Hur lifted his weary weighted hands. O that God would turn us all into Aarons and Hurs, to lift up each other's weary, heavy hands! Sin opposes. It entrenches itself in the very citadel of the soul, and spreads paralysis and death, and nothing but the power of the Holy Spirit through the blood of Christ can dislodge it, and this must be done or we shall surely faint. Satan is full of "devices" and will ply all his arts to fill us with discouragement and cause us to faint. The whole current of the world runs against us and none can stand against it, unless the infinite God is engaged in our behalf; and we shall certainly faint unless we feel the undergirdings of everlasting strength. Hoary, hardened, organized, confederate evils confront us; no mere human power can compete with them. They menace, overbear and terrify us and cause us to faint.

"True 'tis a straight and thorny road,
And mortal spirits tire and faint,
But they forget the mighty God
Who feeds the strength of every saint."

Brethren of the reform, do we not hear the voice of the Master ringing out distinct and clear through the ages, "Men ought always to pray and not to faint?" Does it not come down like a benediction into our souls; expelling all faintness and fear; filling us with courage and strength; giving us the spirit of all prayer; pouring out the spirit of grace and supplications; bringing God into the work of the reform; raising up friends on the right hand and on the left; clothing the people of God with grace and humility; setting forward the work of reform, so that all shall behold it and say, "Behold, what hath God wrought?"

A GLARING CONTRADICTION.

When I was about taking the Masonic oath, I was told on the honor of a man and a Mason it would not conflict with any of my duties as a Christian or a citizen.

Now let us examine this matter from a citizen's standpoint. After the above assurance the Master of the lodge proceeded to administer the oath which bound me to conceal and never reveal any of the secrets of a brother Master Mason, "Murder and treason excepted." This language necessarily includes all other criminal acts which may be committed by a brother Master Mason, such as theft, slander, adultery, man-stealing, and so on to the end of the catalogue. And that the commission of crime is included in the secrets of a Master Mason is self-evident since the commission of murder and treason only release me from my oath, and that in strict harmony with the language of the oath all crimes may be committed by a "worthy brother," murder and treason not excepted; all of which I am bound to "conceal and never reveal" (with the above exception) when committed by a brother Mason.

Now what are my duties as a citizen of the state or community in which I live?

1. To be a worthy citizen I must keep the law inviolate myself, nor will the state recognize me as a worthy citizen knowing that I am a violator of its laws.

2. My neighbors' houses are being robbed, or their horses are being stolen; the tongue of slander is ruining their good name and I know who the guilty parties are, and to be a true and worthy citizen I must see to it that the guilty parties are arrested and punished for their crimes against the state, for injury done to the individual in person or property is a crime against the state, and as a citizen I cannot "conceal and never reveal" those crimes without making myself a party to their evil influences, hence an enemy to the state. Neither can I lend my influence in any way to screen the guilty from the just penalty of the law and remain a true and loyal citizen.

Now for the application. If I conceal or in any way protect my brother Mason in his crimes I make myself an enemy of the State, and this I must do if I adhere to Masonry, and consider myself bound to the rotten carcass "by an obligation stronger than human hands can impose."

Since I cannot at all times be a loyal Mason and a true citizen I hereby absolve myself from my obligation to the worshipers of Osirus, under the new name of Hiram Abiff.

Here let me say to my brother Masons, come out like men and defend your institution, or by your silence acknowledge your guilt, "hold up your hands and receive your sentence."

Delavan, Ill.

SHORT STORIES.

John L. McMillan, who is making a type-setting machine in Ilion, N. Y., with which he expects to set $5,000 ems an hour, says that $500,000 was spent on the Alden type-setting and distributing machine before it was given up as impracticable, and that $1,000,000 was wasted on the Page machine, which patent subsequently sold for $10,000.

In Mr. Spurgeon's inexhaustible fund of illustrative stories is one of a man who used to say to his wife: "Mary, go to church and pray for us both." But the man dreamed one night, when he and his wife got to the gate of heaven, Peter said: "Mary, go in for both." He awoke and made up his mind that it was time for him to become a Christian on his own account.

Within the last six months the railway postal service has been extended over 5,000 miles of road, mainly in the South and Southwest. As this extension was to accommodate the commercial interests of this section, it furnished good evidence of the material progress of those regions, and in a measure accounts for the fact that there has been less complaint of dullness of business there than in any other part of the country.

A colored woman near Selma has a reading-school for women, with forty pupils between the ages of thirty and eighty. One of these aged pupils came to school with a borrowed primer, and when asked if she was not too old to learn, replied: "I know my time is almost out here, but I would like to learn just to spell the word God, then I shall be satisfied."

After three years of acquaintance with educational matters in twelve Southern States, Dr. A. D. Mayo, of Boston, bears this testimony in the Independent: In regard to the generosity of the people in the support of education, it may be said that, last year, the South paid $15,000,000 for schools; more than $12,000,000 for public schools, open to both races. This $15,000,000 signifies to the Southern people far more than the $70,000,000 expended by the powerful and prosperous North The Southern people have certainly spent $30,000,000 or $40,000,000 on education since 1865, without reckoning the Peabody education fund, the donation of a citizen of a Southern State, given from affection to the Southern people. No less than $7,000,000 has been given by residents of these States for the endowment of the higher education of white students, to say nothing of the perpetual gift of time and money by the proprietors and instructors in all classes of the academical schools. I doubt if the history of the world presents an instance of greater efforts, sacrifices and expenditures for education under circumstances so discouraging as in the South during the period named.

"Josh Billings" has published a cook book and pictorial proverbs as his latest contribution to literature. Freed from their bad spelling, the following are some of his best sayings: "The man who gets bit twice by the same dog is better adapted for that kind of business than any other. There is a great deal of religion in this world that is like a life-preserver—only put on at the moment of immediate danger, and then half the time put on hind side before. Experience is a school where a man learns what a big fool he has been. The man who doesn't believe in any hereafter has got a dreadfully mean opinion of himself and his chances. There are two kinds of fools in this world—those who can't change their opinions and those who won't. A good doctor is a gentleman to whom we pay three dollars a visit for advising us to eat less and exercise more. Out in the world men show us two sides to their character; by the fireside only one. The world is filling up with educated fools—mankind read too much and learn too little. Every man has his follies; and oftentimes they are the most interesting things he has got.

According to an exchange, the failing of the Comstock mines brings hopeless ruin upon Virginia City. This place and Gold Hill, which is practically a part of the same town, had 35,000 inhabitants eight years ago; merchants with $1,000,000 capital, a score or more men worth from $300,000 to $30,000,000 each, private homes that cost $100,000, and hotels and everything else to match. Now there are but 5,000 inhabitants, nearly all miners and gamblers; the fine houses are all carried away or abandoned; real estate cannot be sold for the amount of the taxes; nothing can be sold which is not worth carrying away; and in a little time the gorgeous city must entirely disappear. There have been $285,000,000 worth of gold and silver taken from the Comstock mines, and this within a distance of half a mile.

Vertigo, Hysterics, Convulsions—all nervous disorders in fact—are cured by Samaritan Nervine.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other standard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.75
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Conn., J. L. Barlow of Willimantic.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Kansas, P. S. Feemster, Pearlette.
Missouri, M. N. Butler of Albany.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
Michigan, H. A. Day, Parma.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Vermont, O. C. Bailey.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

S. E. Starry, Clarence, Iowa.
Jas. Furguson, " "
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Promise City, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Baker, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perrry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans.
D. A Richards Clarkville Mich

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

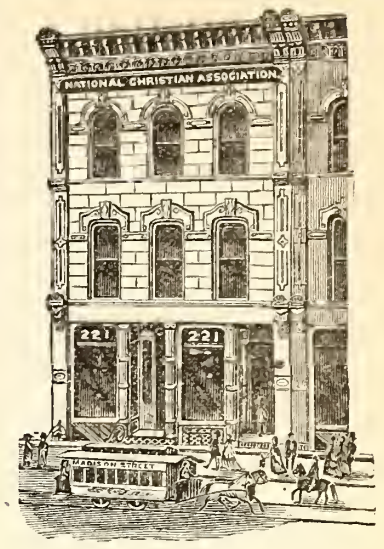
Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Presbyterian church, Hoopeston, Ill.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

NOTICE.

Persons write occasionally, saying, "I sent a remittance so and so, but the tag on my paper it not changed." Such inquiries are proper, and the explanation is this: when a subscription is received it is entered at once on the book and the letter filed for future reference if needed, but the printed mailing list is not changed until a sufficient number are received to require the printing of a new list. If but few subscriptions are received, the change may be delayed for a month or more, but when the list fills up rapidly it requires frequent revision. If the date on your paper is not changed within four weeks after you remit it is the safest way to drop a card to this office

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H Ross and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec. M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas. C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres., B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas. J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1884.

A GOOD BEGINNING

has been made by the friends of the anti-lodge reform in self-denying, personal efforts for their paper. Seldom, if ever, have the responses been so numerous and hearty. Nobody will deny that this is a good work that should be kept up as much as possible throughout the year; but especially at this season are efforts for the list of the Cynosure successful, and they should be continued with zeal and determination as long as possible. Remember that our cause—that every good cause—prevails only by steady, PERSISTENT, PERSONAL EFFORT.

AN EASY TASK.

To get two month's subscribers for 25 cents will not be found a difficult work, if you fail in securing a yearly subscription. Each copy of the Cynosure is equal to an ordinary pamphlet of 80 pages. Eight such pamphlets for a quarter of a dollar is not extravagance by far. Let every reader of this paper present this matter to his neighbors.

PRESIDENT SEELYE of Amherst College has lately given a powerful prohibition temperance discourse—published in the New York Tribune. The lodge and certain Episcopalians of Amherst are secret foes of President Seelye, but he grows more and more popular with the men who founded and built the college and the voters who sent him to Congress.

THE CONGREGATIONALIST perpetrates a joke on the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of English Masons, because he insists that the lodge must be religious. Truly the Congregationalist is growing Anti-masonic.

BEFORE ALBERT PIKE could get his Indians to fight against the U. S. flag he bought fifty, or thereabouts, of their leaders, and swore them into the lodge by an interpreter here in Washington. More of this soon.

The New York Weekly Witness which circulates one hundred and fifteen thousand copies, comes out strong for a third reform party. The editor, John Dougall, Esq., founder of the great Montreal Witness, has invited the editor of the Cynosure to send the Witness a weekly Washington letter, and he has consented.

The Bible is all intensely generic. Thus: "Commit thy way unto the Lord [Jesus Christ] trust also in him and he shall bring it to pass;" is a promise to all mankind, two-thirds of whom are lifting some burden or seeking some needed end. Perhaps this promise covers the case of brutes as well, "young lions" and "young eagles" who "seek their meat from God" who "openeth his hand and satisfieth the desire of every living thing."

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

MR. CHAS. R. BOOSTROM of Western Normal College of Bushnell writes: "There are twenty young men here ready to join a Blanchard and Conant Club." He asks for a form.

SECRETARY STODDARD writes: "Mr. and Mrs. Capwell will be at the Washington Convention." Donald Kirkpatrick of Syracuse, N. Y., says he expects to be at the Washington Convention.

PROF. BAILEY has called on the lady lawyer, Mrs. Belva Lockwood. She says: "There is scarce one man or woman in Washington who does not belong to some secret society." She knows more of this city, doubtless, than any other woman.

NORTH CAROLINA, an advanced State on temperance has two members in Congress; one in each end of the Capitol. The Senator is called for short "Zeb," and the Representative "Bob." Bob is a professed Christian and Prohibitionist; Zeb is neither; but they are both very pleasant gentlemen. Both were Confederate generals. Gen. Bob met and helped Miss Willard. Zeb said, "My heart and conscience are on the side of prohibition, but my stomach is against it. I must settle the stomach question before I can go in for prohibition." The wit and frankness of the saying has carried it through the State of North Carolina and the Capitol.

JOSEPH COOK has given two lectures, last night and the night before. Dr. Rankin's great church was full. Prof. Bailey and myself saw Mr. Cook at his hotel. He says, "I will see about attending your conventions; at any rate will write you a letter." Prof. Bailey will correspond with him. If he consents to attend our N. E. Convention Northampton Town-house will not hold the people.

A THIRD PARTY.

The New York Weekly Witness says, "Never were the prospects so bright for a National Prohibition party." * * * "If neither party shall adopt such a plank [i. e., as Prohibition] then a National Prohibition party will be put in the field, which will secure the support of all temperance elements; those who have heretofore stood aloof from the third party movements, as well as those who have promoted them."

When we consider that these strong, sound words are addressed by the Witness to four or five hundred thousand readers; and those readers too, who are most apt to carry their principles into practice, the above utterances, and the whole editorial from which they are taken are full of hopeful augury.

But we need not, the Witness need not, wait till next June 3d to learn that a prohibition plank would split the platform of either of the old parties. Let us see. "The bright particular star" of the Republican party, in the temperance horizon, is Kansas. In this State the regular Republican convention regularly nominated St. John on a regularly adopted Prohibition platform; yet the party leaders defeated him and elected Gov. Glick, a Lecompton Democrat and professed open secessionist during the war, and a saloon-license man on the day of his election.

Another Star Republican State is Iowa, which carried a constitution amendment (Prohibition) by thirty thousand majority. The Republican courts have vetoed that vote of the people of Iowa, and in the last fall electioneering, the Republican Governor Sherman, was shown by his own official records, book and page, to have cancelled, by the hundred dollars, the fines by law imposed on the vilest and most defiant of the saloon-keepers in the State of Iowa; and let us ask in all candor of every Republican voter in Iowa, what else was to have been expected, when that governor and those saloon men are Masons, in known and sworn secret alliance with each other? And Hon. J. B. Grinnell is now (Jan. 15th) here in Washington, and addressed the "Iowa Republican Association on Monday night, urging the members to use every effort to contribute to the success of the party in the ensuing election." (Star, Jan. 15.)

Now this Mr. Grinnell is a prominent member of a church, belonging to the Iowa Congregational Association, which has expressly testified against the secret lodges; yet in the Triennial Congregational convention in Chicago, this gentleman spoke and voted in favor of giving the money of Congregational churches to educate Freemasons and Odd-fellows for Congregational pulpits, against the resolution offered by the Rev. S. B. Goodenow. And, in the three days' Prohibition convention in Chicago, which started "the National Prohibition and Home Protection Party," Mr. Grinnell kept the Iowa delegation from joining in that movement. His ground was that the Republican party was a prohibition party, while its Gov. Sherman was pardoning and cancelling the fines of his Masonic saloonist brethren; and its Republican courts were vetoing the peoples vote for prohibition. And in Chicago, where the convention sat, the Cook county Republican convention put forth the worst liquor platform which their language could frame: and Cook county includes Chicago.

The Democrats are as deep in liquor as the Republicans. There is neither wisdom nor prudence in waiting till next June, when by some tariff or trifling scare, the people will be committed to parties ruled by liquor and the lodge, before we run up the white flag of reform. J. B.

JOSEPH COOK.

This is a wonderful man. He is the Moody of moral metaphysics, sent of God into the arena of Philosophy to > "Whip with satire keen

> The happy pack which has disgraced the scene."

As Moody, without school learning, has come to show how contemptible is theological lore in the hands of ministers and professors whose gospel indicates no evils and saves nobody (not even from tobacco, whisky or the sworn swindle of secret societies, which "privily bring in damnable heresies, denying the Lord that bought them"), and yet a ministry who arch their "eye-brows" and talk "orthodoxy," "Calvinism," "Liberalism," "Americanism," the "Perseverance of the Saints" and even the "Divinity of Christ," while they commune with his lodge-contemners—so Mr. Cook has come out of the Adirondac Mountains from near the grave of John Brown to cleanse the temple of human philosophy, as his Divine Master cleansed the Temple of God.

Mr. Cook's mind is like his body; and his genius like both. Stout, but not obese; rugged, yet not rude—he resembles some mighty machine which can grind up rocks and cut off hairs.

"Evolution," he exclaims, "can evolve everything but itself." "There must be an evolver behind evolution, as there must be a weaver behind a web, a harper to make the music, or a rower to push the boat."

"Life," he says, "precedes body and produces motion; not follows it. It is cause, not effect, and so can dissolve and disappear while the effect remains entire." Alluding to Voltaire's sharp saying, "When the eagle has eaten the sparrow, what becomes of its song?" he argued: "Yes; but the soul is not the song, nor the body which the eagle eats; but the life which brought that sparrow out of the egg; body is effect, a following thing, and so may die or dissolve, and leave the soul, as the poet Tom Cambell's "Last Man," to light its torch at the fire which burns the world up, and

> "——the darkening Universe defy
> To quench his immortality
> Or shake his trust in God."

And if, as Bishop Butler argues, the patent, obvious, universal fact, that mind produces motion while matter cannot move itself; if this fact should give hope of some sort of futurity to brutes, this would not disturb sound reason or Mr. Cook, who holds with Shakespeare,

> "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
> Than are dreampt of in our philosophy."

Having exposed the gross assumptions, and illogical fallacies of "the oppositions of science, falsely so called," Mr. Cook came down to Thos. Paine

> "As if an eagle flew aloft, and then,
> Stooped from his mountain perch to pounce a wren."

He admitted that Mr. Paine aided us in our Revolution. That was his praise; and he was well paid for it. But he became a drunkard and his ideas and character sunk to the low level of his habits. The gentle, honorable and humane Washington Irving, in his "Salmagundi" said, "he was glad that red was so popular a color, for it is the color of my own slippers and Thomas Paine's nose." And the boys in the streets of New York, had a ditty running:

> "Thomas Paine shines from afar,
> His nose is like a blazing star."

Yet the whole stock-in-trade of the modern champion of shallow material atheism is but a rehash of the bold assertions and vulgar charlatanism of one in whom truth and virtue were lost in liquor.

Neither Mr. Cook nor Mr. Moody were ever licensed or ordained. This is a fearful reflection on the popular ministry and churches. God sends prophets to recall men from practical errors and sins. But the Hebrew prophets so failed in this, that they gradually sunk through popularity into popular contempt, and honest earnest men first laid aside the dress and then the office of messengers of God. Zech. 13: 4, 5. John Rogers wrote, "Few rare and worthy men continue such to the end." Let us hope these great and good men may prove exceptions, and live and labor to life's end, that God will not cast them away from his presence and take not his Holy Spirit from them. Ps. 51: 11.

—Bro. Stoddard, who expected to spend the Sabbath in Middlefield, Ohio, and reach Oberlin on Tuesday, finds that the Morgan tragedy is yet a living influence in western New York. The revived memories of some old people yet living gives daily some new coloring of certainty and of horror. The Lockport Journal prints at length from the Cynosure some of the communications lately published in our columns. At New Fane where Bro. S. spoke last week Tuesday, crowds came out to hear about that stone weight. It made a ponderous text.

—Several students have been lately expelled from Monmouth College for connection with secret fraternities. The evil, which took root there some fifteen years ago, seems to spring to life again from the roots though several times thoroughly cut down. A Monmouth correspondent of the American Freeman, speaking of the literary societies, says: "Monmouth has long excelled in efficiency and thorough drill of the societies. But a marked change has taken place within the past two years. Two parties have arisen in the societies known as the Fret, and Anti-Fret; that is, the fraternity boys and the hanger-on and the anti-fraternity boys. These parties are at sword's-point, and by their constant squabbling and figuring against each other they have sapped the strength of the societies so that the work done during the past two years has amounted to comparatively nothing except it be in studying up the constitution and rules of the order." It is hoped that the last exercise of discipline against the fraternities, which came as soon as they discovered themselves to the faculty, will give peace.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INSKIP AND THE HOLINESS MOVEMENT.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 16th, 1884.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The letter of J. Steer in the Cynosure of the 10th inst., about Dr. Inskip and his co-laborer (I suppose Wm. McDonald), brings to my mind an interview I had with the latter a few years ago at "Red Rock camp-meeting."

A mutual acquaintance, who walks in the uneven ways of the Fellows who call themselves Odd, introduced me to him; and having heard that W. McDonald was a Freemason, I plainly asked him if such was the case. He replied that he was a Freemason. He also told me that he knew of nothing wrong about Freemasonry, and that he had just seen a man in Wisconsin who was a monomaniac in his opposition to Freemasonry. His attention was called to the Scripture, Leviticus 5: 4, 5; to which he replied, "I do not propose to confess that I sinned in joining the Masons;" and abruptly turning from me he joined his fellow Masons on the platform, where he preached a sermon on "Perfect Love," at the close of which a great many church members pressed forward to the altar to seek that blessing—perfect love.

What did he mean by telling us that he had just seen a man who was a monomaniac in his opposition to Freemasonry? I have met a great many men who oppose Freemasonry but never one whom I thought had anything like monomania upon that subject. People are not apt in this easy-going age of religion to become monomaniacs in opposing such an abomination as Freemasonry; and I cannot help thinking that he was indulging in the common Masonic slang which Freemasons love to hurl at righteous men who hate that Masonic abomination. Perhaps, before the intelligent readers of the Christian Cynosure, further comment upon him is unnecessary. The holiness that is found in Masonic lodges is not the kind that will stand the judgment flames.

In regard to Dr. Inskip, he said in 1875 at the Cedar Rapids' Iowa, camp-meeting, that he found he could accomplish more by preaching holiness than by preaching hell. And I have observed that the subject of hell is a very disagreeable subject to many of the holiness people. Preaching about hell implies the righteous anger of a righteous God in active operation upon the souls of people who die in their sins, which is not congenial to a sentimental holiness with the element of righteousness left out.

It is safe to say that if a minister deliberately contemplates the leaving out of any doctrine of Christ or his apostles well known to that minister, or if he deliberately and systematically refuses to rebuke in his congregation that which he knows to be iniquity, he is preaching another gospel, and the Scriptures admonish him of his end. The position in that editorial paragraph in question, if Dr. Inskip's intentions can be said to be good, is, it seems to me, well taken. W. FENTON.

STRIKING EVIDENCE.

WESTON, Mich., Jan. 8, 1884.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Thinking some of your readers would like to hear from this part of the field once more I take the liberty to send you a few lines for publication. There is no paper I take (and I take several), from the perusal of which I rise with more satisfaction than from the Cynosure. The pungent truths, crisply stated by cultivated minds are a feast, indeed. There is a satisfaction in reading the best thoughts of competent writers on any topic, and especially is this so when connected with a reform of this kind. And there never was more need of a faithful portrayal of the truth, the antidote of error, than now.

Society is being honey-combed and undermined by the sophistries of the lodge. By the lodge I mean secret societies of all kinds. For they are all possessed of the same views in a greater or less degree. The animating principle of all of them is, the obtaining of advantages by those inside over those outside. Incidental to this is the security felt and vouchsafed by the initiated from their clan affiliations. The temperance cause is greatly hindered by the manifest sympathy liquor sellers find in their lodge friends either in the jury box, or on the bench, or both. No deserving man can fail to see this if he will make his observations in the right quarters. And not only so, but the course of justice is seriously impeded by the same kind of obstacles. Let a Mason or an Odd-fellow be accused of a crime and how soon do his fellow-craftsmen come to his rescue, denying the charge or palliating it, or hiding the witnesses, perverting the testimony, etc.

These things are of daily occurrence. Not quite a year ago the Worshipful Master of Fairfield lodge, near here, was caught in the act of a scandalous offence against not only the law of the land, but the laws of Masonry also, lenient as they are. So scandalous and outrageous was the offence that members of the craft, though professing nothing higher than common morality and decency, felt that something must be done to save their cause from wreck. So they preferred charges against him for unmasonic conduct, in violating that part of his obligation in which he swore he would not have illicit intercourse with the sister of a brother Master Mason. And now comes the amusing part of the affair. These innocents supposed he could be tried by the blue lodge over which he presided, but they found he could only be tried by the Grand Lodge of which he was a member, and according to Masonic law he must be tried by his peers (in morals?). At the first hearing the case was dismissed for informality, and before it was presented for trial again the witnesses were reported to be unreliable, and influences had been brought to bear on the complainants out of consideration "for the good of the order." As a result the complaints were withdrawn and the Worshipful Master remains in good standing and can waltz with the wives, sisters and daughters of Masons as heretofore, and the lodge remains a stench to decent people.

Another case occurred recently at Morenci, in which the grange (the adversary's latest spawn) suffered a severe internal eruption. A Mason was charged with being accessory to an abortion and fled. His Masonic friends had influence enough in the grange, being members, to secure him a demit, which he applied for through his wife. This so disgusted the decent people belonging to the grange, that about forty of them left it never to return. But Masonry did its work of giving a criminal, through them, a good character all the same, making a cat's paw of it.

It is not a pleasant task to spread matters like these upon paper, but when will people learn that Freemasonry is opposed, in its structure and in its workings, both to true religion and sound morality, and also to good government. There can be no such thing as impartial administration of justice with lodge oath-bound men in the position of judge, jury and prisoner at the bar, or party to a suit. It is expecting too much of mortal man to suppose he will not respond to the demand of these terrible obligations which are burnt into the soul when he is initiated, passed and raised. The nature of the case requires it should be so, history proves it, and observation confirms it. It always has been the case, is now and will be so long as human nature remains as it is and this institution exists.

Reforms do not spring from the lodge. All real progress toward the elevation of the masses and toward civilization has come from the open promulgation of the truth. The church and the school-house are the great civilizers and neither of them are governed by secret signs, grips and passwords. Their language is to all, Come and drink at the fountains of divine truth and of knowledge, and when you have acquired it impart it to others. Freely ye have received, freely give. The lodge says, Keep, conceal and never reveal. The two systems are heaven-wide apart. The one is from above, the other from beneath. The one elevates, ennobles and enfranchises men. The other fastens its fetters on the souls of men, locking their lips lest they should speak the truth. "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate and I will receive you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, said the Lord Almighty." Fraternally,

C. QUICK.

COMPLICITY WITH EVILS.

MT. VERNON, Iowa.

DEAR EDITOR:—I see in the last Cynosure the renunciation of Masonry by E. J. Clemens, and apology to those he had offended. I am alwas glad for these public renunciations, and wonder why they are so few and far between, and am astonished that ministers of the M. E. church know so little of their own history as to express a hope that the church will ever separate herself from this sin as she did from slavery. The church never separated from slavery. The hand of God and Abraham Lincoln's proclamation, with the Union bayonets, separated slavery from the church; and if the church is ever clear of this lodge abomination, it will be something outside of herself that will do it. The fact is, the M. E. church from its organization to the day of Emancipation, was always a slave-holding, if not a pro-slavery, church. But General Conference, in 1864, comes out and says, we are glad to know that we as a church have ever stood foremost in opposition to it (slavery), when the fact can be clearly proven beyond successful contradiction, she has done more to prop up slavery than any other church in this nation. How such a body of grave divines as composed that conference could pass such a report is more than I can account for. It is the darkest page on their history, adding insult to injury. If the day shall ever come when the dark, infernal system of lodgery will be banished from our beloved country, by what art of legerdemain the M. E. and some other great churches will excuse themselves I cannot tell. I can fully substantiate all I say from documents in my possession.

GEORGE JOHNSTON.

TEMPERANCE IN KANSAS.

STRAWBERRY, Kans.

Probably one of the most aggravating things to the illicit grogist under the prohibition amendment, aside from prohibition itself, is to have a blatant temperance advocate get sly drinks "on tick," and never pay for them. I heard an ex-saloonist of Clifton, this county, complain of a lodge and lady-loving literary light in Clifton playing that game. Also, that the "druggists are getting rich selling liquor, while a saloon keeper's wife has to buy it secretly, keep it under the bed, and sell it slyly to those who won't get drunk." In order to protect their husbands from prosecution, I suppose.

Said he, "If temperance folks are so smart why don't they pass a law to have whisky tested, so that nothing but pure liquors could be sold? That's the right way—and not try to prohibit it, for it can never be done."

Same authority says the saloonist of West Clifton takes two gallons of high wines, costing $14, and 75c worth of drugs, of which he makes a barrel of whisky; and that the whisky usually sold by saloonists, unless manufactured as above, costs $85 to $90 a barrel.

Now in retailing, the poor fools who drink it pay about $150 per barrel for social, physical, mental and moral ruin—poison. And yet Hon. Legate, of Leavenworth, says, "There is no moral question involved in prohibition."

Stop the use of intoxicants as a beverage and see if it doesn't materially lessen the stream of souls into hell. May the arm of the Lord awake and smite the lazy, avaricious, misery-making, soul-destroying legion. Since Glick's election the saloonists are boastful and defiant, selling liquor in some cases openly. H.

ROBERT MORRIS.

How a man can expect ever to come to the light by beginning with hiding his own eyes under a Masonic hoodwink, as Robert Morris has done, seems strange. In all his modes of reasoning he seems always to have a bandage over his eyes. His arguments are more destructive to himself than to any body else. He says that Mr. Ronayne was an Irish Jesuit priest who became the Master of a Masonic lodge in America, before becoming an Anti-mason. His statement is not true; because Mr. Ronayne was never a Jesuit priest.

But if it were admitted that Robert Morris' statement is true, what does it prove? Why, it proves this, that a Jesuit priest may become the Master of a Masonic lodge in America. And if one lodge may be under the mastership of a Jesuit, why may not all the lodges of America be filled with Jesuits? How are we to know that Robert Morris himself is not in the pay of the Jesuit church? He could not possibly render a greater service to Jesuitry than he is doing by playing Freemason. His tricks are precisely of the Jesuit stamp, only they are not so masterly in their playing off. It is not impossible that Robert Morris may mean well; but if he does, he is very shallow, and could be easily made a tool of by the Jesuits. The Jesuit could hardly desire a better instrument than the Masonic lodge for effecting his purpose. And yet Robert Morris pretends not to see this! He is hoodwinked.

VOTE HIM DOWN!

—The $5,000 offered by the French Government as compensation to the missionary, Mr. Shaw, has been paid over by the French authorities. The money was not pressed for by Lord Granville, but was offered by the French Government, through the British Government, to Mr. Shaw. The French Government admit that their representatives were in error in keeping Mr. Shaw in confinement for so long a period under such painful circumstances, and they acknowledge that the treatment he received while in French hands was both harsh and uncalled for.

"UNION IN CHRIST."

Under the above caption, Bro. H. H. Hinman, writing in the Cynosure of December 20th, reviews our article on The Unity of the Church, which appeared in the issue of November 29th. We did not write for the sake of provoking controversy, but rather with a single aim to glorify God by a faithful presentation of important truth. If the article in question did really contain the five mistakes alleged by Bro. H. in his review, we fear that our zeal to glorify God was not according to knowledge, and may have been productive of great harm. Moreover, we fail to see how an article so loosely written as our reviewer would make the one in question appear, could be at the same time pronounced by him an "able" and "admirable presentation" of the subject under consideration, unless those terms were used sarcastically. We make no claim to infallibility of judgment and no claim of ability as a writer. Hence it becomes us to be always ready to humbly acknowledge our errors and mistakes when they are pointed out by others. This we hold ourself ready to do. But when errors are charged upon us in a wholesale manner we deem it our right to examine the charges and vindicate ourself against the wholesale slaughter of our literary efforts if possible.

The first mistake alleged by Bro. H. is that we "infer that it is unwise to labor for the accomplishment" of visible church unity. Letting alone the matter of fact as to whether it is unwise or not, we ask, in what sentence or passage did we make any such inference? We fail to see, and do not wish to be held responsible for an inference which Bro. H. incorrectly draws.

As a second mistake he says: "It is assumed that those who believe there ought to be 'no schism in the body' are in error and do not 'keep the unity of the Spirit.'" We assumed no such thing, as an ungarbled presentation of the statement the brother so severely criticises will show. Our words were these: "Those who decry church organization as opposed to Christian unity, and who un-Christianize all sects and members of various sects, are in gross error, and in their zeal for a visible unity, do themselves depart from the 'unity of the Spirit.'" We said it, and would repeat it with emphasis. But even when emphasized in the highest degree it can not be legitimately construed into such an assumption as our reviewer alleges.

In the same paragraph we are charged indirectly with "blackening the reputation of those who oppose" our view, as our method of defense. We are sorry to be so misunderstood. Speaking of "those who decry church organization as opposed to Christian unity and who un-Christianize all sects and members of various sects," we charged them with wanting catholicity of spirit, and stated indirectly, that the "no-sect tree is more prolific in thorns than in fruit." We made these statements deliberately, and based them on the scandalous, abusive, indecent and libelous articles we have read in certain periodicals devoted to the propagation of the no-sect or anti-sect principles, and which are sent us from time to time gratuitously. We did not and do not even now suppose Bro. H. to be under this condemnation by advocating the error specified above. Nor would we vilify any individual or class of individuals in order to defend ourself. But whoever may consider himself "blackened" or stung by the statements objected to, we believe them to be strictly true and are not inclined to retract them until they are shown to be otherwise.

Mistake number three, if it be a mistake of ours, is set forth as follows: "Our brother makes the common mistake of supposing that all who discard sects are opposed to any religious organizations," etc. We specified particularly, "Those who decry church organization as opposed to Christian unity," etc., as the class against whose error we contended. When we used the term "modern no-sectism," we used it in designating the class we had previously described. We are too obtuse to see in any statement we have made such a mistake as the brother charges upon us in the paragraph under consideration. If Bro. H. will read the article more carefully he may see that he sometimes makes mistakes himself when writing of the mistakes of others.

Bro. Hinman says: "The fourth mistake is in assuming that sects are necessary in order that there may be both unity and diversity." It seems hardly fair to charge us with such an assumption. We made the simple statement that "unity and diversity do not necessarily antagonize each other," and, to corroborate it, quoted briefly from Canon Farrar. It certainly requires an astute mind to see in this statement such an assumption as the good brother affirms.

"A fifth mistake," says Bro. H., "is in supposing that our Saviour prayed merely for spiritual unity." We deny having made, directly or indirectly, any such supposition. We expressed our belief that "there will be, ultimately, a visible unity of Christ's followers." We also said that "for the preservation of his people in spiritual unity and peace he still makes intercession before the throne of God in heaven." But this is not saying that "he prayed merely for spiritual unity." Suppose, however, that our brother prove to us, that in the prayer referred to, our Saviour did pray for the visible unity of the Church, since he has assumed it in endeavoring to make out his case against our article. The writer, for one, would be interested in the proof.

In conclusion our reviewer urges the existing state of spiritual delusion in the great religious denominations as an argument (so we suppose) for the no-sect theory. But most of those denominations were once pure, spiritual and effectual in the reproof of sin and in the spread of holiness. Reasoning on Bro. H.'s principle, we would say, their primitive spirituality and purity justified their creation, even at the expense of open division from some older organization.

"Denominational zeal becomes great modern idolatry," says Bro. H. Just so, we reply, the anti-denominational zeal which we have been considering becomes a great modern "idolatry." Because church organization is subject to abuse by bigoted zealots it does not follow that church organization, or that the multiplication of such organizations, is necessarily wrong.

Bro. H., the victim of your critical quill is with you heart and hand "to smite all idols," whether of a denominational or an anti-denominational character. But to plead guilty to your several charges is more than we are prepared to do until further enlightened.

W. T. HOGG.

PITH AND POINT.

The apology I have to make for my prolonged silence is that for more than three years I have been engaged with all the power I could summon, in the work of re-building, re-establishing and endowing our college. Any one at all familiar with such a work, will know, at once, that there is in it opportunity enough for all the effort that can be put forth. My interest in your work has not abated, nor has my zeal diminished. I wish you and your work, I can assure you, most abundant success.

H. H. GEORGE, Pres. Geneva College.

"REMARKABLE RENUNCIATION."

I was much pleased to read the "Remarkable Renunciation," in your issue of Jan. 10, from Rev. E. J. Clemens. I am a member of the same denomination, and since I waked up on the subject of Masonry, I find many ministers in that church, (M. E.) who are claimed as Masons, who tell me they are disgusted with Masonry; have had nothing to do with it for years, and never will have again; and yet publicly they say nothing about it, and suffer themselves to be claimed on the side of a thing they say they are heartily disgusted with. A minister not long ago told me Freemasonry was a fraud and a sin, for he had tried it and knew, but he did not know that it was necessary to make a fool of one's self by publicly exposing it. Now if exposing fraud and sin is not a part of a Christian minister's duty, I fail to understand his commission; and if it makes a fool of him, "let him become a fool that he may be wise." I wish we had more like Bro. Clemens. R. W. LAUGHLIN, Troy, Ill.

RELICS FROM THE LIBERTY SINGER.

I have you daily in my prayers and have had it often in my heart to wish you all a prosperous and "Happy New Year;" but I have been in the "minor mode" for some time past, from a severe attack of neuralgia in my old broken side, from overtaxation and a bad cold, and my "harp has hung almost silently, if not sadly, upon the willows." But I am realizing the great benefit and advantage of "temperance in all things," and so by the blessing of God am coming up and improving, and hope to "weather the Cape" and soon again to be sailing in the fair and open sea. So please accept, though late "better late than never," my best wishes for your success and happiness.

I send you enclosed two relics of the past: one a song from Pres. J. Blanchard, almost forty years old; the other, as you will see, a well-worded and beautifully written letter from L. W. Guiteau, the father of the notorious assassin of President Garfield. I was at that time (1838) publishing the "Michigan Temperance Herald," at Ann Arbor, where Mr. Guitcau resided, apparently a scholar, a gentleman and a friend of the temperance cause.

GEO. W. CLARK, Rochester, N. Y.

The poem and letter kindly lent by Bro. Clark appear on other pages.—ED.

SAVED FROM TOBACCO AND DEATH.

[Extract from a private letter.]

The Lord has always provided for me and I will give him the glory. I will tell you of a few particular things he has done for me. You know that I used tobacco, and had used it for forty years, but after I was converted, as I studied the Bible I was convinced that it was wrong, so I asked the Lord to cure me of the habit. I tell you for about a week I had a fearful time, but the grace of God was victorious, and since then the desire for tobacco is gone.

Then I prayed very earnestly for the Lord to heal me. I was suffering terribly at that time, and it was thought I could not live but a few minutes. When I was just willing to die or suffer the Lord's will, in less time than it takes me to tell you I was easy, and I have never had any more of those pains; and he has cared for me and provided a way for me to get along. Don't you think I have much to be thankful for? H. B. T., Floyd, Iowa.

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON V.—February 3, 1884.—Paul's Second Missionary Journey. Acts 15:35-41; 16:1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Come over into Macedonia, and help us. Acts 16: 9.

"Paul said * * * Let us go again." The proposal was characteristic of one whose heart was ever full of "the care of all the churches" (2 Cor. 11: 28), ever making mention of them in his prayers night and day (Rom. 1: 9; Eph. 1: 16; Phil. 1: 3). We may well believe that it was a desire to know not only the general conditions of the churches, but the spiritual growth of each individual member.—Plumptre. Paul was not content to measure his work by the number of conversions, but sought to strengthen converts in the faith, and assure himself of their well-being (2 Cor. 11: 28).—Abbott.

"And Barnabas determined to take with them John, whose surname was Mark." The old kindness of heart which prompted him in old days to seek out Saul, the former persecutor of the followers of Jesus, and to plead his cause with Jewish Christian leaders at Jerusalem, now induced him to forget Mark's former faint-heartedness, and to welcome him again as a fellow-laborer in the Master's cause.—Schaff. And Mark's subsequent conduct, and Paul's friendship for him in later years (Col. 4: 10, 11; 2 Tim. 4: 11), show that Barnabas did not misplace his confidence in the better character of his cousin.—Peloubet.

"But Paul thought not good to take him with them, who departed from them from Pamphylia." At the beginning of the first missionary journey in A. D. 48, nearly three years before this. John Mark had started with them on the first missionary journey as their agent and helper, especially for Paul, who was in rather feeble health; and just as they were entering upon the most difficult and dangerous part of their journey, Mark left them without any helper, and returned home, either (1) from fear of the hardships and dangers, or (2) from homesickness, or (3) his youthful zeal flagged (see Acts 13: 13). He failed Paul in his time of need, and Paul was not willing to run the risk of another failure, especially (1) as this was to be a longer and more dangerous journey, and (2) Paul may have felt premonitions of that sickness which soon after affected him in Galatia on this very journey (Gal. 4: 13, 14; see on Acts 16: 6 below).—Peloubet.

"And the contention was so sharp." The original indicates bitterness in the controversy, and implies blame on both sides. There is little doubt that severe words were spoken on the occasion. It is unwise to be over-anxious to dilute the words of Scripture, and to exempt even apostles from blame. By such criticism we lose much of the instruction which the honest record of their lives was intended to convey. We are taught by this scene at Antioch that a good work may be blessed by God though its agents are encompassed with infirmity, and that changes which are violent in their beginnings, may be overruled for the best results. This is one of those quarrels in which, by placing ourselves in imagination on the one side and the other, we can alternately justify both, and easily see that the purest Christian zeal, when combined with human weakness and partiality, may have led to the misunderstanding.—Howson.

"Mark." In later times we know Mark became once more the loved and trusted companion of Paul (Phil. 24; Col. 4: 10, 11; 2 Tim. 4. 11). We find him with Peter at Babylon (1 Pet. 5: 13). In the closing days of Paul's life, he seems to have been with Timothy at Ephesus (2 Tim. 4: 11). That he was long the trusted friend and secretary of Peter, was the undisputed tradition of the early Church. Subsequently, church historians relate how Mark founded (probably organized) the Church of Alexandria, and became its bishop, and there endured a martyr's death.—Schaff. It may be that Paul's sharp reproof by refusing to take Mark with him, may have had a very great effect upon Mark's future character and steadfastness.—Peloubet.

"A certain disciple * * * named Timotheus." Timothy, being both of Jewish and Greek extraction, would be thus peculiarly fitted to be Paul's coadjutor in his missionary work. The two epistles written by Paul to him, contain indications of his character; he was not robust (1 Tim. 5: 23), naturally shrank from opposition and responsibility (1 Tim. 4: 12-16; 5: 20; 6: 11-14; 2 Tim. 2: 1-7), was tender and sensitive (2 Tim. 1: 4), and devout and earnestly consecrated to the service of God—this last being indicated by his abandonment of his home to accompany the apostle, and by his submission to the rite of circumcision.—Abbott.

"Circumcised him because of the Jews." An objection has been raised to this act of Paul, (1) as though it was in opposition to his own recorded opinion, Behold, I, Paul, say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing (Gal. 5: 2). (2) As though it was in conflict with his own act, in not compelling the circumcision of Titus (Gal. 2: 3). (3) As though it contradicted the decrees of the council of Jerusalem.—Wm. Denton. In reply, (1) The circumstances were entirely different. Titus was a Greek and not a Jew, and therefore not compelled to become a Jew. While Timothy, being the son of a Jewess, inherited from his mother and was a Jew. (2) In this place it was plain that the rite was not essential to salvation, for Paul was proclaiming at this very time the decree of the Jerusalem conference. (3) "The act was spontaneous, and men may rightly concede as a favor, or as a matter of expediency, what they would be justified in resisting when demanded as a matter of necessity."—Plumptre.

"Galatia." Here comes in an incidental account of this tour through Galatia, given by Paul himself in Gal. 4: 13-15. Paul remained in Galatia long enough to found several churches. The providential cause which led to St. Paul's stay in the country was, as he himself tells us, a severe attack of illness; and the manner in which he alludes to it gives us reason to infer that it was a fresh access of agony from that "stake in the flesh" which I believe to have been acute opthalmia, accompanied, as it often is, by violent cerebral disturbance. All who have been attacked with it know that the image it recalls most naturally, is that of a sharp splinter run into the eye. Nothing is more natural than that the constant changes of climate, the severe bodily fatigue, the storms of fine blinding dust, the bites and stings of insects, the coarseness and scantiness of fare (on this journey) should have brought a return of his malady to one whose health was so shattered as that of Paul.—Farrar.

"Come over * * * and help us." This vision has been rightly recognized by the Church as interpreting the unuttered cry of heathendom for help.—Abbott. And it has been abundantly shown that it is death to a church or a Christian either not to hear this cry, or, having heard it, not to heed it.—Riddle.

"We endeavor to go into Macedonia." In this verse the writer of the Acts adopts the style of an eye-witness, and writes in the first person, We. From this it appears that Luke joined the missionary band first at Troas. Connecting the severe illness of the apostle during the Galatian visit (ver. 6, and Gal. 4: 13-15), from which he had so recently recovered, the supposition that Luke, the "beloved physician," associated himself with Paul at this juncture and watched over his health, is not without foundation.—Revision Com.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

Hindrances to Missionary Work.

1. The reasons why the whole world has not been converted to Christ during these eighteen centuries, are, a lack of faith and zeal among Christians, and the various hindrances that Satan puts in the way. Chief among these hindrances we may class rum, tobacco and the secret lodge.

2. Vessels from Christian countries carry liquor to heathen shores, with all the vices that follow in its train, thus making the task of converting the natives much harder.

3. It indirectly entails a vast expense on the Christian Church by creating so much poverty and vice that a large force of Christian workers have to be constantly employed in counteracting it. Satan acts in this respect like any good military general. He seeks to divide the forces of the Church, and thus prevent them from concentrating in one grand attack on his kingdom.

4. Tobacco hinders the spread of the Gospel in the same way. It is carried by tons to heathen shores, and made the medium of exchange with the natives. Lately returned travelers say that the savages in New Guinea have learned the use of tobacco, and will carry heavy burdens all day to earn a piece no larger than a bullet.

5. The lodge hinders missionary work by weakening the church. The churches in many places are composed almost entirely of women who have often but little money to give. Their fathers, husbands and brothers who earn the money are in the lodge.

6. It diverts into its own coffers money that otherwise might have been used in converting the world. Church members who are also Masons or Odd-fellows are seldom supporters of missions. Their surplus money goes to meet lodge dues, leaving little or nothing to put in the contribution box.

7. Thus we see that while we must do all we can for the heathen, missionary work is needed in our own land. The Macedonian cry comes from the victims of rum and tobacco, and the slaves of the lodge. We admire, and very justly, men like Kossuth and Garabaldi, who suffered to free their country from foreign tyranny, but to free men's souls is a far more noble work than to merely make their bodies free.

Light from the Word.

When did Satan once hinder a missionary journey? 1 Thess. 2: 18. How does he sometimes try to do it? Acts 13: 50. What is his favorite way of hindering? Matt. 13: 2. How are lodge members in our churches like these tares? What encouragement does the Bible give us? Prov. 11: 30; Jas. 5: 20. Can we win souls and not fight against popular sins?

DONE WITH IT.

A MODEL RENUNCIATION AND PROTEST THAT MASONS CANNOT MISUNDERSTAND.

The following is commended to the 453,670 non-affiliated Freemasons (according to the catalogue of Redding & Co., publishers of "Standard Masonic Works"), who are now halting between fear and duty. Let them read this communication of R. W. Marsh, a Methodist Episcopal minister in good standing in Canada who having left the lodge felt in conscience bound to give his reasons to the men with whom he had associated, that they might not stumble into eternal ruin over his example.

CENTRETON, Ont., Sept. 20, 1883.

To the W. M. and members of Lodge No. 38 of A. F. A. M., situate in Trenton, etc.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to announce to you my full and complete renunciation of first my membership in the lodge; and second, my non-acceptance and rejection of the theoretic and professed religious character of Freemasonry. I may remind members who witnessed my initiation ten years ago, how I was troubled when taking the first degree, at the horrible phraseology of the obligation "under no less a penalty," etc., etc. So also my soul revolted with each successive degree, until I was made a Master Mason in the lodge. Members will remember I refused to utter the words of the oath until the Master of ceremonies offered an explanation that temporarily quieted my conscience. I talked with Masons of my inability to reconcile the Masonic oaths, or make them accord with the spirit and genius of the only religion I accept, viz.: the religion of Jesus Christ.

I furthermore am induced and emboldened to deny "the religion of Masonry" as anti-Christian in its character. Its Christless prayers, its bloody oaths, its lifeless system of morality (lifeless because Christless), I most decidedly condemn.

I wish also to announce my belief and purpose: First—that having been, "not of my own free will and accord" (because I was ignorant of what I was called to pass through), but unadvisedly led into the taking of what I can only conceive to be murderous, horrible, and wickedly anti-Christian oaths of the first degrees in Freemasonry; and second, having for the last eight or nine years been so persuaded concerning the character of believing said oaths; and thirdly, chiefly that by the authority of the written word of Jesus Christ, whose I am, and whom I serve, I am divinely authorized to disavow, and refuse to obey or observe said oaths, I proclaim to the lodge, and to all Masons everywhere, my freedom from all obligation to so respect and keep the obligations of the three first degrees in Freemasonry.

My purpose is based, first, on the consciousness I have that our Lord Jesus Christ maketh me free from all obligation to keep the unholy oaths I took in the lodge (See Matt. 5:33). Second, on the nature of my commission as an ambassador of Christ "to warn every man" (Ezk. 33:6 and Col. 1:28), which I or another so minded cannot do, and be true to those oaths. I hold it to be my bounden obligation in the sight of my Divine Master, and my sacred purpose to prevent by my advice and my example, also (so far as seems needful to save men), to fully expose the anti-Christian character of the institution.

I do most positively affirm that, in taking this course, I have only what I understand to be love, Christian love, toward all men. I take my stand for God, in the name of his Son, my adorable Saviour, Jesus Christ. I am aware of the consequences possible, in connection with step I take. "But none of these things move me." I believe myself true to a good conscience in the sight of God in what I am now doing. I believe I sinned in the first instance toward the Christian's God, when I bowed at Masonic altars, and took Masonic oaths. I know myself true to the Christian's God and the best interests of my race in boldly throwing off all allegiance to Freemasonry.

By this communication I henceforth stand fully committed in proper light. I enclose a couple of tracts which, if read, may be an additional expression of my views, in part at least. Morgan, Carlisle, Ronayne of Chicago, and Rev. Pres. Finney, with many others, have clearly discovered the whole machinery of Freemasonry. A Mason put Carlisle's work in my hand to study, that I "might be posted," immediately after my joining.

In the name of the Lord, I shall apply myself to warn all I can while I live against the gigantic evil that paralyzes justice often, and lulls the consciences of many into fancied religious security without Jesus Christ.

I am, gentlemen sirs, yours only in the true faith of Jesus Christ. Amen. R. W. MARSH.

—Free Methodist.

BURYING SIN.—There are some persons who think it much easier to bury a sin than to repent of it. But it is a very hard thing to hide a sin. It is like hiding a seed or a root in the ground. It draws strength in its concealment, and finally pushing up through the soil brings forth fruit, thirty, sixty, and a hundred fold. Sin is not dead enough to be safely buried. It is like a smouldering flame. It is like a poisonous seed; it will work ruin in its concealment, and finally break out into open ungodliness, and destroy on every hand. A sin needs to be dragged out of its hiding-place and extirpated. "Whoso covereth his sins shall not prosper, but he that confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."—The Christian.

A FEARFUL PICTURE OF LODGERY.

THE TERRORS OF AN IRISH INVINCIBLE.

[From the Grimsby (England), Express.]

A correspondent, whose good faith is beyond question, sends to the Standard the following letter, written by one of the unfortunate men who has been induced to join one of the American-Irish secret societies:

"October, 1883.

"MY DEAR———, —I am very glad to hear from you, through M——. You are very lucky in escaping, by refusing to join our party. I wish I had taken your advice, and never joined; its really very tiresome. Every one is watching the other. I will give you some little idea, without telling any secrets (I don't know very many, having simply to give and obey orders). I am a paid officer receiving about £2 15s. a week, and my duties are to make myself acquainted with the whereabouts of my 228 men continually, to whom by a number I give a sealed order, and I do not know where he is ordered, everything being done with the greatest secresy by ballot. The written orders are sealed, and whoever is lucky or unlucky enough to have his number drawn must proceed on his mission. There may be ten or only two. None know each other's business, though it may be the same. I think there are some in the post office, as it is known at headquarters when you get a letter, and from where and whom. Such is the system of spying into your private affairs, that had I not been sent to —— I probably never would have heard from you, as I got the letter from M——, and wrote through her to you. There are about 12,000 in this city of ——, not including the bar-room men, who have the privilege of getting men to join. I would give worlds to be out of it, since I must write in such guarded language. I question really sometimes if even my thoughts are my own. The old man has thoroughly re-organized everything since the last great failure on the above principle. There is something in contemplation, as thirty of my party are gone, and they all received English money before leaving. I am sorry I cannot tell you more. One thing I can tell you though—i. e., no one is recognized here as an Irishman who does not belong to us; they are enemies. I believe the policy (mistaken policy) to be to strike terror into the hearts of all enemies, then they will clamor to the B——— Government to throw our country over to their own resources. What nonsense, as if they could by their blood-thirstiness frighten an Englishman. When I was in the King's I learned better. I don't think I would have joined only for my brother, who asked me when dying to take his place. I don't like to say anything now he's dead, but I do wish he had died a day sooner. My old friend, its a dreadful life, frightened of your greatest friend; there are attached to the special party over 200 spies, nearly every State has its own numbers, all subordinate to the O. M.; its known when you are in and when you are out; etc. If the B. Gov. would put a little pressure on all would be soon disbanded. I know a Congressman who thinks the same. It is cruel and very cruel tyranny. When once you have taken the oath then you have virtually surrendered your liberty. If I am once out of this I will be a bad Irishman before I will be thought a good one by giving up my liberty—yes, giving up your liberty in more senses than one; no consideration for wife and family. If wanted you must go, and at once; no time to say good-bye, as they are afraid you will perhaps tell your wife where you are going. You are watched to the station or steamer, and watched on your arrival, and watched till your return (if you do return—many don't). There are scores of our men in England. I hope no harm will attend you. I am directly against this policy, but we against it are few, and are looked upon with suspicion. There is one thing that gives me a little happiness, i. e., now that I am a paid officer I remain at headquarters. Our capital is very large. Send your letter to Maggie to A. M., for me. Don't for the life of you send it here, as its contents are sure to be known. Love to Mrs. ——— and family, from yours ——. P. S. Will tell you more in my next. Can't tell how long before I will be able to write."

OPEN LETTER TO ELDER PRUETT.—NO. VI.

MY DEAR BRO.—I am to say something to you in this letter about "organization and methods of work" in this anti-secret contest. The enemy you are called to fight is an enemy thoroughly organized. Its leader understands this matter of "organization" and never looks for success without it. Freemasonry is one of his ideals—one of his oldest and most perfect. It has come down through the ages, always active, always aggressive, always reaching for power; seeking the overthrow of true religion and the downfall of governments, sometimes under one name and anon under another; but it has always maintained an organization through which its deeds of cruelty and darkness have been wrought. Nothing but an organization can successfully cope with or hope to overthrow it. In view of its known character and aims it is time that the "children of Light" should begin to show as much wisdom as the men of this world. We must organize too—organize intelligently and with reference to the work of destroying this secret foe of all good.

Look around you, in the realm of nature here below, and in the heavens above us, and you behold organization. See the constellations. Look at our planetary system, the starry spaces, the Milky Way which spans the nightly skies; all show organization. Every tree and plant, every living creature, every man, woman and child is an organization, made up of a congeries of organs, working out some end or ends, for which their Designer formed them. God works everywhere through organized forces, in both physical and spiritual realms. While here on earth, as the God-man he planned an organization to which he gave ordinances and laws, and which was put into working order by the Apostles. That organization was to remain until he comes again. Marred it may be, and has been, yet it still exists and will to the end. We could do nothing against sin without it. If in certain places the churches grow corrupt, as they have done and will, leave them if they cannot be reformed, and build again on the old Divine pattern. There is a Divine organization. He who throws it away because evil and corrupt men have abused it, and attempts to fight the devil alone and single-handed, will find that he has bartered Christly wisdom for human folly. The churches ought to have strangled this devil of secretism long ago, and rendered it unnecessary to form other organizations of Christian men and women to do this work. But alas! the churches are themselves taken captive, and must be rescued if saved at all by Christian associations formed for that purpose. We have already, as you know, formulated after this idea a National Christian Association, with nineteen State Associations, and I know not how many county, district and town societies. These should be multiplied all over the land.

Oregon needs such an organization. Take it on your heart, my brother, to see that this want is met. If this cannot be effected at once, do not let it drop. Look around you; within certain limits form a local organization, town or county, where you can find enough Christian men and women to officer an association. When you get ready I will send you a constitution, if you need it. Make a beginning, no matter how humble. Keep it alive with labor and prayer, expecting it to grow until other localities are aroused, and a State Association shall arise, into which the auxiliaries may pour their strength and make it a power in your State. California, as you know, is already in the field. Let Oregon be the next of the Pacific States to wheel into line. When you organize in town, district, county or State, put no man or woman into office for the sake of their influence. Choose men for your offices who will make themselves the servants of all for the sake of Christ and the cause.

METHODS OF WORK.

In the first place, after organization, raise a fund for a Masonic library. Let the ministry among you read these books until they master the origin, history and claims of the order, so that they can speak to the people on these matters advisedly. Pick out your best man or men for this purpose—a man of piety, brains, fair culture, with a clean record, easy speaker, one who fears neither man nor the Grand Master of Masonry, the devil; with the requisite amount of grit, pluck and perseveranee, and then put him into the field as your agent and lecturer, and there back him with your prayers and your means. But ere this can be reached much preliminary work must be done. Let your ministers, after fitting preparation, take the matter to the pulpit and enlighten the people with regard to it. Scatter tracts, papers, books. Get articles on the subject of secret societies into the local newspaper, original or selected. Take the matter into associations, conferences, presbyteries, assemblies, synods. Ask for investigating committees who shall examine the subject and report to these bodies for their instruction and action. Speak yourself in your own pulpit, in school-houses, halls, or wherever you can find a hearing. One good way would be for some friend to open his parlor or kitchen and invite in his neighbors, the pastors of the churches, and the candid and intelligent among the Christian portion of the community, and let you give them a candid, social talk, full of facts, on the origin, history and claims of the system, its religion, its obligations, secret ceremonies, etc. For this purpose you want Mackey's Encyclopedia, his Lexicon, Ritualist, and Jurisprudence; Webb's Monitor, with Rob Morris' Notes; Pierson's Traditions, Sickels' Monitor, Rebold's General History of Freemasonry, Steinbrenner's Origin, etc., Chase's Digest of Masonic Law, and Oliver's Star in the East. With those, you need Ronayne's Mah-hah-bone, and Freemasonry Illustrated by J. O. Doesburg. If you have Mackey's Encyclopedia his Lexicon will not be needed. J. L. BARLOW.

THE SOUTH AND ITS PROBLEM.

DEAR BROTHER K:—Lately I sent you some notes respecting Freemasonry as I encountered it in a journey to the South. In addition I remark that where furnaces and foundries and schools flourish, there also the lodge flourishes; and if in some localities the lodge is in neglect, there business enterprise and educational institutions are in the same condition. This looks as if there was some relation between business and the lodge, and that the decline of the lodge in some localities is due more to circumstances than to the power of the Gospel. At all events, we must look the thing in the face.

For myself, though I do not covet the name of reform in any technical sense, yet I shall continue to warn against the dangers of the lodge just as I do against the dangers of the saloon; or, if I devote more time to the former than the latter, it is because the danger here is more covert, and the laborers in this department of Christian enterprise are comparatively few. I suppose it is the duty of every enlightened servant of God, not only to guard with vigilance against the encroachments of the lodge, but to oppose it with faith and courage and persistence as we do any work or device of the devil that would destroy the purity of our homes, or corrupt the church or overturn the state.

But over and above all this is the

SOUTHERN PROBLEM,

which I do not grasp very fully, much less do I attempt to solve it. I only notice a few facts which enter into the problem. And 1st. The soil, especially in northern Alabama and Georgia is poor in comparison with that of any of our Northern States, and not more than two-fifths of the land that was cultivated before the war is under cultivation now. It is covered with weeds, sage-grass or new forests; and the fields that are planted with corn and cotton have an appearance of slovenliness. There is a want of industry and thrift in almost the whole population. Born Southerners are discouraged. The negroes as a general thing want an overseer to keep them at work, and the Northern farmers who have gone down there have not yet learned to adapt themselves to the new order of things. In the few brisk manufacturing places, like Chatanooga, Tenn., and Birmingham, Ala., this condition of things is passing away. But these are only oases in the vast desert of the cotton lands.

2d. There is—in Alabama at least, a great lack of the means of education. The State has an incipient school system of which the people seem proud. It provides for a county superintendent with power to grant certificates, and a trustee for every "beat" or electoral precinct of about six miles square, and the public funds are sufficient for a two or three months' school (one for blacks and one for whites) in every rural beat, and a somewhat longer term in villages and towns. But there are no public school houses. The teacher must provide his own house as best he can; though in towns houses are built by joint stock companies and rented by the teachers. In the several States adjoining Alabama I think the condition of things in this regard is somewhat better. But this beginning indicates progress in the last twenty years, and has in it a cheering promise for the future.

I visited two schools for the freed people (one at Athens, Ala., and one at Huntsville), founded and maintained by the benevolence of Northern churches, the one employing three and the other four teachers, with a normal department in each; and my observation convinced me that their work is being well and nobly done. But these teachers, though ladies of an eminently Christian spirit and as intelligent and refined as I have ever known, and though pursuing their vocation in the most quiet and unobtrusive manner, are utterly ignored by the entire white population; and the mayor of Athens told me that though individually he honored and sympathized with those teachers, yet any white woman would be ostracized who should in any way notice a teacher of negroes. And when I looked at those noble women, one of whom said she had been there nineteen years, I thought, there is heroism here, a heroism sustained by faith in God.

If schools could be opened at the South like one which I see is being founded in Chicago, where the pupils could divide their time between books and the practice of some skilled labor, I think it would be a great advance on anything yet undertaken in the South. Rev. Dr. Haygood of Georgia, has written a book, "Our Brother in Black," which comes nearer to a solution of the Southern problem than any thing I have seen. But his book is coolly received. The most intelligent men I talked with have no theory or plan for the elevation of the South, white or black, save to do the best they can for the hour and wait the developments of a Divine providence.

There is another fact which I found was being noticed by far-seeing men, a fact that may contain in embryo a solution of the whole problem. It is that the black population, though now about equal to the white, is increasing out of all proportion to the white. And this Fact is gloomily ominous to one class, and cheerfully prophetic to another, that the blacks are to supercede the whites in the possession of the South. In this sense it may yet be true that "The negro is the coming man."

3d. There are churches and Christians at the South—truly such. There are men there who see and sigh over the desolations around them; and here there is hope. The Gospel of God and the Spirit of God are indeed the only hope for North or South. But the churches are mostly feeble and widely scattered; and the remark which has been made of the negro, that his religion has little connection with his morality is not to be confined to the negro. But I forbear.

Very likely I am putting the worst side out. If you look at the South from the standpoint of absolute barbarism, you will see a great deal of progress, beauty and loveliness. But I am looking at it from the rich soil and the cultured and Christian villages of Ohio; and to me not only the great plantations, but the old palatial mansions and the groves of pine, cedar and holly that surround them, all have an air of neglect, decay and dreariness.

However, if you enjoy rocks, cascades and mountains, the very wilderness of nature, with extensive landscapes or places of historic interest, and if you cannot go to Yellowstone Park, just go and stand on Lookout Mountain; and after you have seen its clouds and cliffs and crags and chasms and streams and fountains, look over to Missionary Ridge and Chickamauga Valley, and the mountain ranges that rise like terraces for sixty miles to the cast.

WARREN TAYLOR.

TESTIMONY ACCUMULATING.

That stone detached from the body of Morgan fifty-six years ago hung on the neck of the Masonic beast, sinking it into the lake of perdition; testimony of T. M. Howell, Canandaigua, N. Y.

Discoveries and recent discussions in this field of Masonic "Ku-Kluxism" and "Night-riders" of fifty years ago have quickened the memories and called out expressions from veterans who are awakened from the sepulchral silence of half a century to repeat again the facts of Morgan's "taking off." The stone weight, stolen from hay scales in Canada, and fastened to the body of Morgan, when plunged in the Niagara river (as stated by Dr. Jamison, a Royal Arch Mason, on his death bed), fished out by Peter Tower in the fall of 1827 (thus as he believed, and as seems probable, freeing the body of Morgan so that it rose and a few days after was found at the mouth of Oak Orchard Creek); carefully kept by Mr. Tower until his death in March, 1882, and obtained from the widow of Mr. Tower, December 5th, 1883, by Peter D. Miller, Esq., and the writer, seems destined to fill an important place in the anti-lodge discussion.

The press in this region has shown a commendable zeal in reporting the discovery of this relic of Masonic barbarism, and their statements, though somewhat imperfect, have gained a wide circulation. The first I saw was in one of the leading dailies of Philadelphia, and the latest that has come to my knowledge is in the Canandaigua Times. After giving the article substantially as it appeared in a number of papers, the editor admits over a column of original history, written from a personal knowledge of the "Morgan mystery" and events connected with it, written by Mr. T. M. Howell, then and now a citizen of Canandaigua.

Mr. H. introduces his narrative thus: "A brief recapitulation of the events of the abduction of Morgan by Freemasons in 1826," etc. Further on he says, "A few of the old residents of this village will remember that on the evening of the 12th of September, 1826, our quiet village was startled by the cry of "MURDER!" and the thrilling announcement that William Morgan had been kidnapped by the Masons."

Then follows a clear synopsis of this remarkable case, and a strong indictmet of the lodge, giving names of actors and incidents in the case from his personal knowledge. "The carriage," he says, was driven east a short distance, turned, and passed west around the corner of the 'Ontario House,' then kept by Kingsley, and the old Court House, and the last heard from the party save by the initiated was the exclamation by one of them within the carriage, "Hubbard, why don't you drive faster? Damn you, why don't you drive faster?" The writer concludes with the following statement and incident which deserves to be put on record:

"Time and space prevent a relation of the trials of the Masons, resulting in the conviction of Bruce, Chesebro, and Sawyer, the two latter of whom were confined in the jail in this village. Edward Sawyer subsequently removed to Michigan."

"In 1835, the writer, with his brother, was then in the wilds of Livingston county, Michigan, "hunting land," as it was styled. Unexpectedly we found Edward Sawyer. One night he conveyed us in his two-horse wagon to a distant point, about twelve miles. After a refreshing meal of meat and drink he became talkative, and referred back to the events above recorded. Suddenly he exclaimed:

"'Boys, you remember when Morgan was made away with! You know that Chesebro and I occupied one room in the jail. Chesebro was a glorious provider. I tell you, we lived like fighting cocks in the large debtors' room in the second story, which he had fitted up in style. One day, just as we were sitting down to an elegant dinner, brought to us, you know, from Chesebro's own house, Mr. Hall, the jailor, suddenly opened the door of our room and exclaimed: "Gentlemen, the body of Morgan has been found, and taken from the Niagara river!" Great God! boys, my heart jumped into my throat, and I felt strangled. I jumped from the table and rushed to the window for air. With my head out of the window and faint with the excitement of the announcement, I heard the rattle of knife and fork upon the plate, and turned and saw Chesebro quietly helping himself, and eating as if he had not heard what the jailor had said. I exclaimed "Good God, Chesebro, did you not hear what Hall said?" "What did he say?" "Why, that the body of Morgan was found! Don't you know that is our death warrant? How can you eat?" His reply, which I shall not forget to my dying day, was, "Well, I am not going to lose my dinner for any damned body of Morgan!'"

"That semi-avowal of the fate of Morgan, uttered at that hour of the night, in the wilds of Michigan, made a lasting impression. Strange that such a daring, high-handed attack upon the liberty and life of a citizen should have had its inception in our quiet village. The writer has no idea that its final result was anticipated."

When in Livingstone county, Michigan, some years ago I was shown the house of Col. Sawyer and a number of incidents were related to me showing the peculiar sensitiveness of Mr. Sawyer whenever Morgan's name was mentioned. Will some of the friends of Grand Blanc or Goodrich look up this man, and report his case, whether dead or alive.

J. P. STODDARD.

Lockport, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1884.

A GOOD LETTER.

Among the other good things at the Philadelphia convention, not among the least was the following letter from Josiah W. Leeds, which is thus published in the Friend of Philadelphia:

Philada., 12th mo. 18th, 1883.

I have been interested to hear of the call for a Convention to be held this evening and to-morrow, in opposition to secret societies, belonging as I do to a religious denomination which is, and has been since its rise, virtually a unit in declaring against organizations of that character. Such a movement, I am sure, ought to meet with full sympathy in this city of William Penn., when we consider that the spirit animating its founder was that of the broadest Christian benevolence, and that the right hand and "grip" of helpfulness was not restricted to those of one set, or creed, or cast of thinking, but embraced, in its pure philanthropic purpose, all people of whatever nation, color, or religious belief, who desired to dwell together in true brotherhood—to be "neighbors" one toward another as exemplified in the parable of the Good Samaritan.

But, I chiefly desire, in penning this note, to indicate one direction in which your helpful counsels may be of special service (because I think it is likely to be overlooked); that is to say,—with respect to secret societies as affecting the negro race in this Republic. * * * I observe that a fondness for joining with secret societies is—so it appears to me—being rapidly developed by this people. In looking over a weekly paper which is sent to me, and which is published by negroes in the (professed) interest of industrial education, in a Southern city, I have been both disappointed and pained to see the frequent references to secret society lodges, so that I have been led to ask myself whether the publicity and approval given to those matters might not in the end over-balance any good presumably to be derived from the paper's advocacy of industrial pursuits.

The foolishness of this lodge affiliation—whether by blacks or whites—was forcibly presented to me several months ago, when, riding in a horse car beside a talkative and self-important negro, the latter confidentially observed to me that he had purposely come up from the seaside to take part in a ceremony of his lodge. He had a big bundle in his lap, which I understood contained the trappings in which he was to appear. Upon my querying, What good? "Why, you know Jesus Christ was a Mason," he seriously said. I told him I did not wish to hear any talk of that sort about One who was the Light Himself, and who said that "men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil," and whose Apostles also declared that Christians must have "no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." He did not pursue the subject.

Desiring the Divine favor upon your deliberations, which I trust may be conducted free from any mere strife of tongues and to God's glory, I am thy friend, and the friend of the cause which is that of the light.

JOSIAH W. LEEDS.

AN APPALLING SHIPWRECK.

THE LOSS OF THE CITY OF COLUMBUS WITH OVER 100 LIVES.

The iron steamer "City of Columbus," 2200 tons burden, left Boston for Savannah at three o'clock last Thursday afternoon, carrying eighty passengers and a crew of forty-five. At 3: 45 A. M., Friday, at the Gay Head light, island of Martha's Vineyard, the vessel struck on the outside of Devil's Bridge buoy. The wind was blowing a gale, west by north. The vessel immediately filled and keeled over, the water breaking in and flooding the port side of the saloon.

All the passengers, excepting a few women and children, came on deck, nearly all wearing life-preservers. All the boats were cleared away, but were immediately swamped, and the majority of the passengers were washed overboard.

Seven passengers left the vessel on a life-raft and about forty more took to the rigging.

At 10: 30 A. M. the Gay Head life-boat put off and took seven persons. Another life-boat put off between 12 and 1 and the revenue-cutter Dexter came along about 12:30 and sent off two boats. Twenty-one persons, one of whom was dead, were placed aboard the Dexter, and, after all persons had been taken from the vessel, the Dexter proceeded to New Bedford. Three persons died after going aboard the Dexter.

Captain Wright says, I went aft and told the passengers to KEEP COOL AND GET LIFE PRESERVERS.

I next told the officers on deck to get the boats ready. The steamer settled down aft and righted. It was blowing very hard and a heavy sea was running. We launched to port No. 6 boat, which immediately capsized. The sea was breaking over the steamer's deck and the stern being entirely under water we were forced to go upon the top of the house. I staid there awhile, but we finally were obliged to take to the rigging. The mate, second mate, chief engineer, and fourth engineer took to the raft. I think the steamer struck on a lone rock."

—The steamer Hwai Yuen, from Shanghai for Hong Kong, was wrecked on the Hie Shan Islands. Five natives were saved. Nothing is known of the rest of those on board—six Europeans and 198 natives.

—It is reported that the Sheikh of Senoussi is advancing to join El Mahdi. If this is true, Egypt is in the greatest danger, as the influence of Senoussi extends through the whole North African maritime provinces to Egypt. Governor Bahr, of El Ghazal, asks for re-enforcements to quell the revolt in that district, plainly fomented by emissaries of El Mahdi. A telegram to the Austrian Consul from Khartoum says all the higher Egyptian officials at Elobad have been massacred.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multidude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 831 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

NEVER FAILS.

IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURING Epileptic Fits, Spasm, Falling Sickness, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impoteney, Syphilis, Serofula, and all

Nervous and Blood Diseases.

☞To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all whose sedentary employment causes Nervous Prostration, Irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulent, Samaritan Nervine is invaluable.

☞Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50, at Druggists.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR.

The DR. S. A. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.

For testimonials and circulars send stamp. (18)

McShane Bell Foundry

Manufacture those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogues sent free. Address H. McSHANE & Co., Baltimore, Md.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

T. HUDSON J. L. STRATTON

— Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of—

HARDWOOD LUMBER.

Have on hand a large amount of Dry Ash, Red and White Oak, Hickory, and Basswood.

Prompt attention given to orders and satisfaction guaranteed. KALAMAZOO, MICH.

An Honest Offer

If you are not enjoying good health we will on certain conditions send you ON TRIAL our Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, and if they fail to cure or greatly benefit you within a month we make no charge. Prices very low. They are the marvel of the age. 75,000 Cures made during 1883. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once

ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address Dr. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

WANTED HELP.

Entirely New. PROFITABLE. Outfit Free.

We want an AGENT in every locality. Something entirely new. Our Agents are sweeping the field wherever they go, and making money rapidly. Men, women, boys, girls, all do equally well. Will send you full outfit on receipt of 2 cent Stamp. Don't delay. Address at once, S. S. PUBLISHING CO., Brownwood, Texas.

WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY. Proprietor, Wheaton Ill. General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best.

STRAW BLACK GOOSE RASP BERRIES, GRAPES. and other Small Fruits.

Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

Readings and Recitations!

100 CHOICE SELECTIONS No 22 NOW READY.

This number is uniform with the Series, and contains another HUNDRED splendid Declamations and Readings, combining Sentiment, Oratory, Pathos, Humor, Fun. Price, 30cts., mailed free. Sold by Booksellers. Every boy who speaks pieces, every member of a Lyceum who wants Something New to recite, should get the whole set. Club rates and full list of contents free. P. GARRETT & CO., 708 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.

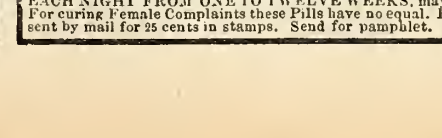
Send description of your Invention. L. BINGHAM. Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED



The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

How to rear and manage poultry. Send a ten-cent piece to H. H. Stoddard,

Hartford, Ct., for a copy of THE Poultry World, and it will tell you.

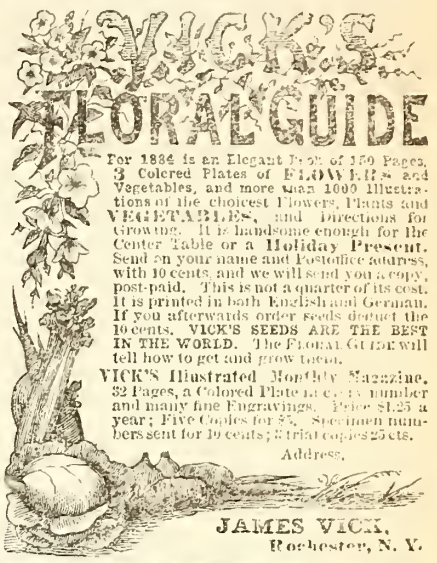
MILL OWNERS SEND FOR PAMPHLET.



MANUFACT'D AT MOUNT HOLLY N.J.

THE FLORAL WORLD.

A suberb illustrated $1.00 monthly free 1 year to all that enclose this ad. to us now with 12c. for postage. FLORAL WORLD, HIGHLAND PARK, ILL.

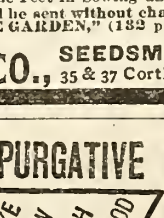
PATENTS Hand-Book FREE. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE

For 1884 is an Elegant Book of 150 Pages, 3 Colored Plates of FLOWERS and Vegetables, and more than 1000 Illustrations of the choicest Flowers, Plants and VEGETABLES, and Directions for Growing. It is handsome enough for the Center Table or a Holiday Present. Send on your name and Postoffice address, with 10 cents, and we will send you a copy, post-paid. This is not a quarter of its cost. It is printed in both English and German. If you afterwards order seeds deduct the 10 cents. VICK'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD. The FLORAL GUIDE will tell how to get and grow them.

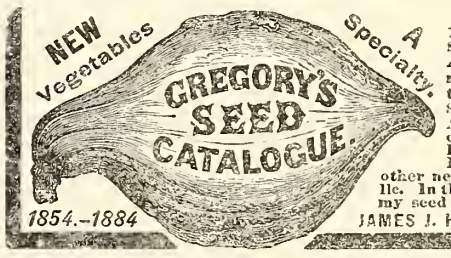
VICK'S Illustrated Monthly Magazine, 32 Pages, a Colored Plate in every number and many fine Engravings. Price $1.25 a year; Five Copies for $5. Specimen numbers sent for 10 cents; 3 trial copies 25 cts.



Address,

JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION.



I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

GET A MODEL PRESS.

Price, complete with Type, &c., $5 to $10 and up. Prints Cards, Circulars, Labels, Tracts, everything for Business, Schools, Churches, &c. It is very durable and rapid, and so simple that any boy can work it and earn hundreds of dollars a year. 12,000 sold. Send a cent stamp for 40 Page Catalogue, with gorgeous floral card and other work done on a Model Press. J. W. Daughaday & Co. Mfrs. 721 Chestnut St. Philadelphia

MODEL IMPROVED.

My Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1884, the result of thirty years' experience as a Seed Grower, will be sent free to all who apply. All my Seed is warranted to be fresh and true to name, so far that should it prove otherwise, I agree to refill orders gratis. My collection of vegetable Seed, one of the most extensive to be found in any American Catalogue, is a large part of it of my own growing. As the original introducer of Eclipse Beet, Burbank Potatoes, Marblehead Early Corn, the Hubbard Squash, and scores of other new Vegetables, I invite the patronage of the public. In the gardens and on the farms of those who plant my seed will be found my best advertisement.

JAMES J. H. GREGORY, Seed Grower, Marblehead, Mass.

THE PUREST IS THE BEST.

In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are

COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.

The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading and foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.

The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing

FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS.

They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

IN CLUBS OF FIVE OR MORE,

THE PEARL	12c	PURE WORDS	10c
THE LILY	12c	SUNSHINE	10c

Be sure and send for samples before you order your next supply of papers.

SAMPLE COPIES SENT FREE.

We are prepared to furnish any other Sunday-school papers in the market at publishers' prices, so that schools can order all their supplies from us, and thus save the complication, labor and expense of sending to several parties. We handle a full line of Sunday-school Tickets, Reward Cards, helps and other requisites.

☞Send for our new catalogue of Sunday-school cards and other requisites, with discounts. Sent free to any address. Address T. B. ARNOLD, 101 & 106 Franklin St., Chicago. Ill.

GARDEN AND FARM TOPICS

By PETER HENDERSON, is a New Book of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a Steel Portrait of the Author, embracing within its scope the following subjects: Popular Bulbs and their Culture.—Window Gardening, and Care of Plants in Rooms.—Propagation of Plants.— Rose Growing in Winter.—Green-house Structures, and Modes of Heating.—Formation and Renovation of Lawns.—Onion Growing.—How to Raise Cabbage and Cauliflower.—On the Growing and Preserving of Celery.—Strawberry Culture.—Root Crops for Farm Stock.—Culture of Alsalfa or Lucerne.—Manures and their Modes of Application.—Market Gardening around New York.—The Use of the Feet in Sowing and Planting —Draining, etc.

Mailed on receipt of $1.50, and with which will be sent without charge, our handsomely illustrated MANUAL of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN," (132 pages) containing a colored plate of the new Rose "Sunset."

PETER HENDERSON & CO., SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

FARM NOTES.

A BAD LEGACY.

In 1847, when Brigham Young led the first company of Mormons across the plains, they experienced great inconvenience on account of the scarcity of fuel. When Brigham returned to the States the next year he purchased large quantities of sun-flower seed and had it industriously distributed along the route of travel from Iowa to Utah, so that future emigrants might have the dry stalks for fuel. But the sun-flower long neglected and being year after year

"Born to blush unseen
And waste its fragrance on the desert air," degenerated to a wild and wicked weed. It is now the greatest pest that the Nebraska and Colorado farmer has to contend against. Whole fields of grain are hopelessly smothered by these wild sunflowers which grow thick and fast wherever they can get root. They are a fit emblem of polygamy, which is a blight, a withering curse on civilization wherever found. Ten thousand execrations and curses are heaped upon Brigham Young for his instrumentality in entailing such a pest upon the farmers of the far West. But how much more execrable should his memory be for the part he has borne in fastening the untold evils of the last relic of barbarism upon the innocent and helpless who have fallen under his rapacious and remorseless power!—Instructor.

SPIGOT AND BUNG.

History furnishes instances where crisis battles have been lost for the want of the timely furnishing of ammunition, or food or rest for the soldiers. The saving of a little time or insufficient provision, at the wrong end, cost untold millions and unrecorded miseries. If this has been true now and then, on the vast plane of national life, it is more true in the vaster plane of individual life through the aggregate of countless classes of humanity.

Even in our own splendid farming region, we see a great deal of spigot-saving and bung-wasting. There is a farmer whose premises we have often passed. His situation is airy and high, and his land medium, if not better; his nearness to a fine market is more than a compensation even for an inferior grade of land. Yet he is constantly struggling with debt. We resolved to discover some of the reasons. We find that he is one of your spigot philosophers and bunghole practitioners. In the first place, he says he can't afford to feed his land with fertilizers. In addition to that he, we presume, can't afford to prepare a compost pit to preserve the fertilizers which he can accumulate on his own premises; for more than once have we gone by his place after a hard rain and seen (would you believe it?) a richly colored stream of manure water running down the road from his barnyard. Our off-hand calculation was that, after one hard rain, he lost, in that way, about $100 to his crop income.

We can take him to a man similarly situated for nearness to market, who began poor and a laborer at truck gardening, and now holds his hundreds of thousands. How did he get forward so rapidly? On his own showing, he attributes his success largely to an early discovery of the great value of fertilizers. He gives this illustration: "In raising cabbages, I spend $65 an acre for fertilizing. One year I thought to save that sum by spreading nothing on one acre which was to be taken up with a street in the fall. Now look at the prodigious mistake I made. At that time, (the last year of the war), I could get, at wholesale, $12 a hundred for my cabbages. On every acre I planted a hundred each way, which, of course, makes ten thousand to the acre. It cost the same to plant and attend the unfertilized acre and market its products, as each of the other acres cost. The cabbage grown on the enriched ground brought me $1,200 an acre in New York, and those grown on the other acre brought me $500. So you see that bit of economy—taking out the cost of manure for another acre—lost me $635. I learned my lesson well, and now hold that no investment a man can make is better than to feed his land well." This no doubt was an extreme and exceptional case; but the principle is correct.

"This certifies," writes D. D. Christman, of Oswego, Ind., that "Samaritan Nervine cured me of epileptic fits." At Druggists. $1.50.

A DANGEROUS AMBUSCADE.

DISCOVERED BARELY IN TIME—THE MOST DECEPTIVE AND LURING OF MODERN EVILS GRAPHICALLY DESCRIBED.

(Syracuse Journal.)

Something of a sensation was caused in this city yesterday by a rumor that one of our best known citizens was about to publish a statement concerning some unusual experiences during his residence in Syracuse. How the rumor originated it is impossible to say, but a reporter immediately sought Dr. S. G. Martin, the gentleman in question, and secured the following interview:

"What about this rumor, Doctor, that you are going to make a public statement of some important matters?"

"Just about the same as you will find in all rumors—some truth; some fiction. I had contemplated making a publication of some remarkable episodes that have occurred in my life, but have not completed it as yet."

"What is the nature of it, may I enquire?"

"Why, the fact that I am a human being instead of a spirit. I have passed through one of the most wonderful ordeals that perhaps ever occurred to any man. The first intimation I had of it was several years ago, when I began to feel chilly at night and restless after retiring. Occasionally this would be varied by a soreness of the muscles and cramps in my arms and legs. I thought as most people would think, that it was only a cold, and so paid as little attention to it as possible. Shortly after this I noticed a peculiar catarrhal trouble and my throat also became inflamed. As if this were not variety enough, I felt sharp pains in my chest, and a constant tendency to headache."

"Why didn't you take the matter in hand and check it right where it was?"

"Why doesn't everybody do so? Simply because they think it is some trifling and passing disorder. These troubles did not come all at once and I thought it unmanly to heed them. I have found, though, that every physical neglect must be paid for and with large interest; men cannot draw drafts on their constitution without honoring them sometime. These minor symptoms I have described grew until they were giants of agony. I became more nervous; had a strange fluttering of the heart, an inability to draw a long breath, and an occasional numbness, that was terribly suggestive of paralysis. How I could have been so blind as not to understand what this meant I cannot imagine."

"And did you do nothing?"

"Yes, I traveled. In the spring of 1879 I went to Kansas and Colorado, and while in Denver, I was attacked with a mysterious hemorrhage of the urinary organs and lost twenty pounds of flesh in three weeks. One day after my return I was taken with a terrible chill and at once advanced to a very severe attack of pneumonia. My left lung soon entirely filled with water, and my legs and body became twice their natural size. I was obliged to sit upright in bed for several weeks in the midst of the severest agony, with my arms over my head, and in constant fear of suffocation."

"And did you still make no attempt to save yourself?"

"Yes, I made frantic efforts. I tried every thing that seemed to offer the least prospect of relief. I called a council of doctors and had them make an exhaustive chemical and microscopical examination of my condition. Five of the best physicians of Syracuse and several from another city said I must die."

"It seemed as though their assertion was true for my feet became cold, my mouth parched, my eyes wore a fixed, glassy stare, my body was covered with a cold, clammy death sweat, and I read my fate in the anxious expressions of my family and friends."

"But the finale?"

"Came at last. My wife, aroused to desperation, began to administer a remedy upon her own responsibility, and while I grew better very slowly, I gained ground surely until, in brief, I have no trace of the terrible Bright's disease from which I was dying, and am a perfectly well man. This may sound like a romance, but it is true, and my life, health and what I am are due to Warner's Safe Cure, which I wish was known to and used by the thousands who, I believe, are suffering this minute as I was originally. Does not such an experience as this justify me in making a public statement?"

"It certainly does. But then Bright's disease is not a common complaint, doctor."

"Not common! On the contrary it is one of the most common. The trouble is few people know they have it. It has so few marked symptoms until its final stages that a person may have it for years, each year getting more and more in its power, and not suspect it. It is quite natural I should feel enthusiastic over this remedy, while my wife is even more so than I am. She knows of its being used with surprising results by many ladies for their own peculiar ailments, over which it has singular power."

The statement drawn out by the above interview is amply confirmed by very many of our most prominent citizens, among them being Judge Reigel, and Col. James S. Goodrich, of the Times, while Gen. Dwight H. Bruce and Rev. Prof. W. P. Coddington, D. D., give the remedy their heartiest endorsement. In this age of wonders, surprising things are quite common, but an experience so unusual as that of Dr. Martin's and occurring here in our midst, may well cause comment and teach a lesson. It shows the necessity of guarding the slightest approach of physical disorder, and by the means which has been proven the most reliable and efficient. It shows the depth to which one can sink and yet be rescued, and it proves that few people need suffer if these truths are observed.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

The Broken Seal: or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each: per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2 00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Oddfellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen. 75 cents.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 418 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

WHICH LOVED BEST?

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right. Honor thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise, That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth"—Eph. 6:1-3.

"I love you, mother," said little John;
Then forgetting his work, his cap went on,
And he was off to the garden swing,
And left her the water and wood to bring.

"I love you, mother," said Rosy Nell,
"I love you better than tongue can tell,"
Then she teazed and pouted full half a day,
Till her mother rejoiced when she went to play.

"I love you, mother," said little Fan,
"To-day I'll help you all I can;
How glad I am school doesn't keep!"
So she rocked the baby till it fell asleep.

Then stepping softly, she brought the broom
And swept the floor and tidied the room;
Busy and happy all day was she,
Helpful and happy as child could be.

"I love you, mother," again they said—
Three little children going to bed,
How do you think that mother guessed
Which of the little ones loved her best?

—Sel.

TWO WAYS OF TELLING A STORY.

Young people commit more faults from thoughtlessness than from intent to do wrong, and want of reflection leads children astray much oftener than want of principle. Indifference to the feelings of the aged, a proneness to make light of peculiarities, are, however, occasionally indulged in by the young; and, in the excitement of the momentary gratification which such merriment may produce, all thought of the wrong and all sense of the right are equally forgotten. The proverb of the wisest man saith: "The glory of young men is their strength; and the beauty of old men is the grey head." The strength of the young should protect and defend the beauty of the old. The hoary head should ever be respected, whatever may be the outward condition of its possessor; and neither sport nor ridicule should be thrown upon him whose enfeebled strength scarce suffices to bear the weight of the many years with which time has burdened him.

The following narrative, which is strictly true, illustrates what has been observed, and proves that the just recompense of a thoughtless fault may be much more speedily repaid to those who commit it than may be either expected or desired by them. The common saying of "waking up the wrong passenger" is peculiarly applicable to the case.

In one of the most populous cities of New England, some years since, a party of lads, all members of the same school, got up a grand sleigh-ride. There were about twenty-five or thirty boys engaged in the frolic. The sleigh was a very large and splendid establishment, drawn by six grey horses. The afternoon was as beautiful as anybody could desire, and the merry group enjoyed themselves in the highest degree. It was a common custom of the school to which they belonged, and on previous occasions their teacher had accompanied them. Some engagement upon important business, however, occupying him, he was not at this time with them. It is quite likely, had it been otherwise, that the restraining influence of his presence would have prevented the scene which is the main feature of the present story.

On the day following the ride, as he entered the schoolroom, he found his pupils grouped about the stove, and in high merriment, as they chattered about the fun and the frolic of their excursion. He stopped awhile and listened, and in answer to some inquiries which he made about the matter, one of the lads, a fine, frank and manly boy, whose heart was in the right place, though his love of sport sometimes led him astray, volunteered to give a narrative of their trip and its various incidents. As he drew near the end of his story, he exclaimed: "Oh, sir, there was one little circumstance which I had almost forgotten to tell you. Toward the latter part of the afternoon, as we were coming home, we saw at some distance ahead of us, a queer looking affair in the road. We could not exactly make out what it was. It seemed to be a sort of half-and-half monstrosity. As we approached it, it proved to be a rusty old sleigh, fastened behind a covered wagon, proceeding at a very slow rate, and taking up the whole road. Finding that the owner was not disposed to turn out, we determined on a volley of snowballs and a good hurrah. These we gave with a relish, and they produced the right effect, and a little more; for the crazy machine turned out in the deep snow by the side of the road, and the skinny old pony started on a full trot. As we passed, some one who had the whip gave the old jilt of a horse a good crack, which made him run faster than he ever did before, I'll warrant. And so, with another volley of snow-balls pitched into the front of the wagon, and three times three cheers, we rushed by. What an old fellow in the wagon, who was buried up under an old hat and beneath a rusty cloak, and one who had dropped the reins, bawled out: "Why do you frighten my horse?" "Why don't you turn out, then?" says the driver. So we gave him three rousing cheers more; his horse was frightened again, and ran up against a loaded team, and, I believe, almost capsized the old creature; and so we left him."

"Well, boys," replied the instructor, "that is quite an incident. But take your seats; and after our morning service is ended, I will take my turn and tell you a story, and all about a sleigh-ride, too."

Having finished the reading of a chapter in the Bible, and after all had joined in the Lord's Prayer, he commenced, as follows:

"Yesterday afternoon a very venerable and respectable old man, and a clergyman by profession, was on his way from Boston to Salem, to pass the residue of the winter at the house of his son. That he might be prepared for journeying as he proposed to do in the spring, he took with him his light wagon, and for the winter his sleigh, which he fastened behind the wagon. He was, just as I have told you, very old and infirm; his temples were covered with thinned locks, which the frosts of eighty years had whitened; his sight and hearing, too, were somewhat blunted by age, as yours will be, should you live to be as old. He was proceeding very slowly and quietly, for his horse was old and feeble, like his owner. His thoughts reverted to the scenes of his youth, when he had periled his life in fighting for the liberties of his country; to the scenes of his manhood, when he had preached the Gospel of his divine Master to the heathen of the remote wilderness; and to the scenes of his riper years, when the hard hand of penury had laid heavily upon him. While thus occupied, almost forgetting himself in the multitude of his thoughts, he was suddenly disturbed, and even terrified by loud hurrahs from behind, and by a furious pelting and clattering of balls of snow and ice upon the top of his wagon. In this trepidation he dropped his reins, and, as his aged and feeble hands were quite benumbed with cold, he found it impossible to gather them up, and his horse began to run away.

In the midst of the old man's trouble there rushed by him, with loud shouts, a large party of boys in a sleigh drawn by six horses. "Turn out, turn out, old fellow!" "Give us the road, old boy!" "What'll you take for your pony, old daddy?" "Go it, frozen nose! what's the price of oats?" were the various cries that met his ear.

"Pray, do not frighten my horse," exclaimed the infirm driver.

"Turn out, then! turn out!" was the answer, which was followed by repeated cracks and blows from the long whip of the 'grand sleigh,' with showers of snowballs, and three tremendous huzzas from the boys who were in it.

"The terror of the old man and his horse was increased, and the latter ran away with him, to the imminent danger of his life. He contrived, however, after some exertion, to secure his reins, which had been out of his hands during the whole of the affray, and to stop his horse just in season to prevent his being dashed against a loaded team.

"As he approached Salem, he overtook a young man who was walking toward the same place, and whom he invited to ride. The young man alluded to the 'grand sleigh' which had just passed, which induced the old gentleman to inquire if he knew who the boys were. He replied that he did; that they all belonged to one school, and were a set of wild fellows.

"Aha!" exclaimed the former with a hearty laugh (for his constant good nature had not been disturbed), "do they, indeed? Why, their master is very well known to me. I am now going to his house, and I rather think I shall give him the benefit of this whole story."

"A short distance brought him to his journey's end, the house of his son. His old horse was comfortably housed and fed, and he himself abundantly provided for.

"That son, boys, is your instructor; and that aged and infirm old man, that 'old fellow' and 'old boy,' (who did not turn out for you, but who would gladly have given you the whole road, had he heard your approach), that 'old boy', and 'old daddy,' and 'frozen nose,' was Rev. Daniel Oliver, your master's father, now at my house, where he and I will gladly welcome any and all of you"

It is not easy to describe or imagine the effect produced by this new translation of the boys' own narrative. Some buried their heads behind their desks, some cried, some looked askant at each other, and many hastened down to the desk of the teacher with apologies, regrets and acknowledgments without end. All were freely pardoned, but were cautioned that they should be more civil for the future to inoffensive travellers, and more respectful to the aged and infirm.

Years have passed by; the lads are men, though some have found an early grave; the "manly boy" is "in the deep bosom of the ocean buried." They who survive, should this story reach their eyes, will easily recall its scenes, and throw their memories back to the school-house in "Federal Street," Salem, and to their old friend and teacher, Henry K. Oliver.—Massachusetts Teacher, 1854.

TEMPERANCE.

CHICAGO ANTI-MASONIC TEMPERANCE BAND OF HOPE.

SECOND ANNUAL REVIEW.

The second year's work of the Band of Hope which was noticed in the Cynosure of February 15th, 1883, will be completed on the nineteenth of this month. As a power for Christ and his kingdom, we believe this band has been twice as strong this year as last.

The Chicago Anti-secrecy Christian Association has furnished it teachers, money, and encouragement.

The National Christian Association has furnished printed lessons for the Band, and shown deep interest in it. The West Side Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union has given it the use of a large, warm room, well located for its work among the children, with the use of a piano.

Miss E. E. Flagg, of Wellesley, Mass., has furnished us an admirable course of lessons for the year, which we trust will prove to her, as well as to the teachers who used them, as bread cast upon the waters.

C. R. Bockins presented them with one hundred and thirty-seven volumes of the Sabbath Library, and many papers. The members of the Chicago Christian Association gave them a delightful excursion to Wheaton College on the 30th of June, about one hundred and twenty-five persons from the city participating in it, and the friends and officers of the college tendered them a cordial reception.

Names of others who have aided its work might be mentioned. Mrs. Tapley sent them souvenirs of the South which were highly appreciated. A new call bell and blackboard are gifts which will help in the order and efficiency of the Band.

In Miss Alford, one of the Chicago Bible workers, we have a faithful and successful director and superintendent of our meetings. The average attendance this year has been double that of last.

Two of our most faithful members have been taken from us by death: Josephine and James Bezey, our librarian and treasurer; and each week their memories, fragrant with all that is carnest and lovely and true, whisper to our hearts of the things which are invisible. Christine Bezey, William Hatton, and the mother of one of our pupils have also gone home. So our "hundred fold" this year has also had its "tribulations."

We need and pray for a permanent home for this work which is most hopeful in its every aspect.

AN INTRODUCTION FOR THE LIBERTY SINGER.

[From the father of the assassin of Garfield.]

ANN ARBOR, July 31, 1838.

GENTS:—Permit me to introduce to your acquaintance Mr. Geo. W. Clark, who is at present acting as a temperance agent in this county. He goes to your place to consult with the friends of temperance and to co-operate with them in their efforts for the promotion of that enterprise. He has in his possession a paper which he will show to you, addressed to the officers of temperance societies in Washtenaw Co., from some of the leading members of the temperance association in Salini, with whom I have the pleasure of acquaint ance, and whom I know to be men of responsibility and worth. Not knowing who the officers of the society in your place are, I take the liberty of referring Mr. Clark to you, not doubting but you will do what you can in rendering him any advice or co-operation which he may need. I remain, gentlemen, your humble servant, L. W. GUITEAU.

A LESSON FROM REAL LIFE.

Robert Martin, a well-educated and gentlemanly man, resided in Newark, N. J., with his wife, four sons and a daughter. Though an able machinist, he could not get regular employment on account of his drinking habits. On the night of June 15, 1881, he returned home intoxicated, and became involved in a quarrel with his wife. She left the house and he went to his room. A few minutes later she returned, and went to the room where he was, picked up her infant daughter who had been lying in her cradle, and started down stairs. Martin followed her from the room, and with a revolver fired at her three times. All of the shots took effect, and one shot struck the baby in the abdomen. Both mother and child died almost instantly. He was convicted of murder, and all the efforts which are allowed by law were perseveringly made to get the sentence mitigated, on the ground, chiefly, that he was intoxicated. These efforts, appealing from one court to another, occupied over two years of terrible suspense, but they were in vain. Jersey justice stood firm, and Jersey mercy should have refused to allow such a protracted punishment. Not till the day before the execution did he cease to hope that he would be saved from the gallows. He said, "I am not afraid of death, but oh, the disgrace that my death will bring on my sons!" When his four fine-looking boys bade him farewell, he took the youngest on his knee, stroked his head, and cried over him. He was hanged next morning (last Thursday). Oh, that men should put a devil into their mouths to steal away their brains! Yet there are thousands of youths now growing up with Robert Martin's habits.—N. Y. Witness.

The Evangelist quotes Judge Noah Davis, Chief Justice of New York, as saying:

"There is an average of more than two persons murdered in New York city weekly; that there are 67,000 persons arrested annually for crime, and that nine-tenths of the crimes committed were traced directly to the grog shops." He further says: "I have sat on the bench twenty-six years, and have sentenced to death many, and the poor wretches had no other excuse but 'I was drunk.' Our laws make that an aggravation of the crime, while it legalizes the drunkard makers. 'How long, O Lord, how long!' until the drunkard makers, the crime manufacturers, are brought to judgment!"

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

THE TWO-FOLD LIFE; or Christ's Work for us and Christ's Work in us. By A. J. Gordon, author of "In Christ," "Grace and Glory," etc. Boston: Howard Gannett. pp. 252. $1.50; paper, 75 cents.

This is one of the many books which have been published within the past ten years on the subject of holy living. It is one of them, yet in clearness, beauty and eloquence of thought and diction it is easily in the first rank of the works on this great theme. The scope of the work in the author's own words is seen in this paragraph from the opening chapter: "Do we mourn that ours is a materialistic age? Would that it were only so on the scientific and rationalistic side. But what we have most reason to fear is that subtle materialism which is creeping into our church life and methods. How little dependence is there on supernatural power as all sufficient for our work! How much we are coming to lean on mere human agencies!—upon art and architecture, upon music and rhetoric and social attraction! If we would draw the people to church that we may win them to Christ, the first question with scores of Christians nowadays is, what new turn can be given to the kaleidoscope of entertainment? What new stop can we insert in our organ, and what richer and more exquisite strain can we reach by our quartette? What fresh novelty in the way of social attraction can we introduce; or what new corruscation can be let off from the pulpit to dazzle and captivate the people? Oh for a faith to abandon utterly these devices of naturalism, and to throw the church without reserve upon the power of the supernatural! Is there not some higher degree in the Holy Spirit's tuition into which we can graduate our young ministers, instead of sending them to a German university for their last touches of theological culture? Is there not some reserved power yet treasured up in the church which is the Body of Christ, some unknown or neglected spiritual force which we can lay hold of, and so get courage to fling away forever these frivolous expedients on which we have so much relied for carrying on the Lord's work? The enduement of the Spirit for power, for service, for testimony, for success—this in brief is the subject of this book." The author has made judicious and happy use of illustrations from the inner experience of such Christians as John Howe, Flavel, Edwards, Christmas Evans, David Brainerd, Wesley, Whitfield, Madame Guyon, Miss Havergal, Wm. Grimshaw, Charles Simeon, Henry Martyn, George Mueller, Charles G. Finney, D. L. Moody and many other eminent workers. It is a work worth reading and studying by every follower of Christ.

The retirement of Mr. Carl Schurz, a few weeks ago, from the editorship of one of the leading journals of New York, on the ground that irreconcilable differences of opinion existed between him and his associates with regard to the conflict of the Telegragh and Railroad men with their employers, has awakened curiosity in no ordinary degree; and hence when he defines his position upon the question at issue, viz., "Corporations, their Employes and the Public," as he does in the North American Review for February, he is sure to commaud an attentive hearing. Senator J. J. Ingalls, of Kansas, writes of "John Brown's Place in History," his purpose being to disprove the several counts in the indictment of the hero of Potawatomie contained in the recent article by the Rev. David N. Utter, of this city. The statements of the latter are shown to be so prejudiced and untruthful that it is not difficult to utterly overthrow them. The argument of John Brown, Jr., some time since in reply to Utter is mainly followed, showing that the incursions of the pro-slavery "Border Ruffians" from Missouri, left no alternative for the actual settlers in Kansas but to move back to the States at risk of life, be made slaves where they were, or fight. The article closes with a fine tribute to John Brown in which occur the sentiments: "Out of the portentous and menacing cloud of anti-slavery sentimeut that had long brooded with sullen discontent, a baleful meteor above the North, he sprang like a terrific thunderbolt, whose lurid glare iluminated the continent with its devastating flame, and whose reverberatious among the splintered crags of Harper's Ferry were repeated on a thousand battle-fields from Gettysburg to the Gulf. From the instant that shot was fired the discussion and the debate of centuries was at an end. He who was not for slavery was against it. The North became vertebrated, and the age of cartilage and compromise was at an end. The Nation seized the standard of universal emancipation which dropped from his dying hand on the scaffold at Charleston, and bore it in triumph to Appomattox." "Henry Vaughn Silurist," "Must the Classics Go?" "Race Increase in the U. S.," "Defects of the Public School System," and "Rival Systems of Heating" are other articles of the number.

Miss Sarah Freeman Clarke has devoted part of her life to the task of following the footsteps of Dante in his wanderings through Europe. The notes and sketches made by her will be reproduced in the March and April numbers of The Century, while in the February number two preliminary papers will appear, one by Christina Rossetti on Dante and his Divine Comedy, and one by Miss Clarke on the portraits of Dante. The latter paper will be strikingly illustrated. Among the portraits, a copy of the famous mask of Dante will be given, and a full-page engraving by Cole of the Dante of Raphael, painted on the walls of the Vatican, in the famous "Disputa."

The thanks of the Cynosure are due to Hon. James F. Wilson, of Iowa, who has just been re-elected to the Senate, for a copy of his able vindication of the rights of the black race in a speech in the Seuate Dec. 12th, ult., on an amendment to the Constitution which shall protect the civil rights of all our people.

THE CHURCHES.

—A new Free Methodist church has been dedicated at Alma, Neb.

—A union has been effected between the Mennonite Brethren in Christ and the Evangelical United Mennonites. The Gospel Banner, published in Goshen, Ind., is the organ of the first named body.

—Rev. Wm. Johnston, writing to the United Presbyterian on the prospects of the church represented by that paper in St. Louis, thinks that a theological seminary may soon follow the new paper, the Midland, and new churches spring up in addition to the two already there. The second church has just been organized from a mission in charge of Rev. T. C. McKelvy. Mr. Johnston draws a good argument from the soundness of Dr. Wilson's First Church, thus:

"However the pastor of this church may be on incidents, on fundamentals and distinctives, in so far as we examined him we pronounce him sound. He has moral courage to say to a Mason or an Odd-fellow, even though wealthy and influential, We have no place for you in our communion unless you abandon the order. Moreover, he does not fear to admit a Jonathan Blanchard to his pulpit lest some one should be hurt. If this principle of our church can be maintained in St. Louis it can be in any other city.

—The Garfield Memorial church was dedicated in Washington on the Sabbath. Rev. F. D. Power, the pastor, presided, and Rev. Dr. Pendleton, president of Bethany College in West Virginia, preached the sermon.

—The special religious services in the Chicago Avenue church in this city, which began with the year, are still continued this week. Many hopeful conversions have taken place, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard is assisted in the good work by other ministers in the city.

—The whole Bible has been translated into nine African languages, the whole New Testament into nineteen, and parts of the Bible into thirty-one. All these, except the Coptic and the Ethiopic, are newly made versions.

—Arthur T. Pearson, D. D., late of Detroit and Indianapolis, a man most deeply taught of God and powerful in the ministry, was installed pastor of Bethany Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, on the 25th ult. Two thousand persons were present. Dr. Pearson has a wide repute for his eloquent appeals for the evangelization of the world in twenty years.

—Mrs. Emma Molloy is conducting missionary work among the Cherokees in the Indian Territory. She has the co-operation of Chief D. W. Bushyhead and others of the Council. Her meetings have been very successful.

—Rev. C. F. Hawley, who has been assisting Rev. S. Bedford at Seneca Falls, N. Y., for some weeks in revival services, has now gone to Pittsford, Mich., to assist Bro. O. B. Grinnell in like labors.

—Mrs. Valeria Stone died at Malden, Mass., Jan. 15th, from the effects of a fall four weeks ago. During the past few years she has given colleges and schools for girls over $400,000. Among the principal gifts were $100,000 to Wellesley Female College, about $150,000 to Andover Theological Seminary, $50,000 to Drury College, at Springfield, Mo.: $50,000 to the Chicago Theological Seminary; $30,000 to Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., and large amounts to Amherst and other New England colleges and Oberlin University. The gifts were mainly in the interest of the Congregational denomination. Mrs. Stone also gave many thousands to the American Missionary Association, which were used in the education of the colored people in the South.

—The French invasion of Tonquin is beginning to affect mission work in China. Preaching is suspended in some of the English chapels in Canton, and attendance at the girl's schools has fallen off; but the American mission chapels are open as usual.

—The first edition of the entire Bible in the Zulu language has been received at the mission stations in that country, from America, where it was printed by the American Bible Society, under the superintendence of Rev. S. C. Pixley.

—Loo Foo, the Chinaman who sold himself into slavery some years ago, that he might go to Demarara as an evangelist, has now a church of 200 members, sending out a missionary and colporteur of their own.

—From Ongole, India, Dr. Clough writes that while the Malas and Madigas have been converted by the thousand heretofore not many caste people have been baptized. The time is near, he thinks, when the sundras will come in crowds. Many, he believes, are converted men now, and will break away from caste and Hinduism in the near future. He reports about sixteen hundred baptisms thus far this year. One hundred and twenty-three were baptized at the quarterly meeting in July, and sixty-five since then. "All branches of our missionary work," he adds, "were never more prosperous and encouraging."

—During the week of prayer requests have been received from missionaries on heathen soil, whose great burden has been, "Pray that we may be delivered here from the reign of King Alcohol." One is tempted to wonder how much force the prayers for the abolition of the alcoholic liquor traffic in foreign lands, will have when offered by men and women who do almost or absolutely nothing for its removal at home. The fact is emphasized however by these requests, that at home and abroad one of the greatest obstacles to the progress of Christ's kingdom is this traffic in souls for whom Christ died.—Union Signal.

—A school has been established in Sweden in which young men are trained with special view to home missions. Several of the men who have been trained there have been laboring for some time among the Laplanders, of whom there are said to be 56,000 in the most northern part of Norway, Sweden, and Russia.

—Pastor Jordan writes that in Halle, Germany, eleven years ago, nothing was known of Sunday-schools. A lady began one and another followed. Now there are 3,000 scholars in six schools. Half the teachers are young men—theological students—and many of them were themselves scholars of the Sunday-schools.

—The Free Church missionary at Erromanga, where Williams and others were devoured by the cannibals, reports that the natives have been improving the Martyrs' Church, and have shipped 2,200 pounds of arrowroot to pay for the printing of the four Gospels.

—Converts are numbered by the thousand at the Moody and Sankey meetings in England. The meetings were resumed at Clapham and Battersea Jan. 6. Mr. Sankey did not assist on account of the death of his father at Newcastle, Pa.

—The murder of Mr. Schrodes, a German missionary in Zululand, is confirmed. It is also reported that Mr. Horman, another German missionary living near Oham, who not long ago defeated Cetewayo, has been put to death.

—Persia has a population of 7,653,600, the vast majority of whom are Mohammedans, the total number of dissenters being not more than 93,000. The latter consists of 43,000 Armenians; 23,000 Nestorians; 19,000 Jews, and 8,000 Parsees. The English Church Missionary Society has a mission at Julfa, with two missionaries, 58 communicants, 3 schools, and 204 scholars. At Oroomiah is an orphanage for girls, a school for boys, and an evangelist supported by friends in England. The American Presbyterian church has in Persia 10 ordained, 3 medical, and 22 female missionaries, and 1,717 communicants. The American Bible Society has an agency with headquarters at Tabrez. The London Society for the Conversion of the Jews reports two missionaries and two assistants at Hamadan.

—It is thought that the Japanese Christians of different denominations will probably unite in carrying on the work in Corea. It is a hopeful sign that upon these young churches of Japan, recently baptized of the Spirit, is falling the spirit of missions to lands beyond their own. As in apostolic times, it is the Holy Spirit that is moving them and saying, "Separate me, from your number, ambassadors for the regions beyond, for upon Corea also must this grace descend."

—Chili is making rapid political and educational progress. Her citizens are beginning to believe in a future of national power. Religious freedom is granted, and liberal legislators, even now, foresee the separation of church and state. While gospel missionaries are still persecuted, a free press denounces such conduct and calls for toleration. But in this most advanced South American republic the truth has not gained more than a foothold.

—Rev. Dr. Waugh (American Methodist) of Lucknow, India, writes under date of November 13: "We have had a most successful year here in Lucknow, the best we have ever had. Since February I have baptized thirty-seven persons, only ten of these being children, the rest recruits from heathenism, most of them of low caste, but employed as cooks, bearers, etc., on good pay. I believe our work must begin at the lower strata of society and work up. The native brethren, the helpers, have done grand good service, and they should have the credit for the work. The fine big school building is now ready, except the clock and bell, a really grand building, able to accommodate say four hundred pupils. There are twelve masters in the Centennial school, and we have had a good year; am just sending some fourteen boys up for the Calcutta entrance examination."

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONS IN INDIA.

Prof. Robert Stewart writes to the Christian Instructor some very interesting facts respecting the progress of the U. P, missions in the East:

1. The total net increase of the church during the year was 870; that of the foreign missionary Presbyterics, 339; that of Sialkot Presbytery alone, 211. Thus the church owes to her foreign missions more than one-third, and to the India mission nearly one-fourth of her actual increase.

2. The net increase of the whole church was about one per cent of its membership; that of this mission about 53 per cent.

3. The increase on profession of faith in the whole church was 4122, or about five per cent of the membership of the preceeding year and an average of six for every ministerial laborer. That of the India mission was 216, or about 54 per cent, and an average of over 21 to every minister.

4. The increase on profession of faith in the Sialkot Presbytery for the year was greater than in any other Presbytery in the whole church, and greater than that of two entire Synods which might be named.

5. Of adult baptisms there are reported for the entire church 707; for the Sialkot Presbytery, 201. That is, two out of every seven were from this mission.

6. The number of adult baptisms here during the year was greater than in any Synod at home—than in any two Syuods at home—four more, indeed, than in five whole Synods put together, one of which is among the largest in the church.

7. It will be observed. too, that the number of adult baptisms here exceeded fifty per cent of our membership and averaged twenty to each minister—facts unparallcled elsewhere in the body.

—The students of Oberlin Theological Seminary are to discuss the question, "Secret lodge fellowship in the Christian church. The debate will soon transpire, and is regarded with much interest by the friends of the reform in the Seminary and the town, who find most of the theological students sadly lacking information respecting the lodges and some of them even favoring secret societies.

—The National Convention in Batavia, in 1882, voted to recommend that the next national meeting be held in Washington. Those who are moving forward the American aud prohibition convention, Feb. 20–22 next, desire that the National Convention be held at the same time. The N. C. A. Board provides for the expenses of the National Convention, and will consider the matter immediately.

—Mrs. C. McFarland, a lady met by Mrs. Blanchard at the Metropolitan church, Washington, who is from Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, sends money for two names for the Cynosure. She is quite interested in seeing and doing what her hands find to do and the friends in that city hope she will yet be a great benefit to the cause.

A NEW HELPER.

Mrs. Emma Butler, who is now on the Freeman, Albany, Mo., is lecturing as well, and is exceedingly able. The editor should leave us to guess that Mrs. Butler is his brother's wife. She lately lectured at Salem Ridge, which she speaks of as her first attempt to address a mixed audience. Following are some of her utterances:

"Freemasonry ignores Christ in all its open publications, openly and above board. Its teachings as given to the public are as Christless as the Mecca of Mohammedanism. Its Worshipful Masters and High Priests are the perpetuation of a system which was done away when the Messiah came; and its practical make-up may be seen by examining the register of any lodge, to be composed of the profane swearer, scoffer and skeptic. Christ is our leader, and his enemies are ours."

Mrs. Butler only requires study and practice to make an accomplished and effective lecturer. The songs of birds are as needful and useful as the heavier-toned music of winds and waters; and anti-secret lectures from good women are like the music of birds in morning twilight, which tell us that daylight is coming and the lodge darkness is to disappear.

PITIABLE.

In this number and last there have been given some noble examples of the power of Christian faith in the renunciation of the secret lodge. The following should be read in connection that its revolting character may more easily be seen. Truly doth the god of this world blind the eyes of men that they may believe a lie. Read and pray that truth may yet break on a darkened mind:

CLAYVILLE, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1884.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Some one has caused this Cynosure to be sent me but not by my consent. Please do not send any more, as it is an offence to me and my family. We do not believe that the Masons ever caused the death of Morgan. We do not believe the story of Thurlow Weed, and we love what you hate and try to destroy, aud pray for what you try to curse. I am proud to be known as a Mason, and as chaplain have often prayed and do still pray, that its members may be enabled to live according to its teachings, and then, as a good Methodist said to a young man, "Oh my young man, if you are a good Mason you will soon be a good Christian." So mote it be.

Yours, I. NIGHTINGALE.

The Missouri Pacific railway company has issued a unique, attractive and useful little pamphlet representing in colored diagrams the area, population, crop reports, etc., of Texas and Arkansas.

In a station house in Brooklyn the other night, a police officer in charge whiled away the time by taking a vote to see what were the politics of the seventeen men gathered into custody. Some of them were republican and some democrats, but all but two of them, or fifteen out of seventeen, declared they would vote for prohibition if they had the chance, as the best and surest means of keeping their money out of the hands of liquor dealers, and preventing for themselves and their families the misery which in their better moments they promised themselves to avoid in future. If our drunkards and criminals are willing to vote for prohibition, or anything that will pull them out of the slough of despond, surely every Christian man ought to lend a helping hand.—Union Signal.

The Boston Produce Exchange joins in the demand that Congress take steps to prohibit importations from France and Germany of "adulterated wines and other articles injurious to health," in view of the interdict placed by those countries on American pork. A little over 100 years ago Boston adopted substantially the same plan toward Great Britain. That famous tea party was based on the policy of retaliation. It may be said that it led to war, but it also led to independence. In this case it is pretty safe to let the American "dander rise," and we are glad Boston steps to the front.—Inter Ocean.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1884.

The past has been one of the most trying weeks in all my experience with snow storms. The one redeeming feature is that I have been well housed and cared for by the best of friends. The roads in Wyoming county have been either blocked or in such condition that no one dared venture out without a shovel in hand to "dig out" with. It was unreasonable to expect people to gather for evening meetings under such circumstances, and it would have been very unwise to make appointments. The roads here are little if any better, but I propose to strike out in the country in search of my boy Willie, and to see what can be done where an interest has already been awakened.

I find everywhere a very hopeful feeling about the Washington movement, and a number whom I have met expect to be there. Friends everywhere should make this a subject of prayer, and as many as possible should attend the meeting in February. Bro. Bailey, on the committee of arrangements, is on the ground and will look carefully to details. He will give prompt attention to any letter sent him at 215 4½ St., N. W., Washington, and as soon as completed will announce the programme and arrangements for entertainment.

During the past week I have assisted two friends of our reform who wish to help on the work by their means after they are gone. If any one reading this should desire like assistance I should be glad to hear from him at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. J. P. STODDARD.

REFORM WORK IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Fifteen days of December were spent in Christian and reform work, which is substantially the same. I preached December 14th in New Durham Ridge Freewill Baptist church, Bro. M. A. Quinby kindly making the appointment and assisting. This place is famous as the scene of Elder Benjamin Randall's labors which resulted in organizing the Freewill Baptist denomination. Gertie F. Randall subscribed for the Christian Witness. Her grandfather, whom I saw, is a grandson of Elder Benjamin Randall.

I addressed the Reform Club on temperance at New Durham Depot, December 15th. Sunday, December 16th, I preached in Temperance Hall at New Durham Depot. Elder M. A. Quinby and his excellent and accomplished daughter assisted in the afternoon service. In the evening the hall was well filled and the power of the Lord was present to bless and save. My own soul was greatly blessed at New Durham and a few were led to seek the Lord. May they not stop short of full salvation. The brethren urged me to return and hold a protracted meeting, which, if the Lord will, I mean to do.

Tuesday night I was permitted to attend a prayer service at Gilmanton Iron Works. A powerful testimony was given by many brethren against turning the church into a play-house. Baal had no defenders.

Saturday evening, December 22, I lectured in the Congregational church at Epsom, on secret societies, to an intelligent and attentive audience. Lord's day following I preached in the same house to a congregation, small on account of the severity of the weather. I was also permitted to listen to a sermon by Elder N. A. Avery, in which he stated, with great emphasis, that if a man promised to do a thing which on further investigation he found to be wrong, that he should trample his obligation under his feet and not do the wicked thing. This is a true principle and opens the door of every lodge prison. Now let the conscience-smitten prisoners come out, repent and confess their deeds. In the evening a few brethren met at the house of Bro. William Bennett, who has been sick for years, and we enjoyed a very precious season.

During my journey I visited and addressed three public schools, distributed a few tracts, secured one hundred and eighty subscriptions for the Christian Witness and other good papers, conversed and prayed with one hundred and ninety-five families, many of them living remote from all Christian privileges, and not a few sick and poor. Since returning home I have received a letter from a young man saying he has burned all his infidel books and commenced a life of prayer. Praise the Lord. I have been greatly blessed in my own soul and I trust my labors in the Lord have not been in vain.

S. C. KIMBALL, Home Missionary N. H. C. A.

—It is announced that Chunder Sen, the apostle of the Brahmo Somaj, India, has lately died.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible] intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with book of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

NOTE.—In March, 1883, Pres. J. Blanchard resigned the nomination above, subject to the action of the next National Convention of the American party.

AMERICAN AND PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

A convention of the American and Prohibition parties has been called to meet in Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C., Feb. 20–22, 1884, commencing at 7:30 P. M. of the 20, and continuing through the next two days and evenings. This convention has been called after consultation with leading members of both parties, in the interest of two important reforms, with the purpose of taking steps to fuse these two young and growing reform parties. It is a very important meeting and all friends of reform should make an effort to be present. Entertainment will be provided at the lowest rates and ample provision made both for economy and comfort. Leading members of both these parties have engaged to be present. For further information write to the undersigned at No. 215 4½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C. E. D. BAILEY.

AN INQUIRY.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—If it is proper to inquire the nature of the following, and request an answer by the Cynosure, it is most respectfully submitted. In your valuable paper a "note" in date of Jan. 3d is seen as follows:

"Note that the conventions called are entitled American and Prohibition in all good faith. Not that Americans are expected to come in and attack prohibition, or vice versa, prohibitionists attack the American platform; but, as the American platform includes both, both parties will share in officering the convention, and the advocates of each cause will be welcome to the platform to advocate the cause to which they are primarily attached."

On reading the above it at once occurred to us to inquire whether there was included in the proposed fusion a prohibition of secret society prohibitionists? That is, is it expected that the prohibitionists will be restricted as to secret society alliances? If not, how can an Anti-masonic American party fuse with the Prohibition party, made up largely of secret society men and be consistent? The Steuben Signal, of Hornellsville, N. Y., Oct. 31, 1883, says: "Recently the Prohibition party of this State nominated Mr. Merritt for the State Comptrollership, a Mason in very high standing." Yes, and there are multitudes like him in the party. WOODRUFF POST.

ANSWER.—Bro. Post has read the "Appeal" in last Cynosure, which will probably answer his question. He knows, too, the men whose names are appended and has confidence in their integrity. There is nothing that can be properly construed into a supposition that any principle of the American platform is to be kept in the background.

THE HOME.

THE GREAT MESSAGE.

Apostles of the risen Christ, go forth!
Let love compel.
Go, and in risen power proclaim his worth,
O'er every region of the dead, cold earth,—
His glory tell!

Tell how he lived, and toiled, and wept below:
Tell all his love;
Tell the dread wonders of his awful woe;
Tell how he fought our fight, and smote our foe
Then rose above!

Tell how in weakness he was crucified,
But rose in power;
Went up on high, accepted, glorified;
News of his victory spread far and wide,
From hour to hour.

Tell how he sits at the right hand of God
In glory bright,
Making the heaven of heavens his glad abode;
Tell how he cometh with the iron rod
His foes to smite.

Tell how his kingdom shall thro' ages stand,
And never cease;
Spreading like sunshine over every land
All nations bowing to his high command,
Great Prince of peace!

—Selected.

AT THE MASTER'S FEET.

REV. MARK GUY PEARSE.

Once I went forth to look for Repentance. I sought her day and night in the city of Mansoul. I asked many if they knew where she dwelt, and they said they had never seen her. I met one, grave and scholarly, who told me what she was life, and bade me seek her earnestly; but he did not tell me where she was to be found. Then, all sad at heart, and wearied with my search, I went forth without the city walls, and climbed a lonely hill, and up a steep and rugged way, until I came in sight of a cross, and of Him who hung thereon. And lo, as I looked upon him, there came one and touched me. Then instantly my heart was melted, and all the great deeps of soul were broken up.

"Ah, Repentance, I have been looking everywhere for you," I said.

"Thou wilt always find me here," said Repentance; here, in sight of my Crucified Lord. "I tarry ever at his feet."

Again I went forth to look for Forgiveness. I knocked at many a door in the city of Mansoul and asked for her. And some said they thought she did live there sometimes, and some said she used to once, and some said she came there occasionally when the weather was fine to spend a Sunday. Then up came one whom I knew by name as Unbelief, with a voice like the croaking of a raven, and he said Forgiveness never was there and never would be, that she was much too fine a lady to live in so low a place as that and among such a set as they were. So I came forth wearied and sad, and as I reached the city gate I met again the grave scholar, and he gave me much account of her birth and parentage, and he showed me her portrait, and told me of her gracious works, and bade me seek her earnestly, but he did not tell me where I could find her.

So I went along my way, looking, but well-nigh in despair, when it chanced that I found myself again upon the high hill, climbing again the steep and rugged path. And I lifted my eyes and saw once more the cross and Him who hanged thereon, and lo, at the first sight of my dear Lord, Forgiveness met me, and filled my soul with holy peace and a rest like heaven itself.

"O, I have had a weary search for you," I said.

"I am always here," said Forgiveness; "here at my Master's feet."

Long afterwards I wondered within myself where Holiness dwelt, but I feared to go in search of her. I knew she would never be at home in the lowlands and busy streets of Mansoul. All whom I asked about her answered doubtfully. One said that she had died long ago; indeed, was buried in Eden before Adam came out. One said that she lived away at the end of the Valley of the Shadow of Death, her house was on the brink of the river, and that I must hope to meet with her just before I crossed it. Another argued almost angrily against the notion. "Nay," said he, "she lives farther on still; search as thou wilt, thou shalt never find her till thou art safely across the river and landed on the shores of the Celestial City."

Then I remembered how well I had fared aforetime on the Holy Hill, and went forth again. So up the lonely way I went, and reached the top of it and looked once more upon my blessed Saviour. And lo! there was Holiness sitting at the Master's feet. I feared to say that I had been looking for her, but as I gazed upon the Crucified, and felt the greatness of his love to me, and as all my heart went out in love and adoration, Holiness rose up, and came to me all graciously, and said, "I have been waiting for thee ever since thy first coming."

"Waiting where?" I asked, wondering.

"At His feet," said Holiness. "I am always there."
—The Christian.

NOISE IS NOT POWER.

I had just come out of another church further up the avenue, the Presbyterian Memorial church, Dr. C. S. Robinson's. He is a sweet-faced old man, but he wields a heavy weapon when he strikes at the giant wrongs of society. He had been dealing brave and weighty indictments against the too prevalent tendency to showiness and outward demonstration in religious matters. He seemed to feel somewhat as Isaiah did when he said, "Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth; they are a trouble unto me, I am weary to bear them." Isa. 1:14. He deplored the passion for great conventions, showy sermons, mammoth boards, world-wide societies, machinery Sunday-schools, wound up prayer meetings, etc. Not that he discarded the organized work of the church, but he dreaded the spirit that was glorifying these at the expense of the home care every man ought to have for himself, especially at the expense of the strict supervision every family and every church ought to have over their own children, as primary, first, most important work. He said: "You would be surprised at yourselves, were I to ask all to raise their hands, who, as heads of families, had so much as once ever given that son of yours instruction in the first principles of Christian living and doctrine. You send them to the great Sunday school, to be taught by some Miss of fifteen, as ignorant as they in things they most need to know, and when the school is out, two out of four of them go trooping home to dissipate the day away, leaving the minister without this warm fertile soil to sow Gospel seed upon, as much as to say, 'That's too prosy, children must be amused.' Older people go to church more to display fine equipage than to get real soul culture. These things are of incalculable damage to the church and the cause of Christ." He said, "'Aim at something and hit it,' don't spread out away from your base of supplies. The enemy is ever alert to dodge into the gap. Don't think noise is power, nor that great conventions and synods and revival meetings carry the real power of the church. Back in your own hearts, your own homes, go seek it; go clear to the kitchen and stable. See that your domestics have chance for Christian culture." All this thrilling putting of home truths, so consonant with my life-long views and teachings, was so absorbing me as I walked down that magnificent boulevard of palatial residences and gorgeous churches, that I well-nigh forgot my surroundings.—Sabbath Recorder.

WHAT IS A ZENANA?

Zenana, a word of Persian origin, signifying that part of the domain of a native gentleman of India occupied by the women of his family. In Bengal, where is the typical zenana, the dwelling consists of two houses built each round its own court. The one on the street, where dwell the father, sons, grandsons and great grandsons, has large, lofty, well-furnished rooms which open to the outer air.

In the rear building the first floor is for cow-sheds, storage and cook rooms; above are cells, 10 to 12 feet square, each having one door and one small grated window opening upon piazzas, which, in one, two, or three tiers, surround the inner court.

Faint breath of heaven it is which, mingled with the odor from below, reaches these rooms. The only furniture of these dismal cells, even when the appointments of the gentlemen's rooms are sumptuous, is a bedstead with a strip of mat upon it, a chest, a brass cup, and sometimes another small mat to spread on the brick floor. When a son marries, he brings his little bride to his father's house, and thus sometimes fifty women, each being an only wife to some one of male occupants of the outer house, are domiciled in the zenana.

Polygamy is rare, though permitted.

To each wife one of the cells above-mentioned is assigned in which to rear her children, but at the time of a birth she is deprived of the poor comfort it might afford.

She is removed to a cow-shed below, where, on a straw mat spread on the floor of beaten earth, with only a mat-screen between her and the animals, she must remain for twenty-eight days, without doctor or nurse, or any one to speak to her but a low-caste coolie woman. This treatment being usually when the little mother is not yet 11 years old.

The Zenana lady would rather die than be seen by a man other than her own husband; therefore a husband cannot enter the zenana to visit his own wife until all the other women have hidden within their respective cells.—Library of Universal Knowledge.

HEALTH HINTS.

DANGER FROM SLEEPING DRAUGHTS.

Recently the dangerous and lamentable habits of promiscuously taking sleeping draughts has unfortunately become very prevalent, entailing misery and ill-health to a terrible degree. Most persons addicted to this destructive practice erroneously think that it is better to take a sleeping draught than lie awake. A greater mistake could hardly exist. All opiates more or less occasion mischief, and even the state of stupefaction they induce utterly fails to bring about the revitalization resulting from natural sleep.

The physiological effect of hypnotics or sleeping draughts upon the system is briefly as follows: (1) They paralyze the nerve centres and disorder the stomach, rendering it unfit for its duties; witness the sickness and loss of appetite consequent upon a debauch. Chloral, chloroform, opium, etc., act upon the system much in the same way as inebriation. (2) One and all anæsthetics introduced into the body have life-destroying properties in a low degree—proved by an overdose being fatal. (3) The condition they produce is not sleep, but a counterfeit state of unconsciousness. (4) They directly poison the blood, consequent upon the carbonization, resulting from their action. While speaking of sedatives, we cannot omit drawing special attention to chloral. This powerful drug is popularly supposed to give a quiet night's rest without any of the after effects (headache, etc.) produced by various preparations of morphia. Now, chloral is what is termed cumulative in its action, which implies that even the same dose persisted in for a certain length of time may cause death. Of all hypnotics, chloral is by far the most deadly, and should never, under any circumstances, be taken except under medical supervision.—Scientific American.

HOW TO PROTECT AGAINST THE COLD.

How to stay at home in the winter and be well, is no less important than to know where to go to be better. All that might be said of the importance of outdoor air and clothing for adults, who are supposed to know how to dress themselves for protection, and of domiciliary conditions, is implied in the directions previously given for invalids. But the greatest sufferers are children—those who do not know how to care for themselves, and, unfortunately, often the subjects of mothers and nurses who seem not to know how to care for them. How to dress a child for the winter to be healthy is commonly sacrificed to the esthetics of exposure without regard to weather. Hence we venture the following suggestions, equally suitable for either sex, with the certainty of not offending those who have no need of them, for the benefit of those who have. Flannel shirt, all wool, loose, both in texture and fit; long sleeves and high neck; two pairs of drawers, the under ones of same material as shirt, long enough to reach the top of the boots; long, loose-textured woolen stockings, to be pulled up over the under drawers. The second pair of drawers may be of thick Canton flannel, or wool, gathered at the knees; waist or under-jacket of the same material. Thick, wide-soled boots, not tight at the ankle, and with heels not more than half an inch high; for children under three years of age no heels. Outside clothing, including mittens, should also be made of loose woolen material, and fitted loosely. Thus dressed, and with a warm hat on the head—not tied behind it—with ear-covers, children may be safely permitted to go out without the risk of "catching a death of a cold."—Sanitarian.

LITTLE HELPERS.—Yes, they are often little hinderers it is true, but is it quite fair to them because their willing hands are awkward to shut them out of the kitchen when you are baking? Please let Molly have her cooking-apron, her little spoon, her basin, her chance to learn how to mix and mould, and cook a nice dinner for papa. Please encourage Betty when she wants to clear up a room, and show her how to do it neatly and deftly. Let Susy and Fanny have their own share in the housekeeping while they are little. One of these days they will thank you for having allowed them to learn woman's profession in the easiest way, at home under mother's eye.

WATER PROOF CLOTH.—If we immerse a tissue in a solution composed of gelatine 5 parts, soap 5 parts, Alum 7 parts, water 170 parts, we shall find, upon lifting and thoroughly drying the cloth, that we have communicated to the surface of each particular filament of which the stuff is composed the property of exercising on water a repulsive force. Consequently, if upon the surface of the stuff water be thrown, it will not penetrate between the threads; it will be repelled; it will run over without passing through. The texture of the stuff has not been changed by the immersion in the aluminous bath, and gases and vapors can traverse it as before.

TO KEEP GRATES BRIGHT.—To preserve bright grates or firesides from rust, make a strong paste of lime and water, and with a fine brush smear it as thickly as possible all over the polished surface requiring preservation. By this simple means all the grates and fire-irons in an empty house may be kept for months free from harm without further care or attention.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 50
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	25
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.

EZRA A. COOK, Publisher. 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE.

311,000 references. The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's a child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2.50, half Russia, $3. Postage, 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY. 10 books, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Teaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now issued. The whole lot for $11.48.

Single copy, postpaid, 10c, 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.

Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil
11 Newlyn House. [dren.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Susette.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May.
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
20 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwel.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bernie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Miss'n, Lit. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Haylands.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
52 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Failure.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer. [Marched.
57 Hagarda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I.
61 Tempest Tost'd.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hope.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself.
72 Lyman.
73 Kenneth.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl.
77 Margery Kramer's School-
78 The Quartette. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Lulu Preston's Trials and Triumphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror
85 Joe and Harry
86 Fred, the Backwood Boy.
87 Bloomfield Rock.
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 No Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Saunders.
93 Pet of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit; Frank Spencer's Rule of 109 The Harker Family. [Life.
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Tim's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
116 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Poll and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Fearndale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium.
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; John Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Telfourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Banyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Lonie' School Days.
151 Blossom and Blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Bruey.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips.
156 Digging a Grave with a Wine-glass. Little blind May.
157 The Manor House Mystery. May's Sixpence.
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Job Lufton's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.'
163 Little Faith. The Diver's Daughter.
164 Dora's boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe.
166 Danesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear
168 Drift. [ful bondage.
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list, Nos 96, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168, are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4, any 12 copies for $1; 10c each.

Reform Note Paper & Envelopes

This is good heavy paper, 5⅜x8⅛ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scripture and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with an "ad" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.

Price postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches.

Published by EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM, T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is, Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N Y Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts "—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

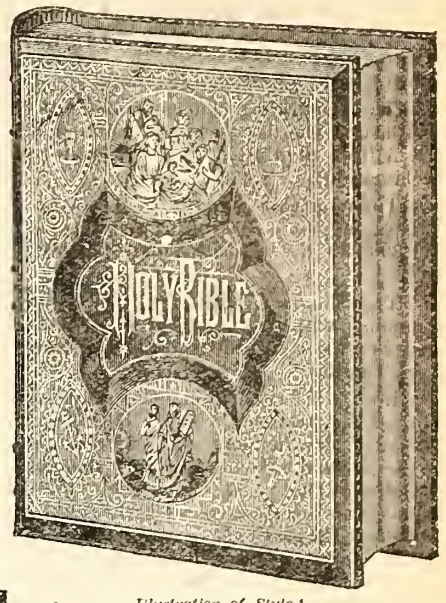
A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.



TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering. All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order, Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10½x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and FAMILY Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible, Harmony of the Gospels, Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 1.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

Illustration of Style 4.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4, with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Established 1875.

DAVID C. COOK, Publisher of SUNDAY SCHOOL REQUISITES.

PUBLICATIONS:

Primary Grade. The Primary Teachers Quarterly. Illuminated Lessons. Primary Scholars Quarterly. Primary Weekly. Dew Drops. Little Learners Paper.

Juvenile Grade. Juvenile Teachers Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly (abridged). The Coral. Sabbath Home. Giant Killer. Truth Seekers.

Intermediate Grade. Intermediate Teachers Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly (abridged). Duplicate Lesson Leaf. The Sunday School Gem. The Young Folks Friend. Careful Builders. His Jewels. Sabbath School Weekly.

Advanced Grade. Advanced Teachers Quarterly. Advanced Scholars Quarterly. The Royal Road. Gracious Words. Our Own Sabbath School Paper. Conqueror's Herald. Weekly Magnet.

Bible Class Grade. Bible Class Teacher. Bible Class Scholar. Church and Home, (weekly). Church and Home, (semi-monthly).

Average combined circulation each issue over Three Million Five Hundred Thousand copies. Samples forwarded on application.

"I do not hesitate to commend them as far the best of any."—Rev. E. Corwin, D. D., Racine, Wis. "Their excellence can not be overestimated. Prices defy competition."—S. W. Hayes, Wheeling, Mo. "They give unbounded satisfaction."—J. L. Hodge, Oyer, Kan. "Superintendent ten years; have found no helps so good."—W. R. Davidson, Arabi, Ky. "Best publications in twenty years' experience."—L. B. Davis, Lodi, Mich. "The interest has increased fifty per cent."—J. L. Lassiter, Branchville, N. C. "Prospering gloriously; due to Cook's supplies."—T. A. Davison, Kellerville, Ill. "Our school is the best in this part of the country, and we owe it to your supplies."—Geo. W Finch, Auburn, Cal. "Doubled our school in a few weeks."—E. Timmerman, Jasper, N. Y. "School gaining every Sabbath."—Thos. Purvis, Sunderland, Ont. "School has grown nearly twice as large."—E. F. Wilson, Centre, Tex. "Our school has built up greatly."—J. M. Worth, West Salamanca, N. Y. "Better pleased than ever. We are having a precious revival."—Henry Cobb, Metropolis, Ill. "The Holy Spirit is blessing our school with a knowledge of the Word we never had before."—A. Hamilton, Stewartsville, Ont.

GOLDEN CENSER: "By far the cheapest publications for quality, quantity and frequency. Everything Evangelical, pure and helpful." CHAUTAUQUA DEMOCRAT: "When we mention his name in connection with any Sunday-school literature, it is sufficient guarantee of its excellence." CENTRAL METHODIST: "Whatever Mr. Cook puts his hand to is given life and energy." BOSTON CONGREGATIONALIST: "Mr. Cook advertises truthfully. 'Enormous saving to Sunday-schools.'" BALTIMORE METHODIST: "A leading, if not the largest publisher of Sunday-school supplies on this continent."

Publishing House Elgin Ill., Office and Store 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—In the Ohio legislature, Tuesday, Henry B. Payne was elected United States Senator without opposition, the Republicans of both houses voting blank.

—The Republican caucus of the Iowa legislature, Tuesday evening, renominated Mr. Allison for United States Senator by acclamation.

—The increase of deposits in Massachusetts savings banks last year amounts to $11,296,230, the deposits being $252,607,593.

—The Standard Multiplex Telegraph Company, with a capital of $2,500,000, filed a certificate of incorporation at New York Tuesday.

—Robert Harris, President of the New York, Lake Erie and Western Road, was Thursday unanimously elected President of the Northern Pacific line, and Thomas F. Oakes of Boston, was chosen Vice President. This selection pleases the public interested in the securities of the road, and in Wall street it was looked upon with such favor that values immediately showed an upward tendency.

—A claim for damages for injuries received in a railroad accident was disallowed in the United States Court at Boston Wednesday, because the plaintiff, contrary to State law, was traveling on Sunday, and not on a mission of necessity or charity.

—James Egan, ex-Speaker of the New Jersey House, was sentenced Thursday at Newark to a month in the Penitentiary and $500 fine for attempting to bribe an Assemblyman at the last session of the Legislature.

—Nine of the ten mills of the Consumer's Powder Company near Scranton, Pa., blew up Thursday night, one at a time. L. H. Emory, the only victim, was killed half a mile away from the works by a flying piece of iron.

—Robert Gordon, who was born a slave and died recently at Cincinnati, bequeathes $25,000 for a home for aged and indigent colored women.

—Two buildings of the Johnson Harvester Works, at Batavia, N. Y., burned Tuesday morning, causing a loss of $50,000.

—Hereafter colored children will enjoy the same school privileges at Halifax, N. S., as are accorded to white children.

—In a car-load of wheat which left St. Louis Nov. 19 last, and was handled Wednesday at the Niagara elevator in Buffalo, N. Y., was found the body of a man frozen stiff.

—Mrs. E. N. Miller, living near Norwood, Ga., swooned from fright at the burning of the family residence, and died in a few moments.

—The boiler in Brink and Elkins' saw and grist mill, some distance from Columbia, Mo., exploded Friday, scalding and maiming eight men, who are not expected to recover.

—The mixing house of the Vulcan Dynamite Works at Allentown, Pa., blew up Friday morning. Three men were killed and mutilated, three others injured and three buildings wrecked.

—A boiler in the kitchen of Frank T. Sherwood at Hunter's Point, L. I., burst Friday morning, killing Mr. Sherwood's little boy, fatally injuring his brother, and blinding and burning Mrs. Sherwood.

—A boiler explosion in E. Y. and E. Wallace's shoe manufactory and tannery, at Rochester, N. H., Friday afternoon, killed four men and wounded seven, two fatally. One man is missing and is supposed to have been killed. One of the victims met his death by a piece of the boiler penetrating a thick brick wall, and then passed through the base of a 90-foot chimney, which fell on him.

—The nephew of Lieutenant Colonel Sudeikin, wounded by the Nihilists who assassinated his uncle, died Thursday, without recovering consciousness. The murder of Colonel Sudeikin has exercised a terribly depressing effect among the higher Russian officials. The Emperor summoned Count Tolstoi, the Minister of the Interior, and violently reproached him for lack of energy and incapacity. Tolstoi thereupon resigned.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

In Debility from Overwork.

Dr. G. W. COLLINS, Tipton, Ind., says: "I used it in nervous debility brought on by overwork in warm weather, with good results."

BUSINESS.

SAMPLE COPIES.

Back numbers of the Cynosure will be sent to all who wish them for distribution among their neighbors.

The plan is to send them to you in packages of ten or twenty and have you act as distributing agent. If you want subscription blanks and envelopes, please so state when you write; but understand that they will be sent without charge upon application, if you will only undertake to scatter the light as contained in the Cynosure.

Please send for the papers at once; we have now on hand quite a large number.

Many of our friends are, perhaps, prejudiced against the paper and that because they have never read a copy, who, after reading, may be led to send on their subscription.

If you enclose ten cents for postage with your order it will be acceptable, and if any balance remains after paying postage it will be credited to general work.

CYNOSURE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Received for the week ending January 19 from the following parties:

Robt Wilson, H R McRae, V J Miller, J H Hunting, S G Stewart, Orrin West, R G Wood, Orrin Sholes, C M Strickland, Mrs M C Smith, O N Tyler, Rev J S Rock, J Griffin, R Miller, D Marshman, Jno Swickord, J Leavitt, J B Slocum, F A Armstrong, John Todd, T R Hays, F F French, A Rolfe, M Woodward, D Callow, Benj Ulsh, J B Crall, H. Randall, A L Blowen, A K Martin, E H Collins, D L Morgan, M Zimmerman, B M Mason, J Gamble, Wm Perrin, R Hembrough, L W Bascom, Elizabeth Scott, R Ragan, Mrs E A Rowley, A M Paull, Philo Carpenter, E H Babbitt, W B Walthall, Saml Bushey, R B Landon, Eliza Osburn, G Durfee, F R Tobias, J T Comstock, Mary Gorsline, J W Suidter, S Murmmey, R W Dorlittle, E Van Forsen, C C Stowe, S Bingham, Wm R Vance, E Akins, L Roberts, Rev C C Foote, J Burgess, Smith Love, F Palmer, Jno Frew, Wm Dilley, E A Cook, Subscription News Co (1), Rufus Park, Matthew Caldwell, D Macauley, W M Baldridge, Mary A Fowler, Mrs U P Merrill, H Wychgram, H P Birdsall, W G Waddle, W S Titus, B J Hunt, Rev Z T Petty, Eld Freeman, Hiram Smith, Josiah Divell, Morris' Subscription Agency (3), Mrs Fred Lloyd, Mrs R Schnellbacher, A Conley, W W Ames, O Jennings, A Acker, W B Stoddard, Rev W Burr, S E Starry, J W Wilson, M L Worcester (2), E D Bailey, B Williams, B Bond.

SPECIAL.—To those who may have had their paper stopped much to their surprise, we wish to say that at this season of the year when there are many subscriptions received for renewal, and there are a number of changes to make on our mail list, there is danger of clerical errors, and if any of our subscribers should not receive the Cynosure as they expect, we would be grateful if they would send us a postal card notifying us that they wish their subscription continued, and we will be pleased to make the correction at once.

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

PAPER COVER, PRICE 75 cents.

The former price was 60 cents. We cannot send this book hereafter except upon receipt of 75 cents.

Eminent Dr. J. J. Caldwell, Batltimore, Md., states: "I have used Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic largely in Debility, Febrile and Nervous Diseases, and I have found it one of the most reliable of nutrient tonics in use or to be found in pharmacy." (Take no other.) Of druggists.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21, 1884.

GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2			88½
No. 3			79
Rejected			75
Winter No 2	88		96
Corn—No. 2			52
Rejected			45
Oats—No. 2			31¾
Rye—No. 2			58
Bran per ton		14	50
Flour—Winter	3	50 @6	00
Spring	2	25 @7	00
Hay—Timothy	6	00 @9	50
Prairie	4	00 @9	00
Lard per cwt		8	65
Mess pork per bbl		14	70
Butter, medium to best	18	@35
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	75	@2	20
Eggs			27
Potatoes per bus	30		39
Seeds—Timothy	1	15 @1	40
Clover	6	00 6	25
Flax		1	41
Broom corn	02	@ 07½
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Clear	42	00 @48	00
Common	11	00 @18	00
Shingles	2	50 @3	00
WOOL—Washed	22	@37
Unwashed	16	@26
LIVE STOCK—Cattle extra	6	40 @6	65
Good	5	75 @6	35
Medium	5	20 @5	70
Common	2	25 @4	75
Hogs	5	10 @6	25
Sheep	$3	40 @5	25

NEW YORK MARKETS.

Flour	2	80 @6	50
Wheat—Winter	75	@1	09
Spring	99	@1	02
Corn	48	@61½
Oats	39	@46
Mess Pork		14	50
Lard		9	00
Eggs			30
Butter	10	@41
Wool	10	@45

An Awful Responsibility.

EVERYBODY has something to say about consumption. We all deplore its terrible ravages, but only a few of us seem to have enough common sense to take the proper means of preventing it. It is as simple as "two and two are four," that Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, taken as a remedy for coughs, colds, difficult breathing, hoarseness, or any of the symptoms which pave the way for that terrible destroyer, will effect a radical and rapid cure of the ailment, and avert all danger. Whoever, under these circumstances, neglects to resort to the true specific, assumes a fearful responsibility. Sold by druggists.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

The Flesh Speedily Reunites

When obstinate sores are cleansed with Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Of druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, black ro brown, fifty cents.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED.

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.

C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS, WHEATON COLLEGE.

Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.

MRS. S. H. NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in their schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.

WM. W. FARWELL

Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.

76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD

Attorney and Counselor at Law

79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent FREE

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Send stamps for NEW LAWS. COL. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

PARLOR ORGANS ONLY $35.00

WARRANTED SIX [6] YEARS.

Including Stool, Book and Music, providing order is given and remittance made within seven days from date of this newspaper. REGULAR PRICE, $65.00, Without Stool, Book and Music. The PARIS, LONDON and NEW YORK ORGAN is built expressly to supply every household throughout civilization with Organs at popular prices. It is handsomely built, for the Parlor, Lodge, Church or Sabbath School, and is an ornament for the parlor of the millionaire, workingman or the far away Western farmer, &c. BRIEF DESCRIPTION: New Style, No. 700, Height, 59 inches; Length, 41 inches; Depth, 23 inches; Weight, boxed, about 325 pounds.

FIFTEEN (15) USEFUL STOPS, NAMELY:—

1, Powerful BOX SUB-BASS;

2, Double OCTAVE COUPLER, which doubles the power of the Organ; Couples Octaves Right and Left;

3, VOIX CELESTE, Opens set Three Octave Reeds, giving very charming, sweet, melodious tone;

4, FRENCH HORN, Imitates a Full Orchestra and Brass Band;

5, DIAPASON, Opens five full Octaves new and original "Paris" Reeds;

6, DULCIANA, Powerful Five Octaves Golden Reeds are thrown open by this Stop; tone, "London" Style;

7, VOX HUMANA, Tremulant; which imitates by a FAN WHEEL the Human Voice;

8, SAXAPHONE; 9, Piccolo; 10, Æolian; 11, Clarionet; 12, Cello; 13, Vox Jubilante; 14, Clarabella; 15, Grand Organ Knee Stop. The last eight stops are operated in direct conjunction with above seven, bringing forth, at command of the performer, most charming music, with beautiful orchestral effect, from a mere whisper, as it were, to a grand burst of harmony. Its THUNDERING TONES, while using the full Organ, must be heard to be appreciated

This original Cabinet Organ contains FIVE SETS GOLDEN TONGUE REEDS as follows:—1st, Five (5) Octave Set Diapason or Paris Reeds; 2d, Five (5) full Set Dulciana Reeds, toned "London" style; 3d, Sweet Voix Celeste Reeds of Three full Octaves; 4th, One (1) full Octave Powerful Manual Boxed Sub-Bass Reeds; 5th, Two (2) Octaves or one each of Piccolo and Saxaphone Reeds combined. The above Five Sets of Reeds are entirely original and are covered by patents obtained at the UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE. This beautiful PIANOFORTE UPRIGHT PARLOR OR CABINET ORGAN contains Five Full Octaves, One Manual or Key Board, Handsome Walnut Case, Receptacle for Book and Sheet Music, Lamp Stands, Handles, Rollers, Treble Upright Bellows (immense power), Steel Springs, &c. Right Knee Swell, also Left Grand Organ Knee Swell, by which the full power of this Organ may be obtained at pleasure by use of the knee without removing the hands from the Keyboard.

A MIDWINTER OFFER.—I desire every home within the reach of civilization to possess one of my matchless Organs and to this end only I make this offer.

A $65.00 Parlor Organ, with Book, Stool and Music, complete, boxed, delivered on cars at Washington, New Jersey, FOR ONLY $35.00

Providing Offer is accepted and order given within Seven days from date of this newspaper.

☞ CLIP THE FOLLOWING NOTICE AND MAIL WITH ORDER. ☜

No. 111. Upon receipt of this Notice from any reader of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE together with only $35 CASH, by P. O. Money Order, Registered Letter, Check or Bank Draft, mailed within the limited time, as specified, I hereby agree to receive same in full payment for one of my Beatty Organs, New Style, No. 700, &c. Money refunded with interest at 6 per cent. from date of your remittance, if not as represented after one year's use. (Signed), DANIEL F. BEATTY.

Remember to secure this GREAT BARGAIN you should order at once before the limited time has expired. Nothing can be gained by long correspondence. My sole object is to have this popular Organ introduced, without a moment's delay, into every household throughout civilization, as early and as quickly as possible. I am willing to offer the first instrument at a sacrifice to introduce, as every one sold so far has sold others. In one particular instance thirty sales, at $65 each, have followed the first Organ purchased. First Organ is shipped at $35.00 as an advertisement. All I ask in return of you is to show the instrument to your circle of friends. The instrument speaks for itself; it sings its own praises. If you are unable to accept this Great Offer, write me your reason why. Perhaps you have an instrument already of some other make and are not pleased. If so, dispose of it and order this. Friends of yours may desire an Organ. Call their attention to this advertisement. If they are from home mail this offer to them. If you can conveniently help me extend the sale of these Popular Instruments I shall certainly appreciate your efforts. If you are in need of an Organ you should avail yourself of the above offer at once, as it will not be repeated. Let me hear from you anyway. (Bear in mind, that I will not deviate from the above offer.) ☞ ORDER IMMEDIATELY.

DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 19. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1884. WHOLE No. 718.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.
J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
The Washington Convention..... 8
Editorial Correspondence 8
Shall I Withdraw from the Church?..... 8
Americans, Prohibitionists, Secretists..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Unity of the Spirit..... 1
Week-day Sermon..... 2
Masonry Crops out again.. 2
Paganism, Æstheticism and Mormonism..... 2
Fifty Years Ago..... 3
SELECTED:
The Arsenal at Springfield (Poetry)..... 3
Masonic Experience and Renunciation..... 3
AMERICAN POLITICS:
Will it Reform? New Party in Michigan..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
From the General Agent.. 4
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
CORRESPONDENCE:
From a Kansas Prayer Meeting; School of Falsehood; A Modern Instance; Hopeful Admissions; From a Brother who has been Standing Alone; Freemasonry and Outsiders; Difficult but Practical Question; Pith and Point.....5, 6
COME TO WASHINGTON..... 4
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
FARM NOTES..... 7
Entertainment at Washington..... 9
The Morgan Family..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES..... 12
OBITUARY..... 13
THE SECRET EMPIRE..... 13
THE N. C. A..... 7
IN BRIEF..... 14
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

THE FIFTEENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION

FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF THE SECRET LODGES.

By vote of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association a NATIONAL CONVENTION will be held in Washington, D. C., on the 20th, 21st and 22d of February, 1884, to discuss in the political center of the New World and in the presence of our nation's executive, judicial and legislative bodies, the principles fundamental to government and religion which are assailed by the secret orders, and also to co-operate for the overthrow of these orders with the convention already called at the same time in favor of political action against the dram-shop and the lodge. Able speakers will be in attendance and the very best arrangements for the accommodation of delegates will be made by the local committee. A grand feature of the Convention will be the formal inauguration of the work in Washington for which the National Association has purchased a fine building at No. 215, 4½ Street, N. W., and for which hundreds of its friends have liberally contributed. Every State, county and local society, and all churches opposed to secret societies are urged to send representatives to this Convention and arrange if possible for their expenses: and the N. C. A. Board by vote hereby request all friends of the reform who can not attend this Convention in person to send contributions and collections to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer of the N. C. A. in Chicago, to defray the expenses of this great meeting.

W. T. MELOY,
Chairman N. C. A. Board.

HENRY L. KELLOGG,
Secretary.

THE COMMISSARIAT.

ENTERTAINMENT AT WASHINGTON.

Delegates and visitors to the convention in Washington February 20–22 will please notice carefully the following facts. A few persons, who cannot afford to pay board, can have free entertainment provided they write beforehand. Only a few places can be furnished free and worthy persons needing them should write soon. Fair board and lodging can be obtained for a few persons at 70 cents a day; other places charge $1 or $1.25 a day. One good boarding house offers to take 20 delegates at $1.25 a day. Those wishing to economize should write to the undersigned stating how much they are willing to pay and arrangements will be made accordingly. On arrival in Washington delegates should report at No. 215 4½ St., N. W. If they arrive during the sessions of the convention they should report at Lincoln Hall. For further information address,

E. D. BAILEY,
215, 4 1-2 St., Northwest.

The effort to reach several thousand Scottish Highlanders in Chicago with religious services in the Gaelic tongue was begun on Sabbath day in a hopeful way. Dr. H. C. Campbell of Collingwood, Canada, Moderator of the Presbyterian church Synod, spoke in that unusual language, and a regular Sabbath afternnon meeting with cottage prayer meetings was provided for. This service is of more interest, since preaching in the Gaelic has been very unusual in this country, a Scotch church in Elmira, Stark county, Illinois, being almost the only place where it could be heard. The diversity of tongues which this service suggests, may have put it into the mind of Hon. John V. Farwell, who was present at this meeting, to say of the sects into which Christendom is cut up, that with God's will he would like to do away with all the "nicknames" by which the places of Christian worship were known.

The New York legislature was considering the other day a constitutional amendment to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. A leading Republican denounced the proposition as in the interest of free rum and claimed that those who have labored for that measure in New York and other States were inconsistent and ungrateful and deserved for their efforts little consideration from the Republican party. The contemptuous tone with which the proposition was treated shows that legal prohibition is not likely to succeed in New York until these is some breaking up of parties in that State.

It was lately announced that foot-ball was forbidden in Harvard College, but neither has rebellion at this "sumptuary" law emptied the class-rooms, nor have indignant parental protests disturbed the peace of the faculty. It is an easy argument from the prohibition of a rough game that results only in torn clothes and bruised shins to the prohibition of a poisonous drink which beggars ten thousand homes, is responsible for most of the crimes, and sends its victims by platoons to everlasting woe. Or, confining the case to college walls, if an institution finds it useful for the good of its inmates to forbid a playground sport, the argument has ten-fold power when turned toward the secret fraternities in colleges which are night schools of cruelty, trickery, favoritism and debauchery.

We have a glimpse of the superstition and ignorance of the Irish masses through which they are too often made the game of demagogues. Last week at Derrybeg, the birth-place of O'Donnell, an immense concourse of peasants assembled to assist in a mass for the repose of the soul of the murderer of Carey. Mass over, the wrought-up feelings of the crowd carried out the scene to the end. A mock funeral was arranged, a coffin borne in solemn pomp to the burying ground, wreaths of flowers strown upon it, and as it was placed in the grave the multitude knelt in prayer around it with all the demonstrations of grief. A people whose feelings are under so little restraint tempt unscrupulous leaders to dishonesty and imposition. The same credulity and want of judgment fills the lodges of this country with dupes who pass amazed through the initiatory rites, and never feel more solemn in their lives than when they stand before an Odd-fellow skeleton or play Hiram Abiff in in a Masonic lodge. But familiarity with these mock ceremonies must soon harden the heart, so that in an old frequenter of the lodge deception must be a second nature.

Governor John N. Irwin of Idaho Territory is an Iowa man, and seems to partake of the loyal Iowa spirit that is purging that State of the liquor fraud. When his first quarter's salary was sent him from Washington he returned it to the National Treasury, saying that the honor of the office was enough, the money was overpay. He objected to putting the money in the "conscience" fund, but recommended the opening of an honor fund. Governor Irwin's case is so singular, that it is difficult to penetrate his motive, whether it springs from the stern traditional integrity of former days, or there is some game of political advantage which he is playing. If he is misjudged he must thank the lodges which have everywhere undermined public confidence and engendered mistrust even for good action.

Two or three years ago Lorenzo Delmonico, proprietor of a celebrated restaurant in New York, died from excessive use of tobacco. A few days since the news that his brother Charles was missing, was followed by word that he had miserably perished from exposure and exhaustion in a mud-hole near to a friendly shelter, having wandered away in an insane condition. He was one of the best known men in the metropolis, was born to wealth and tasted every luxury and exhausted every pleasure that art and money could bring. At thirty-five he was an old man; at forty-five he was a lunatic, watched by guardians, and escaping from the splendid surroundings of his palace home he perished miserably in a roadside ditch like the most wretched tramp. The pleasure-loving world has seldom had such lessons of warning as these brothers have given; but who stops to avoid the snare into which they have fallen of the giddy thousands who press the cup of sinful indulgence to the lip and carelessly drift on to their doom. For God's merciful restraint of poverty how few are the thanksgivings, even from those who confess themselves dead to the world and alive to the glorious hope revealed in Christ!

THE SAVIOUR said that when he should send the Holy Spirit to his disciples, he (the Spirit) would do two things for them, viz.: teach them "all things," and bring his words to their remembrance. This covers all the exigencies of life, here and hereafter.

"UNITY OF THE SPIRIT."

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

Long and most earnestly have I desired to touch and locate on bed rock, on this grave subject. I have communed with such spirits as Hinman and Fee in this matter, not without benefit. My thoughts have troubled me as I have looked for the solution of the question of Bible Christian union as applied to this age and time. On this 25th day of December, the Papal day of almost universal Protestant recognition and "will worship," my thoughts revert to what I have seen and read on this subject. As I have before said, in your columns, once at least, has the prayer of Jesus been fulfilled—when the "disciples were all of one accord and in one place" under the full and direct leadings of the Holy Spirit. Here is the only hope of the unity of the church. All Christian bodies endorse this, as a theory. If they did it in fact God's people would now be one—as they are not.

The present condition of our Zion is humiliating, bewildering. Yet some teach that the church is substantially one, as the great Founder intended it to be. Let any one carefully read the Saviour's prayer for church unity, in the spirit of that wonderful document, and then take into his mind the divided, distracted conditions of Christians, if Christians they are, he will see that to ascribe all this carnality to Christ is to perpetrate on him the vilest caricature. As Jesus prayed that "they all might be one" as the Father and the Son are one, such an assumption would teach that the triune Deity exists in eternal discord —monstrous thought.

Ministers and teachers who set forth this doctrine "know not what they do." Such teachers object to real Christian unity founded on Christian character in a given community, on the ground that this adds another sect at war with all the rest. Be it so. Then, since polemic wars and conflicts are what Jesus prayed for, as above supposed, we may assume any amount of such unity, as for the best good of the church; and in as much as this so-called new sect is at war with all other bodies they have a manifold better reason for their being than any other, for according to such a line of argument they have found the keynote of Christian unity. The more competition the better, and of course the more and the greater the competitors the better, for all this is the union prayed for.

After long centuries of sectarian wars, it need not surprise us that the Scripture doctrine of the "unity of the Spirit" should be greatly corrupted, if not lost in the debris of eternal conflicts. So accustomed are we to the carnal strifes of so-called Christians that it is not easy to form any right conception of the import of that wonderful prayer, "That they all may be one in us as we are one." As all objects tend to the temperature of their surroundings, so it is in morals and religion. A miracle of spiritual power, only, can lift us above our environment. Both Abraham and Lot suffered by this depressing law of vicious contacts. Only the grace of God through the Holy Spirit can withstand it; the flames of Sodom must be added in many cases. The grossest heathenism has, sometimes, to be burned out of comparatively good men, as in Lot. While his "righteous soul" was vexed from day to day with the filthy conversation of the wicked, he did not escape contamination. Angels did not interpose to pull down the flag of holiness to half-mast, to accommodate the views of the place, but to purge out, by fire and brimstone, the infernal leaven of that sin-doomed city.

God will not lower the doctrine of the "unity of the church" to harmonize with the sentiments of this age of sectarian infidelity. The main object of this article is to advocate Bible Christian unity against the human notion of it, growing out of unbelief, generated by sectarianism combined with false teaching.

It may be said that to make "his people one" would require the greatest miracle. Then the greatest let it be. Christianity is a miracle of miracles. From its conception in heaven, to its Pentecost yet to come, of which that at Jerusalem was only the earnest, or the minature, the achievements of Christianity begin, culminate and triumph in miracles—being itself a miracle of life and love.

The full, final, all-uniting pentecost was and is embraced in the prayer of Jesus, "that they may be one as we are." We do not overlook the measure of union now found among God's people, but thank God there is any at all. In the first principles of the Gospel system, there is in fact some degree of harmony. But it is only the dim twilight of the noon-day of the unity prayed for by the Son of God, wherein saints are to be "perfectly joined together—of the same mind and judgment." Christ's prayer must and will be answered.

If we are to engage our souls with Jesus in his union prayer, we must be profoundly impressed with the fact of the present discord, and the future prospective harmony of the church. Those who think the church has already attained to this harmony, in the present competition and conflicts of scores of mutually hostile armies of the saints, need not, cannot pray for the unity for which Jesus so earnestly prayed.

We will close this article with the aemark, that unity can never be had in error. While error is intensely and eternally discordant, all truth is in holy harmony. On this rock we build. The powers of two worlds, in conspiracy against truth and God, propelled by all the malice of hell, cannot dislodge our souls from truth. All of "one accord and in one place," on and in the "Rock of Ages we find the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." O God, give us more light, that we may see better how to pray and how to work to this end. "Lord what wilt thou have me do?"

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

There are promises in the Bible which every Christian knows by heart. They have been the common property of the church in all ages; heroes and martyrs and babes in the faith have alike drank from their exhaustless fountains. But who has ever mapped out the hidden, unnoticed springs of comfort and strength that bubble up wherever the foot treads on Scripture ground? When we wander in the wilderness, weary and thirsty, how often God opens our eyes as he did Hagar's! How strange, that this promise, that encouragement, that tender word has been there through all the centuries waiting our moment of need! And in a peculiar and most sweet sense we feel that the word of promise or encouragement which we never heard elaborated into a sermon, and which commentators pass over in silence is ours—our very own.

Such an experience I now have in mind. I was reading the sixty-eighth Psalm, listless and despondent, discouragement within and physical weakness without. Yet its wonderful strains of triumph stirred no responsive chord till I came to the twenty-eighth verse: "The Lord hath commanded thy strength." That thrilled through me like a clarion call. What right have we to think that we cannot do much for God? that we are too weak to resist evil, and uphold right? Like the Philadelphian church every Christian has a little strength, enough not to openly deny his Lord; and much or little God has commanded it, not to fritter away in unnecessary household cares, or the mere seeking of gain; not to be wasted in fretting over our small crosses, or in trying to bear to-day the burdens of the morrow.

Sister B, when you sit down weary and headachy, to review a day in which "everything has gone wrong;" or Bro. X, after a similar experience with shop or farm, is there not a well-spring of comfort in the thought that God "commands our strength?" that he knows its limit to a hair's breadth, and will not try it beyond that limit by a feather's weight. The Lord must have great pity for all tired and discouraged people. I never could read the story of Elijah under the juniper tree, without thinking that he expressly allowed the iron-souled prophet to fall into such strange depths of gloom and despondency just to show how grandly, how tenderly he can comfort when our souls faint within us.

This is an age when evil lifts its hydra head on all sides, when the love of many is waxing cold. It is a time when God especially commands the strength of every Christian. The hosts of the saloon are rallying for a last struggle; the lodge like another Goliath is challenging the armies of the living God, and very easy it is to despond in view of such an outlook—to remain ingloriously in the sheepcotes thinking we are too weak for the battle. But there is One who knows our weakness, and just because he knows it far more thoroughly than we ourselves do, he can can command our strength.

MASONRY CROPS OUT AGAIN.

BY GEN'L J. W. PHELPS.

Masonry lies at the bottom of everything that the Republican party has done; and the longer that party works and flourishes, the more the lodge works out into view. The more the attention of the people is turned to the Republican party's connection with the lodge, the more plainly is the cloven hoof seen. Party pretences to respectability on the part of the Republicans have become so much shortened and cut away of late that the cloven hoof sticks out on all occasions. It cannot be concealed any longer.

Neither Andrew Johnson, nor Mr. Hayes, nor Gen. Garfield would have been President of the United States if he had not been a member of the lodge.

Nor would Mr. Edmunds of Vermont have been elected as presiding officer of the Senate the other day if he had not been a Freemason.

Mr. Edmunds represents a party, and he also represents that party within a party, the Masonic lodge; and he represents little else. He comes from a State that, at the beginning of the late war, offered the most perfect standpoint for the exercise of true Republican statesmanship that could ever have been presented. Never did South Carolina, in her palmiest days of slavery, offer John C. Calhoun a more solid independent platform wherefrom to announce slave principles than Vermont offered to her political leaders for announcing principles right the reverse. But Vermont political leaders instead of assuming this platform so freely offered to them, have been content with playing the part of mere subordinate partisan politicians. Of the numerous instances of party corruption exhibited by the Republicans, the political leaders of Vermont in Congress do not stand distinctly arrayed against one of them. On the contrary they are implicated with them rather than declaimers against them. They have been silent in the midst of them. They have "concealed and never revealed." They have subjected their poor and stony State to the useless payment of some ten millions of dollars for bounties to white recruits instead of insisting on the immediate acceptance of black recruits. They have aided to subject the country to the unrepublican measure of an enormous, fraudulent pension list. They have helped to reward high-handed rebels with high office; they have conciliated and compounded with criminals instead of asserting republican principles; they have sunk their State from a high moral standard of civil independence and freedom to the low position of being dragged at the tail of mere party expediency. In no case has the Vermont delegation in Congress ever risen during and since war times to the level of statesmanship which the character of their State freely offered them. They have entirely failed to represent the real republican character of the State. Their eyes have been hood-winked and their mouths gagged by the Masonic lodge, and they stand to-day, without an exception, among the mere rank and file of partisan followers. And in consequence it has helped to sink the Republican party to a lower level, if possible, than the Democracy itself. It has helped on the cause of Democratic conciliation to such an extent that neither justice nor truth is left with either party. Neither party can admit the truth without condemning itself; for what has been done by the Republicans has been done out of deference to Democrats; and hence neither can admit the impolicy and injustice and criminal laxness of what has been done. The Republicans have nothing to show for their motive power but the Masonic lodge; and if that power prevails, as Mr. Edmunds would have it do, not only republican government but the Christian religion must become subverted. Mr. Edmunds has shown himself capable of accepting office at the hands of the lodge; and hence he holds office under conditions that renders true service to the Republic an utter impossibility.

Everything shows that the country has need of a new party. The old parties have become too much compromised with fraud and corruption, and have strayed off too far from American principles to be able to serve our original American institutions. They are contending for plunder and power, and not for principle. The lodge which both parties in turn have used and served, must necessarily have brought our political affairs into this ruinous condition; and nothing can extricate them therefrom except a new party based on immutable opposition to the Masonic lodge.

PAGANISM, ÆSTHETICISM AND MASONISM.

Under the head of "Christianity and Æstheticism" in the Andover Review, just entering the field for public favor, we find some words which are quite applicable to Masonic members of Christian churches, who are characterized by Herbert Spencer as the people who "profess Christianity but practice Paganism."

Says the writer in the Review, "If you propose to live by the pagan rule, it may be well to avow it; certainly it is not well to deny it. . . Something is gained by the abandonment of hypocrisies. Something is also lost by the degradation of ideals. There is always a disparity between our standards and our conduct; if there were not, no progress would be possible. . . And while we may say that it is better not to avow the Christian law of righteousness and service if we are determined not to conform to it, we may also say that for any man voluntarily to renounce that standard of living and turn away to a baser one is a great renunciation—a great moral catastrophe. Yet this is what not a few of our neighbors seem to be doing. . . They are asking . . whether it were not better to take an easier rule than the Christian rule and forbear to strain after the impracticable. Signs of this change in the standards of conduct appear on every hand among the luxurious classes. . . We may detect in much of our literature the . . . substitution of some other standard of living for the Christian standard." . . . It is curious to find Mr. Oscar Wilde railing in mellifluous verse against mammon worship. It is as if a delicate-tinted toadstool should turn and rail at the compost heap on which it grows. . . He, Wilde, says,' It is not an increased moral sense . . that your literature needs. Indeed, one should never talk of a moral or immoral poem. Poems are either well written or badly written, that is all.'"

Thus the standard of Oscar Wilde is taste or fancy and ideals of art, and Christianity has no place in his system. So Masonry has its own standard and more certainly excludes Christianity by its own substituted worship and grand lodge above.

The clear Christian law of life is, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all good things shall be added." The modern paganism lays down its law also: "Love art for art's sake, and all things that you need will be added to you." The very words of Christ's law are travestied, and art put in the place of righteousness as the supreme law of life. Could blasphemy further go?"

Yes, Masonry not only travesties the very words of the divine law, but substitutes its own rites, prayers, etc. It ignores the Lord Jesus Christ of the New Testament, and pretends, for pay, to show him in its secret chamber!

"This æsthetic paganism, whose gods are set up in so many homes and whose degrading worship threatens the life of the church and the nation. . . They might have been good pagans if they had lived in the days of Socrates; but he who has seen . . the fullness of Christ can never go back to pagan patterns without crippling and corrupting his soul.

FARM NOTES.

WATERING HORSES.

One of the best agents in keeping the horse in condition is water. It is too commonly the practice to feed a thirsty horse first, watering him afterwards. The stupid groom has learned that horses will usually drink more freely after feeding than before, hence he reasons that the horse should have water given him at the period when he will take the most. It saves trouble, too, if water is given at the time when most will be taken, for if a horse requires two pailfuls in a day, the attendant thinks that he may take it all at once. While it is proper to give the horse access to water while at his meal, upon a plan we will refer to further on, still, a gorge of cold water taken into the stomach upon a full ration of grain or hay, interrupts digestiou by distending and chilling the stomach, diluting the gastric juice at the same time.

Cold water taken before eating acts as a tonic, in the same manner that going from a warm room into a frosty atmosphere acts as an invigorator upon the whole system of man or beast alike. It is well known that hot water applied to the surface relaxes the tissues, while cold water constringes, braces up, and gives tone. Hence it will be readily seen, that as the effect is quite alike upon all the tissues, the drinking of a large amount of warm water before a meal would relax the coats of the stomach, rendering its coats flabby, hence in a condition the opposite of that likely to give an appetite. Therefore it is correct to give the horse cool water before feeding him. It is a better plan to keep water within reach of the horse at all times. By adopting this rule the animal will at no time take enough to chill his stomach, so to speak, but will while eating his grain and hay, take just enough to moisten the dry food, greatly promoting digestion thereby.—National Live Stock Journal.

THE SIMPLEST FARM BOOK-KEEPING.—For an ordinary farm I would have but one book, and that one ruled after the form of the merchant's cash-book, and keep it very much in the same manner; i. e., on the left-hand page I would enter all the debits, and on the right-hand page all the credits.

The first account I would open would be the farm. On the left-hand page I would enter the present cash valuation of my farm, the cash value of each farm implement, and of all the new ones bought and repairs made. On the right-hand page I would enter the amount received for auy implements sold or returned, etc. Next I would have a name or number for each field on my farm and give it the same space in my book. On the left enter what I consider fair price for labor done, cost of all fertilizers put on that field, and all good seed put on same; on the right-hand page the cash value of all that field produced. The balance at the end of the year would show me the profit or loss on that field. And from the amouut of this loss or gain I would know what next to do with it. In like manner I would treat every field on my farm; also my sheep,—holding separate accounts with different breeds if I had such;—with my dairy cattle, my stock cattle, my horses and horse teams, my hogs, my poultry. Each of these accounts will show its gains or losses, from which I can decide the future management.

At the end of the year I would place on the right-hand or credit side a fair valuation of my farm and all farm implements, balance all my field and cattle accounts, and carry the balances to my farm account; this would then show me whether I was worth less or more than at the commencement of the year, aud just where the loss was sustained or profit made, i. e., which field or department of my farm had been the most profitable to me, and which the least. The farmer needs not to have scales to ascertain actual weights. His estimates are good enough, only be sure and estimate against yourself, and then the result will not disappoint you.—Scl.

CORN will shrink from the time that it is husked from the field or shock, in the autumn, in well protected cribs, from twenty to thirty per cent by spring. That is, 100 bushels will shrink to seventy or eighty, according to how dry it was when gathered. Sound corn will shrink twenty per ceut, so that forty cents per bushel as it comes from the field is as good as fifty cents in the spring.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE FOR 1884.

The national representative of the movement to "WITHSTAND, EXPOSE AND REMOVE" THE SECRET LODGES can now promise for the coming year a more attractive LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS than ever before, embraeing some of the ablest writers upon Christian reform topies in over twenty denominations. The Cynosure has been known for fifteen years as one of the most radical and uncompromising defenders of Christianity against the error of false religious systems, especially those now organized and powerful in the SECRET LODGES OF AMERICA.

The Cynosure is a welcome family paper in thousands of homes, having a choice family department, temperance, religious and secular news, farm notes, editorial notes on eurrent events, literary reviews, ete.

The editors, PRES. J. BLANCHARD and HENRY L. KELLOGG, will be most ably assisted by the lecturers and agents of the National Christian Assoeiation and its auxiliaries: J. P. STODDARD, General Secretary; E. D. BAILEY, Washington Agent; H. H. HINMAN, PAUL S. FEEMSTER, H. A. DAY, ISAAC BANCROFT, S. L. COOK, M. N. BUTLER, W. B. STODDARD and others; and by the following

Noble List of Contributors,

to which additions are being constantly made:

PROF. J. R. W. SLOANE, D.D.,
Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary.
PROF. J. G. CARSON, D.D.,
Zenia Theological Seminary.
PROF. L. N. STRATTON,
Wheaton Theological Seminary.
PRES. H. H. GEORGE, D.D.,
Geneva College.
REV. JOHN G. FEE,
Berea College.
PRES. C. J. KEPHART,
Avalon College.
REV. A. M. MILLIGAN, D.D.,
Pittsburgh.
REV. W. T. MELOY, D.D.,
Chicago.
REV. GEO. B. CHEEVER, D.D.
REV. C. C. FOOTE.

GEN. J. W. PHELPS,
American Candidate in 1880.
REV. J. C. K. MILLIGAN,
Editor Our Banner.
PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD,
Wheaton College.
GEORGE W. CLARK,
The "Liberty Singer."
EDMOND RONAYNE,
Anti-masonic Author.
REV. HENRY T. CHEEVER,
Worcester.
ELDER J. L. BARLOW,
Willimantic.
REV. WILLIAM WISHART, D.D.
ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.
ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

REV. W. O. TOBEY,
Editor "United Brethren in Christ."
H. L. HASTINGS,
Editor of the "Christian," Boston.
PROF. E. G. PAINE,
Wasioja Seminary.
PROF. O. F. LUMRY,
Wheaton College.
REV. P. B. CHAMBERLAIN,
Walla Walla, W. T
PROF. T. E. KENNEDY,
San Jose, Cal.
REV. ALBERT SIMS.
Uxbridge, Can.
JOHN D. NUTTING,
Oberlin.
REV. C. D. TRUMBULL.

REV. DAVID MCFALL,
Chambers St., Ref. Presbyterian Church, Boston.
REV. B. F. WORRELL,
Editor "Free Press," Olathe, Kans.
REV. WM. MOERDYK,
Dutch Reformed Church, Milwaukee.
PROF. J. A. EDGREN,
Morgan Park Theological Seminary.
ELDER WM. R. ROACH,
Pickering, Canada.
REV. A. J. CHITTENDEN,
College Church, Wheaton.
ELDER A. L. POST,
Montrose, Pa.
C. A. S. TEMPLE,
Reading, Mass.
REV. W. W. AMES,
Menomonie, Wis.
REV. W. T. HOGG,
Buffalo.
REV. WARREN TAYLOR.
REV. WOODRUFF POST.
REV. X.A. WELTON.
THOS. HODGE, ESQ.
REV. E. MATHEWS.
DR. J. G. CLARK.

Our lady writers are as excellent as their numbers are few.

E. E. FLAGG,
Author of "Holden with Cords.
MRS. J. S. COLLINS.
MRS. C. S. KENNEDY.
EDNA SHAW.
MRS. L. E. DEWOLF.
MRS. E. D. BAILEY.
MISS A. J. CAROTHERS.
MRS. M. A. TAPLEY.

FOREIGN.

REV. JOHN BOYES, A.M..
Grimsby, England.
PROF. CLAUDIO JANNET,
University of Paris.
REV. A. D. ZARAPHONITHES,
Andros, Greeee.
REV. WM. HAZENBERG,
Cape Town, S. Africa.

Other correspondents are being secured in Germany, England, Armenia, Japan, India, Australia and Mexico.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other staudard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

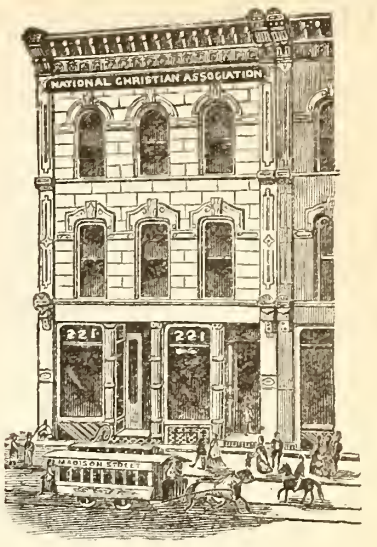
THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.7
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

SPECIAL.—To those who may have had their paper stopped much to their surprise, we wish to say that at this season of the year when there are many subscriptions received for renewal, and there are a number of changes to make on our mail list, there is danger of clerical errors, and if any of our subscribers should not receive the Cynosure as they expect, we would be grateful if they would send us a postal card notifying us that they wish their subscription continued, and we will be pleased to make the correction at once.

ALL REMITTANCES should be made by draft on Chicago, New York or Boston, postal money order, express or registered letter. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. In sending money the amount and what it is for should be distinctly stated. In every instance the name of the writer and his post office address should be given to avoid confusion or mistake.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of —— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H oss and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

LABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollis ; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; rcas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas. C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres., B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas. J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market: Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins.

Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1884.

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

This is the nearly last Cynosure which our readers will receive before some of them must be starting for the Capital. This is the situation. The advance-money is paid for Lincoln Hall and receipted. This secures the Hall. Letters are hourly expected from Gov. St. John, Pres. Scoville of Wooster University, Ohio, Hon. Ferdinand Schumaker, Hon. Chas. Almy and others, who have already given strong encouragement that they will be present. Hon. Frederick Douglass has said to us: "I will be present if I am alive and can get there." If he would say, as we hope he will, And when I get there I will address the convention, that alone would secure a crowded hall. So would St. John or Neal Dow, who has been written to, and his answer is expected daily. The great world-known lecturer, Joseph Cook, said to us, "I will at least write you a letter, and when I get home and look over my engagements I will let you know if I can attend one of your conventions." We have answers from Rev. H. T. Cheever, of Worcester, Mass., that he will be present; and we have written requesting Rev. Henry Avery and Rev. Wm. Johnson of Iowa, urging them to attend and speak. We are hourly expecting letters from the above, and others, whose names, in our haste, we may have omitted here; and the next Cynosure will give all the answers we receive in time to have them reach Chicago.

The "Appeal" to prohibitionists in the Cynosure of Jan. 17, signed by ex-Senator Pomeroy and others, is inserted in the National Republican here, and will be sent to a great many newspapers and individuals.

Meantime Prof. Bailey shows by his communication in this number that he is attending to the physical comfort of those who come, and he will add a codicil next week.

Never in the history of the Republic was there a more important meeting held in it. Slavery was fearful; but the lodge was its tutelar genius, soul, and protectress. Slavery was local; the lodge girdles the globe. Slavery oppressed men; the lodge rejects Christ. Slavery fought out the war; the lodge planned and waged it. Slavery was a bear; the lodge is a snake which charmed the men who made the war. I have conversed with Confederate captains, majors, colonels, and generals, and there is but one, and he a captain, whom I do not admire as men. I asked a major who commanded a brigade at Antietam, where the dead lay in one bloody run seven corpses deep, "Major, how many men do you think there are of any prominence, from Mason's and Dixon's line to the Gulf, who would like the old state of things back?"

"Only two," said the Major, "Bob Toombs and General Early."

"Well, Major;" I continued; "What did you fight our flag for?"

"Why; I stumped my district for the Union and was beaten; then my State went for secession, and what could I do?"

"Go not with a multitude to do evil," I replied.

But what carried out that major's State? I answer, the lodge which defeated J. Q. Adams and elected Jackson, a Royal Arch Mason! The lodge whose ballots shot down St. John from his own party behind him. The lodge which swore in fifty of "Pike's Indians" before even Pike could get them to fight against Curtis at Pea Ridge! The lodge; the LODGE! Every time the LODGE!! The two Vance's from North Carolina, now here in Congress, are gentlemen and patriots, but they were Masons and therefore generals in the rebel service. Robert B. Vance has lectured and formed lodges all over North Carolina, one of the last States dragooned into the rebellion. True, they were slave-holders; so was A. H. Stephens, but he plead for the Union and wept hot tears when leaving this capital to join the rebellion. The lodges, "in the witching hour of midnight," with their cut-throat oaths, bad whisky and devil-worship, priestism, "Grand and Great Grand," that have from Adam down bewildered and bedeviled men and made them fight against their own interests and their own flag, it was the lodge and its priests which befooled and becrazed the South. The loafers and bummers led the lodges at first, and good men and patriots were compelled to take the current and go with them, as charmed frogs go into the mouths of snakes.

This lodge, brethren, is what we have got to meet here on the 20th of February next, here in this city of politicians, clerks and employes, and ministers who are paid by them,—a city governed by the Treasury of the United States, which treasury is governed by men who are governed by the lodges.

Now, the question is, Will you come down here and face this music?

If this convention succeeds, the New England convention at Northampton is a success before we get there, and that will carry Ohio and Chicago.

Read now what Mr. Bailey says, and next week you shall have the rest. Come, men and women; and come as the Ohio Crusade women came—with "prayer and fasting."

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

AN ANTI-WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

The Republican of Jan. 17, contains the following:

MINNEHAHA LODGE.

The last meeting of this temperance organization was held at Simms's Hall and attracted a very large attendance of the members of the lodge, as well as a number of visitors from other lodges. The strength of the lodge was increased through the admission of several new members, to whom and the visitors present a pleasant reception was tendered. During the business session a large amount of important business was transacted. A committee was appointed to arrange for a series of public temperance meetings to be held in South Washington, to be conducted by Mr. M. T. Holden, the temperance lecturer from Providence, R. I. The committee on lecture course reported that Hon. R. B. Vance, Rev. Dr. Poulson, of Virginia; Hon. John B. Finch, of Nebraska, the prohibition leaders of the United States, and Mrs. E. B. Russell, of Illinois, had been engaged for one lecture each during the month of February. A series of resolutions were adopted approving the bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Hon. W. P. Hepburn, and concluding with the following:

Resolved, That a committee of five members be appointed to call upon the committees on the District of Columbia of the Senate and House of Representatives in the interest of such legislation as shall afford the people greater protection than at present against the ruinous influence of the saloon.

Of this committee Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood was appointed chairman.

Representative R. B. Vance is a Democratic-Prohibitionist and Freemason, lecturer and founder of Masonic lodges all over North Carolina. Prof. Bailey and I asked him to attend our Washington Convention and speak for prohibition. He, in answer, gave us the above facts.

Understanding Mrs. Lockwood to be opposed to secret societies we called on her, and she told us she belonged to a lodge.

Mark, Messrs. Vance, Finch and Rev. Dr. Poulson are "The Prohibition leaders in the United States." So? but the N. Y. Witness, Jan. 10, inst., says, "Under the lead of Miss Frances E. Willard a plan has been devised which will no doubt be thoroughly carried out, which will probably dismay politicians next summer." Which is right? Who are "the leaders?"

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

THE W. C. T. U. held two powerful meetings here on Sabbath, Jan. 20, at which Gen. Birney, Commissioner Price and others eloquently denounced a trick of saloonists and Masons to get a law excusing the liquor-sellers from getting a majority of the property-holders to sign their petitions for license. Immediately a meeting is got up at Simm's Hall appointing two leading Masons and a lodge-lecturing woman named Russell, from Illinois, to address a series of meetings in behalf of "Temperance" under the "auspices of the Good Templar lodges." Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood, who belongs to a secret lodge, heads their committee. Mrs. Roach, the very able president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, does not know this Mrs. E. B. Russell—never heard of her.

The Republicans are "whistling loud to keep their courage up." Senator Edmunds said in the caucus, "The outlook for the Republican party never has looked brighter for the last fifteen years." Can the Senator be serious? The "Solid South" has always ruled the country by the aid of Northern men with Southern principles; except when there was a solid North. What with prohibition and the rest a solid North is out of the question. The only Republican hope south of the "line" was Billy Mahone of Virginia. He has gone down and left the South solid for the Democrats. To make things more sure eight Republican judges have left the Ku-Klux free to shoot the negroes if they vote Republican tickets! "Bright" indeed.

J. B.

SHALL I WITHDRAW FROM THE CHURCH?

The case presented by Bro. Isaac Townshend of Tabor, Iowa, on the 6th page of this number and the difficult questions to which it gives rise have been for years discussed in these columns and in the National Conventions. Able arguments have been presented, both in favor of summary withdrawal from churches that continue in lodge fellowship and also of a continued effort with all long-suffering and charity to win men to the truth. The creeds and resolutions of every evangelical church can be shown without difficulty to condemn the lodge, and a fair and faithful application of them would make the churches as a whole disfellowship lodgery as they would Mormonism or infidelity.

The difficulty is here. The churches do not or will not understand the false worship of the lodge which rejects and mocks at Jesus Christ. Can they be better brought to know this by testimony from without or within? is the question for enlightened members.

The church being persuaded of the evils of the lodge and witnessing against them, as does the Tabor church (see their resolutions in Cynosure Nov. 29th), yet failing to fully apply their convictions to their practice in admitting members, is another question. Cannot a little labor and self-sacrifice be well and prayerfully given to make the practice of such a church conform to its testimony? Or, is the resolution a mask of hypocrisy such as churches and associations have been known to put on that they may deceive simple-hearted reformers while they receive Masons with open arms?

These features of the case are local, and brethren who meet them must decide for themselves whether to labor on for the strengthening of the faith of the church or to withdraw from brethren who walk disorderly. If the way of duty is not plain there is One who gives wisdom. Let brethren who agree to serve Christ only, meet frequently for prayer together, and if they follow the Spirit and the Word matters will soon develop. The church will come to them, or else will reject them, and in so doing reject the truth, and Christ who is the truth.

If, instead of hastily and in a contentious manner receiving members who are ignorant of the lodge devices of the devil, a testifying church deals with them in love, asking that a prayerful study of their disagreement with the church be had before they ask for fellowship, these troubles would seldom arise.

AMERICANS, PROHIBITIONISTS, SECRETISTS.

TO REV. WOODRUFF POST, J. H. GRAY AND OTHERS:—The Washington Convention, it was agreed by those who called it, is to decide nothing about candidates beyond giving its opinion. Sen. Pomeroy suggested, and we agreed that the nominations should be made at a National Convention in Chicago in or about June next.

The American party's first article is that "Ours is a Christian not a heathen nation." Christ said nothing in secret and we are bound by his example. If the American party votes for secretists it ceases to be Christian, and drops the first article of its platform.

The secret wing of the Prohibition party all say that the secrecy is trivial. Then it will cost them little to drop it. If the two parties are married, each must give up its secret lovers and keep to each other or the wedding is a sham.

Yours in Christ.

J. BLANCHARD.

P. S.—I believe the bride, however wealthy and widely connected, if she moves into the husband's house, takes his name.

THE MIDLAND.—The new representative of the United Presbyterian churches in the West appeared from St. Louis Jan. 10, a fine eight-page paper, well arranged, neatly printed, ably edited, and deserving a wide patronage without distinction of denominational lines. In an editorial in the first number on the indifference of the masses toward the Gospel, is found this good testimony:

"Apart from depravity, which is the tap-root, is the multiplication of societies which measurably supplant the divinely established church. There are secret fraternities and open associations, composed of believers and unbelievers, in such variety and profusion that one can scarcely discover a man who stands alone. These brotherhoods compete, unwittingly, mayhap, with the brotherhood of faith, and win, because the standard of admission is less exacting and the appeal to self-interest is more tempting. They take time, money and influence, and foster the idea that membership in them is important and sufficient. Thus insensibly there is a training of large classes in aversion to the house of prayer. The attraction of these merely human, not to say sinful, fellowships, is increased by the repulsion of grave defects in the life of the church itself. While many of the world's charges against the body of Christ are manifestly and basely false, it cannot be denied that some of them are true. Through eagerness to add to the roll of communicants unworthy applicants are received and retained. Their unchristliness is made the basis of self-justification on the part of the stayaways."

—Bro. S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire agent and editor of the Christian Witness, writes that God willing he will be at the Washington Convention, and another delegate has been chosen for the State, A. H. Brown, Esq., of Canterbury. Other States have appointed delegations. Let every arrangement be made for their attendance.

—The reform work was never progressing so favorably in New Hampshire as now, writes Bro. Kimball. The February edition of the Christian Witness was 1,300 and is gaining. This is good news. The brethren in that the Power of Jesus' Name.'" I then spoke for an hour to a well-filled room of attentive listeners and at the close announeed my subjeet for the evening at the Wesleyan ehureh.

There was in the evening a good attendance and I continued the theme of the morning's diseourse. I announced at the elose a leeture on the inside of the lodge for Monday afternoon, and promised to give some attention to the effeet of Freemasonry in the family. Despite the intense eold the house was well filled, some eoming from ten or twelve miles away. The fraternities were well represented and listened with marked attention and with perfeet deeorum during the entire diseourse. The friends made an offering to our work of $14.10, which, considering their eireumstanees, was liberal, and I left on a morning train with feelings of gratitude to the friends, and none but pleasant reeolleetions of my first visit to Middlefield. These friends will be heard from in politics at the next general eleetion unless I am greatly mistaken.

J. P. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM A KANSAS PRAYER MEETING.

SABETHA, KANSAS.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We are still trying in our part of God's vineyard to do what we ean for the overthrow of the kingdom of darkness and the establishment of truth in the earth. A few of us last May united together in a prayer meeting every Sabbath at 2 o'eloek, to ask God's blessing and guidanee in all the reforms of the day, and we have found the truth of God's word verified for he has been in our midst, and blessed us. As there were certain kinds of devils in Christ's time that eould not be cast out but by fasting and prayer, we believe the same devils exist to-day in seeret soeieties and they are the prinee of devils, for their habitation seems to be in the very bottom pit of all deeeivableness and darkness, and nothing but omnipotence can unveil them and bring them to the light that poor blinded man ean see their hellish designs.

We earnestly reeommend that where two or three earnest Christians can meet, let them eome together at least onee a week to implore God's guidanee and blessing in this struggle against all these eombined powers of darkness and wiekedness. Can we not see that through their influenee, power and popularity, that iniquity is coming in on us like a flood; that the professed Church of Christ is being flooded with these Baal worshipers, until her glory is departed and she is fast becoming a hiss and a by-word, her priests are fast becoming dumb dogs—they will not bark against these dark, secret, heathen worships for fear of offending.

Will Christ own such a chureh for his bride? I tell you No, but exeept they repent they must all likewise perish. It is no marvel that sueh ehurehes as these have to go down into Egypt for help and shake hands with the world, and make friends with the mammon of unrighteousness to sustain themselves.

Be not deceived. God is not moeked, for what a man sows, that shall he also reap; what a ehureh sows it shall reap; what a nation sows it shall reap also. Now, dear reader, are we sowing as individuals, as ehurehes and as a nation to the glory of God or are we sowing the wind to reap the whirlwind of God's wrath? Do we not see these seeretists have gotten into the ehureh to that extent that they have gotten the eontrol and led the ehurch away into Egypt after forms, fashions and folly till it has lost its power, and beeome salt without a savor?

We are fast beeoming a lawless people. These seeret, eombined powers of Satan are arrayed against the religious and eivil governments ordained of God, putting themselves in the seat of God to be worshiped above all that is ealled God. They tell us in their Grand Lodge reports that they know no government save their own Masonic government.

It would make our communieation too lengthy or we would try to unveil the G. A. R. We will pass it for the present and show at some future time how it has outmasoned Masonry and deeeived, if possible, more of the people.

JOHN THOMPSON.

SCHOOL OF FALSEHOOD.

At the close of the last Miehigan State Convention, held at Grand Rapids, Dr. Wieker, Elder Steer, and others, took the early morning train east. I intended to take the same train, but was providentially hindered. Coming on a later train my mind was greatly exereised about the state of society.

Seeing a noble looking man in the ear with a "square and compass" on his eoat front, I took a seat near him and said, "You are a Mason?" Looking surprised, he wished to know why I thought so. Pointing to his badge I asked him if that was not Masonie. He seemed eonfused, and said it was the Master Mason's badge.

I learned that he was a wealthy farmer, and had been prominently eonneeted with a railroad. I gave him an aeeount of the Grand Rapids Convention, and said that I had decided to ask some intelligent Mason if those representations of Masonry were true. He said he understood Blue-lodge Masonry well. I asked him if the eandidate was stripped or "duly and truly prepared," as stated by Mr. Starry. He replied, "If so, it would be to prevent him from taking any weapon of defense into the lodge." "Yes, but is it true?" After hesitating he said, "No, it is not true." I asked him about the obligations, penalties and ceremonies, and he positively denied all.

He said he was not a Christian, but his family were Christians. I asked him if Masonry was intended to take the plaee of the Gospel and the church. He said that a man would be just as good as the best Christian if he would live up to the teachings and principles of the order. But was not the name of Christ excluded from the Blue lodge? He said it was, but that is because Masonry is aneient. But a good Mason would as eertainly go to heaven as a Christian would.

I asked him what he meant by saying that he was not a Christian. He said he meant that he did not belong to any ehureh, and he did not make any profession as others did, though he thought he was as well off as they if he was a good Mason. Turning my attention to an unusually bright looking man ornamented with a "Key Stone," I learned that he was in business at Corunna. At first he seemed very cautious. I told him about the eonvention, and also about my eonversation with the other Mason. He strongly denied all the facts mentioned as the other did. He said that the lodge was as good as the ehurch. I asked him what he thought of the relation of the lodge to the ehureh. He answered, "When Masonry beeomes universal there will be no chureh." What is often ealled the ehureh is no better than the lodge, and is more dangerous. As Mr. Weirs said, "The religion of the lodge is fast beeoming the religion of the land, and our elergymen and ehurches have generally adopted it."

The men referred to above seem to be as bad as their philosophy. So prompt and positive were they that I eould not have doubted their statements had I not certainly known that they were deliberately lying. Now observe: If they would be true Masons they must lie. If they adhere to Masonry they will be lost.

A. H. SPRINGSTEIN.

A MODERN INSTANCE.

A speeimen of modern statesmanship, under the reign of the lodge, has been recently displayed in the House of Representatives by Mr. Cox. He showed himself very indignant against what is ealled the "iron-elad oath;" or, in other words, against an oath which is intended to seeure allegianee to the United States instead of to rebellion. But Mr. Cox has never shown any indignation, that we are aware of, against the oaths administered by Masons, Mormons and Ku-Klux, binding men to treasonable praetiees against the United States. What interests does Mr. Cox represent; those of the Republie, or those of rebellion against it? There is no eonsisteney nor moral depth or breadth in the statesmanship of Mr. Cox. He oeeupies the position of mere gladiator, who fights for his party and not for equity, justiee or truth. To find a carping, trivial objeetion against an oath administered by the goverument, and at the same time to defend by his silence the barbarous oaths administered by seeret soeieties which prey upon the government, is a species of statesmanship under whieh no government nor even deeent soeiety ean thrive. But under the tuition of the Masonie lodge the United States is full of just sueh statesmanship. The people will have to employ a higher order of servants than this if their aim is to save popular free government. Mr. Cox is probably above the average of our modern statesmen.

AMERICAN.

HOPEFUL ADMISSIONS.

GOODWINE, Ill., Jan. 21, 1884.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Permit me to say through our valuable paper that something is still being done in this part of the Lord's vineyard for the furtheranee of our reform movement—some books are oeeasionally being sold and traets distributed. Morally we are standing on a far higher plane in the estimation of the people than we did a few years baek; and only in rare instances do preachers have the "cheek" to belong to the ehureh and the lodge at the same time. In faet, so far as I know, preachers generally are quietly dropping out of the lodge and but few, if any, young preaehers are being "roped in." Presiding Elder Gue, of the M. E. ehurch, says he does not go with the lodge any more, and I am inclined to believe he may yet publiely renounee.

Quite an intelligent Mason stopped with me the other night. He wore the "keystone," on which were of course the first letters of "Hiram, Tyrian, Widow's Son, Sent To King Solomon!" But I am glad to say he was ashamed of the keystone and the eraft as well. He was very fair—unusually so—for one who wore Masonic traps. His travels are very extensive; being in the musie business, and an expert of high order, of eourse he is ealled everywhere. He admits the morals of the craft are very low. What an admission! He estimated that about nine-tenths of his brethren were either libertines or dram drinkers. What a splendid plaee the lodge is for preaehers to train in of nights to be prepared to eome before the people in the day-time to teaeh morals! The Lord will eall the Ameriean people to a fearful reekoning if we do not, and that speedily, dispense with lodge preaehers as teachers of morals.

It is eheering that the Eastern States are falling into line in the interest of the reform. The South is white for the harvest, while the West is ready to reeeive the truth.

The Washington movement, so ealled, is no doubt a grand step in the direetion of the furtheranee of the right. The temperanee eause should by no means be negleeted. Prohibition is the keynote, and the woman's rights movement deserves well also at our hands. Woman's vote eould be depended on in both these reforms. The woman's rights plank will undoubtedly be in our political platform and the sooner it is the better—to this eomplexion we will all eome at last. The Emaneipation Proelamation was the death knell of slavery. The emaneipation of woman by allowing woman the liberty of voting will be the death knell of whisky and the lodge. This last statement may be looked upon by some like Fremont's proelamation liberating the slaves in Missouri. Fremont was our sehoolmaster—the lesson for our nation was a hard one, but we learned it quickly when we had to and could not put the rebellion down without learning it. There is a rebellion now against the rights of the people. Our neighbors are being wheedled into the lodge and our sons are being drilled to the use of the pipe, the quid and drinking habits, and woman's vote will free our nation of these terrible evils.

J. S. HICKMAN.

GOOD LETTER FROM A BROTHER WHO HAS BEEN STANDING ALONE.

CAMBRIDGEBORO, Pa.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I will tell you something of the operations of seeretism in this seetion. I told you before this that Masonry had got a foothold in the chureh of whieh I had been a member over forty years, by Elder Dean making applieation for the pastorate and being voted in after it was made known (by his own admission) that he is a Mason. I opposed him on that ground, and submitted some of my evidenee of its anti-Christian eharaeter; but its truthfulness was questioned on the ground that no moral man, and espeeially a Christian, eould or would take sueh oaths and agree to sueh penalties as were taken in the first three degrees of Masonry, whieh I read as given by Pres. Finney, and for the further reason that a large part of the membership belongs to one or more of the five seeret soeieties of the plaee. I then presented a petition of whieh the following is a eopy:

"To the Baptist Church of Cambridgeboro: The undersigned, your petitioner, would respeetfully represent that he believes Masonry (as revealed by Wm. Morgan, Col. David Miller, Elder Bernard, Pres. Chas. G. Finney, Elder Stearns, and 103 seeeding Masons at a eonvention at Le Roy, New York, in 1828, and hosts of others at that time and sinee who had been Masons and are eredible witnesses) is anti-Christian, and [its members] should have no position either offieially or as a lay member in Christ's church. And as your body by its members present and voting ealled Elder Dean as pastor by a majority vote, who by his own admission is a Mason, I would therefore ask your body by a vote to release me from all eovenant obligations with and toward your body as a church, and make the above as well as the vote granting my petition a matter of reeord: and as in duty bound I will ever pray that the ehureh may be purged and ready when the Bridegroom cometh. J. H. GRAY."

I do not blame the ehureh so very much, as they (or the most of them) are ignorant of the faets and look at Masonry, ete., through the medium of initiation, obligations and professed object of soeieties of whieh they are members. But you ean see what a vast amount of missionary work I have to do in this seetion. I supposed that I stood nearly alone in the work until I reeeived your valuable paper and doeuments, and their reception made me feel some like the one whose eyes were opened at a time of great despondeney and was led to exelaim, "They that are for us are more than they that are against us," and it led me to wish to eo-operate with men who dare in the faee of popularity and publie opinion oppose the wrong and work for the right. Therefore, if any of your leading men are in this vicinity who are posted on the working of your organization I should be pleased to have them eall on me. Our town is on the N. Y. P. & O. R. R., fourteen miles from Meadville, in Crawford eounty. I see by your paper that the organization in this State is principally in the eastern part, but I hope to organize in this seetion soon and desire all the information possible, as I hope to make it effieient. I wish and expect to bend my endeavors to establish the right and prevent the wrong.

By the way, Hon. Sehuyler Colfax laetured on "Odd-fellowship" here in our hall on the 3rd inst., and I had a short and pleasant interview with him after the lecture. I told him I should eriticise it in public and did not wish to misrepresent him. That when he pictured the final judgment and arranged some on the left and another class on the right hand, and quoted "Even as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me," I could at least by induetion only see that their, [the Odd-fellow's] teaching and praetiees brought them to the right hand, henee it is a means of salvation. He denied intending to give it that meaning but I must leave it to the impressions it made on others, as he had a large audienee.

He advised me to join, and said he would like to help initiate me, and I understood he told others he would go 4000 miles to do it, but I don't think he need put off any trans-Atlantie journey expecting any such result. He is a very fine speaker, with quite good, pleasant, and interesting soeial qualities.

There is one thing I would like to see in your paper (it or something like it may have been published before; but you know until lately I knew but little if anything about your paper or publieations). That thing is, tableting and publishing the names of all our known seeret soeieties in the civilized or Christian world in the order of their importance, either assumed or imputed; or if space for all cannot be given, then those in our own eountry, ineluding all that are supposed to be dead and buried, ineluding the Mollie Maguires of our State. I may be asking too mueh but I think it would help me in my work, and there may be some publication having the information in; if so please let me know. I will try and go to some of the conventions if not too far off.

J. H. GRAY.

FREEMASONRY AND OUTSIDERS.

TROY, Ill.

I am frequently told by Freemasons that "outsiders" know nothing about Masonry, and therefore ought not to say anything about it, as they only talk at random. Now I am an "outsider," never took a Masonic oath, and yet there are some things I claim to know.

First, when Dr. — died in a big drunk, a foul-mouthed blaspbemer, the Masons buried him; and they had Rev. Mr. — to preach at his funeral, who drew a little white apron over the pit of his stomach, and preached the doctor, who died drunk, right up into the "Grand Lodge above." This I know. Will any Mason say I don't?

Secondly, I know when I was holding a meeting in Richland Co., Ill., just at the stage when the meeting was becoming interesting and souls were being saved, the night came for the lodge to meet; and when we met for worship many familiar faces were missing out of the congregation. Some of us in our ignorance did not know what was the matter, but we went on with the service till I was just ready in old-fashioned Methodist style to call for seekers, when suddenly the door opened and in came ten or fifteen Freemasons, and so completely confused and disturbed the meeting that it never recovered.

The lodge master told me afterwards, by way of apology, that it was lodge night, and they could not neglect the lodge, but that they hurried through with the business so they could attend the meeting, and that they got in just as soon as they could. These things I know.

And more, I know that little as I knew then about the real inwardness of Masonry, I thought deep down in my heart, that whether its abettors so meant it or not, that Freemasonry was the enemy of the cross of Christ; and the more I learn about it the more intensely I believe that to be so.

Christ says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." Masonry says, "Attend ye first to the lodge, then you may go to church." Christ says, "Make ready wherewith I may sup, and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink." Masonry says, the lodge first; afterward Christ. R. W. LAUGHLIN.

A DIFFICULT BUT PRACTICAL QUESTION.

TABOR, Iowa.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I write you a few lines for advice, or from any other good Christian minister of the Gospel. Several weeks ago a man who has been a member of the Methodist church, and a Royal Arch Mason, applied for admission to the Congregational church of this place. He was accepted by the examining committee and his name was read in public for admission to the church; objection was raised on account of his being a Mason. Two or three church meetings were called to discuss the subject, and the final vote was to admit him notwithstanding the objection. The vote was 47 to admit and 35 not to admit. Then to smooth over the matter the Masonic party drew up the articles that you printed some weeks ago, condemning Masonry and then admitting Freemasons that do not renounce the lodge, but say that it does not conflict with their Christianity or their duty to the church. The action looks to me as inconsistent as if a church should condemn polygamy and then admit a member that has three or four wives.

Now as I believe that adhering to Freemasonry is inconsistent with Christianity, and cannot fellowship those that adhere to Freemasonry, what shall I do? There is no church within 35 or 40 miles of this place that excludes Freemasons. I hope that you or some good Christian brother will give me some good advice as to my future duty. The subject of Freemasonry was pretty well discussed in those church meetings that were held to consider the case of admitting a Freemason into the church; the subject has not been discussed here before for years. Yours in love of the truth, ISAAC TOWNSHEND.

NOTE.—A few suggestions by way of reply to our brother appear on the editorial pages.

PITH AND POINT.

ANOTHER SECEDER.

I have lately received a letter from a friend containing the following: "I have been a member of four secret societies, one of which was Masonic; but gave all up. I do not think it consistent for myself to have anything to do with them, and as I have proper occasion I bear testimony against them. I do not see how any devoted Christian (and I doubt if there are any) can be active in a Masonic lodge, and I do not see how any Christian can belong to the order, but no doubt many do, but I think they need "washing" and their eyes need opening to see where they stand.—J. S. BIBBINS, Newark, Ill.

CONVERSION WITHOUT CHANGE OF HEART.

Mr. Beecher has been to New Orleans, and says the people there have come to like General Butler. They are converted, at last, to an admiration of the SOVEREIGN GRAND INSPECTOR GENERAL 33D DEGREE. But it must be remembered that the General Butler whom they have at last come to admire, is the same General Butler who traduces Massachusetts and who voted for Jefferson Davis for President. He, General Butler, is neither converted nor subject to a change of heart.—SOUR APPLETREE.

I want to send you a card shortly inviting and urging all the subscribers here and elsewhere to send in their renewals without delay, and urge each one to make the best effort they can to obtain a new subscriber. We shall make such an effort here and do all we can for the cause. Except the Lord conduct the plan our best concerted schemes are vain. The cause is the Lord's. I feel, as I trust every other worker does, as Luther did before the Diet of Worms, "I can not do otherwise, the Lord help me."—GEO. JOHNSTON, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

A QUESTION FOR PROF. SLOANE.

The sermon of Rev. A. J. Chittenden is very superior on the subject, in my humble opinion, as also that under the caption, "Reform and Reformers." I left the kingdom of Scotland in the administration of President James Buchanan, landing in New York City, where I lived one year and some days. During that time a Reverend gentleman named Sloane, in one of the churches of said city, preached against slavery. Provided this gentleman is the same man, he is a most powerful man on any side of a controverted subject. He forcibly reminded me of some of the divines of Glasgow, or Paisley, Scotland, who with an unhampered freedom could come forward without embarrassment to address a national assembly.

I hope I will be pardoned for asking said Reverend gentleman, for my information, what "Churches were organized which made slavery a term of communion;" would he please give a brief account of said church and its organization through your valuable columns. Please publish this humble request of one of your readers.—S. W., Morning Sun, Iowa.

THE POWER WE NEED.

We are reminded that it is our duty to stir up each other by way of remembrance. To withstand the conspiracy that is carried on in secretism is a work which many of us are aware must have ability and power. The Holy Ghost is the power necessary to destroy the evil. As we are filled with the Holy Ghost we will be all the time taking a fervent delight in doing good to our fellow beings.. Let there be a concentrating to this power by all Christians and a glorious light will shine overcoming all error.—STEPHEN MACY, Pleasant Plain, Iowa,

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON VI.—February 10, 1884.—The Conversion of Lydia. Acts 16: 11-24.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.—Acts 16: 14.

"Thence to Philippi," about ten miles from Neapolis. So far as the New Testament history directly informs us, Philippi was the first city in Europe that heard the Gospel message. How minute the seed, a conversational service with a few women outside the gates of Philippi! how great the tree, European Christendom! Comp. Matt. 13: 31, 32.—Abbott.

"Where prayer was wont to be made," or "where there was wont to be a place of prayer." The word (proseucha) is well known as the designation of a slight and temporary structure, commonly circular, frequently open to the sky, erected for the purposes of Jewish worship; in some cases the "proseucha" seems simply a space or inclosure set apart for this solemn purpose. There was evidently but a very small colony of Jews resident at Philippi, owing, no doubt, to the fact that Philippi was rather a military than a commercial city. This accounts for there being no regular synagogue there; the "proseucha," or place of prayer by the river side, was the substitute for the ordinary Jewish meeting-house.—Schaff.

"A certain woman." That she was a Jewish proselyte is indicated by the language, which worshipped God; ver. 15 indicates that she had her residence in or near Philippi; she is not mentioned again in the New Testament, but may well have been one of those women which labored with Paul in the Gospel, and referred to in Phil. 4: 3.——Abbott.

"Lydia." Lydia had probably, in her own country, borne another name; but when she removed to Philippi she was called as a stranger Lydia, or the Lydian. Lydia only is mentioned by name, and it has been surmised that she was a widow, and that her "whole house" consisted of her children and domestics. As purple in ancient times was of a very costly description, and the manufacture of it would require considerable capital, Lydia must have been a lady of some wealth and influence, and certainly she had the means of exercising a noble hospitality.—Lewin.

"Whose heart the Lord opened," i. e., in conformity with other passages (Matt. 11:25 sq.; Luke 24: 45; 1 Cor. 3: 6, 7), enlightened, impressed by His Spirit, and so prepared to receive the truth.—Hackett. Observe the incidental recognition here of the truth that the Word of God is efficacious only as it is blessed by the Spirit of God (1 Cor. 7: 6; 2 Cor. 4: 6. Comp. Matt. 13: 16).—Abbott. The heart is of itself closed, but it is for God to open it.—Bengel. Probably the opening was a process that had been going on for a long time. From day to day her heart longed more for God; from day to day her prayer rose more eagerly to the throne. This was the opening; she was growing ready for receiving the Gospel. Even the preaching of Paul did not save unless an opened heart attended to it and took it in.—Arnot.

"Come into my house, and abide there." As a rule, Paul was reluctant to accept favors. Surrounded by enemies, he determined that the reproach of mercenary motives should never hinder his work for the Master. Lydia's urgent invitation induced Paul to deviate from his practice of refusing help, even from his most intimate friends (Acts 20: 33, 34). There were of course exceptions to this rule (Acts 24: 23; 28: 10; Rom. 16: 23).—Commentary on Revision, Schaff.

"A certain damsel possessed with a spirit of divination." Literally, of Python, or of a Pythonic spirit. Python was the serpent that guarded Delphi, and which was slain by Apollo, and hence that god was called Pythius. In the temple of Apollo the organ of the oracle was always a woman, said to be inspired by the god. The heathen inhabitants of Philippi accordingly regarded this woman as inspired by Apollo. The history plainly implies that she was possessed with a devil—she was a demoniac.—Gloag. So that the act of Paul did not merely expose a fraud, nor calm the perturbed mind of a lunatic, but really delivered this unfortunate from the evil spirit which possessed her.—Abbott.

"Which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying" (pretending to foretell the future). She was a mixture of fraud, clairvoyance, insanity and devil. These heathen prophets were not only tolerated, but protected and honored by the government, were consulted by leading men, and were honored counsellors in the public assemblies. They were not infrequently slaves, as in the case of this woman, who was owned, apparently, by two or three masters in common.—Abbott.

"The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying," etc. This may have been a supernatural recognition of the power of God in the apostles; see the analogous cases in Matt. 8: 29; Mark 3: 11; Luke 4: 41; 8: 28; and this is the view of most commentators; or it may have been a cry of sarcasm and derision, the possessed following Paul with this outcry, somewhat as a crowd of boys might do.— Abbott.

"The hope of their gains was gone." The first heathen persecution, like that subsequently at Ephesus (ch. 19: 25–27), was set on foot by covetousness. Comp. 1 Tim. 6: 9, 10. Like the Gergesenes (Matt. 8: 28–34), they cared nothing that a soul had been saved in comparison with the loss of their gains.—Abbott. There is something like a prophetic significance in the use, at this stage, of the word which was the key to nearly all the persecutions to which the early believers were exposed. Men could tolerate varieties of worship or the speculations of philosophers; they were roused to madness by that which threatened their business.—Plumptre

"Being Romans." Observe the contrast; they, Jews, trouble us, Romans. While the Roman government allowed in the provinces the original religion of the inhabitants, they forbade the introduction of innovations in religion, especially into Roman cities like that of Philippi, as calculated to unsettle the minds of the people and create political disturbance. Morever, every city had its own special protecting deities; to bring into it a new worship was an invasion which the people were as ready to resent as the magistrates to punish.—Abbott.

"Commanded to beat them." The custom was with the Romans to inflict blows with rods upon the naked body. In his catalogue of the sufferings he had endured (2 Cor. 11: 25), Paul relates how "thrice he was beaten with rods, and of the Jews five times had received forty stripes save one" (2 Cor. 11: 24; Deut. 25: 3). He endured here, we are told, many stripes, there being in the Roman practice no such merciful restriction as that existing in the law of Moses.—Revision Com. It is happy for us that few modern countries know, by the example of a similar punishment, what the severity of a Roman scourging was. Well might St. Paul, when at Corinth, look back to this day of cruelty, and remind the Thessalonians how he and Silas had "suffered before, and were shamefully treated at Philippi."—Howson.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

The Agency of Evil Spirits.

1. Lydia, though a gentile by birth, and resident of a heathen city, lived up to the light she had, and so was ready to receive the Gospel when preached to her. We are free agents. God cannot open our hearts if we keep them closed by persistent sin, by prejudice against the truth, or by neglecting to improve the privileges we have.

2. She was a Jewish proselyte instructed in the true faith. Church statistics show that the great majority of converts have religious training in their youth. Children who have learned to hate profanity and Sabbath-breaking, as well as lodgery, tobacco and the intoxicating cup, are much more apt to become Christian men and women.

3. This "damsel possessed with a spirit of divination," was supposed to be inspired of Apollo like the priestess at Delphi, who, under the influence of some kind of exhilarating gas delivered the celebrated Delphian oracles. She was really suffering under an evil spirit who helped her to deceive people by pretending to foretell the future.

4. The Bible tells us that Satan is "the god of this world," and under him are legions of wicked spirits whose chief work is to deceive mankind. He is the head and inspirer of all false worships. This is why Paul calls the offerings made to heathen gods "sacrifices to devils."

5. The fact that Freemasonry traces its origin to these same heathen worships proves clearly that like them it is inspired and controlled by evil spirits. We cannot tell just how these evil spirits act on men's minds at the present day, but there are passages in the Bible which speak as if they caused a kind of spiritual intoxication in which the conscience, like the drunkard's brain, loses all capacity for true discernment or just reasoning.

6. Freemasonry bears testimony to Christ by the very care it takes to suppress his name. This shows that like the devils of old it fears his power.

7. Masonry and kindred secret orders "bring great gain" to a few crafty leaders, and they do not care for the many who lose their manhood, their money, their liberty and their souls, any more than the saloonkeeper cares for the ruin and misery his terrible traffic creates. Those who oppose profitable wickedness must always expect persecution.

Light from the Word.

What other character in Acts greatly resembles Lydia? 10: 1, 2. What does the Bible tell us about the mission of evil spirits? 1 Tim. 4: 1; Rev. 16: 14; 20: 3. What are false worships called? Deut. 32: 17; Ps. 106: 37; 1 Cor. 10: 20. How is the intoxicating effect of such worships shown? Jer. 50: 38; 51: 7; Rev. 17 : 2. If Freemasons do not worship the true God who do they worship?

The rejection of the good which he knows to be the highest is the soul's prerogative, and the most terrible of tragedies."

So writes the able pen of Washington Gladden against the silly and selfish but openly taught vanities of Oscar Wilde's system. How much more ought to be said of that selfish lodge hypocrisy which inculcates another gospel" and another home above than that of the Christian heaven, and yet professes to abide before men as members both of the free church of Christ, and the oath-bound slave church of Masonry? A SCOT.

THE ARSENAL AT SPRINGFIELD.

This is the arsenal, from floor to ceiling,
Like a huge organ, rise the burnished arms;
But from their silent pipes no anthem pealing
Startles the villagers with strange alarms.

Ah! what a sound will rise, how wild and dreary
When the death angel touches those swift keys;
What loud lament and dismal miserere
Will mingle with their awful symphonies.

I hear even now the infinite fierce chorus—
The cries of agony, the endless groan,
Which through the ages that hath gone before us,
In long reverberations reach our own.

On helm and harness rings the Saxon hammer,
Through cimbric forests roars the Norsemen's song,
And loud amid the universal clamor
O'er distant deserts sounds the Tartar gong.

I hear the Florentine, who from his palace,
Wheels out his battle bell with dreadful din;
And Aztec priests, upon their Teocallis,
Beat the wild war-drums made of serpent's skin.

The tumult of each sacked and burning village,
The shout that every prayer for mercy drowns,
The soldiers' revels in the midst of pillage,
The wail of famine in beleaguered towns.

The bursting shell—the gateway wrenched asunder—
The rattling musketry—the clashing blade;
And ever and anon, in tones of thunder,
The diapason of the cannonade.

Is it, O man! with such discordant noises,
With such accursed instruments as these
Thou drownest nature's sweet and kindly voices,
And jarrest the celestial harmonies?

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals nor forts.

The "Warrior's" name would be a name abhorred!
And every nation that should lift again
Its hand against its brother, on his forehead
Would wear for evermore the curse of Cain.

Down the dark future through long generations
The echoing sounds grow fainter and then cease;
And like a bell with solemn, sweet vibrations—
I hear once more the voice of Christ say: Peace.

Peace; and no longer from its brazen portals
The blast of war's great organ shakes the skies,
But beautiful as songs, of the immortals,
The holy melodies of love arise.

—Longfellow.

"It is understood that the Pope has a mind to show some favor to the English Freemasons."

The long and well understood opposition of the papal authority to Freemasonry is altogether upon a different basis than that occupied by ourselves, and the platform of the "Christian Association." With the Romanist that opposition is based upon the encroachment of the lodge upon the authority of the church, Rome denying the right of the lodge, or of any person, or body of persons, other than herself to ordain religious rites, or impose moral or religious obligations. Our opposition is on the ground that the lodge offers eternal salvation on other foundation than that of the merits of Christ.

We are not at all surprised at this disposition on the part of the Pope. The circumstances of the case demand it, viewed from a secular and politic standpoint. And further, we regard this as but in the line of the fulfillment of prophecy; for the time is coming when all the powers of anti-Christ—symbolized as "Beast," "False Prophet," and "Dragon," shall become confederate against the kingdom of Christ. The practical union of secrecy and papacy in the nature of the case will take place.—Free Methodist.

In these days Christian people exercise much liberty in the matter of travel on the Lord's day. Every one however, must see something suggestive in this paragraph from a London paper: "I'm dying—I feel I'm dying—fetch some one to pray with me," cried a poor cabman who had been thrown from his box some days ago. At his request his weeping wife sent her poor boy for the nearest minister. The sorrowful boy soon returned with the messenger of God, and found medical attendants doing all they could to alleviate the agonies of the sufferer. The minister, bending over him, assured him there was mercy. A convulsive struggle showed that the conflict was nearly over. He opened his half-closed eyes, and with an expiring effort, he muttered, 'I've had no Sundays!' He spoke no more."—Baptist Weekly.

MASONIC EXPERIENCE AND RENUNCIATION.

ANOTHER CHAPTER FROM THE SECEDERS' RECORD.

In the year 1870 I removed to Henry county, Missouri. I took a demit from Worthington Lodge, and when Clear Creek Lodge, Ft. Lyon, Benton county Missouri, was organized I visited the lodge, and after a few months sent in my demit and a petition for membership. I was accepted, and remained a member for three or four years. About the time that Clear Creek Lodge was organized, a new lodge was started in Leesville. I visited the Leesville lodge a number of times, but decided to join Clear Creek Lodge, seven miles away rather than the one right at home, because there the members were nearly all professors of Christianity, and here many were very profane, and some were intemperate, and they were taking in some very poor material, judging from a moral point of view. I now see that it is worse for Christians than for unbelievers to worship strange gods. Then I thought Masonry too good for the profane and intemperate. Now I think, yes, I know, that it is so bad that no one should support it and be enslaved by its degrading obligations.

While I was a member of the Clear Creek Lodge, Davis Paddleford, a special friend of mine, was "initiated, passed, and raised" in that lodge. He was a zealous Mason, but his mother and grandmother were strongly opposed to secretism. His grandmother, who lived in Wisconsin, hearing that he had joined the Masons, frequently sent him a copy of the Cynosure, and he in returning some borrowed books to me, wrapped them in a copy of that paper. I read it. It put me to thinking. I saw what I had been doing, and quit attending lodge, and refused to join in Masonic processions when ordered so to do by the Worshipful Master. But I was still a slave, for I felt that my obligation to "forever conceal and never reveal," was still binding. I made the common mistake of thinking that all oaths are sacred.

Well, in March, 1877, a neighbor, who had toiled and saved and denied himself and family some of the comforts of life in order to pay for the first degree, said to me that he had a book that claimed to give the three degrees of Blue Lodge Masonry in full, and said he knew the first was rightly given, and wanted me to stop and get the book and see if the second and third were correct. I declined, as I felt bound by my obligations not to reveal the secrets of the Fellow Craft's and Master's degree to an Entered Apprentice. I felt sure the book told it all, for I had known for years that it was fully exposed. He mentioned it to me several times, and finally, when I was passing one day he brought it and handed it to me. I could not decline without rudeness, and I took it. It was Ronayne's Hand Book. As I had expected, the work was all right, but the remarks and arguments of Mr. Ronayne served to open my mouth, my eyes had been opened before, and when I returned the book to my friend, I told him that the secrets were all there, and that I considered Masonry the biggest humbug in existence, and advised him to pay no more money for degrees, but get them from the book if he wanted them. While the book was in my house I showed it to my wife, sister, and brother, and told them it was all true, and since that time I have not been afraid to open my mouth at any proper time or place upon the subject of Masonry. I sent for sermons, tracts, and books on Masonry, and in the course of argument and conversation with different persons did not fail to make my position understood, so much so in fact that I received a summons to appear before Leesville lodge and answer charges of unmasonic conduct. I had taken a demit from Clear Creek Lodge, and living within the jurisdiction of Leesville lodge, that body, according to Masonic law, was responsible for my Masonic behavior. I attended the trial, and was asked by the Worshipful Master to select counsel from among the brethren present. I replied that I felt able to manage my own case. He then asked me if I was ready for trial. I replied that as soon as he furnished me a copy of the specifications I would be ready. This he refused to do but had them read. They were three in number, one that I violated my obligations, another that I had lectured in public on Masonry, another that I had revealed secrets of Masonry. I read a written reply to the charge of unmasonic conduct and in conclusion I told them I had not considered myself a Mason for nearly three years. That if it was doubtful as to whether I was or not, I wished them to make sure work and get me out. That were I at that time an inmate of the state prison I should thank any one who would be so good as to turn me out, and that I had the same feelings in regard to Masonry.

The Worshipful Master then told me I might retire, and the members, whom I afterwards asked, told me that I had been "expelled." "So mote it be."

JOHN V. BAKER.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

EVENTS AND MATTERS OF INTEREST NOT TO BE FORGOTTEN IN ONE DAY.

Masonic writers often speak of Morgan's murder as a myth, or say, "If he was murdered," when all know who will read the evidence, that in few cases is there such an array of proof, strong as "holy writ," as in this one. De Witt Clinton, then Governor of New York, a Mason, sent out proclamation after proclamation offering different and additional rewards, one of which, published in the principal Batavia paper of fifty-seven years ago, I forward to you with this notice. Morgan was never found alive, and the reward of $1,000 never claimed, but he was found dead, almost as by miracle, and his body fully identified, contrary to and in spite of the intention of his murderers.

If you have room in your valuable paper would it not be well to republish this time-worn relic, which it seems to me casts light on the horrors of the past. If Masonry gives to irresponsible men the power of life and death, every one should know and realize it. Human life is too sacred a boon to be tampered with. If forfeited the whole community have a right to know the reason why. To know what great law has been violated, and what magistrate—"the minister of God to execute wrath"—is alone authorized to pronounce, in the presence of the people, in open court, the extreme sentence of the law.

ERNESTINE.

PROCLAMATION

By De Witt Clinton, Governor of the State of New York.

Whereas the measures adopted for the discovery of WILLIAM MORGAN, after his unlawful abduction from Canandaigua in September last, have not been attended with success: and whereas many of the good citizens of this State are under an impression, from the lapse of time and other circumstances, that he has been murdered: Now therefore, to the end that, if living, he may be restored to his family, and, if murdered, that the perpetrators may be brought to condign punishment, I have thought fit to issue this proclamation, promising a reward of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the discovery of the said William Morgan, if alive: and, if murdered, a reward of TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS for the discovery of the offender or offenders, to be paid on conviction and on the certificate of the Attorney General, or officer prosecuting on the part of the State, that the person or persons claiming the said last mentioned reward is or are justly entitled to the same under this proclamation. And I further promise a free pardon, so far as I am authorised under the constitution of this State, to any accomplice or co-operator who shall make a full discovery of the offender or offenders. And I do enjoin it upon all officers and ministers of justice, and all other persons, to be vigilant and active in bringing to justice the perpetrators of a crime so abhorrent to humanity and so derogatory from the ascendency of law and good order.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and the Privy Seal at the city of Albany, this 19th day of March, Anno Domini 1827. DE WITT CLINTON.

A startling notice published in the Republican Advocate, Batavia, New York, Oct. 4, 1826:

TO THE PUBLIC.

On the 11th of September, William Morgan, a native of Virginia, who had for about three years past resided in this village, was, under pretext of a justice's warrant, hurried from his home and family, and carried to Canandaigua. The same night he was examined, on a charge of petit larceny, and discharged by the justice. One of the persons who took him away, immediately obtained a warrant against him, in a civil suit, for an alleged debt of two dollars, on which he was committed to the jail of Ontario County. On the night of the 12th of September, he was released by a person pretending to be his friend, but directly in front of the jail, notwithstanding his cries of Murder, he was gagged and secured, and put into a carriage, and after traveling all night, he was left (as the driver of the carriage says) at Hanford's Landing, about sunrise on the 13th, since which he has not been heard of. His distressed wife and two infant children, are left dependent on charity for their sustenance. The circumstances of the transaction have given rise to the most violent fears that he has been murdered. It is, however, hoped by his wife and friends, that he may be now kept concealed and imprisoned in Canada. All persons who are willing to serve the cause of humanity, and assist to remove the distressing apprehensions of his unfortunate wife are earnestly requested to communicate to one of the committee named below, directed to this place, any parts or circumstances which have come to their knowledge, and are calculated to lead to the discovery of his present situation, or the particulars of his fate, if he has been murdered.—Batavia, October 4, 1826.

T. F. TALBOT,
D. E. EVANS,
T. CARY,
WM. KEYES,
WM. DAVIS,
JON. LAY,
T. FITCH,
L. D. PRINDLE,
E. SOUTHWORTH,
JAS. P. SMITH,

Committee.

N. B. It is hoped that printers throughout the State, in Canada, and elsewhere, will give the above a few insertions and thus serve the cause of justice and humanity.

COME TO WASHINGTON.

It is not possible to give all the details of our efforts for the coming convention. Our correspondence has been extensive and encouraging and I append a few samples of letters received. A leading prohibitionist writes: "I think the time has come to strike out boldly and I shall cheerfully co-operate in any enterprise of this kind. The only secret society I have ever been connected with is the Sons of Temperance which, it seems, has outlived its usefulness. * * * I shall be glad to attend the 22d of February convention." Another prohibitionist, whose name has become a household word writes asking for the date of the convention "and," says he, "I will then be enabled to answer definitely as to whether I can attend. I am not afraid of trampling upon any body's toes politically." Neither of these gentlemen has ever attended any of our meetings. Another prominent man sends a long letter in which he gives his views of secret societies at length. He used to be a Good Templar but says: "I withdrew from the Good Templars because they left the work they were organized to do and began to 'play.'" He adds: "In regard to Masonry, Odd-fellowship and the like I would say that I have had it hinted to me very plainly that I would be an acceptable member but have as often declined. I regard their real object as a selfish one and their restrictions as altogether unreasonable. There is not enough good in them, in my opinion, to warrant their existence. There may be some in the Prohibition party who are zealous prohibitionists from principle and also 'bright' zealous Masons, but I think you will find their number few. The zealous Masons are not generally cast in the same mould as reformers, and when prohibition means sacrifice they won't train in our company. When the crowd comes they will come with it, but at present I doubt if we shall be much troubled with zealous Masons except that perhaps one may now and then join us as a spy." The writer of this is no fanatical Anti-mason, has never joined our movement but writes wholly from the standpoint of personal observation. It would add strength to the letter to give the name of the writer but as it is only a private letter I will not take this liberty.

In an interview yesterday with a government official who ranks next to a Cabinet officer I asked him if he belonged to a secret society? "No, sir," said he, "I once joined an Odd-fellows' lodge and tried to get them to receive a band of temperance cadets, and when they refused I told them I would never darken their doors and I never have." This gentleman has been a temperance man for forty years, has repeatedly been in Congress and is a living Christian. I asked him to address our convention and he did not refuse but asked me to call again.

Now we cannot tell whether any or all of these men will address the convention or not, but they are with us in heart, as their words show, and we hope they will be with us in person.

There are many reasons why friends from all parts of the country should come to the convention. We are exposed here to the gaze of the nation more than any where else on the continent. A success here will be followed by grand results in the near future, but failure will be a disaster. The numbers in attendance will determine the status of the convention. Character and ability have less weight here than votes. How many votes will they influence will be the leading question? This is the first and an important reason why every man and woman should come.

There will be important business to come before the convention which will need the wisest counsels. This also should influence friends.

Those who come will have a grand opportunity to see the capital city of the nation. They can see Congress in session, the Supreme Court, the White House and other places of interest. Let all these and other considerations weigh heavily and decide you to come.

E. D. BAILEY.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.
For Vice President,
JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible]intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

NOTE.—In March, 1883, Pres. J. Blanchard resigned the nomination above, subject to the action of the next National Convention of the American party.

AMERICAN AND PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

A convention of the American and Prohibition parties has been called to meet in Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C., Feb. 20–22, 1884, commencing at 7:30 P. M. of the 20, and continuing through the next two days and evenings. This convention has been called after consultation with leading members of both parties, in the interest of two important reforms, with the purpose of taking steps to fuse these two young and growing reform parties. It is a very important meeting and all friends of reform should make an effort to be present. Entertainment will be provided at the lowest rates and ample provision made both for economy and comfort. Leading members of both these parties have engaged to be present. For further information write to the undersigned at No. 215 4½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

E. D. BAILEY.

—Gideon T. Stewart, chairman; R. W. Nelson, secretary; and A. J. Jutkins, corresponding secretary of the National Committee of the Prohibition Home-Protection party, have issued a call for a convention composed of accredited delegates, to be held in Pittsburgh, May 21st next, to nominate candidates for President and Vice President, and to adopt a platform of principles. Outside the thirteen States of California, Connecticut, Illinois, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, which have voted prohibition State tickets, all who wish to be represented in this Pittsburgh convention must sign this pledge: "We hereby mutually pledge ourselves to each other, that we will entirely separate ourselves from the Republican and Democratic parties, and from all political parties not opposed to the liquor crime, and that we will do all in our power to promote the success of the principles and candidates of the Prohibition Home-Protection party."

WILL IT REFORM?

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY (ALIAS THE MASONIC LODGE) PROMISES AMENDS.

It is the peculiar characteristic of the Masonic Lodge that it pretends to be honorable while being very dishonorable. This same characteristic is shown by its offspring, or rather foster child, the Republican party. When a Republican Senator sends to the grog-shop, established under his rule in the Capitol of the country, for a drink of brandy, he calls for "tea."

He has made the Capitol a huge grog-shop. He has favored land-grabs, Credit Mobiliers, back-pay grabs, river-and-harbor jobs, Star-route transactions, Indian wars, debased currency bearing a pious motto, etc., etc.

But now the party promises reform. After neglecting public education, the Mormon outrage, and after chartering Masonic associations which shelter and promote fraud and corruption, the Republican Congressional Committee resolve that "We recommend the prompt and cordial union of Republicans with all such patriotic citizens in combined efforts to redeem their States from the fatal domination of false ideas and dishonoring practices." Now if there ever was a party of "false ideas and dishonoring practices" it is the Masonic lodge, which forms the very heart and core of the Republican party. That party could no more engineer a reform than the slave power could have abolished slavery. The Masonic lodge, whose ideas are false and whose practices are dishonorable, is the heart of the Republican party just as the slave power was the heart of the Democracy.

The only possible way to reform is to first get rid of the Republican party, which blocks the way to it. Americans to the front, and

STAND FIRM!

NEW PARTY IN MICHIGAN.

A temperance convention met in Jackson, Mich., Jan. 9th, of which Prof. Samuel Dickey of Albion was made chairman. About 250 persons were in attendance. The platform adopted was substantially as follows: Declaring a new party, with prohibition of the liquor traffic, to be called the Union Party of the State of Michigan, to act in unity with the National Prohibition party; believes there is no more difficulty in executing prohibition than any criminal law; that there is a demand for prohibition; that the popular sentiment is ripe for it, and that idiocy, poverty, insanity, vice, misery and crime can be abolished thereby; that license taxation is wrong and vicious, and increases the traffic; that local option is only a partial remedy, and engenders local strife; denounces the press for favoring local option; declares for statutory and constitutional prohibition and its thorough enforcement; declares for aiding education and its extension, and invites all believers with them to join the Union party; demands rights for labor, and that it be protected by law; discourages monopolies, and insists that corporations be governed by the same laws as persons: that the public revenues should be raised by imports, to afford incidental protection, but not to build monopolies; favors civil service reform and indorses the State Sabbath law.

Governor Begole was present at the mass meeting in the evening and made a short address.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 22, 1884.

But short notice had been given of my coming to Middlefield, yet the interest and zeal of the brethren there had prepared the way. I met Bro. Hayes, who had been busy circulating notices, and went with him to his hospitable home, where I was met by sister H. and a band of genuine old-time Wesleyan reformers, whose convictions on moral questions do not end in talk. On Saturday evening we repaired to the house secured for a lecture to meet a small, but very attentive audience. The pastor, Rev. E. J. Stienchcombe, was engaged in revival efforts in a neighboring town, but by making special arrangements was present on both Saturday and Sabbath evenings. Bro. S. is not what would be styled a brilliant preacher but he is evidently a young man of deep piety and ready for every good word and work. His presence and that of his energetic wife at the meetings was a benison and aided not a little in the good work. Rev. E. J. Hayes, chairman of the conference, was very assiduous and helpful.

On Sabbath morning I preached to a goodly congregation on the secret system. At 2 P. M. I went to the M. E. church and enjoyed a pleasant and profitable season with the Bible class. The pastor was absent but sent Bro. Shepard to fill his appointment. I was introduced to Bro. S. by Bro. Nichols, the Sabbath-school superintendent. He inquired after my theological pedigree, which I gave in brief with a statement of my present business. He meditated and seemed a little confused and finally said, "I don't know but you had better preach." I replied, "As you like." Another pause followed which was terminated by his saying, "Will you take a seat in the pulpit?" I assented and when seated the chorister came for the hymns. My brother still seemed in doubt and turning to me said, "What do you say?" I replied, "You say it." Seeing that he was embarrassed I thought it my duty to relieve him, and did so by saying, "I will preach," and said to the chorister, "We will begin with 'All Hail

OBITUARY.

ALBION, Ind., Jan. 23, 1884.

Death has again invaded our ranks. Brother A. Housel, of Ossian, Indiana, died on the 19th of Aug., 1883, aged 79 years. Father Housel was a life long Christian, a member of Bethel class U. B. church. Though humble in his pretensions, he was decided in his convictions of right, and never feared to express them in the face of opposition. He was a subscriber to the Cynosure from its commencement to his death, and was constant in doing what he could to distribute its truths in his neighborhood; not only this but his home had a welcome for every reformer and no itinerant worker ever left without a free contribution and often a liberal one in proportion to his means. Father Housel had just finished his harvest, doing most of the work himself, when the Great Reaper took him, a ripe sheaf from the field of Christian work and garnered him above. His aged widow and family are no less entitled to our sympathy and kind remembrance. All who knew him will miss him. S. L. COOK.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—It is reported that the Prince of Wales, in his capacity as Grand Master of English Freemasons has consented to issue a warrant for the organization of a total abstainer's lodge in London. The announcement indicates a sad condition among English lodges.

—Ex-Senator Richard Oglesby of Illinois was persuaded to join the Grand Army of the Republic the other day. He wants an office.

—Although the grange in Illinois has become an institution apparently without influence, use or power, a meeting of the State grange was held the other day in Springfield and Mrs. Gov. Hamilton gave the body a reception one evening. Perhaps the remembrance of its marvelous facility in drawing money from the farmers' pockets gives its corpse an odor of sanctity.

—The lodge known as the "Improved Order of Red Men" has a membership of 500 in Michigan. The name of this order suggests a stock farm and something better than Modocs, Utes or Sitting Bull.

—The colored people of Chicago follow the bad example of the whites through to the end. They have their Masonic degrees to the thirty-second and have organized a "Consistory" for the accommodation of their grand high Masons. Like the whites, too, this consistory must have a ball, which came off lately with much demonstration.

—At the time of Captain Webb's rash death in the rapids below Niagara falls no mention was made of his Masonry. He belonged, however, to a London lodge, and on learning this the lodges exhumed the body and reburied it with much pomp.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multidude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and ACUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 831 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

NEVER FAILS.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

A SPECIFIC FOR Epilepsy, Spasms, Convulsions, Falling Sickness, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Syphillis, Scrofula, Kings Evil, Ugly Blood Diseases, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Sick Headache, Rheumatism, Nervous Weakness, Brain Worry, Blood Sores, Biliousness, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Kidney Troubles and Irregularities. $1.50.

Sample Testimonials.

"Samaritan Nervine is doing wonders." Dr. J. O. McLemoin, Alexander City, Ala.

"I feel it my duty to recommend it." Dr. D. F. Laughlin, Clyde, Kansas.

"It cured where physicians failed." Rev. J. A. Edie, Beaver, Pa.

☞ Correspondence freely answered. ☜

For testimonials and circulars send stamp.

The Dr. S. A. Richmond Med. Co., St. Joseph, Mo, Sold by all Druggists. (17)

An Honest Offer

If you are not enjoying good health we will on certain conditions send you ON TRIAL our Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, and if they fail to cure or greatly benefit you within a month we make no charge. Prices very low. They are the marvel of the age. 75,000 Cures made during 1883. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once

ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.

Send description of your Invention. L. BINGHAM. Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY. Proprietor, Wheaton Ill. General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best, STRAW BLACK GOOSE RASP BERRIES, GRAPES. and other Small Fruits.

Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

"The Christian Statesman deserves a VERY LARGE CIRCULATION. It fills a place supplied by no other."—HON. JUDGE STRONG.

The Need of the Nation

Can only be supplied by an acknowledgement of Christ's authority and an acceptance of His Divine Law as the BASIS OF NATIONAL LIFE.

To secure this, and maintain all existing Christian features of the American government, is the object of the National Reform Association, an organization undenominational in character, with a membership of many thousands, including leading ministers, educators, authors and jurists all over our nation.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN,

A large, elegantly printed sixteen-page journal, advocates the principles of this Association, and discusses all public questions in the light of the Christian religion. The Maintenance of our Sabbath Laws, and of the Christian Law of Marriage and Divorce, the use of the Bible in the Public Schools, the Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic, the Mormon Question, the Rights of the Indian and the Chinaman, receive constant attention in its columns. It gives thorough expositions of the International Bible Lessons, and their bearing on national questions is not overlooked. Price, $2.00 per year. ☞ Sample copies free. Address,

JOHN WAGNER PRITCHARD, 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN

"In its course has been manly and consistent, its editorials able, and its success, under the conditions of apathy and prejudice which surrounds the whole subject, marvelous."—THE REV. S. F. SCOVEL, PRESIDENT OF WOOSTER UNIVERSITY.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

STEAM COOKED CEREALS.

Choicest Foods in the World, for Old and Young.

American Breakfast Cereals.

Selected grain, all hulls, cockle, and impurities removed. CRUSHED, STEAM COOKED AND DESICCATED. Patented. Prepared, as wanted, for the table, in ten minutes. Saving money. Saving fuel. Saving time. Saving waste. Saving health. Easy to digest, being already thoroughly cooked.

A. B. C. WHITE OATS. A. B. C. WHITE WHEAT.
A. B. C. BARLEY FOOD. A. B. C. MAIZE.

Ask for A. B. C. only. (Registered Trade-Mark.)
For sale by all Grocers. THE CEREALS M'F'G CO.,
Send for circulars. 88 MURRAY ST., NEW YORK.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

WANTED HELP. Entirely New. PROFITABLE. Outfit Free.

We want an AGENT in every locality. Something entirely new. Our Agents are sweeping the field wherever they go, and making money rapidly. Men, women, boys, girls, all do equally well. Will send you full outfit on receipt of 2 cent Stamp. Don't delay. Address at once, S. S. PUBLISHING CO., Brownwood, Texas.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents,

National Christian Association, 221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST. CHICAGO.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen.

Furnished in any quantities at

ANTI-LODGE HEADQUARTERS, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

Hallelujah and Victory!

SING THE SONGS OF REFORM AT HOME, IN THE FIELD, IN THE SHOP, IN THE CONVENTION—SING THEM TILL THE DAY OF TRIUMPH COMES.

CLARK'S REFORM SONG BOOK;

by George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer" of Abolition fame, who has compiled a new book for the new movement. Here are—

Songs for temperance.
Songs for the good and true.
Songs for freemen.
Songs for the home.
Songs for the devotional meeting.
Songs for reform meetings.
Songs that will vanquish the lodge.

SING THEM!

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN SING THEM!

Price in boards, postpaid, 40 cents. In cloth, with portrait on steel, 55 cents.

Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO. Price, 25 cents.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Peter Henderson & Co's COLLECTION OF SEEDS AND PLANTS

embraces every desirable Novelty of the season, as well as all standard kinds. A special feature for 1884 is, that you can for $5.00 select Seeds or Plants to that value from their Catalogue, and have included, without charge, a copy of Peter Henderson's New Book, "Garden and Farm Topics," a work of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a steel portrait of the author. The price of the book alone is $1.50. Catalogue of "Everything for the Garden," giving details, free on application.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

IN BRIEF.

The population of Ireland is 4,000,000 less than it was thirty-eight years ago. It has declined almost one-half. At this rate the island will be depopulated in fifty years more.

"When does a man become a seamstress?" "When he hems and haws." "No." "When he threads his way." "No." "When he rips and tears." "No." "Give it up." "Never, if he can help it."

Obscene literature will not be allowed to be sold or circulated in Montgomery, Ala., hereafter. Similar municipal legislation throughout the country would soon tone down the exuberance of a certain class of gross pictorial sheets published at New York City.

The Commercial Bulletin publishes a summary of the fire record during 1883. The aggregate fire loss for the year is $103,000,000. There were 196 fires where the loss exceeded $100,000. In December the record shows an aggregate loss of $11,000,000. The fire loss for 1883 is the heaviest, excepting 1871 and 1872, the years of the Chicago and Boston fires.

It now appears that the great German navy, on which a hundred million dollars has been expended, is worthless. This is not the assertion of enemies, but the declaration of a leading German paper. There is no navy, but a lot of old iron, which is a poor representative of the French millions that have been wasted in naval experiments. Now that tribute money has gone, and if the Germans want ships they will have to put their hands in their pockets to get the money to pay for them with. After all, it is well that this country was so slow about the building of war-ships.

The evangelist Fliedner, in Spain, is making great progress in his work since the King publicly favored him. He observed in the hospitals that the sisters of Mercy went from bed to bed with the basket of clean linen, and posed the patients individually with the question, "Have you confessed?" Upon receiving the reply, "Yes," clean linen was liberally supplied; if the answer was negative, so were the material comforts. Under these circumstances M. Fliedner has established a hospital with eight beds, and an orphanage in which are forty children.

A new prison chaplain was recently appointed in a certain town in Scotland. He was a man who greatly magnified his office, and entering one of the cells on his first round of inspection, he, with much pomposity, thus addressed the prisoner who occupied it: "Well, sir, do you know who I am?" "No; nor I dinna care," was the nonchalant reply. "Well I'm your new chaplain." "Oh, ye are? Weel, I hea heard o' ye before." "And what did you hear?" returned the chaplain, his curiosity getting the better of his dignity. "Weel, I heard that the last twa kirks ye war in ye preached them baith empty; but ye'll no find it such an easy matter to do the same wi' this ane!"

"I've seen a good many curious things in my travels," said a commercial traveler, "but the Walled Lake of Iowa rather lays over anything I ever saw. Just imagine a body of water covering nearly 3,000 acres, with a wall built up all around it, not a stone of which can be less than 100 pounds in weight, and some are as heavy as three tons, and yet there is not a single stone to be found within ten miles of the lake. The wall is ten feet high, about fifteen feet wide at the bottom, and may be five on top. The country is prairie land for miles around, except a belt of heavy timber that encircles the lake. This timber is oak, and it is plain that the trees were planted there. They are very large. The belt is probably half a mile wide. The water in the lake is probably twenty-five feet deep, as cold as ice and as clear as crystal.

"What I would like to know is, who built that wall? And how did they hold the water back while they were building it? And how did they cart those immense stones for ten miles? If ever you go to Iowa, don't fail to visit the Walled Lake. You'll find it in Wright county, 160 miles from Dubuque. The cars will take you almost to it."

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

Beware of Imitations.

Imitations and counterfeits have again appeared. Be sure that the word "HORSFORD'S" is on the wrapper. None are genuine without it.

OUT OF THE DEPTHS.

OUR CORRESPONDENT'S RESEARCHES AND A REMARKABLE OCCURRENCE HE DESCRIBES.

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Jan. 10, 1884.

Messrs. Editors: The upper portion of Vermont is one of the pleasantest regions in America during the summer and one of the bleakest during the winter. It affords ample opportunity for the tourist, providing he chooses the proper season, but the present time is not that season. Still there are men and women here who not only endure the climate, but praise it unstintingly, and that, too, in the face of physical hardships the most intense. The writer heard of a striking illustration of this a few days since which is given herewith:

Mr. Joseph Jacques is connected with the Vermont Central railroad in the capacity of master mason. He is well advanced in years, with a ruddy complexion and hale appearance, while his general bearing is such as to instantly impress one with his strict honor and integrity. Several years ago he became afflicted with most distressing troubles, which prevented the prosecution of his duties. He was languid, and yet restless, while at times a dizziness would come over him which seemed almost blinding. His will power was strong, and he determined not to give way to the mysterious influence which seemed undermining his life. But the pain and annoying symptoms were stronger than his will, and he kept growing gradually worse. About that time he began to notice a difficulty in drawing on his boots, and it was by the greatest effort that he was able to force his feet into them. In this manner several weeks passed by, until finally one night, while in great agony, he discovered that his feet had, in a short while, swollen to enormous proportions. The balance of the narrative can best be described in his own words. He said:

"When my wife discovered the fact that I was so bloated, she sent for the doctor immediately. He made a most careful examination and pronounced me in a very serious condition. Notwithstanding his care I grew worse, and the swelling of my feet gradually extended upward in my body. The top of my head pained me terribly; indeed, so badly that at times it seemed almost as if it would burst. My feet were painfully cold, and even when surrounded with hot flannels and irons felt as if a strong wind were blowing on them. Next my right leg became paralyzed. This gave me no pain, but it was exceedingly annoying. About this time I began to spit blood most freely, although my lungs were in perfect condition, and I knew it did not come from them. My physicians were careful and untiring in their attentions, but unable to relieve my sufferings. My neighbors and friends thought I was dying, and many called to see me, fully twenty-five on a single Sunday that I now recall. At last my agony seemed to culminate in the most intense, sharp pains I have ever known or heard of. If red hot knives sharpened to the highest degree had been run through my body constantly they could not have hurt me worse. I would spring up in bed, sometimes as much as three feet, cry out in my agony and long for death. One night the misery was so intense that I arose and attempted to go into the next room, but was unable to lift my swollen feet above the little threshold that obstructed them. I fell back upon the bed and gasped in my agony, but felt unable even to breathe. It seemed like death.

"Several years ago Rev. Dr. J. E. Rankin, now of Washington, was stationed here as pastor of the Congregational church. We all admired and respected him, and my wife remembered seeing somewhere that he had spoken in the highest terms of a preparation which had cured some of his intimate friends. We determined to try this remedy, accordingly sent for it, and, to make a long story short, it completely restored my health, brought me back from the grave, and I owe all I have in the way of health and strength to Warner's Safe Cure, better known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I am positive that if I had taken this medicine when I felt the first symptoms above described, I might have avoided all the agony I afterward endured, to say nothing of the narrow escape I had from death."

In order that all possible facts bearing upon the subject might be known, I called on Dr. Oscar F. Fassett, who was for nineteen years United States Examining Surgeon, and who attended Mr. Jacques during his sickness. He stated that Mr. Jacques had a most pronounced case of Albuminuria or Bright's disease of the kidneys. That an analysis showed the presence of albumen and casts in great abundance, and that he was in a condition where few if any ever recover. His recovery was due to Warner's Safe Cure.

Mr. John W. Hobart, General Manager of the Vermont Central railroad, stated that Mr. Jacques was one of the best and most faithful of his employes; that his sickness had been an exceedingly severe one, and the company were not only glad to again have his services, but grateful to the remedy that had cured so valuable a man.

Mr. James M. Foss, assistant superintendent and master mechanic of the Vermont Central railroad, is also able to confirm this.

I do not claim to be a great discoverer, but I do think I have found in the above a most remarkable case, and knowing the unusual increase of Bright's disease feel that the public should have the benefit of it. It seems to me a remedy that can accomplish so much in the last stages ought to do even more for the first approach of this deceptive yet terrible trouble.

F. B.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen. $3.50.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 De-GREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Re-PUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

MISCELLANEOUS.

In the Coils; or the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of every-day life, and showing how individual, domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

General Washington Opposed to Se-CRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

LUTHER'S SNOW SONG.

On a cold, dark night, when the wind was blowing hard, and the snow was falling fast, Conrad, a worthy citizen of a little town in Germany, sat playing his flute, when Ursula, his wife, was preparing supper. They heard a sweet voice sing outside:—

"Foxes to their holes have gone,
Every bird unto its nest;
But I wander here alone,
And for me there is no rest."

Tears filled the good man's eyes, as he said, "What a fine, sweet voice! What a pity it should be spoiled by being tried in such weather."

"I think it is the voice of a child. Let us open the door and see," said his wife, who had lost a little boy not long before, and whose heart was opened to take pity on the little wanderer.

Conrad opened the door, and saw a ragged child, who said·

"Charity, good sir, for Christ's sake!"

"Come in, my little one," said he. "You shall rest with me for the night."

The boy said, "Thank God," and entered. The heat of the room made him faint, but Ursula's kind care soon revived him. They gave him some supper, and then he told them that he was the son of a poor miner, and wanted to be a scholar. He wandered about and sang, and lived on the money people gave him. His kind friends would not let him talk much, but sent him to bed. When he was asleep they looked in upon him, and were so pleased with his pleasant countenance that they determined to keep him if he was willing. In the morning they found that he was only too glad to remain with them.

They sent him to school, and afterwards he went into a monastery. There, one day, he found a Bible, which he read and learned the way of life. The sweet voice of the little singer became the strong echo of the good uews—"Justificd by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Conrad and Ursula, when they took that little strect-singer into their house, little thought that they were nourishing the great champiou of the Reformation. The poor child was Martin Luther! "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers."

The following is the whole of the song which Luther sang on that memorable night:—

Lord of Heaven! lone and sad,
I would lift my heart to thee;
Pilgrim in a foreign land,
Gracious Father, look on me,
I shall neither faint nor die,
While I walk beneath thine eye.

I will stay my faith on thee,
And will never fear to tread
Where the Saviour Master leads;
He will give me daily bread,
Christ was hungry, Christ was poor—
He will feed me from his store.

Foxes to their holes have gone,
Every bird unto its nest;
But I wander here alone,
And for me there is no rest.
Yet I neither faint nor fear,
For the Saviour Christ is here.

If I live he'll be with me;
If I die to him I go,
He'll not leave me; I will trust him,
And my heart no fear shall know.
Sin and sorrow I defy,
For on Jesus I rely.

—Fireside News.

THE WONDERFUL MOTHER.

The winter of the year 1709 was one of extreme cold. Never was a colder winter known iu Europe. In France many people froze to death in their beds, not only among the mountains, but even in the villages and cities. The hottest fire was not sufficient to keep a room warm. While the stoves were red-hot the water would freeze but a few feet from them. The trees in the forest and by the roadside became so frozen that some of them burst, and made a noise as if a small mine had exploded.

Sparrows and crows and jackdaws sometimes fell down dead while flying in the air. Large flocks of sheep and cattle froze in the barn-yards. The bats, which usually sleep during the winter, were awakened out of their torpid slumbers, fluttered around a little while, and fell dead on the ground. The deer in the forest could no more run swiftly, but crept slowly out of the woods and came near the dwellings of men. Finally spring came and a multitude of them were found dead in the woods. The little lakes and brooks and rivers, after they had been thawed by the sun, emitted a very unpleasant odor, because nearly all the fish in them had been frozen to death. The people suffered from extreme poverty, for the cold had destroyed many of their means of support. The wheat that had been sown in the autumn, their sheep, fowls, fish and vegetables that had been buried in the ground were completely destroyed by the frost.

During this winter a poor little Savoyard boy was wandering the streets of Luneville, in Lothringia. He was a pitiable orphan. His older brother, who had taken care of him, had now gone on a message to the city of Nancy, to earn a few francs. But he suffered the fate of many travelers, and was frozen to death. Many of the passengers on the stage and on horseback were frozen to death, though covered with furs and cloaks. The drivers lost their lives, and still held the reins iu their stiff hands.

The little Savoyard boy wandered about from house to house to get a little employment or a piece of bread. He was glad to blacken boots or shoes, dust clothes, clean dishes in the kitchen, or do anything that would give him a sou. But when night came on his suffering became intense. He had slept with his brother in a carpenter shop where the two had covered themselves with an old footcloth on which they piled shavings very high. They lay very close together, and by this means managed to be protected from the severity of the cold. But now he was alone, and he would certainly freeze if he should attempt to sleep in the carpenter shop. The wife of a hostler took compassion on him. She showed him a little sleeping-place in one of the stalls in the stable where the horses of a certain prince were kept. In this stall there stood an iron cage, in which a large brown bear was confined, for the beast was very wild and angry. The little Savoyard boy, who had come in the darkness of the night into the stable, neither knew nor cared for any wild beast that might be near by. He lay down upon some straw, and stretched out his hand to pull more. As he stretched out his hand, he put it between the wires of the cage in which the beast was, and found that a large pile was there. Thinking it was better to get in where the straw was, he crawled up to the cage, and squeezed in through the iron bars. The bear grumbled a little, but did no violence. The little boy offered to God a prayer, which his departed mother had taught him, and then committed himself to the keeping of his Heavenly Father. He asked protection from the cold, and he was protected both from the cold and from the wild beasts.

The bear took the little stranger between her paws and pressed him near her warm breast, and against her thick skin, so softly and comfortably, that he who had not slept for many nights with any comfort now forgot all fear, and soon fell into a sweet deep sleep.

In the morning the boy waked up with renewed strength and crept out of the cage, and went forth to the city to attend to his business and seek his daily bread. At night he returned to his strange mother. Beside the bear there lay a great many pieces of bread which had been brought from the table of the prince, but the bear had eaten all she wanted, and these were left. So the little Savoyard boy helped himself to all he needed. He then lay quietly down betweeu the paws of his thick-clad mother, who pressed him to her as she had done before, and he slept there as if in the warmest feather bed.

In this way he spent five nights without anybody knowing it. On the morning of the sixth night he overslept himself, so that when the hostlers went around with lanterns in the early morning to attend to the many horses in the stable, they saw the boy lying between the paws of the great bear. The old bear grunted a little as if she were very much offended at any one seeing her taking care of her little favorite. The boy sprang up and squeezed through the cage to the great astonishment of the bystanders.

This strange affair became widely known, and created much wonder throughout the city. Although the modest little Savoyard boy was very much ashamed that anybody should know that he had slept in the arms of a bear, he was ordered to appear in the presence of the prince, to whom he told his recent experience. The prince appointed a day for him to come again. The boy came, and in the presence of the prince and princess, and many people of rank, he was requested to enter the cage where the great bear was. She received hiu as kindly as ever, and pressed him to her breast.

The good prince now understood that the bear, or rather God, working providentially through the bear, had been the means of saving the little orphan boy from death. No person had taken care of him, none had shown any sympathy for him, and yet in the very coldest night of that remarkable winter this rough bear was the means of saving his life, the providence of God preserving him.

This circumstance led the prince to contemplate divine providence in a higher light than he had ever done before; and so should it lead us to remember that God sometimes uses the most unexpected means as the instruments for the consummation of his purpose. The little Savoyard afterward led an honorable and useful life, nor did he ever forget how God had spared him in his great need.

"The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion and out of the paw of the bear." 1 Sam. 17: 37.

"I laid me down and slept; I awaked, for the Lord sustained me." Psalm 3: 5.—Good Words.

TEMPERANCE.

That good man, Edward S. Morris, whose manufactures of Liberian products go to endow a missionary school in Liberia, must have felt the bitterness of sorrow when an African chief who visited his son at this free school asked, "What make Morris man do this thing?" And on receiving answer, "Morris man is a Christ man," said bluntly, "If Morris man be a Christ man then he must drink liquor and get drunk." The Lord Jesus is still most wounded in the house (country) of his friends. —Union Signal.

According to Sir William Gull, Queen Victoria's physician, and, of course, eminent in his profession, it is better, in case of a fatigue from overwork, to eat raisins than to resort to alcohol. In his testimony before the Lords' Commission in London a few months ago, he affirmed "that instead of flying to alcohol, as many people do when exhausted, they might very well drink water, or they might very well take food, and they would be very much better without the alcohol. He added as to the form of food he himself resorts to: In cases of fatigue from overwork I would say that if I am thus fatigued my food is very simple—I eat raisins instead of taking the wine."

Prohibition means something in Pottawatomie county, Kansas. Saloon-keeper Hulen, having beeu convicted on twenty counts, was fined $100 on each count, and on the twenty-first count the court committed him to jail to stay until all the money is paid. Saloon-keeper Shaw, also having been convicted on thirteen counts, was sentenced to pay $100 and costs on each count, and to spend thirty days in jail and stay there until he pays up. Saloon-keeper Pittman got $1,100 fine and a month in jail. Upon twenty dealers the court imposed fines aggregating $7,600 and $3,000 costs and ninety days in jail.—New Haven Journal.

It is always with sincere regret that we see the organ of the National Prohibition Home Protection party lowering its tone of expression or its dignity, but it is with honest indignation that we have read in one of its recent issues an editorial quoting with warm approbation an article from a whisky paper marked with insult to our National W. C. T. U. president, and to the Hon. Henry W. Blair. The Prohibition party must purify its mouthpiece if it hopes to win and deserve the allegiance of the pure minded.—Union Signal.

A great decrease has taken place in the consumption of rum and beer in this country by European soldiers, with a corresponding spread of sobriety among the rank and file. Curiously enough while rum has lost much of its popularity in the canteen, beer has not taken its place; our boy-soldiers are really very moderate drinkers indeed. Thus, in the year 1877–78, the total consumption of rum among the British troops in India was 254,254 gallons; in 1881–82 it had fallen to 149,801 gallons. Comparing the same years as regards beer drinking we find that the figures are respectively 76,942 and 74,748 hogsheads.

Isaac V. Baker, Jr., Superiutendent of Ohio State Prisons, in his annual report has the following touching the use of tobacco:

In March last I determined to discontinue the practice of issuing tobacco to the patients, for the reason that its use tended to excite irritability and to otherwise aggravate disturbed mental conditions; that it involved an expenditure of about one hundred and fifty ($150) dollars per anuum, besides furnishing an additional obstacle to the maintenance of cleanliness in the wards. The result has been most satisfactory; the clamor for it, which was almost constant and very annoying, when a weekly ration of tobacco was regularly issued, has entirely subsided, and efforts to obtain it surreptitiously are steadily becoming less frequent; while those patients who were most addicted to its use have evinced a gradual and marked improvement in their mental condition and moral tone. I am convinced, by both observation and reflection, that tobacco, when used to excess, ranks next to alcoholic stimulants as a deteriorating and demoralizing agent, and that the constant presence of the active principle of tobacco, nicotin, in the tissues of the body, is unphysiological and in most persons incompatible with a high standard of health.

ALCOHOLIC STIMULANTS.

Extract from a paper read by R. Greene, M. D., of Boston, before one of the medical societies of that city:

"There seems to exist a force of habit, or prevailing fashion, among physicians to prescribe alcoholic stimulants upon nearly all occasions, and I believe they do so without considering the evils which are likely to result from their use, or realizing the responsibility which rests upon them as individuals, and as members of the medical profession.

"All intoxicating stimulants are injurious, and when taken into the human system have the effect first to excite, then to depress, the entire vital force. As the habit of using intoxicants is increased, the desire for food and the power to assimilate it is diminished. This fact becomes more apparent as the habit increases, and in stages immediately preceding the dclirium tremens the desire for food and the power to digest and assimilate it are entirely suspended.

"Alcohol is neither food nor medicine. It cannot add one molecule to the plasm out of which our bodies are daily built up. Ou the contrary, it exerts upon the whole animal economy a most deleterious influence. It does not supply, but diminishes, vital force. It weakens the nerves, deadens the sensibilities, and lessens the power of the system to resist disease, or to recover from its effects."

MODERATE DRINKING.

A young man, with an inherited taste for liquor, was at a Masonic festival, where was present also an English clergyman who was in the habit of freely drinking beer. He called for a bottle, aud offered a glass to the young man: "Mr. Cushing, have a glass of wine with me." I looked at him and said, "Don't you to touch it." Said the clergyman, sneeringly, "Are you his mental adviser? I hope you are able to take a glass without making a fool of yourself." The young man said, "If my pastor can drink, so can I." He took it. At the end of three weeks he died of strong drink. During his deliriums he exclaimed, in his agony, "God won't damn me for drinking unless he also damns Dr. Richmond." That minister murdered my friend, but he walks the earth today unhung.—Mrs. Molloy.

THE CHURCHES.

—Revivals are reported among United Brethren churches in the Telescope thus: Summit St., Dayton, O; Hartsville, Ind.; Albany, Mo.; Dresden, O.; Indianapolis; Crawfordsville, Ind.; and numerous other points.

—Moody and Sankey's mission at Battersea, London, was closed last Wednesday. The mission was a great success. The evangelists began a mission at Stratford LeBow next day. Notwithstanding the hurricane, 6,000 people were present. Moody said it was very encouraging to see so many people come out in the storm, and hoped the mission would be a great success.

—The Rev. Dr. John Hall, of New York, has only missed preaching because of sickness on two Sabbath days during his sixteen year's pastorate.

—At the Westminster Presbyterian church, Chicago, the second preaching service will no longer be held in the evening as heretofore, but at 3: 45 o'clock in the afternoon.

—The corner-stone of the new addition to the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of this city will be laid with imposing ceremonies on Tuesday afternoon of this week. This building will cost $50,000, and is the gift of Cyrus McCormick.

—At the meeting of the Woman's Presbyterian Board of Missions, Chicago, Mrs. Van Hook read a letter from an American pastor in South Russia, giving an account of his work and the persecutions which he had endured. A letter was also read from Mrs. Ward, of Tabriz, which was accompanied by lead idols of the people of Siam, one of Buddha and the other Dagan, and a book explaining the worship.

—Rev. J. A. Richards writes to the Wesleyan Methodist that the Wesleyan church in that city has invited Rev. B. F. Worrell to be their pastor. "I found him at work, giving satisfaction. I believe this church will yet shine forth as a moral and spirtual lighthouse in the Kansas Conference. The Lord was with us on Sabbath to bless the truth and comfort our hearts."

—Rev. D. A. Richards has been holding a series of meetings at Clarksville, Mich., which have resulted in much encouragement to the people of God in that place. Rev. H. A. Day, the Michigan agent, assisted in the work one week.

—Wheaton Theological Seminary closed the first half of its third year of study on Friday last. There will be a vacation of two weeks and two days. This time will be used in special meetings held by the young men who have pastoral charges. The next term will open February 11th and run up to June. The graduation exercises will take place Monday, June 13th, in the evening.

—Dr. John Hall's Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church gave $12,287 lately at its collection for foreign missions. The sum will probably be increased, as the amount contributed last year to this cause was about $20,000.

—During the past year 158 new Congregational churches were formed, 31 of them in Dakota. This is more by 53 than were organized in 1882. The number of ministers ordained or installed was 219, against 177 in 1882.

—Bishop Huntington has requested the Young Men's Christian Association of Syracuse, N. Y., to make an effort to suppress the public sale of indecent papers, engaging to support them himself and to summon the clergy of the Episcopal church to help them.

—According to the statistics of the Presbyterian church the remarkable fact is brought out that the additions to the churches on confession of faith during the last year have been much larger in proportion among the heathen than at home. The accessions on confession, taking the statistics of the previous year as the basis, were in the Synod of China, nearly twenty-five per cent (twenty-four and four-fifths); in the Synod of New York, which comprises the whole State, only four per cent. There has been an actual decrease in the number of church members in the Synod of New York, while in the Synod of China there was a net increase of twenty-three and a half per cent.

—Rev. J. C. Ryle, Bishop of Liverpool, England, who recently preached in a Presbyterian church, to the scandal of the Romanizing section of his own church, has again incurred their wrathful displeasure. In the course of a recent address, he remarked that whether men wanted to give up Episcopacy and adopt some modified form of Presbyterianism, he could not say, but unless bishops were treated with a little more fairness and consideration, they would one day find that no right-minded and high-souled man who loved direct spiritual work and hated wasting precious time in strife would consent to be a bishop at all.

—An English Baptist has offered to the Baptist Missionary Union of New York a mission in complete working order at one of the best points on the Congo River. "This mission has been hitherto sustained by the personal contributions of one of the wealthiest and most excellent Christian laymen of London. He does not propose to withdraw his co-operation from it, but believes it to be for the interest of the mission that it should be placed permanently under the direction of a fully organized missionary society. Hence his offer to transfer the mission with all that appertains to it to the Missionary Union."

—Prof. Robert Stewart of the United Presbyterian mission in India reports a cheering circumstance: "One of the most remarkable discoveries made by Mr. Lytle on his tour was a house at Sabzkot in process of erection for Christian worship. This was begun and carried on by the natives themselves, without any help from the mission, or any expectation of help—perhaps the first instance of the kind in the whole Punjab! True, it is what is called a kachcha building—that is, one made of sun-burned bricks—and not very large, nor very well provided with windows and doors; and the whole expense of erection will probably not reach $40. True, also, such places of worship can answer only a temporary purpose, and, if erected at all, ought to be supplanted speedily by structures of a more suitable and permanent character. But the fact that people just out of heathenism are prompted to build even such houses—as good, in fact, as their own residences—speaks largely in favor of their sincerity, and gives promise that some time in the future we shall see a self-sustaining native church."

—Since 1879, when the Century Co. undertook the publication of the various hymn and tune-books compiled by Rev. Dr. Robinson, "Spiritual Songs," "Songs of the Sanctuary," etc., more than 400,000 copies have been sold and nearly 4,000 churches supplied. Not fewer than 800,000 copies of "Songs for the Sanctuary" were sold from 1865 to 1879, when "Spiritual Songs" appeared. The grand total of sales of Dr. Robinson's books is thus more than a million, and probably 10,000 churches have adopted one or more of them.

—The Gospel in all Lands, in an article speaking of religious progress in the South American States, gives the following succinct account of their internal condition:

Of the northern republics, Columbia is in a fairly settled and quiet state; but Equador, Peru and Bolivia are seldom without revolutionary disturbance. War disintegrates society; government is anarchical. The masses are uneducated, superstitious, idolatrous. The Roman church rules with iron hand, frowning upon and opposing all efforts to introduce the Bible, to found evangelical schools and churches. Chili is working rapid political and educational progress. Her citizens are beginning to believe in a future of national power. Religious freedom is granted and liberal legislators even now foresee the separation of church and state. While gospel missionaries are still persecuted, a free press denounces such conduct and calls for toleration. But in this most advanced South American republic the truth has not gained more than a foothold.

—The movement in Germany for the better observance of the Sabbath is assuming very considerable proportions. Since the beginning of last year nearly two hundred centres of population have declared in favor of the closing of shops and the cessation of all work, and in Berlin 12,000 tradesmen have petitioned the Government for the abolition of work on that day. The movement has been chiefly directed by a number of Catholic priests, with the approval of their bishops. The Empress of Germany, always foremost in every good work, has contributed 10,000 francs to the support of the movement.

—The American Board has in Japan eighteen churches with a membership of nine hundred; a collegiate theological institution, with one hundred and twenty students; three boarding schools for girls, with one hundred and fifty pupils; hospitals and dispensaries in charge of mission physicians and unlimited opportunities for women's work in the homes of the people.

—Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Goodell of St. Louis, will sail from New York Jan. 29, for England, visiting Paris, Nice, Constantinople and perhaps Palestine. They expect to be absent six months. Rev. Dr. Eddy, of Detroit, Mich., will supply Pilgrim pulpit until the summer vacation, when Prof. Currier, of Oberlin, will preach.

—Miss Clara Sands with helpers, in a recent trip through Japan, sold three hundred and fifty copies of the Gospels in an hour and a half. More than five hundred people were crowded about the sale. There is a cry everywhere for the Word of Life, and it is sought for with the greatest eagerness.

—The Michigan Holiness Record, Rev. S. B. Shaw, editor, has lately removed to Grand Rapids, and will be published at 165 Stocking street in that city. Some changes for the better have been made in the external appearance of the paper and as for its contents, improvement will always be the motto. Price, 50 cents per year.

AN AFRICAN MISSIONARY.—A native from the interior was converted at Natal, returned to his own people as a missionary, and for nine years has been laboring among the heathen and savage, people, unknown, unpaid, unvisited by missionaries, and unrecognized by any church. In this time several hundred have been converted through his labors; and at one time he and two hundred converts were driven from their own tribe because they were Christians, and compelled to find homes in a strange country. The preacher and the people have remained true to Christianity in the face of persecution, and have held fast to the Wesleyan church, in which the leader was converted, although tempted to leave it by missionaries who desired to add this promising interest to their own work. The place now occupied by the preacher is two hundred miles in the interior from the farthest Wesleyan station, and his out-stations reach within fifty miles of the Limpopo river, the northern boundary of the Transvaal. It is now proposed to take up the work, send an English missionary there, and carry on the mission vigorously. In view of this case, who can say that the natives of Africa are incapable of exercising intelligence, constancy, courage and faith in the cause of Christ?—Missionary Magazine.

"Our Pleasant Home" heating stove which was advertised last year in the Cynosure deserves a particular commendation. After several weeks' trial of one of the larger size in the Cynosure office it can be warmly recommended as the best heating stove of which we have had any experience. An especial excellence is in the fact that the heat is thrown out unusually near the floor while the upper part of the stove is comparatively cool. One stove has here kept two large rooms comfortable—the office and composing room. Economy of fuel, powerful heat and easy management are the points of excellence. When the manufacturer shall make the ash-pan a little larger he will have a nearly perfect stove.

The following shows the number of Organs shipped from Beatty's Organ Factory at Washington, New Jersey, during the year 1883:

January, 1,102; February, 1,152; March, 1,432; April, 1,344; May, 1,420; June, 1,606; July, 1,386; August, 810; September, 1,600; October, 1,800; November, 1,600. December, (only 25 working days,) 1,800. Total for year 17,052.

NEW JERSEY, } ss.
WARREN CO., }

Charles H. Davis, being duly sworn, on his oath saith that he is the Superintendent of the Beatty Organ Factory, at Washington, New Jersey, and that the foregoing statement of Organs shipped (17,052 for 1883), from said factory is correct and true.

CHARLES H. DAVIS.

Sworn and subscribed before me, this 15th day of January, A. D. 1884.

WM. A. STRYKER, Master in Chancery of New Jersey.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

THE
CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
A NEATLY PRINTED SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY JOURNAL, UNSECTARIAN AND OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE POLE STAR OF REFORM.

EVERY Christian, every Prohibitionist and every Patriot should read it for the following among other reasons:

1. Because it meets the wants of the general public by giving in brief the latest reliable information on all questions of Reform, having the special object of exposing and opposing organized secrecy. Besides able editorial, contributed and selected articles upon this topic, which is of more than national importance, it has interesting sketches of progress and incidents from the reform lecturers in all parts of the country, reform news and notes, letters from the Old World, etc., etc. It is the especial organ of this movement in America—a movement which is sustained by the utterances of some of the ablest statesmen and divines whom the country has produced. Every person interested in either the family, government, or religion—the most sacred interests of humanity—is directly affected by secret societies, and needs to keep posted in this movement.

2. Because it is uncompromising on ALL questions of the day. On temperance, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, Mormonism, the Southern and Indian questions, civil-service reform, monopolies, the rights of labor, and every other question, its only aim is to be RIGHT, and advocate the TRUTH. It is hence FEARLESS and OUTSPOKEN.

2. Because it emphasizes the fact that political action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD and SPIRIT of God and that Christ must be acknowledged KING of NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

4. Because, in addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

It is now owned and published by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

at its office, NO. 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL., on Thursday of each week

TERMS: $2. per year. In clubs of five $8.75. In clubs of ten $15.

Sample copies sent free on application.

Address CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

State have had a hard fight, the adversaries have been many and bitter, but the Lord be praised if the persecuting spirit is broken and that the truth is beginning to have a free course.

—At the meeting of the N. C. A. Board of Directors on Saturday, the result of whose deliberations appear in the call for the fifteenth National Convention in Washington, it was announced by Bro. Phillips, who has had immediate charge of the advertising in the Cynosure, that as soon as present contracts expire, he was in favor of refusing as a rule the advertisements of patent medicines. This announcement will be gratefully received by some of our readers.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman started again for the East on Wednesday evening, going by the southern route through Kentucky and Virginia. He expected to visit Berea and spend the Sabbath with Mr. Fee and Elder J. F. Browne. His work for the immediate future will be in the vicinity of Baltimore and Philadelphia. This field he regards as very hopeful, and there is much more to be done for the reform, especially in the cities.

—The Record, of Blanchard, Iowa, pays a worthy tribute to the labors of Bro. Butler, the Missouri agent, whose diligence against the lodge has made him well known throughout north-western Missouri and the adjacent counties in Iowa. The Record says:

"We have however made some effort to ascertain the character of Mr. Butler's performances, deeming it a duty we owe to our readers to keep them informed concerning all matters of public interest. From the best available sources we gather that they are of more than usual interest, and are perhaps receiving more than usual attention in the various communities where he has been. Full houses and respectful attention seems to be the rule wherever he goes."

—Redding and Co., Masonic publishers of New York, claim to be "the only firm doing a strictly Masonic business in this country." With their catalogue they send out a colored plate representing an "Ancient Initiation Scene." It is after the style of Dr. John A. Weisse who revels in ancient Egyptian Masonry and sees as many positive marks of it among the tomb paintings as Rob Morris found in Palestine—only he manufactured himself all the Masonic relics he found, while Weisse studies those that are genuine. Doubtless there is much in modern Masonic ritualism copied very closely from the pagan rites of Egypt; the religious principles of the old are more closely copied even. Redding's little plate pictures the candidate bound and hoodwinked, the altar and the due-guard being made before the Master. This is a useful picture for Freemasons professing Christianity to hang in their rooms. It gives a striking idea of the universality and paganism of Masonry.

—A correspondent sends a slip from a Cincinnati paper with a bit of court record upon it. A father had his son arrested for stealing. He was not a parent of large or tender heart, but made a comfortable provision for his son. The judge however publicly reproved him, ordered him to take home the boy, and put the father in charge of the son by instructing the latter to report any short-coming. Young America being now in the stirrups with a law court to hold him on can ride at will. The same judge may in a few days have the hideous satisfaction of sentencing this same lad for crime induced by his own instructions.

—Bro. W. M. Love is holding a discussion in his paper, The Banner of Truth, Osceola, Mo., with an Elder Tatum, who affirms in crude and illogical terms, and entirely without any proof but his own assertions, that the National Christian Association, the American party, the Associated Churches of Christ and the Osage, Mo., Baptist Association, are "organically" connected with each other. This absurd proposition is argued with all gravity in the affirmative. Probably the only trouble with the indignant Elder is that all these distinct organizations (so far as they are organized, for the Associated Churches are in agreement only) are seeking the overthrow of the lodge. That marks them with a curse in his eyes.

—K. A. Burnell began a three months' campaign at Leavenworth, Kansas, January 6. The meetings are held in the Methodist church, afternoon and evening and all the leading denominations unite in them.

—The Iowa Home Missionary Society during the year 1883, had under its care fifty-seven missionaries, and granted aid to eighty-two churches. Thirteen new churches were organized in the State during the year, and nine houses of worship were finished and dedicated.

—The Lutheran church in the United States has at present eighteen missionaries in India and two in Africa. Since the organization of the Foreign Missionary Society in 1837, the contributions of the General Council and General Synod have been $411,554.

THE MORGAN FAMILY.

Miss Sarah Stevens of Batavia is a valuable helper in our reform work, and one always busy. She has a quaint, original way of putting things, but her sincerity and veracity are beyond question. Her memory of events occurring fifty years ago and more, extends to the minutest detail. Since my last call on her she has been busy tracing up the history of each member of the Morgan and Miller families, and should she be spared to pursue her work to the end the facts gathered would make a valuable accession to our literature. From her I obtained a picture of Mrs. Lucinda E. Morgan, and two letters of recent date from D. B. Smith, who married Mr. Morgan's only daughter, Lucinda. I also learned much of the history of Thomas, only son of Wm. Morgan, who died in Memphis, leaving children whom Miss S. is trying to trace out, with a prospect of success. There is also a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harris (Morgan) living, when last heard from, in Missouri. Miss Stevens is on her track, and has found that her husband was in the rebel army, etc., and she will probably find either the woman or her grave before relinquishing the search. She reads the Cynosure and notes everything said about our movements. She is confident that David C. Miller wrote out a full and correct account of Morgan's abduction, murder and the subsequent trials of his kidnappers, which he told her would be published after his death. She has not relinquished the hope of unearthing this document, and every friend should pray that she may be guided to a successful issue in searching for so valuable a treasure from the past.

From letters written by Mr. Smith it appears that he had never made known the parentage of his wife, Lucinda, after removing to the far West. A few days after her death it was announced with a brief sketch of her history in New York papers, and extensively copied in papers on the Pacific slope. Mr. Smith is still ignorant of the source from whence the New York papers obtained their information, but reports a marked change towards him by his Masonic neighbors on receipt of the intelligence. This case shows two things; viz., the ceaseless vigils of the eye of Masonry that never sleeps, and its vindictive, unrelenting spirit towards not only the principal witnesses, but a determined vengeance upon the children and children's children of all who break their slavish chains and expose their hellish clan.

While in Niagara county I was told that ex-sheriff Eli Bruce was nine days dying in the most horrible agony of soul conceivable and that a competent witness to the fact is still living in the neighborhood. Will Bro. P. D. Miller or any one who knows or can look up the facts, furnish them for our readers? If true, it is a warning which all Masons ought to read and heed. J. P. STODDARD.

AN ODD-FELLOW BANQUET.

An adhering Odd-fellow, in the Odd-fellow's department of the Independent Statesman, gives the following experience:

A few years ago it was my privilege to join, by invitation, an Encampment of Uniformed Patriarchs in a visit to a neighboring city, in an adjoining State. We were cordially received, and shown many objects of interest and properly entertained. In the evening we were invited to join in a ball at the City Hall. This proved to be a grand affair; good music, fine hall, and plenty of ladies. Intermission came at 12 o'clock. The visiting patriarchs were invited to partake of refreshments. I thought a bowl of oysters would be just the thing for me at that time, so I gladly accepted the invitation. We passed two or three squares to a saloon said to be kept by a brother. We went in, passed along to the back part of the saloon where we found two long tables.

—The sixteenth annual Washington Convention of the National Woman's Suffrage Association will be held in Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C., Mar. 4, 5, and 6. The principal object of the Association is woman suffrage by an amendment to the Constitution.

—Emma Mallory, well known as one of Indiana's best temperance workers, has recently held a series of Gospel temperance meetings amongst the Cherokee Indians. The meetings were very large. Three hundred and sixty Indians took the pledge, and after she had preached Christ to them on First-day, 52 arose at her call, and came forward to give themselves to the Savior. She addressed the council with a view to introducing temperance lessons into their schools.—Christian Worker.

For every five persons who use tobacco in England, France and Russia, there are 15 in Germany and North America, 24 in Belgium, and 28 in Holland. The medical fraternity are comparatively unanimous in condemning its use in every form, and rank it only second to intoxicating liquors as the foe to longevity and the promoter of insanity.

RAILROAD PROHIBITION.

The Erie railroad and the Chicago and Alton road have enacted a prohibitory law on their respective lines. They remove all employes who use intoxicants in moderation, as well as those who drink to excess, well knowing that he who drinks at all is always in danger of drinking too much. In other words, they recognize the fact that any man who is addicted to the use of alcoholic spirits, all of which are brain poisons, is an unsafe man to be intrusted with human lives or valuable property.

A. M. Richards, division superintendent of the Chicago and Alton road, in an interview, says: "A comparatively modern thing required in railroading is total abstinence. In former times a little indulgence in the social bowl was winked at. But whisky has been a foe of railroading. It has caused the loss of a great many lives and much money. Railroad managers have learned that a man who drinks is dangerous. Hence if he indulges even off duty he is discharged. If he is on duty at night and then stays up during the day-time he is likewise bounced for not going to bed. He may be warned once of his faults, but a repetition costs him his job. Railroads must have not only clear brains, but well rested bodies. They want every man at his best. Formerly the 'hail-fellow-well-met' man was likely to rise in authority in railroading. This is no longer true. Conviviality is frowned upon everywhere in the service. Urbanity is expected of all, but debauchery permitted in none."—Golden Censer.

—A veteran minister, Rev. John Wray, has lately died in Pennsylvania at the age of eighty-three. Many years ago, when he was a missionary in India, a little heathen girl, in answer to the question, "What is holiness?" said, "Holiness is living as Mr. Wray lives."

—One hundred thousand Jews are said to have become converts to Christianity since 1809, through the agency of the London society for the promotion of Christianity among that people, and 2,000 Jewish Christians are reported to be now living in the English capital.

—The French nation has at last by law guaranteed a decent and peaceable burial to all men without regard to their religious belief.

CHEAPEST AND BEST.

In the whole range of the literature of our reform there is nothing cheaper than the Cynosure. Compute the amount of reading in each number and multiply it by fifty-two, and the result will be a surprise that so much can be furnished for $2.00. No book or pamphlet provides so much in proportion to the cost. As for the variety and quality of their work, the writers for the Cynosure are among the best and most conscientious and intelligent Christians in the world. To surpass their work would be difficult. Let them be sustained by increasing the circulation of the paper by thousands.

If each one will add to his effort for a good cause the name of a new subscriber, enclosing $4.00 for both, the sender may have also his choice of the following valuable pamphlets:

1. The Batavia Convention pamphlet, with the great speeches on that occasion, illustrations of the Morgan Monument, etc.; or

2. Egypt in History and Propheey; or, Pharaoh proclaiming God, by the celebrated Robert Patterson, from Hasting's Anti-infidel Library; or

3. The Anti-masonic Scrap Book, a new and enlarged edition now in press, containing all the tracts published by the N. C. A.; or

4. The Island of Madagascar; the excellent history written by Gen. J. W. Phelps and noticed in a late Cynosure.

5. Copies of any of the pamphlets sold by the N. C. A., to the amount of 25 cents.

A CLUB OF FIVE

trial subscribers (two months for 25 cents) will just now be a valuable accession to the Cynosure list. To every friend who will get one up and enclose the $1.25 and addresses plainly written we will send either of the documents mentioned above.

FOR A CLUB OF TEN the sender may choose any two from the above list.

Get the Cynosure circulated in your town. The lodge does not thrive where it is read.

AN EASY TASK.

To get two month's subscribers for 25 cents will not be found a difficult work, if you fail in securing a yearly subscription. Each copy of the Cynosure is equal to an ordinary pamphlet of 80 pages. Eight such pamphlets for a quarter of a dollar is not extravagance by far. Let every reader of this paper present this matter to his neighbors.

THE HOME.

THE UNFAILING ONE.

He who hath led, will lead
All through the wilderness:
He who hath fed will feed;
He who hath blessed will bless;
He who hath heard thy cry
Will never close His ear;
He who hath marked thy faintest sigh
Will not forget thy tear.
He loveth always, faileth never;
So rest on Him, to-day, forever!

He who hath made thee whole
Will heal thee day by day;
He who hath spoken to thy soul,
Hath many things to say;
He who hath gently taught
Yet more will make thee know;
He who so wondrously wrought,
Yet greater things will show.
He loveth always, faileth never;
So rest on Him, to-day, forever!

—Frances Ridley Havergal.

WORLDLY AMUSEMENTS.

It is a sad stumbling-block to the unconverted to see professed Christians seeking pleasure or happiness from this world. Such seeking is a misrepresentation of the religion of Jesus. It misleads, bewilders, and confounds the observing outsider. If he ever reads his Bible, he cannot but wonder that souls who are born of God and have communion with him, should have any relish for worldly ways and pleasure. The fact is that thoughtful, unconverted men have little or no confidence in that class of professing Christians who seek enjoyment from this world. They may profess to have, and may loosely think of such as being liberal and good Christians. They may flatter them, and commend their religion as being the opposite of fanaticism and bigotry, and as being such a religion as they like to see; but there is no real sincerity in such professions on the part of the impenitent.

In my early Christian life I heard a Methodist bishop from the South, report a case that made a deep impression on my mind. He said there was in his neighborhood a slave-holder, a gentleman of fortune, who was a gay, agreeable man, and gave himself much to various field sports and other amusements. He used to associate much with his pastor; often invite him to dinner, and to accompany him in his sports and pleasure-seeking excursions of various kinds. The minister cheerfully complied with these requests, and a friendship grew up between the pastor and his parishioner that grew into an intimacy which continued till the last sickness of this gay and wealthy man. When the wife of this worldling was apprised that her husband could not live but a short time, she was much alarmed for his soul, and tenderly inquired if she should not call in their minister to converse and pray with him. He feelingly replied, "No, my dear, he is not the man for me to see now. He was my companion, as you know, in worldly sports and pleasure-seeking; he loved good dinners and a jolly time. I then enjoyed his society and found him a pleasant companion. But I see now that I never had any real confidence in his piety, and have now no confidence in the efficacy of his prayers. I am now a dying man, and need the instruction and prayers of somebody that can prevail with God. We have been much together, but our pastor has never been in serious earnest with me about the salvation of my soul, and he is not the man to help me now." The wife was greatly affected, and said, "What shall I do then?" He replied, "My coachman, Tom, is a pious man; I have confidence in his prayers; I have often heard him pray when about the barn or stables, and his prayers have always struck me as being quite sincere and earnest. I never heard any foolishness from him. He has always been honest and earnest as a Christian man. Call him." Tom was called and came within the door, dropping his hat and looking tenderly and compassionately at his dying master. The dying man put forth his hand saying, "Come here Tom, take my hand. Tom, can you pray for your dying master?" Tom poured out his soul in earnest prayer.

I cannot remember the name of this bishop, it was so long ago, but the story I well remember as an illustration of the mistake into which many professors and some ministers fall, supposing that we recommend religion to the unconverted by mingling with them in their pleasures and their running after amusements. I have seen many illustrations of this mistake. Christians should live so far above the world as not to need or seek its pleasures, and thus recommend religion to the world as a source of the highest and purest happiness. The peaceful look, the joyful countenance, the spiritual serenity and cheerfulness of a living Christian, recommend religion to the unconverted. Their satisfaction in God, their holy joy, their living above and shunning the ways and amusements of worldly minds, impress the unconverted with a sense of the necessity and desirableness of a Christian life. But let no man think to gain a really Christian influence over another by manifesting a sympathy with his worldly aspirations.—Pres. Finney.

CHRIST'S PERSONAL COMING.

In the Christian Union Lyman Abbott speaks thus of the coming of Christ: "But it is a strange and inconsequential logic which concludes that he will not come again because history has perpetually baffled all this irreverential guess work.

The prophecy of the first coming of the Messiah is not so clear in the Old Testament as the prophecy of a second coming is in the New Testament. It is the hope held out to his church for the future. It is explicitly reiterated and promised by Christ. It was unmistakably the anticipation of his apostles. It is made by both the basis of many a practical exhortation. The disciples are bid to be ever hastening toward the coming of their Lord; to live soberly in this present life, looking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing; to be as virgins, with lamps trimmed and burning, that wait for the Bridegroom; to be as stewards keeping their trust till their King returns to receive their accounting. Are they oppressed? They are to be patient unto the coming of the Lord. Are they in sorrow? They are to comfort one another with the hope of the day when the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout. Are they weary of waiting? They are warned against scoffers who ask, Where is the promise of his coming? With this hope Christ comforts his disciples ere he departs from them. With this the angels again encourage them after his resurrection.

It is idle to attempt to interpret these propheeies by the gradual and invisible appearing of Christ in the spiritual experience of his own disciples. The exegesis which can thus explain away the words of Scripture, can at will make nothing out of something, and something out of nothing. The one appearing is gradual, the other is to be sudden like a stroke of lightning; the one is invisible, the other shall be seen of all men; the one is without observation, the other with a shout and the sound of a trumpet; the one is recognized only by believers, and sometimes with difficulty even by them, the other shall bring terror to the foe and triumph to the friend of Christ. I would not put undue emphasis on the emphatic words of the angel at the time of the ascension: "This same Jesus which is taken up into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven;" but if they do not indicate a far different manifestation of Christ from any we have seen in the gradual development of a Christian spirit among men, words have no meaning."

THE SOLDIER WHO WOULD NOT FIGHT.

Richard Newton, relates the following incident of the war:

"In one of the regiments of the Southern army was a company of soldiers from North Carolina. Drafted into this company was a man belonging to the Society of Friends. He had been forced to join the army against his own will. He protested against it, and said that he was opposed, on conscientious principles, to fight under any circumstanees, and that he could not, and would not fight. But nobody would mind him. He was forced to shoulder his musket and march. He did so, but always declaring that he would not fight.

"The regiment to which he belonged joined Gen. Lee's army in the invasion of Pennsylvania. But it was never called into aetion till they came to Gettysburg. There it was soon known that a great battle was to be fought. Just before the battle began, this Friend went to the colonel of his regiment and told him that he could not fight. 'You must fight,' said the colonel. 'I cannot, and I will not," was his calm reply. 'Then I'll have you shot,' said he. 'Thee can do as thee pleases about that, but I trust in God, and I cannot fight.'

"The colonel had him led out into an open space and ordered a squad of soldiers to shoot him. The soldiers made ready, took aim and waited for the order to fire. Whilst this was going on, the man stood calmly there. He lifted up his face to heaven and said in a loud clear voice: 'Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.' When the men heard this they threw down their arms, and said they 'would not shoot such a man.'

"Another squad was called out, and the same thing occurred with them. Then the colonel was angry. He swore a dreadful oath declaring that he would trample the man to death. He put spurs to his horse and made him gallop towards the man. But just as he came up to him the horse reared up on his hind legs and then turned away. This was repeated two or three times with the same result.

"Just then the trumpet sounded to battle. The colonel had to hurry away and lead his men into fight. On one of the very first volleys fired by our army he fell mortally wounded. The Quaker soldier was taken prisoner by our men. He was brought to Philadelphia, and was afterward discharged by President Lincoln and released from doing military duty.

"The facts of this incident are entirely authentic. Personal friends of mine, thoroughly reliable, who were acquainted with this man, so true to his principles, have assured me of the truth of what is here stated."—Banner of Love.

GOD'S WAY AND MAN'S WAY.

God says: Seek ye first the kingdom of heaven and its righteousness, and all these (earthly things) shall be added unto you.

Man says: Seek first worldly wealth and fame and power; religion you can get on a dying bed.

God says: Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it.

Man says: Let prayer go, and work for what you want.

God says: Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down and shaken together and running over, shall men give unto your bosoms.

Man says: Charity begins at home. Why give to others that for which you have toiled so hard? Your own family may want it.

God says: Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.

Man says: Each man for himself. Look out for number one.

God says: Lay not up for yourselves treasures up on earth, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.

Man says: Make sure your worldly treasures. Heaven is a long way off.

God says: Whosoever hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the Love of God in him?

Man says: What guarantee have I, if I give my earnings to the poor, that I shall not come to want myself?

God says: There is that that scattereth, and yet increaseth.

Man says: It is only by saving and hoarding what you have that it will increase.

Reader, what says your conscience? Is not God's way better than man's?—Christian Standard.

THE BLASPHEMER'S FATE.

The Boston Jonrnal says a man was playing at cards with three others at Omaha recently, when a dispute arose about the betting. The man uttered a lie. Everybody believed him to be lying. Very loudly he asserted his lie, exclaiming in a bold manner: "I hope Christ will kill me if it isn't so." His hour had come. He dealt the hand, his last hand,—he passed the cards to the next player. The player shuffled the cards and asked the man who had referred the matter to his Judge to "cut," but a look into his face disclosed the awful fact that he was dead. The proof of a living Christ, and an avenging Deity was before them. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hards of the living God.

Let us be satisfied with God's plan for saving the world, and not try to help him by any false methods. There is a limit to our own responsibility. The burdens of the world's evil does not all rest on our shoulders. Let us calmly wait on God, and check our foolish impatience. Then why be cast down in despair that truth does not conquer in a day? Why not look out upon life's drama with cheerful content, knowing that God rules, and that he will order all things well? Looking the darkest facts fairly in the face, our supreme question should be, "Lord, what would'st thou have me to do?" Faithfully doing this, the spirit may calmly rest, undisturbed by this world's confusion. Cheerfully accepting all duties and difficulties, contented with life's privilege, with the Divine treatment of us here and the heavenly hope of the life to come, we shall climb the celestial summits with songs of joy.—R. R. Shippen.

"The hireling seeth the wolf coming and fleeth, because he is an hireling." But there may be thousands of well-meaning, weak or ignorant ministers who act, in given cases, like hirelings, when they are not. All the disciples once forsook Christ and fled because they could not face unpopularity and danger. Afterward, poor doubting Thomas said: "Let us also go that we may die with him," and all but John did.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!
Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 50
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	25
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.
EZRA A. COOK, Publisher. 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE

311,000 references The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's a child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2.50; half Russia, $3. Postage 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY, 10 books, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Teaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now in use. The whole lot for $11.48.
Single copy, postpaid, 10c; 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.
Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil
11 Newlyn House. [dren.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Susette.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May.
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
2 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwei.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bernie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Mission, Lt. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Hayland.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
52 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Failure.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer. [Marched.
57 Hagalda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I.
61 Tempest Tossed.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hope.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself,
72 Lyman.
73 Kenneth.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl
77 Margery Kramer's School-
78 The Quartette. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Lulu Preston's Trials and Triumphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror
85 Joe and Harry
86 Fred, the Backwood boy.
87 Bloomfield Rock.
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 No Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Saunders.
93 Pet of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit; Frank Spencer's Rule of 109 The Harker Family. [Life,
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Tim's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
116 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Poll and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Fearndale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium.
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; John Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Telfourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Banyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Louis' School Days.
151 Blossom and blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Briney.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips.
156 Digging a Grave with a Wine-glass. Little blind May.
157 The Manor House Mystery. May's Sixpence,
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Job Lufton's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.
163 Little Faith. The Diver's Daughter.
164 Dora's boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe.
166 Danesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear
168 Drift. [ful bondage.
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list, Nos 95, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141, 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168, are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4, any 12 copies for $1, 10c each.

Reform Note Paper & Envelopes

This is good heavy paper, 5⅜x8½ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scriptures and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with a "head" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100.

Address—
EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.

Price postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches.
Published by EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM
T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is. Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $8 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering. All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order, Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

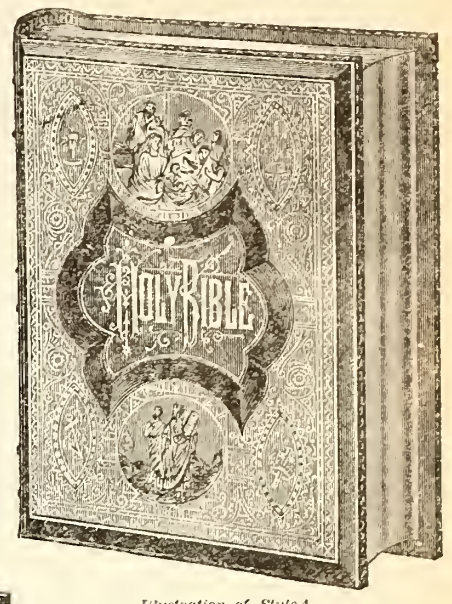

Illustration of Style 4.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10½x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and Family Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible. Harmony of the Gospels, Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 1.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4, with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—
EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Established 1875.

DAVID C. COOK, Publisher of SUNDAY SCHOOL REQUISITES.

PUBLICATIONS:

Primary Grade. The Primary Teachers Quarterly. Illuminated Lessons. Primary Scholars Quarterly. Primary Weekly. Dew Drops. Little Learners Paper.

Juvenile Grade. Juvenile Teachers Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly (abridged). The Coral. Sabbath Home. Giant Killer. Truth Seekers.

Intermediate Grade. Intermediate Teachers Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly (abridged). Duplicate Lesson Leaf. The Sunday School Gem. The Young Folks Friend. Careful Builders. His Jewels. Sabbath School Weekly.

Advanced Grade. Advanced Teachers Quarterly. Advanced Scholars Quarterly. The Royal Road. Gracious Words. Our Own Sabbath School Paper. Conqueror's Herald. Weekly Magnet.

Bible Class Grade. Bible Class Teacher. Bible Class Scholar. Church and Home, (weekly). Church and Home, (semi-monthly).

Average combined circulation each issue over Three Million Five Hundred Thousand copies. Samples forwarded on application.

"I do not hesitate to commend them as far the best of any."—Rev. E. Corwin, D. D., Racine, Wis. "Their excellence can not be overestimated. Prices defy competition."—S. W. Hayes, Wheeling, Mo. "They give unbounded satisfaction."—J. L. Hodge, Oyer, Kan. "Superintendent ten years; have found no helps so good."—W. R. Davidson, Arabi, Ky. "Best publications in twenty years' experience."—L. B. Davis, Lodi, Mich. "The interest has increased fifty per cent."—J. L. Lassiter, Branchville, N. C. "Prospering gloriously; due to Cook's supplies."—T. A. Davison, Kellerville, Ill. "Our school is the best in this part of the country, and we owe it to your supplies."—Geo. W. Finch, Auburn, Cal. "Doubled our school in a few weeks."—E. Timmerman, Jasper, N. Y. "School gaining every Sabbath."—Thos. Purvis, Sunderland, Ont. "School has grown nearly twice as large."—E. F. Wilson, Centre, Tex. "Our school has built up greatly."—J. M. Worth, West Salamanca, N. Y. "Better pleased than ever. We are having a precious revival."—Henry Cobb, Metropolis, Ill. "The Holy Spirit is blessing our school with a knowledge of the Word we never had before."—A. Hamilton, Stewartsville, Ont.

GOLDEN CENSER: "By far the cheapest publications for quality, quantity and frequency. Everything Evangelical, pure and helpful." CHAUTAUQUA DEMOCRAT: "When we mention his name in connection with any Sunday-school literature, it is sufficient guarantee of its excellence." CENTRAL METHODIST: "Whatever Mr. Cook puts his hand to is given life and energy." BOSTON CONGREGATIONALIST: "Mr. Cook advertises truthfully. 'Enormous saving to Sunday-schools.'" BALTIMORE METHODIST: "A leading, if not the largest publisher of Sunday-school supplies on this continent."

Publishing House Elgin Ill.; Office and Store 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

—President Arthur visited New York last week and was feasted by the Union League and Mrs. W. B. Astor.

—President Arthur and the Governors of the several States have been invited to attend the winter carnival at Montreal, beginning Feb. 4.

—Senator Hoar has reported back from the Judiciary Committee Senator Edmunds' civil rights bill with one merely verbal amendment. The report was not concurred in by any of the Democratic members of the committee.

—From the same committee is reported the bill to provide for the performance of the duties of the office of President in case of removal, death, resignation, or inability of both the President and Vice President. It provides in such case the office shall devolve upon the member of the Cabinet highest in rank, beginning with the Secretary of State.

—At the meeting of the House Committee on Education, a committee from the National Colored Convention held at Louisville was present, and urged the colored people be aided by an appropriation for educational purposes.

—The value of exports of provisions, tallow, and dairy products in December, 1883, was $10,844,952; for the same time in 1882, $12,071,422; for the twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1883, $114,228,956, for the same period in 1882, $96,934,423. The value of dairy products exported for the eight months ended Dec. 31, 1883, was $13,535,740, against $10,439,701 for the same time in 1882.

—Hon. Frederick Douglass, the well-known colored leader, was married at Washington Thursday evening to Miss Helen M. Pitts, a white woman, formerly of Avon, N. Y. The first wife of Douglass, who was a colored woman, died about a year ago.

—An address to the political parties has been issued by the National Temperance Society asking the nomination of a President and Vice President who favor prohibition.

THE COUNTRY.

—Near Fort Wayne, Ind., Monday night, fire broke out in a smoking car of a Wabash train, which was running at a high rate of speed. The occupants were panic-stricken, but the train was quickly stopped and all escaped. The car was then detached and burned to the tracks.

—A Mrs. Malone died suddenly while inebriated Monday at Kingston, Ont., and was buried Tuesday. The dead woman's daughter, Mrs. Gray, who had been also on a "spree," refused to have her mother decently clothed for the grave, requested the undertaker to "chuck her in as she is," then danced on the coffin-lid, and was forcibly removed by an officer.

—The twin babes of Isaac Martin, of Liberty Mills, Ind., who had been placed to sleep in a cold room Thursday night, were found frozen to death in the morning. The neighborhood is excited against the Martins.

—Robert Harris, as Vice President of the Erie Road, received a salary of $12,000; as President of the Northern Pacific Road, he receives $20,000 a year.

—An express train on Toledo, Cincinnati and St. Louis Road, consisting of seven coaches, a baggage car and an engine, dashed off a long trestle twenty feet high, near Beavertown, O., causing a complete wreck, and a loss of $10,000. The accident was caused by the truck of a wheel of the engine breaking as the train was in the middle of the trestle, and all was hurled off in an instant, carrying away part of the trestle. Twenty passengers were on board, five of whom were injured.

—A special from Carthage, on Upper Cumberland river, says a raft was drawn into the whirlpool below that town, and nine men drowned.

—Three schooners of the Gloucester, Mass., fishing fleet have been given up as lost, with crews of forty-six men. One of the schooners is believed to have been run down by an ocean steamer.

—An explosion occurred Thursday in the Colorado Coal and Iron Company's colliery at Crested Butte, Col., while fifty-nine men were in the mine. The engine house, which stood 100 feet from the entrance, was completely wrecked. Fifty-six men, it is supposed, have been killed. Thirty-four dead bodies were recovered Friday, many of them being mangled in the most shocking manner.

—The Grand Jury at Lincoln, Ill., Friday, indicted Orrin A. Carpenter for the murder of Zura Burns. The accused was summoned to court, and after hearing the indictment read, Judge Herdman, in a most emphatic manner, refused to take bail, and Carpenter was hurried off to prison.

FOREIGN.

—A great storm prevailed throughout England Wednesday, and telegraph wires were leveled in all directions. Ten persons lost their lives.

—Sir Charles Dilke remarks that England cares but little whether Egypt governs the Soudan, but England is determined to dominate the Red Sea with the special purpose of preventing the slave trade.

—After a consultation with counsel, it has been determined on behalf of the Catholics and Nationalists of the north of Ireland to seek an official inquiry into the legality of the Orange Society, and to make its members amenable for recent events.

—The French Admiral Courbet has blockaded Tonquin, thus preventing the entry of articles contraband of war.

—The Khedive of Egypt has appointed General Gordon Governor of the Soudan, and has intrusted him with full powers.

—Many think Gen. Gordon will run the risk of assassination at the hands of the rebels. Two Sheikhs accompany him to Khartoum.

—The total number of soldiers in Khartoum is 6,100, of which 2,000 are Chaggias, and are known to be disaffected. The black troops are also unreliable, and the whole garrison is in a state of demoralization on account of the long arrears of pay. There are only two small steamers that navigate the river to Berber. It is evident that the evacuation of Khartoum will take months. Meanwhile the rebel forces are daily increasing south of the town. It is also reported that rebels are coming from the west.

—At Florisdorf, Austria, Thursday. Detective Bloch was shot dead by a man who, when captured, was found to possess a dynamite bomb, a revolver; and a poisoned dagger. The assassin shot a citizen twice who assisted at his arrest, and attempted to explode the bomb to destroy himself and his captors.

—A dispatch says the Loyalist meeting was the most imposing political demonstration ever held in Dublin.

—The Irish Times states that the British Home Office and police have been warned that serious steps are being taken to perpetrate outrages in England in connection with the New York Irish World's "O'Donnell's vengeance fund." It is stated that of £1,000 subscribed to the fund, between £600 and £800 were forwarded to London last week. English detectives are working hard to trace the holders of the money.

Russia makes a formal demand upon Turkey to immediately pay £250,000 still owing for the indemnity exacted after the Turco-Russian war.

—Schenck, who recently confessed to the murder of four girls at Vienna, states that he had planned five others, and besides intended to destroy the family of the Baroness Malfatti. Schenck alleges that he is an American citizen, and, with two accomplices, is charged with killing some twenty persons.

—The snow is so deep that communication with the rear townships of the Canadian province of Ontario is cut off, and it is feared the settlers must suffer for the neccssaries of life.

The United Presbyterian says of our NEW SCRAP BOOK:

"It contains the strong arguments that have been made by not a few eminent men, as to the evil effects of secret societies."

Send for one for your minister. Price, 25 cents.

St. Vitus Dance is a distressing malady. There is but one cure for it. Samaritan Nervine.

"Samaritan Nervine cured my wife's fits," says Henry Clark, of Fairfield, Mich. "She had them 35 years." At Druggists. $1.50.

BUSINESS.

—You are requested to notice the advertisement of tracts in this issue of the Cynosure. The tracts not advertised in to-day's paper are out of print. In ordering please give the number of the tract as well as the name. The New SCRAP BOOK contains the full list of tracts which are now in print.

CYNOSURE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Received for week ending Jan. 26, from the following parties:

W Taylor, S Waite, Jas Haire, A Fink, T Hudson, Jno H King, J H Hunting, A K Richey, S Wilder, R B Arnold, Nat'l Club List, C S Kennedy, E Smith, Jno Hodson, W H Reed, M A Adams, H Leroy, R Hammond, N D Rose, Mrs A Floyd, Moses Morse, B F Gardner, T S Couch, W W McMillan, Abby Wolcott, H A Day, Lucy Dudley, S Simpson, H Siemiller, J E Pierce, G Mereness, G Smith, L Phillips, L H Bohrer, E L Dilley, W Taylor, Eno Nelson, H Nordyke, Seebu News Co, Geo H Troutman, J T Icke, J F Baird, A Fenton, R Drinkwater, Chas Poget, H Gaines, Rev St Clair Ross, Rev J Wilkinson, Lizzie Wiltsey, C Stegner, J N Norris, D Carpenter, C C Hayden, J S Rice, H L Johnson, R E Bird, J F Stevenson, L I Wicker, W M Beden, J Mitchell, Thos Haines, Chas King, B Gaddis, J A Gordon, J R Setts, E C Foster, John Howe, A Rice, Wm Small, W H Dawson, J W Margrave, I Bancroft.

FOLLY.

It's all folly to pay $50 or a $100 for seven degrees in Freemasonry in the Lodge and Chapter when you can send a dollar to the National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, and get the whole thing by return mail, without being hoodwinked and haltered or having to "put up refreshments" after tedious "initiations."

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

PAPER COVER, PRICE 75 cents.

The former price was 60 cents. We cannot send this book hereafter except upon receipt of 75 cents.

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures Nose, Throat, Lungs; full idea; 36p. route, cost free.

Eminent Dr. J. J. Caldwell, Baltimore, Md., states: "I have used Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic largely in Debility, Febrile and Nervous Diseases, and I have found it one of the most reliable of nutrient tonics in use or to be found in pharmacy." (Take no other.) Of druggists.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28, 1884.

GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2		91⅝
No. 3		80
Rejected		70
Winter No 2	97	99
Corn—No. 2		52⅜
Rejected		45
Oats—No. 2		31¾
Rye—No. 2		57½
Bran per ton		14 50
Flour—Winter	3 50	@6 00
Spring	2 25	@7 00
Hay—Timothy	6 00	@9 50
Prairie	4 00	@9 00
Lard per cwt		8 95
Mess pork per bbl		15 62
Butter, medium to best	14	@36
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	75	@2 20
Eggs	24	35
Potatoes per bus	30	34
Seeds—Timothy	1 15	@1 40
Clover	6 00	6 25
Flax		1 41
Broom corn	02	@ 07½
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Clear	42 00	@48 00
Common	11 00	@18 00
Shingles	2 50	@3 00
WOOL—Washed	22	@37
Unwashed	16	@26
LIVE STOCK—Cattle extra	6 50	@7 00
Good	5 75	@6 40
Medium	5 20	@5 70
Common	2 25	@4 75
Hogs	5 40	@6 65
Sheep	3 00	@5 55

NEW YORK MARKETS.

Flour	2 80	@6 50
Wheat—Winter	75	@1 09
Spring	95	@1 06
Corn	48	@63
Oats	39	@43
Mess Pork		15 75
Lard		9 27
Eggs		41
Butter	10	@41
Wool	10	@45

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary, the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

An Awful Responsibility.

EVERYBODY has something to say about consumption. We all deplore its terrible ravages, but only a few of us seem to have enough common sense to take the proper means of preventing it. It is as simple as "two and two are four," that Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, taken as a remedy for coughs, colds, difficult breathing, hoarseness, or any of the symptoms which pave the way for that terrible destroyer, will effect a radical and rapid cure of the ailment, and avert all danger. Whoever, under these circumstances, neglects to resort to the true specific, assumes a fearful responsibility. Sold by druggists.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

The Flesh Speedily Reunites

When obstinate sores are cleansed with Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Of druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, black ro brown, fifty cents.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED.

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.

C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS, WHEATON COLLEGE.

Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.

MRS. S. H. NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in their schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.

WM. W. FARWELL

Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.

76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD

Attorney and Counselor at Law

79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

PATENTS NO PATENT! NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Send stamps for NEW LAWS. COL. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

IT PAYS to sell our Hand Rubber Stamps. Samples free. FOLJAMBE & CO., Cleveland, Ohio.

McShane Bell Foundry

Manufacture those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogues sent free. Address H. MCSHANE & CO., Baltimore, Md.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

T. HUDSON J. L. STRATTON

— Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of—

HARDWOOD LUMBER.

Have on hand a large amount of Dry Ash, Red and White Oak, Hickory, and Basswood.

Prompt attention given to orders and satisfaction guaranteed. KALAMAZOO, MICH.

MILL OWNERS SEND FOR PAMPHLET.

MANUFACT'D AT MOUNT HOLLY N.J.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 20. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1884. WHOLE No. 719.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Lewis Tappan..... 1
Editorial Correspondence 8
Marriage of Frederick Douglass..... 8
Mormons and their Lodge 8
CONTRIBUTED:
Appeal to American Farmers..... 2
With one Consent an Excuse..... 2
Short Sermon..... 2
The Murder in Jackson County, Mich..... 3
SELECTED:
The Skeptic's answer.... 3
The Mormon Question.... 3
Two Evils..... 3
REFORM NEWS:
From the General Agent; Preparations in Kansas; From Western New York; The Michigan Work..... 4
Anti-masonic Lecturers.... 7
CORRESPONDENCE:
Known by their Prayers; School of Falsehood: Notes from Ohio; Extremes Meet; Bricks from the Wall of Masonry.....5, 6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
THE SECRET EMPIRE..... 7
AMERICAN POLITICS:
Call for National Committee and Convention; Constitution for American Club..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
LITERARY..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
THE N. C. A..... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
IN BRIEF..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

THE FIFTEENTH

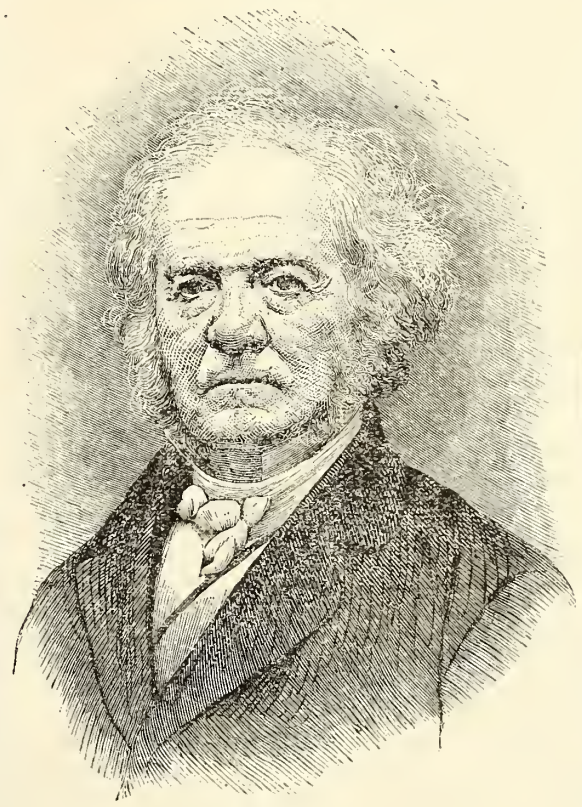
NATIONAL CONVENTION

FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF THE SECRET LODGES.

By vote of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association a NATIONAL CONVENTION will be held in Washington, D. C., on the 20th, 21st and 22d of February, 1884, to discuss in the political center of the New World and in the presence of our nation's executive, judicial and legislative bodies, the principles fundamental to government and religion which are assailed by the secret orders, and also to co-operate for the overthrow of these orders with the convention already called at the same time in favor of political action against the dram shop and the lodge. Able speakers will be in attendance and the very best arrangements for the accommodation of delegates will be made by the local committee. A grand feature of the Convention will be the formal inauguration of the work in Washington for which the National Association has purchased a fine building at No. 215, 4½ Street, N. W., and for which hundreds of its friends have liberally contributed. Every State, county and local society, and all churches opposed to secret societies are urged to send representatives to this Convention and arrange if possible for their expenses: and the N. C. A. Board by vote hereby request all friends of the reform who can not attend this Convention in person to send contributions and collections to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer of the N. C. A. in Chicago, to defray the expenses of this great meeting.

W. T. MELOY,
Chairman N. C. A. Board.

HENRY L. KELLOGG,
Secretary.



THE COMMISSARIAT.

ENTERTAINMENT AT WASHINGTON.

Delegates and visitors to the convention in Washington February 20–22 will please notice carefully the following facts. A few persons, who cannot afford to pay board, can have free entertainment provided they write beforehand. Only a few places can be furnished free and worthy persons needing them should write soon. Fair board and lodging can be obtained for a few persons at 70 cents a day; other places charge $1 or $1.25 a day. One good boarding house offers to take 20 delegates at $1.25 a day. Those wishing to economize should write to the undersigned stating how much they are willing to pay and arrangements will be made accordingly. On arrival in Washington delegates should report at No. 215 4½ St., N. W. If they arrive during the sessions of the convention they should report at Lincoln Hall. For further information address,

E. D. BAILEY,
215, 4 1-2 St., Northwest.

RAILWAY RATES TO WASHINGTON.—Encouragement is given by a railway officer of this city that for a party of twenty-five a round trip rate will be given of $22.50 per ticket. This is about half rate and is as good a rate as could be expected. LET EVERY ONE going to Washington by Chicago send word to this office as soon as possible. Probably an arrangement can be made to take at a reduced rate those who can go by the same route, namely, the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. GET READY TO GO, AND LOOK FOR FURTHER NOTICE. SEND YOUR NAMES.

LEWIS TAPPAN.

On a back street in Northampton, Massachusetts, in a snug New England way, lived a family of eleven children, seven sons and four daughters. They ate their suppers out of tin dishes, of "rye and Indian bread," with milk when they had it, and with 'broth" or "bean porridge" when they had not; which was often in winter. One wishes he could see the mother of these children. She was a niece of Benjamin Franklin; but, unlike her great uncle she never ridiculed her father's "blessing" at table, nor ran away to Philadelphia, and, if she did not bring lightning from heaven, she sent souls above the skies from which her uncle's lightning came down. One of her boys (and he the worst), became United States Senator, and Supreme Judge. John became a merchant prince in Boston, and, though benumbed and stiffened by the "orthodox" clergy there, broke loose from their influence so far as to attend the second World's anti-slavery convention in London, in 1843. Arthur was a slim, pale, silent man, whose money let Garrison loose from a Baltimore prison to inaugurate the overthrow of American slavery; built Oberlin College, and sent and supported Finney there, a shining meteor of God, to illumine two hemispheres with his light.

Another brother,

LEWIS TAPPAN,

whose full, cheerful, earnest face is shadowed in this Cynosure, is the theme of this present sketch.

One is never so glad for recording angels as when dealing with such a family as this. As the poet Gray has it, the brightest gems are not always drawn up from "The dark unfathomed caves of ocean," and often the brightest human flowers breathe their "fragrance" unseen in deserts. But every one of those gems, little or large, lost, forgotten or never known, will appear "in the day when God makes up his jewels," and be set in the starry coronet of heaven. So we bid a brief farewell to the unconsidered and unknown. The clerks who keep the records of God have them all written down—not only are their names but their doings and dispositions are in the eternal scroll of fame, where men see and know as they are seen and known, both "in the vast and the minute."

Lewis Tappan was two years younger than Arthur, born in 1786. The smoke had all gone up from the battle fields of the Revolution, but the earth-works and entrenchments still surrounded the army-cabins of Valley Forge; and the ridges made by cannon-shot were just grassed over on Bunker Hill. Men were in earnest, and not yet corrupted by indulgence, ambition and sloth; and slavery was then hated, North and South. Satan starts sham reforms to stave off real ones; and the tall corner building near our headquarters in Washington, on Pennsylvania avenue, with the large gilt letters "Colonization Building," around its top, was the depot where Mr. Gurley kept his free negroes who were starting to regenerate Africa by shipping over, in their persons, the piety and morals of the plantation.

The hard flinty hills of New England divided their scanty income in the vain hope to wipe out American slavery by colonization. Mr. Tappan was yet a young business man, some 36 years old, when Daniel Webster was president and Lewis Tappan secretary of a meeting to form a colonization society in Boston. Webster said, "Gentlemen, I will have nothing more to do with the matter, for I am satisfied it is merely a plan of the slave-holders to get rid of the free negroes." The plan, for a time, fell through. The gentle, silent, but great-souled Arthur Tappan proposed a line of packets from New York to Liberia, and gave not only to this cause, but to missions, Sabbath-schools, tracts and Bible societies, etc., etc., with the magnificence of a prince.

The Colonization Society started in 1816, next year after the house of Arthur Tappan & Co. was started in New York. After twelve successful years, his brother Lewis joined him from Boston. They supplemented each other. Bold, dashing, honest and impulsive, Lewis was the sails of their ship, and the gentle Arthur its helm. The sham benevolence of colonization, was lifted by Lewis from his brother's mind, but when its fog was dispersed, they both saw slavery clearer and hated it worse.

This was not the only sham which Lewis Tappan shook off. He joined the Masonic lodge. His daughter, who inherits her father's clear moral perceptions and force of mind, says, he was twenty-six years old when he was drawn into the lodge. In 1814 this brief memorandum is found among his writings: "Dr. Dixwell gave me lectures on Masonry at his house." "In September left the LODGE."

Thus this young business man "left the lodge" twelve years before Morgan; while it had snaked its way into the Boston churches, and was turning them into Unitarians, by infiltrating its own Christless deism. It swamped every orthodox church in Boston but the "Old South," and that, for a time, wavered like the scale of a balance.

Mr. Tappan went to New York in 1827–8. January 21st, 1829, he was invited to an Anti-masonic meeting at the house of a friend. He wrote this direct, straightforward reply, which is copied in his own hand writing:

"Dear Sir:—My engagements are such that I cannot conveniently attend the meeting to which you have invited me; but I am free to say that I henceforth renounce Freemasonry, considering it a useless and profane institution.

Yours respectfully and truly,
LEWIS TAPPAN,
A late 'Free and Accepted Master Mason.'"

In an able paper read by his grand-son, Clarence W. Bowen, of the Independent, at an anti-slavery anniversary in Broadway Tabernacle Oct. 20th, 1883, all this is omitted or ignored! The recording angel has not omitted it. Nor would that young man tear this chief laurel from his grandfather's memory, if Masonry was as unpopular now as slavery is. Mr. Tappan's "leaving the lodge" in Boston, when a mere youth in the universal silence of press and pulpit, while its dark power terrorized the country as popery did before Luther burned the Pope's bull and was not burned himself; and that too, in the face of gray-bearded men who were then turning Christ out of their churches to please the lodge, as he was already excluded from their lodges; all this shows that Mr. Tappan's was one of those minds which are now and then sent to lead men from Egyptian errors and flesh-pots, toward the Canaan and truth of God. The New York city anti-slavery society, with Garrison's errors shaken off; the Liberty party of 1840; the temporal salvation of the Mendi Africans; the Free Soil party of 1848; the removal of the Philanthopist from Cincinnati to become the National Era in Washington; the American Missionary Association; the Republican party of 1856, and the fall of slavery in 1863,—all these mighty and stupendous events were in embryo, turning on that young man's faith in God, moral courage and grasp of intelligence.

"'Twas by the faith of joys to come,
He walked through deserts dark as night
Till he arrived at heaven, his home,
Faith was his guide, and faith his light."

All reforms make progress by fighting every step in advance, inch by inch; and often against the resistance of the very men who start them. The Reformation was nearly blocked by the opposition of Luther's perpetual "Hoc est meum corpus," (This is my body). And there are Lutherans now who stop short of where Luther himself advanced to. So fared it with Mr. Tappan, but only for a little time. A convention was called to form a Liberty party to meet in Albany, April 1, 1840, one hundred and twenty-one members enrolled their names, but Mr. Tappan's name is not among them, nor the great and good Dr. Beman's; and Garrison fought the young party with his terrific power of language.

Mr. Tappan had seen in Anti-masonry that a political party could not and did not cure a religious evil. His opposition to slavery was religious opposition, and he dreaded to put Abolitionism into the hands of politicians. But he was not long in seeing that civil government, though, like the church, an ordinance of God, yet included and must not disfranchise the children of this world. And when he saw that he was obeying God in praying for politics as much as in praying for a revival, he embarked in the Liberty-Free-Soil-Republican movement, as was his wont, soul, body and goods.

He raised money, hired lawyers, and by the volunteer superintendence of John Quincy Adams he saved the Mendi Africans from the clutch of Van Buren, and started the Mendi Mission. He raised $5,000 and sent Dr. Bailey to Washington to publish the National Era. He was for years treasurer of the American Missionary Association, which, though its spikes are some of them drawn out of it by the loadstone mountain of Masonic money, yet holds on its way like a stately ship freighted with the salvation of those Americans who are ostracised because their complexion resembles that of the great majority of our race! Mr. Tappan bore that Association in his arms when it was young and weak. May God forbid it should cast off the principles, anti-slavery and Anti-masonic, which made him do it, now that it has become strong.

But this sketch must close though we have drawn but a rude imperfect outline of his great and many-sided character. His grand-son (cited above), speaks of his "reckless courage." Would to God some of that courage had descended to his posterity. One is reminded of Lincoln, who, when one told him that Grant drank whisky at Vicksburg, replied, "Do get some of the same whisky and give to my other officers." Mr. Tappan's courage was anything on earth but "reckless." Fifty thousand dollars were offered for his head, and twelve hundred millions of dollars were invested in the slave-system which he assailed. Yet he wore his head till like Moses he laid it down, when summoned by his God.

As his courage would have inspired armies, so his eloquence would have adorned Congress. In the hottest of the discussion he visited his childhood home in Northampton, and gave notice that he would speak in the town hall; where we soon hope to hear his sentiments explained and enforced. The old hall was crowded with the elite of that charmingly intellectual town. Dr. William Allen, ex-President of Bowdoin College, was there to withstand and reply to him. Overwhelmed by the facts poured out by Mr. Tappan, President Allen, who was of the aristocracy of the place, arose, and staggering up to the case, could do nothing but "doubt the gentleman's authority for his facts!"

Quick as sunbeams, and as pleasant, Mr. Tappan retorted, "Art thou a ruler in Israel and knowest not these things?" He then took up a pile of documents and confirmed every statement he had made to the utter overwhelming of his opposers.

Old patriarchs in Northampton still live, who witnessed that drama, and one of them, the good and venerable Dea. Stoddard, as his last words to the writer, a few months since, said, "Don't forget Mr. Tappan's resplendent and triumphant reply to President Allen, which turned our whole town into Abolitionists."

We hope next April to meet those patriarchs in that same hall, when, if the spirits of the holy dead, as did Moses and Elias, still take an interest in their toils and triumphs here, Mr. Tappan may, perhaps, be permitted from his skyey abode to look down on us with joy, that his life and testimony have not been in vain.

APPEAL TO THE AMERICAN FARMERS.

BY A. THOMSON.

In every movement for the common weal the farmers have an interest like all classes, but in the great movement against monopolies their interest is vital.

In the movement for a fair, free ballot, North and South, and for civil service reform they have no more interest than the merchant, doctor, or artizan; but in all movements against the prostitution of our patent laws, creating gigantic corporations which control the material he must have to build his fences and work his farm, the farmer is more vitally interested than they. While the question as to whether the railroad corporations shall be permitted to adjust their rates with a view to declare heavy dividends on watered stock is to the farmers of the great West simply one of success or failure.

It is but just to the farmers of the United States to admit that they fully understand all this, and the whole body of agriculturists from Maine to California have clamored for government redress, and shaken their sturdy fists in impotent rage at the group of millionaires who have in half a life-time rolled up fabulous fortunes at their expense. Why have they thus far been unsuccessful? There are many reasons.

First, these corporations have already become so great and wealthy as to practically control both political parties.

Second, their position of isolation and want of true and wise leaders have rendered them unable to cope with their perfectly organized and craftily directed enemies.

And last, but by no means least, when the tidal wave of popular discontent was at its flood, the lodge power, that mightiest monopoly, in the form of the cunningly devised grange, switched them from the even line of their duty, from open organization and agitation where all their hope lay, and set them to learning pass-words and taking degrees. Vast sums of the farmers' hard earnings were swept into the pockets of the lodge builders, an agitation, hopeful to the country and dangerous to monopolies and corrupt politicans, almost stifled and nothing gained but ribbons and regalia.

There is, now, however, a party that the farmers of America can safely trust; a party organized by true men to redeem the country from the power of immense and unscrupulous corporations, the unclean hands of the invisible empire that paralyze the will of justice, dull the edge of industry, and carry out against press and pulpit as though a system of intimidation as ever was organized by White Leaguers or Southern Ku-Klux; a party that recognizes the fact that we are a Christian government and all that this implies; and is pledged to a war of extermination against the nations great enemy, intemperance.

Congress has passed no great bill for the benefit of the agricultural classes since the homestead act. Since that time it has given away to corporations of its own creation immense tracts of the public domain, without limitation as to the terms of its disposal by them, and while the poor farmer on the far frontiers must pay his taxes to the last penny, even if he lacks sufficient fuel or clothing, the government, to accommodate the whisky dealers, postpones the collection of taxes due on their bonded liquors, because to compel them to sell on a glutted market would endanger their financial standing.

The platform of the American party is composed chiefly of three great planks:

ANTI-MONOPOLY.
ANTI-LODGE.
ANTI-ALCOHOL.

On this platform the farmers of America must stand would they be emancipated from the power of their enemies. Let there be a grand rally, and such a delegation sent to Washington as shall give the effete politicians of that city the first blast of the coming popular judgment.

WITH ONE CONSENT AN EXCUSE.

BY REV. J. D. GEHRING.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—"An occasional letter" to the Cynosure? Yes, of course. Nothing would afford me more satisfaction than to be able in that way to help in your ground work. But writing for the Cynosure implies publicity as an enemy of secretism, and Masonry in particular. I am satisfied in my own mind that there are hundreds of men in the land who have cut loose from the lodge, but who are persistently silent as to the reasons. They are afraid to speak, even when urged by persons and circumstances, and when their "witnessing" for the truth is a manifest duty. Hear them in self-defence.

"I don't believe in stirring up a muss when I can help it, and I want to live in peace and harmony with my neighbors."

"I am a member of the church; many of my brethren, including our pastor, are Masons and Odd-fellows, and it would be contrary to the law of Christian charity to offend them in this thing."

"I am engaged in business and own property in the place; many of my best customers are Masons, Odd-fellows, or something else; if I speak out my mind I shall lose their good will and their patronage, and I shall be obliged to sell out and leave."

That these excuses are true and real, need not be proven. But what a testimony against the whole system of secretism this fact is! Just look at it a moment. A minister of the Gospel is afraid to speak and testify against the lodge because, by doing so, he will destroy his influence and lose his place as pastor of his church! The business man dares not utter his sentiments on the subject, because by so doing he will bring upon himself financial ruin and social ostracism! A lawyer dare not exclude himself from the lodge, because by so doing he virtually "de-bars" himself, so far as pecuniary success is concerned; Masons would never employ him, and Masonic juries would surely beat him every time!

These things are generally denied by lodge-men with a lofty sneer; but a fact cannot be sneered down. The Masonic obligation, taken as a whole from the "E. A." to the "thirty-third degree," is standing proof that all this, and much more, is true. The sad and humiliating fact is also standing proof, that so many otherwise good, conscientious men, Christian men, when called upon to openly stand on the side of the "National Christian Association," will cautiously whisper in your ear: "I'm afraid!" Yes, sir! many of them are so completely enslaved, sold, that they dare not speak, even those two words, above their breath.

Parkville, Mo.

SHORT SERMON.

TEXT:—The offence of the cross.

MY BRETHREN:—Some men will bear about in their bodies the mark of an old patriarchal institution, which is of no possible value, while they would spurn from them the sign of the cross as the greatest possible offence that could be given them; for they regard Jesus who was crucified upon the cross as an odious malefactor, and a blasphemer. If you ask them what he blasphemed against, or against what law he was a malefactor; why, it was against the law of the Jews, or in other words against the laws of a certain ring called Pharisees, and not against the laws of God. The crucified Jesus opposed the "ancient and honorable" institution of the Pharisees; and therefore he was a blasphemer, and the very sight of his cross is offensive to them! They cannot bear the very mention of it; though it is cherished and borne with submissive pleasure by the best men of the world.

There is still another set of men who cannot bear even a sight of the cross. The cross is a very great offence to them. They will admire and worship the man who split the moon in two; they dote on his sword; they will pay half or three-fourths of their earnings to his descendants by way of taxes; there is no amount of disgrace that they will not stand in his name; they will even lie down in a row and be ridden over by a Pasha mounted on a rough-shod horse; but the idea of bearing the cross would give them a shudder of contempt.

And there is still another class of men who cannot bear the disgrace of the cross. They never mention it in their pious meetings or in their prayers. They are so much ashamed of the cross, although pretending to respect it, that they will not even whisper of it to the Jew or Mohammedan. Though when with Christians they make a show of honoring Christ, yet they ignore his name when meeting for lodge worship with infidels, rumsellers, and such like. There is no amount of imposition and disgrace that they will not submit to in the name of the lodge. They will sell their freedom, their independence, and their manhood to it, binding the bargain with a horrid oath not fit for a savage; they will meanly and treacherously bear about on their persons the squares and compasses and other marks of the lodge; they will strip half naked before it; be blindfolded, haltered and disgraced in a great variety of ways by it, and yet will glory in it, making the real ignominy and disgrace of the lodge of greater worth than the offence of the cross.

My friends, this last class of men are worse than all others, inasmuch as they put the real infamy of the lodge above the glory of the cross. The lodge degrades humanity, while the cross elevates and ennobles it.

Believe me, my friends, there is no greater moral monstrosity than the modern "ring." In slimy, soulless slipperiness it surpasses the snake. And of all rings the Masonic ring is the worst. It is the model, the encouragement and the parent of all others. The divinity that men award to it is more deceptive and more senseless than that which was bestowed upon Bel the Dragon three thousand years ago. It is simply foolish to think that the Masonic ring can be held up to young men as worthy of their respect, and to think at the same time that we may escape national demoralization, failure, and disgrace. God cannot possibly be mocked by such a trick as that.

My friends there is a huge snake in Africa twenty feet long. When it has swallowed a goat which heathen superstition has given it as a religious offering, a column of ants often seize upon it and bite it in such a way as to make it squirm, and writhe, and die from troubled indigestion. So let us Anti-masons seize upon, sting and bite this Masonic snake with our votes and speeches, and sermons, until, gorged as it is with office, and honors, and spoils given by an infatuated people, the monster shall die and stink amidst its worshipers. So MOTE IT BE.

THE MURDER IN JACKSON COUNTY, MICH.

We have been holding our peace concerning the particulars of the Crouch murder in this county which occurred some nine weeks since. Four persons murdered in cold blood, while slumbering quietly in their beds! All sorts of rumors have been afloat, as is generally the case. Cold-blooded as was the awful deed and terrible to contemplate, only about eight weeks pass, before the papers state to their readers that the perpetrators will probably never be found, which is probably a comforting statement to the criminals (who have doubtless read it ere this), and is moreover encouraging to those who are laying the plan to commit another like deed in this State, perhaps in this county. But why does this matter rest so soon? And wherefore the mysterious keeping back of certain things in connection with testimony? Why does a disinterested party come in voluntarily with a testimony about the purchase of a pistol, which only tends to confuse a jury and lead their minds astray? Why are the negro boy, Bolles, and Julia Reese treated like hogs in our county jail, and every possible effort made to wrest from either, or both of them a confession of the crime? Why is a pious fraud in the guise of a woman allowed to enter Julia's cell at night and when in her effort to get Julia to tell God of her crimes in prayer, she fails, why does this tool of some dark power endeavor to persuade her to put on her wraps and try to escape? Handing Julia a revolver, she instructs her to fire at any officer who tries to stop her, and all the while one of our county officers is waiting her appearance in the corridor. This is Julia's story as told to her friends. Why, when Julia undertakes to make a statement of this in her testimony on the witness stand, does the prosecuting attorney so quickly silence her, and why is she so quickly hurried out of the room? The public want to know, and they have a right to. Why does Mrs. Holcomb kill herself, and why in the examination of her dead body was there no other physician than Dr. Williams present? Why did not Dr. Williams examine that liquid in her stomach? Why was Mr. Holcomb and the jury so willing to let the matter pass with Dr. Williams' word merely that Mrs. Holcomb died of heart disease?

There is a mystery about this murder and others, not merely as to who committed the crime, but why certain things are managed as they are in connection with a professed effort to find out the criminals. But then, of course, it would never do to say, secret societies had any influence whatever in the matter. Tell it not in Parma, publish it not in the streets of Jackson, that the grand institution which makes every one of its members swear in the seventh degree, that they will protect each other right or wrong, murder and treason not excepted, never mention the opinion that this great order has anything to do with shielding criminals. It would never do, because it has so many good men in it. It is in nearly everybody's mouth that there is, and has been a suspicious mysteriousness connected, not only with the awful deed itself, but with all circumstances connected with it (so far as ascertained), and with testimony leading thereto.

It is rumored that some witnesses stated that they did not tell all they knew about the matter, because they were not called upon for it. Others report that they could give some light, but have never been called upon.

The public have freely expressed their suspicions, but between the criminals and justice there seems to be curtained windows and bolted doors.

Is such the case? Let us be free to investigate on this line and acknowledge the truth, when facts point that way. We charge Freemasonry with the committal of this deed, or at least assisting in the crime, and with shielding the real criminals, and making an effort to criminate those who are both helpless and innocent. Now if this institution is in no way connected with this bloody affair we are ready to hear the proof of its innocence. Till then the charge remains. H. A. DAY.

THE SKEPTIC'S ANSWER.

We should meet the skepticism of the age by holy living. We must not only preach but live the truth. Phillips Brooks says: "Popular skepticism being what it is, the main method of meeting it must be, not an argument, but a man." His character may give weight to his words, or it may undo their effect altogether. Is it not a compliment to Christianity, that public sentiment holds its teachers to such strict account and makes their character their capital and the prime condition of their success? Should we not stimulate ourselves to meet this expectation? Nay, let the whole church, in her ministry, eldership and membership, show the power of the Gospel over their lives in making them more upright, more loving, more self-denying, more noble than others, and who would be able to gainsay its claim? Simply by well-doing, by right living, we can put to silence the cavils of the enemy. In this way the humblest child of God may frame an argument more powerful than that of the keenest advocate. The prayers and pious life of a godly mother have kept many a son from straying upon whom strong reasons might have been urged in vain. A ready answer to every skeptical thought was found in the fragrant remembrance of her life.

The one thing which criticism attacks in vain is the immaculate life of Jesus. The scoffing, scurrilous infidelity of the Ingersoll type belongs to an age long since past. Ronsseau, in a famous passage scarcely in keeping with much else that he wrote, said: "If the life and death of Socrates are those of a sage, the life and death of Jesus are those of a God." John Stuart Mills asks: "Who among the disciples of Jesus or among their proselytes was capable of inventing the sayings ascribed to Jesus, or of imagining the life and character revealed in the gospels?" The skepticism of the age acknowledges the unique character of Jesus, his pure morality, his sublime patience, his noble heroism. It says in undertone: "I find no fault in him," while yet he opposes Christianity, of which he is the founder. If Christ's followers would come up in any good measure to the standard he has set, if the same candor, purity and love, and same meekness and tenderness, the same lofty aspirations, the same self-sacrifice and forbearance were ours that appeared in his life, criticism would be arrested again. Looking at the fruits of piety, they would acknowledge their beauty and perhaps confess, "This must be the work of God!" But, alas for human frailty! how far God's people come short of their perfect model! Who can tell the injurious results of the worldliness, the enmities. the unscrupulousness of some who bear Christ's name? Possibly we have made infidels sometimes by our unloving controversy. O that we all as the disciples of Christ had more of his spirit! O that the church in general would put on her beautiful garments, that the carping of the infidel might be compelled to cease, and the people might be attracted to her and her glorious Husband and Head! Fellow Christian, you and I will do our very best to resist the skepticism in our several communities by living out our religion, by circumspect, holy, Christ-like lives.

We might speak of the value of apologetic lectures by qualified men, of thorough indoctrination of the youth, of more unity and fraternity among Christians, and such like. But why more? Let us conclude by saying that the great need of the time in order to the complete victory of the truth is a thorough and wide-spread revival of religion. Dr. Cairns, after discussing the unbelief of the eighteenth century at length, says: "It was not anything human, but the return of Christianity as a living power from God that wrought deliverance." He says again in the conclusion of his discussion: "Christianity has not been saved to us in Britain mainly by the arguments of Butler and Sherlock, but by the slow yet sure revival that began to spread over the whole English-speaking world. Nor was Germany rescued from rationalism in so far as it has been, merely by professors and theologians meeting negative criticism, but by the return of visible Christianity, and by the calling forth of prayer, which has power with God." So also will it be in our age. The answer to the skeptic will come more from God than from man. Let prayer again take a hold on God until he make bare his arm for our deliverance. Let us with one accord besiege God's throne and ask for the down-pouring of the Spirit "Revive thy work, O Lord; in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy." "O that thou wouldst rend the heavens, that thou wouldst come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence."—R. G. Ferguson in the Evangelical Repository.

THE MORMON QUESTION.

The error into which a great many of the good people of this country have fallen on the subject is, I think, in their expecting the extripation of polygamous marriage, as if by a miracle, as the consequence of any legislation or other thing which law-makers can devise. It seems to me to be one of those evils that are to be overcome by processes apparently slow and by means that will gather into the opposition to it all that portion of the Mormon people—and it is considerable—who do not believe in the plural marriage business. I have good reason to believe that since the passage of the last act, polygamous marriages have almost entirely if not entirely ceased there, and that, with firm and capable administration of the law, they will not be revived. The difficulty with the proposition to put the government of the Territory into the hands of a commission is:

First, That I believe it is to be entirely unconstitutional, if the commission is to be given any law making power; and I fear,

Second, Quite impracticable unless a local law making power shall be lodged somewhere.

Third, It is revolutionary, and deprives the innocent as well as the guilty of all voice in public affairs. Nothing but the direst need could justify such a step.

Fourth, It is quite clear to my mind that the suppression of polygamy will be just as far off with the government of the Territory in the hands of a commission as it is now, if not further; for it will solidify and intensify a class feeling of the Mormons, and tend to draw to the support of the hierarchy and polygamists the whole body of the Mormon people.

The bill that I have introduced is supplementary to the act already passed, and it was stated when we reported the other act that we expected to supplement it by further provisions. These provisions are directed to enforcing publicity to every species of marriage ceremony, legal and illegal, to the facilitation of the administration of justice by the summary production of books, papers, records, witnesses, etc., and to aiding the people of the Territory to get its political power out of the hands of the hierarchy by suspending woman suffrage there. Woman suffrage is one of the strongest props that the polygamous Mormons have for controlling elections. It was a measure designed for that purpose, although it was approved by the Gentile governor. On the whole, I have the best reason for believing that if we go calmly and steadily forward, preserving our self-possession, we shall eradicate the evil of polygamy in that Territory.—Senator Edmunds, in the Independent.

TWO GREAT EVILS.

The two worst evils of our time, inside the domain of Christendom, are probably luxurious living among church members, and loose thinking among religious teachers. And when the two go together we have a religious club instead of a church; a club, in which, of course, it would be uncourteous to suppose there are any sinners, a club that has forgotten that all men are brethren, and that the business of the church is to stand between the living and the dead. When we have a number of such churches connected by close social ties, and perhaps giving direction to great central currents in the religious life of a city, the time then has come to waken all the powers of the pulpit and press and the platform, against the choking of God's most holy truth by purse-strings and ribbons, and by dashes of the lavender waters of liberalism. I am speaking very frankly; but the truth is that the case needs stern surgery. Our population is a fifth in large cities; and under the voluntary system in the United States, it is likely to be our prevailing trouble that, when Judas carries the bag and betrays his Lord, he will not always have the grace to go and hang himself, and you will not have the grace to hang him.—Joseph Cook.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

JANUARY 25, 1884.

Oberlin has peculiarities, conspicuous and gratifying to every lover of cleanliness and temperance who visits the place. The absence of saloon and tobacco signs is very noticeable and gratifying to the man accustomed to travel with open eyes. The absence of "red noses," blood-shot eyes, so conspicuous at hotels and on the streets in many towns, along with a destitution of profanity, obscenity and rags, suggests the "coming of the kingdom." This is especially true when taken in connection with such a troop of intelligent young people as are seen pouring out of the college chapel at close of general exercises.

Last evening was regular prayer meeting in all the churches, and as I passed to the depot along the principal commercial street, the business houses were closed, with a single exception, according to general arrangement. The genial proprietor of this exceptional establishment told me he was both a Freemason and a Democrat. These he doubtless deemed sufficient. Bourbon, pluck and inspiration for "the life that now is," and Masonic salvation for "that which is to come," what need has he for prayer. Of course he would leave such matters as innocent pass-time for unwashed Republicans, prohibitionists and common sinners who had not been raised from the grave of pollution to a life of purity on the "five points of Masonic fellowship." This "scion" of Democracy and Baalism had his own opinion of the college and its faculty, as might be expected; but as they were not complimentary if correct, and quite damaging to the man himself if erroneous, I "skip" that part of the record.

It is not meet to attach too much importance to picked-up statements, but somebody has said, "Straws show which way the wind blows," and it will not be a breech of good manners to say that, while waiting in the depot for a late train last evening, I chatted with a gentleman who knew many things about Douglass, Bruce, Cook, and other prominent colored men in Washington, that were quite interesting to me. He is not altogether a stranger in Oberlin, or ignorant of the present condition and needs of his brethren who have pitched "their tents in this Mecca" of the fugitive from the auction-block wheu the "angel of the covenant" and Pres. Finney interposed the shield of protection and said to the blood-hound, followed by fiercer beasts in the heated chase, "Thus far but" beyond there is peril.

This brother said "The Sons of Light and Truth," the Odd-fellows and some other of the secret fraternities have made serious inroads among his people in Oberlin, to the very great detriment of their finances, the church, and the unity and domestic comfort of their homes. I spoke of seeing some of the finest business buildings in Oberlin defaced with Masonic and Odd-fellow emblems, and asked if the colored and white brethren met in lodge together. He replied, "Oh, no, they don't meet even in the same room on different eveniugs." So it seems the color line is maintained in some of the "benevolent institutions," professing to teach "piety, morality and science," in Oberlin.

It occurred to me that if some of the pastors could spare an hour or an evening occasionally from their many duties to get these people together and instruct them more perfectly and warn them of the evils into which they are being drawn, it might be a work which the Master would approve. It's an old saying that "Shoemaker's children go barefoot," which is another way of saying those who ought to be our first care are sometimes neglected. If Pres. Finney was capable of judging and expressing his convictions so as to be intel ligible to common minds, Freemasonry is as cruel a system of bondage to the souls as slavery was to the bodies of men. If so there is a work of emancipation within reach of Mr. Finney's successors as much higher as the soul is more valuable than the body, and as much nearer to the churches and college of Oberlin as the homes of its colored population are nearer than were the slave pens and "nigger quarters" of the South in the days of Mr. Finney's prime.

YORK, O.—I intended to say something of the pleasant conference had yesterday with Rev. Brand, Pres. Fairchild and Hon. Prof. Monroe, but the fleetness of the train has brought me to a period and to this house, the home of a wonderful family. Dr. J. A. Bingham is 91 years of age, and Mrs. Bishop now 92½ years on the journey. Both are compassed with infirmities, but able to converse intelligently. Those who have in charge their physical comfort have need of patience, and so far as I can judge are just as faithful and attentive as though they were sworn to kind offices under penalty of having their "throats cut from ear to ear," etc.; and who knows but their ministrations may be quite as acceptable and in the final footing up as profitable to the weary watchers themselves as would be the hired mercenaries of some secret lodge. If a freewill offering for Christ's sake, prompted by the love of a generous and devoted wife, is not more acceptable than the perfunctory services of drafted watchers, then sister Bingham will be discounted by the men of the "three links" and the motley crew who wait in officious civility at the bedside of a "sick brother," or "dance attendance" at his obsequies, crying, "Alas, my brother!" Brother and sister Bishop need no mercenary incentive to smooth their mother's pathway in the few days that remain in this life.

AKRON, O., Jan. 29, 1884.—Leaving Oberlin on the eve of the 23d, I reached York and spent the 24th with Father Bingham. Saturday forenoon I reached Wadsworth, where I spoke in the Disciple church in the morning and in the Congregational church in the afternoon. Last evening I addressed an attentive audience on the evils of secret societies. At seven o'clock this morning I took passage to this city and on my arrival went direct to the office of Ferdinand Schumacher, where I found a plain, honest-appearing German busy with a pile of correspondence. Introducing myself and stating my business, he listened attentively, and gave me the information I desired in very brief but clear sentences. He subscribed for the Christian Cynosure, and assured me of his purpose to attend our Washington Convention.

From Mr. S. I obtained names of persons upon whom he thought it desirable for me to call, and I have been employing my time looking up the clergy of the city and trying to find their whereabouts on reform questions. I feel much gratified with what I have found out, though disappointed in not meeting with some with whom I should have been glad to confer. The train in which I wish to go to Mansfield will soon be due, and I will close this hasty sketch with promise of something more in the near future.

DETROIT, MICH., FEB. 1ST, 1884.—Some weeks have been more eventful than the present in our reform and yet this has not been devoid of interest, beginning with two sermons at Wadsworth, Ohio, and closing up with a long and interesting conference to-day with Bros. Foote and Springstein in this city with the hope of seeing Chicago at 7:30 A. M. to-morrow. Sandwiched in between have been a lecture at Wadsworth, Monday evening; a visit to Ferdinand Schumacher and three of the pastors in Akron on Tuesday; the evening spent with Rev. S. A. George at Mausfield, planning for the Ohio convention in May next; Wednesday with Bros. Auten and Cox at Galion, both of whom dealt liberally with our cause; and Thursday with A. J. Sheridan, Esq., of Toledo, in the joint interests of Father Bingham and the N. C. A. Each of these brethren with the "old guard" at Wadsworth and brother W. P. Clark at Mansfield, and others "met by the way," have put me under lasting obligation for their many acts of kindness, and as I "sketch" the past while waiting for the train I am led to conclude that the life and work of an anti-secrecy advocate is not so bad after all. If he has enemies he has friends as well, and no man will meet a warmer welcome or find purer, truer helpers than the man who conscientiously and faithfully devotes himself to exposing the abominations of the lodge. It's no field for cowards, mercenaries or half-hearted reformers, but the man of grit and grace has nothing to fear and everything desirable to hope for. "Who that is willing to "Deny self and follow Christ" will enlist for the war? J. P. STODDARD.

PREPARATIONS IN KANSAS.

[From the Olathe Free Press.]

The State Executive Committee have blocked out the following programme of work for the present year. The agent is to devote his whole time and energies to the work of the association until the State Conveution in the fall. It is hoped that the way may be prepared for this State Conventiou in the fall by five local conventions held in various parts of the State. We desire to have the best talent we can command and a degree worker at each of these conventious, and it is confidently expected that a great many places awakened by these conventions will call for speakers and the working of the degrees. It will be seen at once that heroic treatment is the programme, but all this costs money. How shall we get this money? We have struck off cards of which the following is a copy:

"Subscription for the Anti-secret Reform, payable to the Kansas Christian Association, for the year 1884. Amount; when payable; name, postoffice, county, State. Subscribers' names will be enrolled as members of the Kansas Christian Association."

They are in the hands of P. S. Feemster, who will furnish them ou demand to any pastor or friend of the reform who will use them in raising funds for this work. We wish to find at once one hundred men in the State of Kansas who will pledge ten dollars each to this cause, and the rest can be easily raised in connection with the work as it progresses. But we wish that one hundred ten dollar shares may be taken as soon as possible. No doubt some will be willing to take more than one share, thus hastening the work. Surely the Lord has money enough in the hands of his stewards to carry on his work if they will only honor his checks. Friends of reform, let us have the means and the work will move on.

P. S. FEEMSTER,
State Agent.

FROM WESTERN NEW YORK.

GAINES, N. Y., Jan. 30, 1884.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I again take my pencil to report the progress of our work in this State.

While I have not been able to accomplish all that I could wish owing to the unsettled weather, yet I have great reason to be encouraged and press forward. Our meetings have generally been well attended, and a disposition manifested to know the truth.

I spoke to good sized audiences last evening and the evening previous. Last evening I felt that the Lord especially helped me to speak the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

Bro. Stacy, a Free Methodist minister of this place, concluded with some very appropriate remarks. Good attention was retained throughout, although the exercises were somewhat long. Bro. Stacy is a speaker of the old stamp and clinches all that he says.

Were I to look alone at the host of secret combinations that curse this beautiful land of ours, I could have but little if any hope that our cause would eventually triumph. But when I remember that we have a Captain that never loses a battle, who is omnipotent, King of kings and Lord of lords, who causes even the wrath of man to praise him and restrains the remainder thereof, I feel like praying, "Thy kingdom come," and marching to victory. Gentlemen have recently said to me in private conversation, "We know that these secret clans are wrong and a curse to any country; but what can we do about it? There are so many evils existing there is no use of our trying to do anything to put them down. It is like butting our heads against a stone wall, the more we butt the less strength we have."

Supposing this to be the fact, will the Lord excuse you for not doing your duty, because forsooth you must suffer for it? Had the children of Israel acted on the same principle do you suppose the walls of Jericho would have ever come down? Did you ever know can't to accomplish anything? Are we not our brother's keepers? Is God a respecter of persons? Will he save the miserable hypocrite who preaches Masoury all the week and then professes to preach the Gospel on the Sabbath, merely because he is a minister? O, no! My Christian friends if you fail to give the Gospel trumpet a certain sound and the people are not warned, their blood will be upon you.

I write this at the home of Mr. Geo. Brown. Mr. Brown is not a professor of religion. He has fine business ability, and sees there is no justice where Masonry rules.

While in Niagara county I conversed with several gentlemen who were living at the time of the Morgan tragedy. They universally confirmed statements already made in the Cynosure. I conversed with an old gentleman in Youngstown (age 85) who stood by Colonel King's couch as he breathed his last. He says there is no doubt but King took poison to avoid giving testimony on the Morgan trial.

Many friends in Niagara county have expressed a desire that the annual county meeting be held at Lockport, immediately after the Washington meeting. It is hoped in this way to secure able speakers. Bro. Miller has the matter in charge. Red Jacket Lodge of that place boasts that it is the banner lodge of the State. W. S. Pound, recently elected W. M. of this lodge, made a speech which was printed in the Niagara Journal. He commences by saying, "My brothers, twelve months ago to-night you placed this gavel in my hand, knowing as you did that the sound of this bit of wood in a master's hand has a power as absolute as a scepter when swayed by the hand of a king."

Lockport is noted for its saloons. This is not to be wondered at when we remember that there is located the banner lodge of the State. with W. S. Pound as Worshipful Master. About 160 saloons are running in full blast, with no license except that granted by the State. Some of the good people of that section are becoming alarmed at this state of things and purpose seeing what can be done in the matter.

I shall speak, D. V., in the Methodist church at Kenyonville this evening. Mr. Brown and myself called on Chester Williams of that place yesterday. He gladly received us, granted the use of the church, and contributed $5.00 for State work. In short, we mean to hold on to the promises and press forward. Every plant that my heavenly Father has not planted shall be rooted up.

W. B. STODDARD.

THE MICHIGAN WORK.

FROM THE AGENT'S REPORT.

Monday, Jan. 7, commenced work again. Leaving Clarksville I was taken to Lowell by Bro. Charles Nash, from whence I took train for Ada where I was met by Bro. Gray who took me to the home of Bro. Inman, with whom I tarried for the night, lecturing to a good audience in the Wesleyan church near by in the evening. Here I sold some books, distributed papers and tracts, took four subscriptions to the American, and sold three shares of stock. Another lecture was announced for the same place on Wednesday evening following, and on the intervening Tuesday evening Bro. Gray announced that I would lecture at the Moffat school-house some three miles distant. Thither at the time appointed I repaired with Bro. Gray, with whom I tarried for the night. We met a small audience to whom I spoke for over an hour, with good attention. The subject was new, and on account of the storm notice of the lectures had not been as thoroughly circulated as it would have been otherwise. So the audience was not prepared for our financial demand. Good was evidently done, however, and I sold one seven degree exposition of Freemasonry and took two subscriptions to the paper. I learned that Bro. Hinman lectured here two years ago. More work on this line will be well received in this locality in future. The church is Free Will Baptist.

Tarrying for the night with Bro. Gray, the following morning I returned to Bro. Inman's, who lives near the Wesleyan church where I was announced to lecture again in the evening. Here I met a good audience who listened carefully to my second lecture, and at the close I sold three more shares of stock, took some subscriptions to the paper and distributed papers and tracts. This place is called Egypt—not a township, but a small space located between some great hills which encompass it on every side. So we have sojourned in Egypt, not to buy corn, for that article is as scarce here this year as elsewhere. Nearly twenty years ago I stayed, when but a lad, in the same house where for one night I tarried with Bro. Gray. There have been some changes, but some things look familiar still. To-day I go to Grand Rapids to lecture to-night and to-morrow night in Wesleyan church. Met a good audience the first evening and lectured on Christian Government. Had good attention throughout and at the close of the lecture found the best market for free tracts and papers than at any other point since starting out. Took also some subscriptions to the paper and sold a few rituals of Grand Army. On the second evening more were present than on the first night, and I found that quite a number of the craftsmen of Freemasonry were present among the rest. On this evening I confined myself more particularly to a talk on the principles and work of this iniquitous system. There has never been a lecture of this kind in this church and we had the closest of attention. None save a few Masons and their women folks found it necessary to shuffle about uneasily for awhile, and then "pack up their baggage and go." At first these Masons tried to laugh and engage others to do the same, but this speedily dwindled to a sickly smile, finally ending in a seeming effort to sink behind the seat, turning white and red by turns until they left the house. I kindly asked them to remain as the best of the lecture was yet to come, but like some of old "they would not," even though Christ did weep over them. At the close of this lecture I sold eight shares of stock, took four subscriptions to the paper and sold some books. Here the Wesleyan church has been struggling for the breath of life for a number of years, yet there has been a tendency on the part of some of the membership and we fear some of the preachers, too, to lightly pass the great question of secret societies. This will never do. Churches which even intimate in their books of discipline that secret societies are wrong will prosper much better to "Reprove, rebuke and exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine," than to consider that because the matter is mentioned in the discipline, this will suffice. In the language of demons in olden times, the secretists say to-day: "Let us alone." And the churches, even those who profess to stand in opposition to the principles and work of these orders, are letting them alone to their own hurt, and to the continued advantage of this great organized system of wrong-doing in our land.

Leaving Grand Rapids on the 12th I arrived in Jackson, remained home over Sabbath and attended meeting at Howe school house in the evening. Having made announcements for a lecture in Tompkins, Jackson county, on the evenings of the 15th and 16th at the Wesleyan church I proceeded thither on Tuesday, where I met a fair audience to whom I tried for an hour to present the subject of Christian Politics. Here I found a strong prejudice in favor of the Republican party, and I had hard work the first evening. On the second evening there were no more present than on the first night. I presented the question of the Effect of Secret Societies in the Government. Years since this community received light upon this important question but have failed to walk in it as closely as should have been the case. A neglect to keep the agitation warm between the truth of God and the lies of Baal and his prophets, has resulted in a spiritual declension which is deplorable. I sold here some books, took some subscriptions to the paper and sold seven shares of stock, receiving also some donation to our treasury. Some loyal friends of the cause yet live in this community. God bless them and awaken others for labor while the day lasts. Some fear to pledge themselves for the future by signing the Association note, and yet it is only by this means we shall succeed in securing a permanent financial basis. From the church in Tompkins I went to the Lincoln school house, where I met a good audience, to whom I have often spoken against secret societies. But all seemed willing to hear again, except some members of the craft, who acted as if they saw themselves in the plight of a candidate as I explained the process of initiation. Oh! how much need there is of agitation all along the line. Here I sold no stock but received from Bro. J. Wood one dollar for our treasury, and took one subscription for the American. I found an excellent market for tracts and hope for good results. On Sabbath I went to Spring Arbor and preached at the Wesleyan church, and had lectures announced for Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Thither at the appointed time I went, and met a good audience the first evening, and spoke to them on the subject of Christian Politics. All seemed to appreciate the effort save a few of the lodge men, who never relish any reference to secret societies. The next day was a day of storm like many others this month, so that on the second evening there were not as many present as would have been but for the storm. A fair audience was out however, showing that there is an interest in these questions. I spoke for over an hour on the deceptive and falsifying character of Freemasonry, read the eighth chapter of Ezekiel, and sung "God's Truth is Marching On," from Bro. Clark's book. At the close of this lecture I sold some books, took some subscriptions to the paper, and sold six shares of stock, besides receiving some donation to our treasury from some loyal friends of the cause of truth.

The terrible Crouch murder in this county, affords an excellent opportunity to discuss the subject of secretism here. The storms of the month have greatly hindered the work. My gross receipts from all sources, amounts, since last report, to $90.29. I purpose now to spend some time in Jackson county, from which work report will appear in our next.

H. A. DAY.

THE DOUGLASS MARRIAGE.—The interest suddenly aroused in the old and almost forgotten "amalgamation" bugbear by the marriage of Hon. Fred Douglass in Washington, is jocosely lined off in the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle by the pen of our old friend George W. Clark:

"I notice in some of the papers tart criticisms or reflections on Mr. Douglass's recent marriage. Are not these criticisms uncalled for, impertinent and unjust? Has not Mr. Douglass the same right any the rest of us have to marry whomsoever he chooses provided 'he loves, she loves, they love,' no matter what her complexion, the color of her hair, or the color of her eyes? I chose a fair complexioned, blue eyed and rosy cheeked English girl for my wife. Has not Mr. Douglass the same right to choose a fair complexioned, dark eyed, intelligent American woman for his wife? But it is said some colored folks feel bad about it, and think Mr. Douglass ought to have shown his respect for their people by marrying one of 'his own race.' Is this complaint fair or just? Pray, will any one tell us which 'race' Mr. Douglass belongs to? Can the black race monopolize him? He is half white and half black. His progenitor was a white man. Have not the white race, therefore, the first claim, or at any rate an equal show, if so be that 'race' has any thing to do with the question? And is it not fair that Mr. Douglass, if he cannot 'respect,' should or may at least recognize 'our side of the house?' Have not 'white men some rights which black men are bound to respect?'"

CORRESPONDENCE.

KNOWN BY THEIR PRAYERS.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 28, 1884.

A certain Mr. "Plausible," meandering in the labyrinths of Odd-fellowship, was trying his thimble-rigs fishing for a young man. He saw that the young man had a fancy for life insurance, whereupon he promptly seized that as a bait for his Odd-fellow's hook, but the young man did not nibble it.

Mr. Plausible next tried the Masonic "thimble-rig," by relating the following story of the preacher and the highwayman. The preacher fell into the hands of a party of highwaymen, who, about to execute upon the preacher their last argument, "Dead men tell no tales," gave him time to offer his last prayer. But in that prayer one of the highwaymen observed a certain Masonic formula, and thereby recognized in the preacher a brother Mason. The preacher's life was then spared on the condition that he unite with his brother Masons in their specialty. The preacher accepted the condition and walked with them until he found a favorable opportunity to make his escape. And so the preacher lived to extol the beauties of Masonry from the pulpit. So says Mr. "Plausible," at the tea-table fishing for a young man to join a secret society.

I have read of the "wiles of the devil," and the above affords an example of the manner in which those wiles may be executed.

When that Freemason, President Finney, was converted to God, God filled his soul with abhorrence of Freemasonry; and Mr. Finney tells us in his book, entitled, "The Character and Claims of Freemasonry," that if he knew that he could save his life a thousand times to-morrow by joining the Masons he would not do it, because he knew that he would lose his soul if he did. And he did not hesitate to tell all he knew about Masonry. He loved God and his fellow men too well to keep that dark hellboru secret hatched in Masonic lodges. Yours truly,

WILLIAM FENTON.

SCHOOL OF FALSEHOOD.

PONTIAC, Mich.

In my last I showed how "moral" men were forced to lie for the lodge. I will now show that a "Christian Mason" is brought down to the same "level."

About eight years ago I exposed Masonry in Rochester, ten miles east of Pontiac. In the midst of my second address, A. H., a Master Mason, went out of the house in a great rage and slammed the door violently after him; then opening the door again, he shook his fist at me and shouted, "You are a perjured villain."

A few weeks ago I spent a little time in Rochester, waiting for a Detroit train. I stepped into the store kept by this Mr. H. Taking me to be a preacher he began to question me. He is a Congregationalist. He was looking for a new minister, the former one having resigned. I told him the churches in Rochester were ruined, being controlled by the world and the lodge. This stirred him up and he plead for the lodges. He insisted that Masons were not required to do anything wrong.

Why then were they sworn under death penalties, I asked, having the throat cut across, etc. He said that men lied about the Masons, for they had no death penalties in the lodge. He had been a Master Mason many years, though he had not been in a lodge for eight years. (the time I lectured there you see!) I asked him if they did not use the words, "having my throat cut across," in the first degree. He said he knew they did not.

A man was then coming into the store and Mr. H. said, "There comes the master of this lodge; you can ask him."

I told the "Worshipful Master" what had passed and asked him if he felt disposed to testify. He tried to divert us to questions purely speculative, but failing, he said it seemed to him that I was one of those men who were trying to destroy Masonry. I asked him if he did not remember me. "O, yes," he said, "and I would not believe a word you say, for you are a perjured man." I asked him if he could believe a brother Mason. His lodge brother stood there and intentionally lied to cover up the devil's work, supposing that I did not know anything about it, and he thought of course the "master" was bad enough to back up the Masonic lie! Why did he think so? Because all Masons are sworn under a death penalty to "always conceal" the secrets confided to them!

I asked the "master" if he did not know that Mr. H. deliberately lied, and he started for the door! I then asked Mr. H. if he did not know that he was lying, and he at once left the store, saying that he must go to his dinner! His daughter and others were in the store, and I asked them what they thought of an institution that compelled church members to stand in company and unblushingly lie for the protection of the thing! They looked amazed. Yet such men are zealous in looking after their church.

If, by the help of grace I can keep some from joining the lodge, I shall feel that my labor is not in vain in the Lord. In the lodge men are thoroughly educated to lie. Their doctrine is, that it is right to do wrong and wrong to do right. O, what a day will that be when all will be uncovered! O, let me have Christ at the cost of all!

A. H. SPRINGSTEIN.

NOTES FROM OHIO.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—It has been some time since my last for your columns, but my zeal in behalf of the triumph of God's cause has been and is unabated.

In a recent trip to visit friends in Ohio there were several points which may be of interest to the readers of the Cynosure, and in fact ought to be to all professing Christians.

At Wittenberg college, Springfield, Ohio, has transpired an occurrence worthy of notice. Out of the two college literary societies has sprung into existence a third, having for its fundamental principles opposition to secrecy. It is to be hoped that the ground work may be laid deep and strong.

At Crestline, having to wait awhile for a train, a very ordinary man was noticed to walk to the ticket office window, and ask the ticket agent whether he was going, that evening, to the lodge. On replying that he could not be there that evening, the former stated that he himself felt hardly capable of conducting the exercises. Shortly after several switchmen coming to the same window, had not a little sport with the agent over a flask, or rather over the contents, which had been so reduced as to be suitable for tantalizing each other, which operation seemed to engage their lofty capacities for several minutes. A few minutes later, with the consent of the janitor (who in answer to an inquiry concerning smoking, said, "It makes no difference; smoke all you want to,") the waiting room became so foul that the writer betook himself to the ladies' room, amply prepared to meet any command to vacate and return to proper place. So much for decency and civilization in this beautiful and prosperous part of our blessed country.

At Lucas, in Richland county, a large village school building is horribly disgraced by having its third story labeled with large gilt letters, "I. O. O. F." I told several that such an outrage ought not to be tolerated twenty-four hours.; and that the fact that such a thing exists, truly portrays the terrible state of ignorance that abounds, notwithstanding the apparent amount of learning indicated by the school building. Yours in Christ,

J. C. SCHOENBERGER.

"EXTREMES MEET."

When one looks at the superabundance of forms of the Roman Catholic church, he would not think an infidel, who wishes everything proven before he will believe, would easily be led to accept this false system of religion. But it is, nevertheless, true. The step between no belief and belief in the many unnecessary things of Romanism is often taken with little difficulty. If the change were caused by the quickening influence of the Holy Spirit we would not object, but it is not.

In these last days we must not be surprised if we were to see the two secret systems, Freemasonry and Jesuitism, embracing each other and marching toward the field of conquest, having Christianity as their foe.

A certain lady came to a city with the intention of lecturing on "The Jesuits, their Teachings and Practices." She desired to obtain a church for this purpose, but if she were to fail in obtaining a church to lecture in, she intended to use a letter of introduction to one of the officers of the Masonic lodge. Thinking it wise at one time to use the letter in question, she told the worthy Mason she was in great distress on account of the evil influence of the Roman Catholics, who had induced her daughter to leave her and enter the convent for life, after she had spent five thousand dollars for the daughter's education; and that her daughter, together with a classmate, had stolen all the property they could get of her and left the outside world for the Roman Catholic heaven—the convent.

The worthy Mason said, "Madam, what business have you going about lecturing against the Roman Catholics? There are as good people in the Roman Catholic church as there are in any church."

The lady said, "I know there are good people in the Roman Catholic church, but I believe there are many in that church who are deceived. I myself was a member of that church, and did not mistrust their teachings until I saw the letters of a certain priest to my daughter after she had left me to become a nun. And I do not do this simply because it seems right in my own judgment, but I have advised with ministers and they have urged me to do exactly what I have undertaken to do."

"Ministers," said the Mason, "they are the last class of men I would ever go to to ask advice. One will tell you one thing and another something else. The Methodist church is always fighting with the Presbyterians, and the Presbyterians with some other church."

The lady answered, "Who then should I go to to ask advice if not to ministers of the Gospel? I have received advice from different denominations, but principally from the Presbyterians, and they have all said the same thing. What church are you a member of?"

"I am a member of Bishop C——'s (Episcopal) church," answered the Mason, who continued to vindicate his position in regard to the rights of the Roman Catholic church; but the lecturer refused to listen, and left him to meditate on what he had said and heard. But, fortunately, the lecturer obtained a church which was the most central in the city, and did not need the hall, which would have been refused if asked for.

Those who heard the lecture of the mother, whose daughter is in the convent of the Sacred Heart at St. Louis, said, "She held her audience to the close." "Her utterance was distinct." "All could hear every word that was spoken." And, "after the lecture several ladies of the audience gave their assurance of sympathy and their well wishes for the future."

An attempt will be made by Mrs. Dr. Green to rescue her daughter from the control of the Roman Catholics at St. Louis, and it is hoped she will be successful. If the daughter is removed the Roman Catholics may say, "There is another monument of Protestant bigotry!" But what would Christ say? Beware of the leaven of the Roman Catholics! PROTESTANT.

BRICKS FROM THE WALL OF MASONRY.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since leaving Gaines, the place from which we last wrote you, we have visited several places from which we have gleaned a few items for the columns of the Cynosure. While at Grand Blanc, Mich., at the house of Dea. T., we learned the following:

An old German lady, an acquaintance of the family, had a son living in Pontiac who was a member of the "Ancient and Honorable Fraternity." This son died at Pontiac and his Masonic brethren gave him a pompous burial, hiring a great number of carriages with their drivers and everything came off with great eclat. The old German lady was delighted and when she returned home she was loud in her praises of the glorious brotherhood. She told the Deacon's wife that if she was a man she would "shine" (join) the Masons the first thing she did. A few days later our friend saw her again and this time her tune was entirely changed. She had learned that the Masons had required her widowed daughter-in-law, who could ill afford it, to pay the expenses of the pompous funeral. Her indignation was so great that she now denounced them as a set of blacklegs.

A few days ago we visited the little town of L—— in Shiawassee county. While there we made the acquaintance of the M. E. minister of the place, of whom the following is related, which took place right there in L——. It appears that one of the merchants of the place had missed money, in small sums, a number of times, and suspected his clerk. He at length determined to speak to him about it. He found his clerk had also missed the money, but supposed the merchant himself had taken it and so said nothing about it. They now determined to watch and see for themselves what became of the money. Accordingly they both concealed themselves in the store, one night, the clerk hiding under the money-drawer and the merchant in some other place near by. Along in the night they heard some one unlock the door and come in. They kept quiet, however, and soon the burglar opened his dark lantern and made for the money-drawer, when the clerk clasped his arms around his legs. The burglar made some resistance and threatened violence, when the merchant stepped from his concealment and the two made him their prisoner, and he was placed in confinement.

Now comes in our Masonic M. E. minister. The burglar was a Mason, and the M. E. minister directly set to work to get his Masonic brother released from confinement.

He drew up a petition and went about among the people of L—— to get their names, praying for the release of the prisoner. He went to the Congregational minister, and as they were warm personal friends he was very persistent that his friend should place his name on his paper. The Congregational minister utterly refused to do so. At length some of his friends discovered that it was seriously operating against him and he was finally prevailed upon to drop the matter.

A lady with whom we met the past week related to us a sad case of delinquency on the part of a member of the fraternity. A man well known to our informant was owing $300 to a man who formerly resided in this vicinity, but who at present lives in the State of N. Y. The latter came back to his old neighborhood and was paid the $300, promising to send back the note. The note came at last, but was presented by another party, who demanded the money on it, and obliged the payment of the note the second time. Both these men were Masons. Hence you see one Mason defrauded his brother out of $300! E. C. A.

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON VII.—February 17, 1884.—The Conversion of the Jailer. Acts 16: 25-40.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved. Ver. 31.

"At midnight Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises." There is nothing strange in their praying at such a time. Many a shipwrecked sailor, whose voice never utters the sacred name before except in blasphemy, cries most earnestly for relief in a time of danger. Many a man who in time of health scoffs at prayer is glad to employ it when sickness comes. But to give thanks in a dungeon, where the atmosphere was full of pestilence, where there was no light, where they might constantly expect an early death—this is surely one of the triumphs of the gospel, a triumph far greater than that of Augustus and Anthony won near Philippi nearly a century before. Nor did they thank God merely that "things were no worse"; they thanked him for the positive joy they experienced in their trials, and that they were counted worthy to suffer for his sake.

"And the prisoners heard them" (or were hearing them). Yes, and there are always some to hear the songs which God gives in the night. It takes night to bring out the stars. A lamp may burn all day and never be noticed; but when neither sun nor stars are to be seen, then its light shines clearly. So do patience and joy in tribulation testify more emphatically to the power of God's grace than any amount of words in prosperity. It is impossible to wait about the sick-bed of him who is supported by the heavenly arm, witnessing his patient endurance and his holy joy, without feeling that Christ has indeed been formed in his heart the hope of glory.

"There was a great earthquake....; the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed." A picture of the results which should be wrought by the gospel just introduced into Europe. What revolutions and convulsions it should work among the nations! How many prison doors of ignorance and despair it should fling wide open! How many bands of superstition, slavery and sin it should undo! The gospel is still the great liberator of mankind. May it make me free from all that hinders my heavenward progress!

"He would have killed himself." Such was the example set by the renowned ones of earth. When Brutus and Cassius had suffered defeat in the plains near Philippi, they tried to save themselves from disgrace by taking their lives, and many of their soldiers followed their example. Cato's suicide was celebrated by the Romans as a heroic act. It remained for the gospel to teach the worth of human lives, and to lift the veil which shows that death is not the end.

"Do thyself no harm." And this has been the cry of the gospel all along. Men are destroying themselves by self-indulgence, by sin in its many forms, and the gospel simply seeks to turn them into the way of safety. Even its severest warnings come in greatest tenderness and love. Is it not a kindness to hold back the sword that would spill the life's blood? Is it not a kindness to warn the traveler of the near precipice? Then it is a kindness to tell a man of his sins and danger and point him to the way of salvation. Then surely it is a kindness to lay a restraining hand on the young man who is entering the drinking saloon or the billiard hall, and say to him, "Do thyself no harm!" Am I true to my God and my brother's soul if I see him going on in sin, neglecting the gospel, and yet do not earnestly, promptly, and yet tenderly warn him of his danger and point him to the safe way?

"He took them the same hour,....washed their stripes,....and was baptized." It is needless to ask whether one can have true saving faith and not be inclined to a better and holier life. We might as well ask whether the lightning that strikes my house will be attended with thunder or not. We might as well ask whether one could hold a lighted candle in a room and it remain dark or not. Grace in the heart will manifest itself in the life. It begets a longing desire to obey God more perfectly, and at the same time opens the springs of compassion toward our fellow men. A few hours ago this man could look on the wounds of the Apostles unmoved. He cared nothing for God's glory nor his law. Now he seeks to relieve the suffering ministers, and to fulfill all God's requirements.

"They feared when they heard that they were Romans." So great were the privileges of Roman citizenship that those who abused them were in danger of severe punishment. But how much higher are the privileges of those whose conversation, citizenship, is in heaven! Will not the King of all the earth avenge those who are abused by their fellow men? Is not this an additional reason why I should heed the exhortation of James: "Speak not evil one of another"?—U. P. Bible Teacher.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

The Lodge a Christless Religion.

1. Suffering in the cause of truth brings joy. V. 25. Many a martyr has passed the night before his execution in sweet slumber and sang praises to God in the flames. On the other hand the most unhappy people in the world are those, who, while they sympathize with truth, are afraid to act up to their convictions. Great questions of right and wrong like the lodge and the liquor questions at the present day are constantly arising, and we must range ourselves on one side or the other—the side of Satan or the side of Christ. To be neutrals in this warfare is impossible. But whatever we may suffer in taking a bold stand for the right we shall have the same sources of joy that Paul and Silas had: (1) The smile of God; (2) fellowship in our Saviour's sufferings; (3) the assurance of final victory.

2. To be saved we must believe in Christ and Christ only. Vs. 29-34. Jesus calls himself the Door and the Way to everlasting life. But Satan's one grand object ever since he tempted Eve in Eden has been to prevent the salvation of our race. So he is all the time opening other doors to salvation which he tells men are just as good. The various secret orders are so many of these false doors. Masonry, the mother of them all, is expressly called by Mackey "a religion." Now there can be but one true religion any more than there can be but one sun in the heavens. So if the Christian religion is true the Masonic religion must be false, and vice versa. The Good Templars' ritual says to the candidate, "Abide with us. Here you are safe." The Odd-fellow is promised that by practicing the charity of his order "he shall come down to the grave in peace with the full assurance of a blessed future." But nothing is said of a Saviour or the need of one. Thus we see that the lodge offers a Christless salvation, a salvation of works which can never atone for sin or purify the soul.

Light from the Word.

Can we be neutral in any great moral or religious question? Matt. 12: 30. What is Satan called in the Bible? 1 Pet. 5: 8; John 8: 44. Is he the inspirer of all false religions? Rev. 12: 9; 20: 3. Is there any safety outside of Christ? John 15: 6. Then what must we think of those secret organizations which promise it? Can the good works inculcated in Odd-fellowship and other secret orders save men? Gal. 2: 16. What must be the end of these false systems of salvation? Rev. 19: 20.

If we love our country with a true, real love, we shall show it by contributing in ourselves to the sum of collective rightcousnes what may be in our power, aided by our God's unbounded and free grace to give.—Rev. Morgan A. Dix.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

—There is some curiosity to know what distinction the pope will make between English and Continental Freemasons, as it is announced that he will make the matter the subject of a proclamation soon.

—The Chinese lodges understand the business of Morganizing. The papers report: "Lu Ling, a Chinese laundryman, was found murdered at his place of business in New York, Monday. There were fourteen stab wounds in his back. It is thought Ling may have been the victim of a secret organization, which is said to exist among the Chinese and which exacts the penalty of death from those who disobey its laws."

"Canada has three Supreme Grand Councils of the Scottish Rite, each claiming legitimacy and exclusive jurisdiction. The Canadian Craftsman represents that prominent brethren are active in each organization. It also intimates that unless something is speedily done to restore peace between the warring factions, the influence of the Rite for good will soon come to an end so far as Canada is concerned."—Freemasons' Repository.

—We have just glimpsed another new secret society entitled, "Empire Order of Mutual Aid." It has the usual number of grandiloquent officials. The main point in this "Aid" is to "aid" a number of high-titled functionaries to live at ease on the money extorted from their dupes. Look out for secret society swindles in general. This "Mutual" swindle has been holding a "Grand Lodge" in Geneva, N. Y., recently.—Wesleyan.

—A little circular dropped into our office from some unknown quarter puts the lodge insurance business in a nutshell thus: "The Knights of Honor now claim a membership of about sixty thousand who are to receive at death the sum of two thousand dollars each. Thus is created a liability of one hundred and twenty million dollars. The sum of twenty dollars per annum is their largest estimated cost to each member. Now thirty-five years would be an unusual average expectancy for insured lives; but for the sake of argument, we will admit an average expectancy of forty years. Sixty thousand members contributing twenty dollars per year for forty years would be eight hundred dollars each, or an aggregate of forty-eight million dollars. Now see what this amounts to: Aggregate liabilities, one hundred and twenty million dollars; aggregate collections from members, forty-eight million dollars; deficiency, seventy-two million dollars."

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Conn., J. L. Barlow of Willimantic.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Kansas, P. S. Feemster, Pearlette.
Missouri, M. N. Butler of Albany.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
Michigan, H. A. Day, Parma.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Vermont, O. C. Bailey.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

S. E. Starry, Clarence, Iowa.
Jas. Furguson, " "
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Promise City, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Baker, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perrry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans
D. A Richards Clarkville Mich.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
FOR 1884.

The national representative of the movement to "WITHSTAND, EXPOSE AND REMOVE" THE SECRET LODGES can now promise for the coming year a more attractive LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS than ever before, embracing some of the ablest writers upon Christian reform topics in over twenty denominations. The Cynosure has been known for fifteen years as one of the most radical and uncompromising defenders of Christianity against the error of false religious systems, especially those now organized and powerful in the SECRET LODGES OF AMERICA.

The Cynosure is a welcome family paper in thousands of homes, having a choice family department, temperance, religious and secular news, farm notes, editorial notes on current events, literary reviews, etc.

The editors, PRES. J. BLANCHARD and HENRY L. KELLOGG, will be most ably assisted by the lecturers and agents of the National Christian Association and its auxiliaries: J. P. STODDARD, General Secretary; E. D. BAILEY, Washington Agent; H. H. HINMAN, PAUL S. FEEMSTER, H. A. DAY, ISAAC BANCROFT, S. L. COOK, M. N. BUTLER, W. B. STODDARD and others; and by the following

Noble List of Contributors,

to which additions are being constantly made:

PROF. J. R. W. SLOANE, D.D.,
Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary.
PROF. J. G. CARSON, D.D.,
Zenia Theological Seminary.
PROF. L. N. STRATTON,
Wheaton Theological Seminary.
PRES. H. H. GEORGE, D.D.,
Geneva College.
REV. JOHN G. FEE,
Berea College.
PRES. C. J. KEPHART,
Avalon College.
REV. A. M. MILLIGAN, D.D.,
Pittsburgh.
REV. W. T. MELOY, D.D.,
Chicago.
REV. GEO. B. CHEEVER, D.D.
REV. C. C. FOOTE.

GEN. J. W. PHELPS,
American Candidate in 1880.
REV. J. C. K. MILLIGAN,
Editor Our Banner.
PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD,
Wheaton College.
GEORGE W. CLARK,
The "Liberty Singer."
EDMOND RONAYNE,
Anti-masonic Author.
REV. HENRY T. CHEEVER,
Worcester.
ELDER J. L. BARLOW,
Willimantic.
REV. WILLIAM WISHART, D.D.
ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.
ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

REV. W. O. TOBEY,
Editor "United Brethren in Christ."
H. L. HASTINGS,
Editor of the "Christian," Boston.
PROF. E. G. PAINE,
Wasioja Seminary.
PROF. O. F. LUMRY,
Wheaton College.
REV. P. B. CHAMBERLAIN,
Walla Walla, W. T
PROF. T. E. KENNEDY,
San Jose, Cal.
REV. ALBERT SIMS.
Uxbridge, Can.
JOHN D. NUTTING,
Oberlin.
REV. C. D. TRUMBULL.

REV. DAVID MCFALL,
Chambers St., Ref. Presbyterian Church, Boston.
REV. B. F. WORRELL,
Editor "Free Press." Olathe, Kans.
REV. WM. MOERDYK,
Dutch Reformed Church, Milwaukee.
PROF. J. A. EDGREN,
Morgan Park Theological Seminary.
ELDER WM. R. ROACH,
Pickering, Canada.
REV. A. J. CHITTENDEN,
College Church, Wheaton.
ELDER A. L. POST,
Montrose, Pa.
C. A. S. TEMPLE,
Reading, Mass.
REV. W. W. AMES,
Menomonie, Wis.
REV. W. T. HOGG,
Buffalo.
REV. WARREN TAYLOR.
REV. WOODRUFF POST.
REV. X. A. WELTON.
THOS. HODGE, ESQ.
REV. E. MATHEWS.
DR. J. G. CLARK.

Our lady writers are as excellent as their numbers are few.

E. E. FLAGG,
Author of "Holden with Cords.
MRS. J. S. COLLINS.
MRS. C. S. KENNEDY.
EDNA SHAW.
MRS. L. E. DEWOLF.
MRS. E. D. BAILEY.
MISS A. J. CAROTHERS.
MRS. M. A. TAPLEY.

FOREIGN.

REV. JOHN BOYES, A.M.,
Grimsby, England.
PROF. CLAUDIO JANNET,
University of Paris.
REV. A. D. ZARAPHONITHES,
Andros, Greece.
REV. WM. HAZENBERG,
Cape Town, S. Africa.

Other correspondents are being secured in Germany, England, Armenia, Japan, India, Australia and Mexico.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other standard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

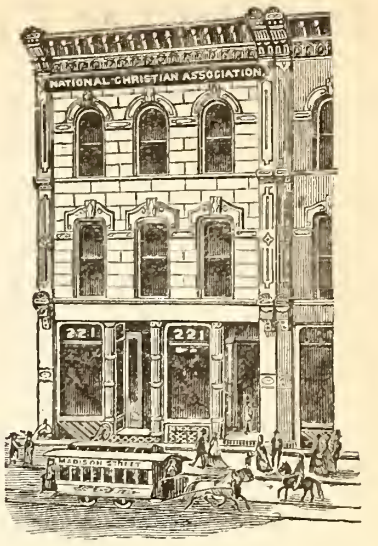
THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.7
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

SPECIAL.—To those who may have had their paper stopped much to their surprise, we wish to say that at this season of the year when there are many subscriptions received for renewal, and there are a number of changes to make on our mail list, there is danger of clerical errors, and if any of our subscribers should not receive the Cynosure as they expect, we would be grateful if they would send us a postal card notifying us that they wish their subscription continued, and we will be pleased to make the correction at once.

ALL REMITTANCES should be made by draft on Chicago, New York or Boston, postal money order, express or registered letter. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. In sending money the amount and what it is for should be distinctly stated. In every instance the name of the writer and his post office address should be given to avoid confusion or mistake.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H oss and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollis ; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; reas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas. C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres., B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas. J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1884.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

LOUD WHISTLING.

The Republican of this city has never deigned to allude to the American party but in a single instance, and not then by its name. It said, in a brief paragraph, that the Greenbackers, Workingmen's party, Anti-monopolists and the Anti-masonic party would probably fuse and vote for Gen. Butler. Whether the suggestion that Anti-masons would vote for a thirty-three degree Mason was the result of ignonance or design in the Republican, does not appear. The old parties and their presses exhibit a nervous honor of the American party as if they feared a conflagration from it; and seek to smother it by their silence, as women throw a blanket over a lamp to keep its flame from spreading through the house when they see the oil in it is in danger of ignition. We give below the Republican's notice of the Prohibition convention in Pittsburg, May 21st next. Counting the open temperance organizations, women and all, a vast majority of the Prohibitionists are anti-secret. We are glad to see the Republican merry; but next November its laughter may turn to sorrow. Here is the Republican's pleasantry:

"The Prohibition-Home-Protection party is in the field with a call for a National Convention to be held at Pittsburg, May 21, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for President and Vice President. Pittsburg, barring its dirt, is a pleasant city, the season selected is propitious, and it is to be hoped the P. H. P. will enjoy its harmless little diversion. In the rush and clamor of a Presidential contest between the great parties its convention and nominations may be remembered twenty-four hours after adjournment, but this is open to doubt."

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

THE SENATE and corridors adjacent were crowded to hear the Mahone debate on the Danville and Copiah county political murders. There was a general disappointment, and the crowds retired exclaiming, "How dull." The Democrats made no reply. Some of the Republicans even read newspapers, some smoked in the ante-rooms, and the Star says the affair was so still-born as to spoil a labored reply which Mahone had prepared. The newspapers all treat it as a Republican attempt to scare the North into support of that party at the next election; and the frequency of whisky murders on election days throughout the South, gives color of plausibility to that theory.

SOME OLD TIME NEW YORK ANTI-MASONS, friends of the new Mrs. Frederick Douglass, persons who have been accustomed to society and wealth in the days of William Goodell, are coming to see us tomorrow, to co-operate in our Convention.

Dr. SCOVILLE, President of Wooster University, Ohio, writes that he will be here and speak. Frederick Douglass has now positively promised. President Seelye of Amherst College, writes in a clear, strong, beautiful letter, that he will come if practicable, and will let us know soon.

SOLIDIFYING THE NORTH.—The Danville and Copiah political murders to be investigated:

"Mr. Shernau's resolution was then taken up, Mr. Sherman addressing the Senate upon it.

"Mr. Sherman led off with a prepared speech in support of the investigatiou, in which he held that it was time for a full and impartial inquiry into the Danville and Copiah outrages. 'Noman,' he exclaimed, 'should be allowed to hold a seat in either House of Congress whose election was obtained by such means. Every one should be equally protected by the law, and neither race nor political creed should act as a reason for the overthrow of the rights of citizenship.

"'The American people had waited with great forbearance for the time when Constitutional rights would be regarded in the South without respect to color, creed or party. The time was ripe for this investigation. The war would have proved a failure if such things as were reported from Danville and Copiah were allowed to go unquestioned.'

"Mr. Mahone supported the resolution in a carefully-prepared and temperate speech. 'It behooves me,' he said at the outset, 'in the name of Virginia to express regret that there should be found in the conduct of any portion of her constituency occasion for such inquiry as that on which the resolution is in part predicated. I protest that the real majority of her people are in no wise responsible for the violent overthrow of the civil law and the unprovoked brutal murder of unarmed citizens painfully conspicuous at Danville.'"

The Critic, from which the above is taken, heads the column "The Ensanguined Banner thrown to the Breeze in the Senate." It is painful that political murders should be able to screen themselves under party tactics.

MORMONISM.—Senator Hoar's exhaustive and earnest anti-polygamy bill, presented Tuesday, seems to be an honest and thorough-going attempt to take out the cancer by the roots. The woman suffragists of this district, at least some of them, object strongly to that clause which forbids all Utah women to vote. As Senator Hoar favors woman suffrage, he will doubtless explain his bill.

A DISTRICT CONVENTION of Prohibitionists will be called by residents of Washington to meet beside our National Convention to elect delegates to the Pittsburg Convention of May 21st. Of course they are not Masons, or they would not meet with us.

WILLIAM WIRT's picture and sketch will be given in the Cynosure in a few weeks and will show the rock on which Morgan Anti-masonry split! which has never yet been seen.

THE WORST FEATURE in our movement is the want of "prayer and fasting" by which alone Christ said evil spirits could be cast out and down. The Women's Crusade begun with earnest, sustained, fervent prayer.

We have visited Mrs. Senator Pomeroy here, and her gentle spirited sister Mrs. Whitin of Massachusetts, well known to missions, to see if these ladies could help us to a lady orator for our convention. They suggested one or two.

The union of the American and Prohibition parties is warmly endorsed by many influential prohibitionists.

We saw on the 28th Mrs. Spafford and Susan B. Anthony. They both say that the imputation of free love doctrines to any member of their Woman Suffrage Association is a gratuitous and wicked libel, that the doctrine of polyandry taught by the woman Woodhull, is regarded by their association with loathing and abhorence.

MARRIAGE OF FREDERICK DOUGLASS.

Mr. Douglass fled from slavery, and by the aid of his Massachusetts friends, sent for and married his first wife, with whom he has lived in amity, who was the mother of his four children, and who died some two or three years since. He has now married a Miss Helen Pitts, twenty-one years younger than himself. She was from Honeoye, N. Y., where her father was an abolition leader, and principal man in a radical church founded by William Goodell, the well-known reformer. Miss Pitts was forty-six years of age, and up to her wedding day worked as clerk in one of the offices here, though her father is said to be wealthy. Both she and Mr. Douglass enjoy characters without reproach. But the element in this marriage which gives it significance, is, that Mr. Douglass is a colored, or semi-colored man, and his wife a good-looking, cultivated white woman. But the press generally, which used to stimulate mob-violence by the cry of "Amalgamation," now acquiesces in this marriage as "an affair belonging to the parties." Perhaps a million and a half colored votes to be cast for President next fall throws a soft shadow of philosophy over this case. But it seems to us to be one of God's milestones in the march of human destiny.

It will be remembered that the young and eloquent Langdon loved and married a white girl in New York, near the girl-home of Mrs. Douglass, and her friends cast her off so that they retreated to Europe to escape that social torment, "Which scarce the firm philosopher can scorn." But this marriage is endorsed and justified here by the Washington press, which echoes public sentiment.

Three hundred and fifty-nine years ago a priest who was an Augustine monk, married a nun. Priests had in a few instances married and were permitted to be pastors, though the second one who did so died in prison for the act; but thousands had lived unmolested in concubinage. So Democrats who turned pale, and gnashed their teeth at the cry of "Amalgamation," voted and shouted for Richard M. Johnson, the mother of whose children, born out of wedlock, was a colored woman.

But for a monk to marry, and to marry a nun, this was to unlock the convents where men and women were imprisoned for life, for religion, as others are for crime! Luther's friend Schurf, the Juris consul, exclaimed, "If that monk marries, he will cause men and devils to shout with laughter, and bring ruin upon all he has hitherto effected." Yet Luther married, the world still stood and "God is marching on."

This marriage of Douglass is asserting in practice that "God has made of one blood all nations of men." This wedding was the funeral of caste; and though people will still ordinarily prefer companions of their own color, no tempests will arise if Desdemona shall love Othello —"for the dangers he has passed,

And he love her, that she does pity them."

This marriage is America's protest and proclamation against the harems and seraglios of the lethargic caste-ridden nations, that Christ's law of marriage (whose complexion was about an average of them all) must wipe out all lines drawn by the fingers of caste, that affection is to be left free under his law; and that he must reign till he has put all enemies under his feet.

MORMONS AND THEIR LODGE.

Samuel D. Greene in the Cynosure of December 20, 1877, tells of his personal acquaintance with Joseph Smith for years before and after the Morgan murder; of his tricks and jugglery, his association with Cochrane, a vagrant and suspicious character like himself; of his familiarity with Freemasonry through the Morgan revelation; and of his thievishly securing Rev. Solomon Spaulding's romance, with the connivance of Rigdon, and turning it into a Mormon Bible. Mr. Greene does not say that Smith was a Freemason; but later when with his deluded followers he sought refuge in Missouri and Nauvoo, Ill., the Mormons were all Masons. In 1852 Lieutenant Gunnison of the U. S. army, issued through the publishing house of Lippincott of Philadelphia, a history of the rise, doctrines and progress of Mormonism. He had gathered the facts for his work from personal observation during a considerable period of intimacy with the Mormons as an officer in the army. In writing of the Mormon priesthood, he says, page 59:

"We are informed they have working signs, and that Masonry was originally of the church and one of its favored institutions to advance the members in their spiritual functions. It had become perverted from its designs, and was restored to its true work by Joseph [Smith] who gave again, by angelic assistance, the keywords of the several degrees that had been lost; and when he entered the lodges of Illinois, he could work right ahead of the most promoted for which, through envy, the Nauvoo lodge was excommunicated, or cut of by the Grand Lodge, on account of its own ignorance of the greatest truths and benefits of Masonry."

This is the Mormon account through Lieut. Gunnison. Next year, 1853, Gunnison, then promoted to the rank of captain, was murdered by the Mormons on the Sevier river with his party of eight engineers.

In confirmation of this statement, L. L. Muun, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Illinois, having examined the records of that body, states that the Nauvoo Lodge was granted a dispensation October 15, 1841; that it was suspended August 11, 1842, after holding relation with the Grand Lodge for eight months. A few weeks later, November 2, 1842, the Mormon lodge of Nauvoo was again authorized to work. This dispensation was also revoked and a charter refused October 3, 1843. The reason for this peculiar management on the part of the Grand Master and the Grand Lodge is given as on account of irregularity and "a disposition to accumulate and gather members without regard to character, etc., etc." The Mormons left Caldwell county, Missouri, in 1838–9, and settled in Hancock county, Illinois, and built Nauvoo, which was nearly or quite all Mormon. Smith was arrested and put in jail in May, 1844. He was killed in June, two months later. In 1845 the State legislature repealed the charter of Nauvoo, and in 1846 the Mormons who had not already emigrated were driven out by the bayonet. In Utah their Masonry developed in the Endowment House oaths and ceremonies and in the Danites. The oaths of the latter were revealed before a Senate investigating committee, and are quoted from Congressional Document, No. 189, in the Millennial Harvester, published by Alexander Campbell, as follows:

There is in the Mormon church, a band called the "Danite Band," composed of the members of that church, and bound together by the following oath:

"Now I do solemnly swear, by the eternal Jehovah, that I will decree to hear and conceal, and never reveal this secret, at the peril of committing perjury, and the pains of death, and my body to be given to be shot at and laid in the dust. Amen."

This band has its signs, and is bound to assist one another, right or wrong—to swear for one another, and in the event of one of them deserting, to kill him privately, wherever they may chance to meet him!

This band executes the orders of the Presidency of the church on dissenters from the Mormon faith, in putting them to death, and casting their bodies into the "hazelbrush to become food for turkey buzzards."

"Sampson Avaird, a witness, produced, sworn, and examined, in behalf of the state, deposeth and saith:

"That about four months since, a band called the Daughters of Zion (since called the Danite Band), was formed of the members of the Mormon church, the original object of which was to drive from the county of Caldwell all those who dissented from the Mormon church; in which they succeeded admirably, and to the satisfaction of all concerned. I consider Joseph Smith, Jun., as the prime mover and organizer of this band. The officers of the band, according to their grades, were brought before him, at a school-house, together with Hiram Smith and Sidney Rigdon; the three composing the first presidency of the whole church. It was stated by Joseph Smith, Jun., that it was necessary this band should be bound together by a covenant, that those who revealed the secrets of the society should be put to death. The covenant taken by all the Danite Band was as follows, to wit:—They declared, holding up their right hand, 'In the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, I do solemnly obligate myself ever to conceal and never to reveal the secret purposes of this society, called the Daughters of Zion. Should I ever do the same, I hold my life as the forfeiture.' Cong. Doc. No. 189, p. 1, 2.

"John Cleminson, a [Mormon] witness, produced, sworn, and examined, for the State, deposeth and saith:

"Some time in June I attended two or three Danite meetings; and it was taught there as a part of the duty of the band, that they should support the presidency in all their designs, right or wrong; that whatever they said was to be obeyed, and whoever opposed the presidency in what they said or desired done, should be expelled from the county, or have their lives taken.

"Dr. Avard further taught as a part of their obligation, that if any one betrayed the secret designs of the society, they should be killed and laid aside, and nothing said about it." Ib. p. 15.

Some of the language used in the Book of Mormon proves that book to have been written, or put into its present shape, since 1827, as it quotes much of the language used about that time concerning Freemasonry; and hence it denounces secret societies, oaths, etc. But by this testimony it is proved that the Mormons have their "secret societies," and we believe they have them in New York, Philadelphia, and most of the places where they have made converts to their delusion.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard, the secretary and agent, returned to Chicago on Saturday morning after a prolonged absence. He preached for the College church, Wheaton, on the Sabbath, pastor Chittenden being sick. He is this week making all possible arrangements for the success of the Washington Convention, especially by way of railway fare reduction.

—Bro. Feemster, the State Agent of Kansas, is also active. His plans are given in another column. He is now arranging for the first of five district conventions to be held in Olathe about March 4th. Others will follow until the State meeting in the fall.

—Word comes in that Rev. John G. Fee of Berea, Kentucky; George W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer;" A. G. Laird, president of the Chicago Association; and E. A. Cook, chairman of the national political committee will attend the National Convention at Washington. Let us have the names of two or three score more before next week.

—If the friends who intend going to Washington through this city will send in their names immediately, arrangements can be made for some reduction in railway fare. The number who can go together from Chicago must be known as nearly as possible before satisfactory negotiations can be made. Therefore, send immediately a card to this office.

—Mr. A. G. Laird, the president of the Chicago Association, is arranging for a series of monthly meetings to be held in different parts of this city, and addressed by such speakers as Dr. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian church, Rev. Joseph Travis, of the Free Methodist, Prof. L. N. Stratton of Wheaton, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard.

—Friends in eastern Kansas are preparing for some good work this month. The Johnson County Association holds a meeting soon in the Wesleyan church at Olathe. The time, according to the Olathe Free Press, is "Tuesday, Feb. 8th," but as Tuesday does not fall on the 8th of February for two or three years, the printer must be at fault.

—Wendell Phillips, justly renowned as one of America's greatest orators, died after a brief but painful illness in Boston, on Saturday evening. In 1839, when twenty-eight years old, he gave up a promising law business and devoted himself to the anti-slavery reform. He was also an ardent advocate of temperance, woman suffrage, and labor reform, and his protest against the lodge was no less emphatic and hearty. The increasing weakness and infirmity of age only prevented his engaging in this reform with all the matchless eloquence with which he was gifted.

ADDRESS BY DR. MELOY.

By arrangement with the Chicago Christian Association, Rev. W. T. Meloy, D. D., of the United Presbyterian church, will give a public address in Carpenter Hall, 221 West Madison Street, Tuesday evening, February 12th; subject, "Rash Promises." All friends of the Association in the city are urged to be present.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible]intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

NOTE.—In March, 1883, Pres. J. Blanchard resigned the nomination above, subject to the action of the next National Convention of the American party.

THE NATIONAL POLITICAL COMMITTEE.

The National Central Committee of the American party is hereby called to meet at No. 215 4½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C., Feb. 20, 1884, in connection with the "American and Prohibition Convention" called to meet at that time. The attendance of every member of the committee is most earnestly desired and asked. As the convention of the National Christian Association immediately follows these political meetings, a time of great interest is promised. EZRA A. COOK,

Chairman National Central Committee.

AMERICAN AND PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

A convention of the American and Prohibition parties has been called to meet in Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C., Feb. 20–22, 1884, commencing at 7:30 P. M. of the 20, and continuing through the next two days and evenings. This convention has been called after consultation with leading members of both parties, in the interest of two important reforms, with the purpose of taking steps to fuse these two young and growing reform parties. It is a very important meeting and all friends of reform should make an effort to be present. Entertainment will be provided at the lowest rates and ample provision made both for economy and comfort. Leading members of both these parties have engaged to be present. For further information write to the undersigned at No. 215 4½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C. E. D. BAILEY.

CONSTITUTION FOR AMERICAN CLUBS.

[The following form of Constitution and By-laws for American clubs is suggested by M. N. Butler, Missouri State agent.]

Art. I. The name of this organization shall be "The —— American Club, Number ——."

Art. II. The object of this organization shall be the dissemination of truth and light concerning the American party, as enunciated in its political platform of principles, by lectures, discussions, circulating printed platforms, tracts and books; through newspaper correspondence, and by all lawful efforts, in such way and manner as shall be deemed practical by its membership.

Art. III. Any person may become a member of this club by signing the Constitution and giving his or her influence and means for the promotion of the objects and aims of this organization as declared in Article second.

Art. IV. The officers of this club shall be a President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, and these officers shall constitute an Executive Committee.

Art. V. Section 1. It shall be the duty of the President to preside over the meetings and deliberations of the club and superintend its general interests.

Section 2. It shall be the duty of the Vice President to render the President such assistance as may be desired and to preside and perform the duties of that officer in his absence.

Section 3. It shall be the duty of the Secretary to keep a record of all meetings and proceedings of the club, and prepare brief monthly reports concerning local work and forward the same for publication in the official organ of the club and other papers.

Section 4. It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to collect all monies pledged, the membership fees and dues, if any, and pay bills at the order of the club, or its Finance Committee.

Art. VI. The time and place of meeting shall be designated at adjournment, subject to change for sufficient reason by the Executive Committee.

Art. VII. This Constitution may be altered or amended by a majority vote of members present, provided one month's notice be given at a regular meeting, of such proposed change.

BY-LAWS.

Section 1. The President and three members may call special meetings of the club, due notice being given to the members.

Section 2. There shall be the following standing committees: A Finance Committee, whose duty it shall be to solicit funds to aid in defraying necessary expenses, holding special conventions and facilitate further organization of new clubs adjacent thereto. A Political Committee, whose duty it shall be to attend such conventions, caucuses, etc., not connected with this body, as may be practical, and report the action and doings of the same to this club, and otherwise carry out the pleasure of the club as its representatives; and the Chairman shall be an emanuesis to report all political items pertaining to the work, to the National Committeeman residing in the State. A Committee on Lectures and Public Meetings, which shall make such arrangements as may be the will of the club. A Committee on Newspaper, whose duty it shall be to solicit subscription from all members, and others, urging them to become readers of American party papers, and especially of the journal in which the official proceedings of the club are published.

Section 3. —— members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

Section 4. These By-laws may be altered or amended by a majority vote of all members present at any regular meeting.

CHEAPEST AND BEST.

In the whole range of the literature of our reform there is nothing cheaper than the Cynosure. Compute the amount of reading in each number and multiply it by fifty-two, and the result will be a surprise that so much can be furnished for $2.00. No book or pamphlet provides so much in proportion to the cost. As for the variety and quality of their work, the writers for the Cynosure are among the best and most conscientious and intelligent Christians in the world. To surpass their work would be difficult. Let them be sustained by increasing the circulation of the paper by thousands.

If each one will add to his effort for a good cause the name of a new subscriber, enclosing $4.00 for both, the sender may have also his choice of the following valuable pamphlets:

1. The Batavia Convention pamphlet, with the great speeches on that occasion, illustrations of the Morgan Monument, etc.; or

2. Egypt in History and Prophecy; or, Pharaoh proclaiming God, by the celebrated Robert Patterson, from Hasting's Anti-infidel Library; or

3. The Anti-masonic Scrap Book, a new and enlarged edition now in press, containing all the tracts published by the N. C. A.; or

4. The Island of Madagascar; the excellent history written by Gen. J. W. Phelps and noticed in a late Cynosure.

5. Copies of any of the pamphlets sold by the N. C. A., to the amount of 25 cents.

A CLUB OF FIVE

trial subscribers (two months for 25 cents) will just now be a valuable accession to the Cynosure list. To every friend who will get one up and enclose the $1.25 and addresses plainly written we will send either of the documents mentioned above.

FOR A CLUB OF TEN the sender may choose any two from the above list.

Get the Cynosure circulated in your town. The lodge does not thrive where it is read.

AN EASY TASK.

To get two month's subscribers for 25 cents will not be found a difficult work, if you fail in securing a yearly subscription. Each copy of the Cynosure is equal to an ordinary pamphlet of 80 pages. Eight such pamphlets for a quarter of a dollar is not extravagance by far. Let every reader of this paper present this matter to his neighbors.

THE HOME.

"A STILL, SMALL VOICE."

1 Kings 19: 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

In Horeb, when before the Lord,
Wrapped in his robe, the Tishbite stood—
The "still, small voice," the solemn word,
Declared his present God!
But earthquake, storm and fire went by
Ere spoke the unseen Deity!

He spake—when those his guards sublime
The silent Prophet had surveyed—
He spake, and to all future time
His words may well be said:
"What dost thou here?" Can conscience say,
"To serve my God in this my day?"

Ah! no; that voice we shun and fear;
While fettered by the spell of sin;
Though heard not by the outward ear,
It cries aloud within,
And every living soul must find
That God speaks thus to all mankind.

Our duties form our common lot—
We live not for ourselves alone!
Nor he who owns the lowliest cot,
Nor he who fills the throne!
But, linked with fate in each degree,
Hang dread responsibility.

"What dost thou here?"—what works engage
For God or man thy precious powers?
Let not a stained or vacant page
Show life all wasted hours.
Each tree will by its fruits be known,
Let time be hailed as wisdom's own.

"What dost thou here?"—the answer true,
By One alone on earth was given—
"How wist ye not that I must do
My Father's work of heaven?"
Suns, stars, and worlds in age shall wane,
But none shall speak these words again.

Mortal and fall'n—'tis well if we Can truly with the prophet say—
"Lord, in a zealous love for thee
Our lives consume away;
And thou, with light divine canst scan
How we have helped our fellow man."

Still strikes the question on each heart
And each must answer it ere long—
As well the loiterers on the mart
And busiest in life's throng.
And those who wait their Lord's return,
Wakeful, with lamps that brightly burn.

The Bridegroom, at an hour unknown
Comes in his splendor suddenly,
But when he asks—What hast thou done
With my rich gifts to thee?
Where is the glory they should bring
To Me—thy Maker, God, and King?

Lord, when upon that awful day
Earth's countless tribes shall all arise—
When thou shalt call thy guests away
And angels bear them to the skies—
May I with those blest spirits be,
Where wedding robes were wrought by Thee!

—From Littell's Living Age.

THE WAGES OF SIN.

A TRUE STORY.

"Well mother, I received a letter from Charlie to-day. He says Manitoba is financially no good and he wants to come up to Chicago to try his luck," said Harry Burns one evening at the cheery supper table.

"Indeed," said Mrs. Burns. "We shall be glad to see and to help him all we can. Somehow I felt when he was here in the winter that he needed help, for under all his brilliance and wit, I thought I could detect a sorrow at his heart."

"Oh! now mother you are up to your old trick of hunting sorrows in people. I'm sure I never saw a jollier fellow than Charlie," exclaimed John.

"My dear," said Mrs. Burns gravely, "Charlie is not a Christian and I'm sorely afraid he keeps company with jollier fellows than himself in places where I hope and pray my dear ones may never go."

Charlie Edwards was a man past thirty years of age, well read, with fine powers of mind and a well developed body, but, after all, he inspired you not with confidence and satisfaction, but with a vague regret and disappointment. He was restless and had made for himself no sweet abiding place. When he came into Mrs. Burns' home she looked into his face and felt that indeed he did need help for his face bore the sorrowful traces of sin and dissipation.

"Mother," he said, for he had asked for the privilege of calling her that sweet home name, "I have come here determined to be a better man or die in the attempt."

Mrs. Burns and he were sitting by the fire alone, and with her gentle sympathy she soon won from him the story of the down dragging years spent with men who drink and sharing their ruin, but he was inclined to excuse himself for his weakness and folly and to lay the blame of his fallen manhood on the laws of the country, on the church members, and on society generally. Mrs. Burns could scarcely keep back the tears as she said, "I half realize the task that is before you. In your own strength I tremble for you. Think of all the waste of these years. None but God can help you to build up again what you have pulled down. Will you not ask him for help?" Mrs. Burns laid her hand gently on his arm, but he shook it off after a moment, saying:

"No mother, God made evil and he is to blame for what I am, I will never bow to my destroyer."

"Oh! Charlie, you are talking against your reason else why did you come here to be a better man. You know you have the power to choose, evil or good, love or hate. God is love. He is yearning for your upbuilding. Come to him."

Charlie answered not a word and Mrs. Burns went to prepare supper with a heavy heart.

Her own manly boys came laughing home from their work. The cheerful meal was followed by music for Mrs. Burns' daughter and sons were fond of music, and Charlie's tenor completed the harmony of their songs. Oh! the sweet voices that pierced their way into Charlie's heart as they sang:

"Come home, come home,
You are weary at heart,
For the way has been dark
And so lonely and wild.
Oh! prodigal child
Come home, Oh! come home."

He turned to dash away the tears, but his proud heart would not yield. Mrs. Burns prayed in her heart for the wandering lost one and through the weeks every thing that a loving wit can devise or tender heart contrive, Mrs. Burns brought about Charlie.

"The better life has begun to dawn," I hope, she said; "but all we can do is to be patient and kind."

But just as this hope began to brighten Charlie began to leave the evening fireside. "Going to take a smoke," he would say. Alas, what does smoking too often lead to? The saloon has an open door for smokers, and Charlie knew it and the smoke was followed by "a drink."

Mrs. Burns' heart ached but how much anguish and trouble came upon her when the odor of a cigar came to her on the words of her own son. What a long sorrowful talk she had with Robert.

"Oh! come mother; don't be fanatical, a cigar now and then won't hurt anybody," he would say. "Charlie takes offence when I won't have a little social smoke with him."

"Oh! my boy, God save you from what Charlie is," she prayed in sorrow.

Charlie had a good situation now and Mrs. Burns invited young company to the house as an extra inducement to keep him from the saloon. The boys took him to call on their friends. The daughter accompanied him to church, but his rebellious heart would not receive the truth. He sneered at the preacher's logic and argument and made it impossible to invite him to go with them. They found strength and comfort where he found only rebuke and unrest. The soul chooses and fixes its own place, confines itself in its own sin and misery. There was a change coming over Charlie. He was no longer a witty, jolly fellow, but was growing morose and bitter. His presence in the home became a restraint and sorrow. "No man liveth unto himself," and one's sin or misery seems to have as much power of diffusion as an atmosphere.

About this time a beautiful young lady friend of the family came to visit. Her bright eyes and charming ways made a deep impression on Charlie; but her eyes were not made in vain, and she read his book of life with all its sweet meanings obliterated.

"What he might have been if"—she said to the daughter, with a sad look in her eyes that filled out the sentence.

"Charlie," said Mrs. Burns' daughter, as he talked to her of Lily, "Why don't you make yourself worthy of her? Perhaps you could win her, she is well worth your noblest efforts" (but Charlie shook his head). "No! Life has only denial for me everywhere I turn. It is fate. It is my hard luck."

"Nonsense," said Mary; "I don't believe in luck. Every one who strives to do right receives his destiny as he goes along, and it is the one he makes for himself. Why don't you say 'no' to the evils that are denying you your rightful destiny and life, and say 'yes' to all pure hopes and ambitions? Ask God to help you to be what you are capable of being."

Meanwhile Robert had taken a vacation, and had spent it at Charlie's old home, and returned with unusual thoughtfulness portrayed in his face. A young lady and gentleman were visiting at the home, and a merry, fine looking company surrounded the dinner table. Somehow the temperance question came up.

"We are all temperance folks up at our house," said the young man, "and mother is a perfect enthusiast."

"Fanatic," put in Charlie. "That's the way with the temperance people—they either lack the courage of their convictions or are crazy of the subject."

Mrs. Burns looked in surprise on the usually courteous Charlie, and Harry spoke up with fervor:

"Would we were all fanatics, and crazy, if you please, on this subject."

Charlie gave a sneering laugh, and then went on to justify the sale of liquors, and to hold up the rights of saloon-keepers under the law. He called down anathemas on the heads of church members, and told of the generosity and large heartedness of the men who had helped to ruin his associates and himself.

"Charlie," broke in Rob, with a white face and trembling voice, "I have heard you talk as long as I can. How can you talk in this way? You say you don't feel about the cause of temperance, and that you have no desire to. You ought to feel about it above every one else here—you, whose white-headed old father is on his way toward a drunkard's grave; you, whose brothers are on the road to ruin and disgrace. Has your heart lost all its natural affection and sunk into such debased selfishness that you do not care even for your own kindred? What ails your town? What baleful influence has killed out honor, respectability, prosperity and humanity? I didn't go to your town in vain. I know what I'm talking about. I have seen the serpent that has bitten you, and coiled its loathsome lengths about you. Intemperance, whisky, has killed out manliness and left beastliness. It is our duty and privilege to feel, and feel intensely, on this subject."

"Mother," he said, turning to her with his eyes filled with tears, "I will never, by God's help, touch another cigar; they are the beginnings of this great evil. Always will I give my influence to putting down intemperance. The temperance cause has gained this day an advocate."

"Amen!" said Harry, and the mother reached out her hand with an unspoken "God bless you" in her eyes.

There followed a painful silence, broken only by Mary's sobs, while Charlie bowed his burning face. Mrs. Burns put her arms about Charlie and wept, and his tears fell fast.

Oh, how the temperance question was discussed that day! Rob went out, and through his earnest zeal for the cause he influenced fifteen young men to sign the pledge that afternoon, and Mary talked with such fervor that her Sunday-school class all promised to be temperance boys.

Yes, surely, it is our duty to feel intensely on the temperance question. This terrible evil is beyond our power to help saving by giving our influence for prohibiting the sale of the poison that is depriving so many of God, home and life's sweetness.—Union Signal.

HUMILITY.—I believe the first test of a truly great man is his humility. I do not mean by humility, doubt of his own power, or hesitation of speaking his opinions; but a right understanding of the relation between what he can do and say, and the rest of the world's sayings and doings. All great men not only know their business, but usually know that they know it; and are not only right in their main opinions, but they usually know that they are right in them, only they do not think much of themselves on that account. Arnolto knows he can build a good dome at Florence; Albert Durer writes calmly to one who has found fault with his work, "It cannot be better done;" Sir Isaac Newton knows that he has worked out a problem or two that would have puzzled anybody else; only they do not expect their fellow-men, therefore, to fall down and worship them. They have a curious undersense of powerlessness, feeling that the greatness is not in them, but through them; that they could not do or be anything else than God-made—and they see something divine and God-made in every other man they meet, and are endlessly, foolishly, incredibly merciful.—Ruskin in "Modern Painters."

"There's too much horse racing at your agricultural fairs," remarked Parson Jones to the secretary of the county society. "I should like to know, sir, what horse racing has to do with agriculture?" "Well, Parson," replied the secretary with a pleasant smile, "no more than church lotteries have to do with the spreading of the gospel." Parson Jones saw the point and changed the conversation immediately.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

NO!

Somebody asked me to take a drink,
What did I tell him? What do you think?
I told him—No.

Somebody asked me one day to play
A game of cards; and what did I say?
I told him—No.

Somebody laughs that I do not swear
And lie and steal; but I do not care:
I'll tell him—No.

Somebody asked me to take a sail
On the Sabbath day; 'twas of no avail;
I told him—No.

"If sinners entice thee, consent thou not,"
My Bible said, and so on the spot
I told him—No.

THE STORY OF A QUARREL.

"A long time ago," began grandmamma, "there lived in far-away England two maiden sisters. They were all alone in the world and very wealthy, and as time went on aud they grew gray and wrinkled with years, they began to think of death, and of what they would do with their money.

At length they decided to build a church of solid stone, which might endure for centuries, and tell the name and fame of the Orme sisters to future generations. The stone was quarried and the builders came. Then whether tower or spire should adorn their church, the sisters could not agree.

"They wrangled and argued for days and months—neither would yield; and in the end each had her way. The tower and spire were erected side by side.

"There they stand through storm and shine as they have stood for ages; the square, strong tower and the slender, tapering spire—a quarrel fixed in stone. And the story of those two stubborn sisters is told to strangers who visit the place over and over again."—Youth's Companion.

MR. WHITTIER'S BOYHOOD.

John Greenleaf Whittier's boyhood was passed in Haverhill, Mass., in a lonely farmhouse half hidden by oak woods, with no other home in sight. Here, he says, on stormy nights:

We heard the loosened clapboards tost,
The board-nails snapping in the frost;
And on us, through the unplastered wall,
Felt the light-sifted snow-flakes fall.

Besides a brother and two sisters, there were few companions. The father was a good Quaker, one of the selectmen of the town; the mother a refined, dignified woman, fond of reading the best books. She spun and wove the linen and woolen cloth needed in the family, always finding time to teach her children from the Bible. There were only twenty volumes in the home, most of these journals of Quaker ministers; and the only fresh book for the young boy was the yearly almanac. He longed for reading, especially for books of biography and travel; and whenever he heard of a volume he would walk miles in the snow to borrow it.

When he was fourteen, his first schoolmaster, Joshua Coffin, brought a volume of Burns to the house and read it aloud. Little John was delighted, begged him to leave it, and lo! forthwith began to make rhymes, and to imagine stories and adventures.

This is not the first time that a book has changed or swollen the current of a life. Faraday would have remained a bookbinder perhaps, if he had not read an article on electricity in a book he was binding. Robert Dick became a noted Scottish geologist from reading a book of Hugh Miller's. Between one baking and another, he often walked fifty and eighty miles, toiling at his scientific diggings and hammerings and spyings, with but a dry biscuit for food, which he moistened in brooks by the roadside.

Whittier's eldest sister, Mary, encouraged him to write in the spare moments he could save from work on the farm, and errand-going for his mother; and, moreover, she sent one of his poems to the Newburyport Free Press, edited by William Lloyd Garrison. Says Mr. Whittier:

"Some weeks afterward the news-carrier came along on horseback and threw the paper out from his saddle-bags. My uncle and I were mending fences. I took up the sheet and was surprised and overjoyed to see my lines in the "Poet's Corner." I stood gazing at them in wonder, and my uncle had to recall me several times to my work."

Some time after this Mr. Garrison called at the farmhouse to see the young poet, who was at work in the fields, simply clad—like a true farmer boy—in shirt, pantaloons and straw hat. With beating heart he made himself ready to meet the editor. Mr. Garrison encouraged him, urging his father to send him to school. Young Whittier desired an education, but there was no money to procure it. "Where there is a will there is always a way," and reflecting that the young man who worked for his father in summer made shoes in winter, he followed his example, and thus earned enough to carry him through a six months' term at the Haverhill Academy. After making provision for his board, tuition and books, he had twenty-five cents left in his pocket. This he carried all the term, not spending a cent more than he had planned at the beginning—and this instance of self-denial and self-control, really Spartan in a school-boy, is surely a lesson in the art of success. He was popular at the Academy, for he was even as a lad, wholly free from conceit, wholly free from egotism—two traits sure to be at once detected and despised by school-boys. He had a fine, open face, then as now, was witty, somewhat shy, did not talk over much, and was very courteous. His memory was retentive, but from the very first he formed the habit of storing information in note books.—Mrs. S. K. Bolton, in Wide Awake.

THE SPARROW'S LIFE-RAFT.

Dr. H. Chatfield, the coal dealer, has on his coal shed for protection against fire two buckets which are at all times filled with water. Recently a young sparrow (which breed seems to be endowed from birth with fighting qualities) fell into one of the pails and could not get out. Its loud chirping soon brought its parent, who alighted on the pail, and seeing the scrape her offspring had gotten itself into, began to all appearance, to scold it. Presently it flew away and brought back with it several more birds, and with their combined efforts, the little half-drowned fighter was fished out. The mode of rescue taken by the older sparrows was to pick up sticks, stones, and other particles that would float. When a sufficient quantity was in the bucket, the drowning sparrow grasped the now completed life-raft and was saved, when it hobbled on the shed, its plumage all bedraggled, and the fight seemed to have left it entirely.—Elizabeth (N. J.) Herald.

TOUCHING VIGIL OF A GERMAN LAD'S DOG.

Some months ago a German family arrived from across the ocean and settled in Boston. They brought with them a promising son of eleven years, and a small gray-and-tan dog. The family has since returned to Germany, but the lad and the dog remain—the former in the Hanover Street Cemetery, and the latter in the family of Superintendent Charles Stoop—and thereby hangs a tale.

The family was suddenly called back to Germany by news of an unexpected windfall. Before preparations for the return voyage could be made the son was taken violently ill, and died in a few days. The gray-and-tan dog, Rover, had been almost the hourly companion of the dead boy, and he attended the funeral at Hanover Street Cemetery, displaying the greatest distress when the body was lowered in the grave, and the earth thrown upon the coffin.

The family sailed for their fatherland almost immediately after the funeral, but the faithful Rover could not be persuaded to leave the grave. For days, through sunshine and storm, he kept his sad vigil over the last home of his dead master. All efforts to drive him from his post failed, and except a few hours each day, when he ran out after something to eat, he remained for months like a sentinel near the little mound which marked the spot where he had seen the body of his master lowered in the earth and covered from view. Many funeral processions came and went away, and many tearful mourners visited the graves of their beloved dead friends and relatives, and returned through the cemetery gates to their homes. Some of them brought fresh flowers, and garlands, and other tokens of affection, but all came only to go away again, and the flowers faded and withered, but Rover still held his watch. He became an object of quiet interest, and especially so to Superintendent Stoop, who attempted to entice him away from his lonely guard, but all his efforts were fruitless, and even through the bleak February and throughout the dreary March Rover remained.

One night, however, there was a great storm of sleet and rain and wind. It was a most terrible night, and the melancholy watcher, emaciated by hunger, and half dead from exposure, succumbed at last. At a late hour, when the storm was raging furiously, Superintendent Stoop heard a scratching at his door, and when he opened it Rover entered. The animal has since been adopted by the family, but still passes hours each day at the German lad's grave, and always takes his meals over to the little mound and eats there.—Humane Journal.

TEMPERANCE.

INFALLIBLE CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.

Never failed where directions were followed. Hundreds of thousands have tried it thoroughly, and are sound. The kind of consumption cured is double acting, or reflex consumption. This type of consumption can be distinguished easily. There are twenty cases of this kind to one of the other types of the disease, and by this fact you may know it from the other forms of it. Another point of distinction is that it costs more to have it than other kinds. Still another fact. Only one remedy exists, but that never fails. You can see and recognize it long distances, by at least two sure tokens. It smells and it swells. You will often see the poor victim in the streets, with something like a tumor hanging to his jaws, often of huge size. Its fragrance is wonderful, sending its fumes long distances around. Noses in the normal state, of which few can now be found, can distinguish these consumptives at fifteen rods away,—with wind favorable, of course.

Some women have this consumption, but it is worse on the male sex.

Stationary and traveling rooms—a sort of pest houses—are provided for these patients, and we have seen as many as thirty of them in a group, in what is known as the "smoking car," or "saloon," surrounded by a blue gas, mixed, usually, with alcoholic malaria. This consumption is often seen in a modified form. Swollen and polluted mouths, with spitting or spurting great streams of unmentionable, mark this form of the disease.

We have called it double acting, reflex consumption. It is all of that and much more. The patient is an inveterate consumer of a deadly poison, in quantities incredible to relate, while this same weed has a double acting power on the doomed victim—doomed unless cured by the one remedy.

It consumes funds, nerves, muscles, bones, bodies, minds, souls. Can it be that all this is so? Yes, verily, every word is established in the records of millions of precious beings. We are getting anxious to find the remedy. Can it be there is a cure? Well, four letters tell you all. STOP. This can be done—has been done. The writer of this has done it, and long years sanction his total,—final,—by the help of God, eternal stop. Now, my very dear brother, please do not die with consumption. Be cured! Your destiny is with you. You are a sovereign in the hands of the Great Sovereign. You can consume your substance and yourself by one vicious habit. Thousands have, and millions more are on the road to premature destruction—tobacco consumption. Precious soul! if you lack the will force, go to God and get it. Beseech him to put into your soul a new main-spring, or so strengthen the old one that it may shut the door against that dreadful weed forever. Come up to the flood-tide of salvation, and be saved from sin. Knock the sides out of your tobacco box, and use no more till they grow in again. Grind your pipes and cigars to small dust, and use no more till they resume their shape, and till Heaven commands you to resume chewing, smoking and thus consuming yourself. "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." Unite your will with his, and hear him answer, "I will; be thou clean." Yes, clean from this American leprosy, with its plague spots all gone never to return. "Can a man be a Christian and use tobacco?" "Yes, a nasty one," answered D. L. Moody. Smoking suits, smoking cars, spittoons, etc. are things of earth; (shame!) none in or around the Celestial Home.

In conclusion, we suggest, tobacco consumption costs too much for a poor man to support. All antidotes cost, save the one we recommend. This is "without money and without price." Patented in the soul by him who formed the human mind, with a will that ought to be free, and is so only when it acts in harmony with God's will. He who acts with God is "free indeed." Tobacco-bound wills are not, cannot be free. Lord help the poor tobacco clogged millions of this sin-stained world to put a period, big as this earth, at the end of a tobacco stained career. Oh, such a "full stop" may there be eternal sunlight. Amen. Yours for freedom, NATHAN CALLENDER.

TOBACCO SYMPTOMS.

Dr. Alexander contributes to the Phrenological Journal the following inventory of symptoms caused by this poisonous and deadly weed: "The derangements which the habitual use of tobacco produces in a more or less pronounced form, are as follows:

1. Headache over the eyes. 2. Nervous headache without sickness. 3. Nervous headache with sickness of the stomach. 4. Deafness. 5. Partial blindness, or amaurosis. 6. Running at the eyes. 7. Cancer of the lips. 8. Consumption, preceded for years by a cough. 9. Asthma. 10. Dyspepsia. 11. Palpitation of the heart. 12. Paralysis of the upper part of the body. 13. Neuralgia, especially of the face, head, and neck. 14. Swelling of the gums, and rotting of the teeth. 15. Enfeeblement of the lymphatics. 16. Enlargement of the glands of the face and neck, making the chewer thick about the cheeks and lips. 17. Lethargy. 18. Morbid appetite for spirituous liquors. 19. Morbid appetite for food, especially highly-flavored food. 20. Indistinct taste. 21. Indistinct smell. 22. Imperfect sense of touch. 23. Obtuseness of the moral sense. 24. Uncleanliness of person. 25. Stertorous, or snoring, sleep. 26. A sense of deadness and of great debility on first waking from sleep, until one has had a chew or a smoke. 27. Confirmed and incurable disease and premature death."

A few weeks ago Frank Bosler, of Carlisle, Pa., aged 14 years, smoked a pack of cigarettes in one day. He became ill, vomiting frequently, and has died from nicotine poisoning.

"You should not speak thus of your brother," I replied. "When people are born to live together, and love each other, it is very wrong to make remarks upon their common peculiarities. Mutual forbearance is the only guarantee of union and happiness. All of us have faults and follies and foibles, and it is only by refraining from noticing the oddities in others that we can hope to escape having them noticed in ourselves."

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH OUR DAUGHTERS? Superfluous Women and other Lectures by Mary A. Livermore. Boston, Lee and Shepard. pp. 208. Price $1.25. Sold in Chicago by H. D. Chapin.

Mrs. Livermore has been too long before the American public to create a surprise by preparing a book on this subject. Her efforts for the advancement of women from the lecture platform are here to a considerable degree put into a permanent form, the seven chapters on "Changed Conditions of Woman's Life," "Physical Education," "Higher Education," "Need of Practical Training," "Industrial and Technical Training," "Moral and Religious Training," and "Superfluous Women," being a re-arrangement of five of her lyceum lectures. Mrs. Livermore writes with an earnest pen upon these themes. The other day she withdrew from the State temperance association in Massachusetts because her favorite idea of woman suffrage was voted down in connection with the temperance effort in that State. The book reflects her convictions strongly. The first five chapters are such a plea for our daughters as we could wish they all might read and heed, especially in the matter of dress; but when she touches upon the higher theme of religion the shallowness of her Universalist belief mars every page. In the last chapter there are pages of facts upon the curse of war and intemperance, and the fearful effect of these evils upon women that should be sounded with a trumpet in every hall of legislature and every court throughout Christendom.

GARDEN AND FARM TOPICS, by Peter Henderson. New York, Peter Henderson and Co. pp. 244.

This veteran seedsman who has for twenty-five years or more been prominently before the horticultural public has in this volume thrown together the observation and experience of these many years. The special topics which he presents are, Bulbs and their culture, Window gardening, Propagation of plants, Rose growing, Green-house structures, Lawns, Onion growing, Strawberry culture, Root crops for stock, Manures, Draining, etc. In this large variety of topics every farmer and owner of a garden patch will find matter of value, which will repay study and add to the profits of the soil. The cuts and diagrams which illustrate the volume add much to its value.

In The Century for February artist and engraver surpass the other contributors in the excellence and attractiveness of their work. The portrait, "Head of a Man by Rembrant," which forms the frontispiece, is a wonderful piece of work. The portrait of Gen. Sheridan is also very fine. Coles' engravings of Courbet's paintings and the illustrations of "Merinos in America" and the "Cruise of the Alice May." Elbridge Kingsley contributes a beautiful plate, "Snow-born," and the sketches of Keats and Dante are strikingly illustrated by copies of bronzes, reliefs, and life and death masks. The most important articles are Adam Badeau's sketch of Sheridan and Geo. W. Cable's discussion of the convict lease system of the South.

Vick's Floral Guide, which comes dressed in the neatest and most elegant of covers shows more enterprise and appreciation of the needs of the public than ever. To every lover of garden work we commend, in the heartiest possible manner, this beautiful and exceedingly practical publication. There is not a flower or a vegetable grown that is not illustrated in it, and some valuable advice given as to how to raise and care for them. Besides all this, the book contains a charming colored plate of flowers, one containing a plate of vegetables, and a third shows a specimen of Vick's Extra Early Potato. Vick presents this Floral Guide to all his last year's customers, and to all others at the low price of ten cents, and tells such that they can deduct the cost of it from their first order for seeds. To our farmer friends, to every market gardener, and those who merely garden for pleasure, we say—Get Vick's Floral Guide, of James Vick, Rochester, N. Y.

Vick's Magazine for February is a good number. Underdraining, mountain gardens, wind screens, hanging baskets, landscape art, farmers' privileges, house plants, etc., and various topics discussed in the correspondence make a variety that will attract almost every one. James Vick, Rochester.

The second volume of the American Reformer, New York, opened with the issue of January 5. Among its interesting contents is an editorial review of and reply to Dr. Dio Lewis' argument against legal prohibition; an article from Hon. Neal Dow, on "The Republican Defeat in Ohio;" one from the Rev. C. H. Mead, on "Moses, or Political Reform Work among the Colored People;" one from Rev. O. P. Gifford, on "The Ideal Saloon;" one from J. D. Rice, on "Municipal Reform;" one from Mrs. M. S. Robinson, on "The Republic and the Indians." Also a reprint of Mrs. Mary L. Dickinson's poem "Aunt Sally and Hopping Joe," with an original poem and other matter from the same popular writer. Sample copies mailed on application.

The touching persistence with which the late J. R. Green, the historian, labored in his last days upon his book, "The Conquest of England", is chronicled by his widow. "The pages," she writes, "which now close it were written by his hand—words written one morning in haste, for weakness had already drawn on so fast that, when in weakness he at last laid down his pen, he never again found strength even to read over the words he had set down. 'I have work to do that I know is good,' he said when he heard that he had only a few days to live; 'I will try to win but one week more to write some part of it down.' As death drew near he said for the first time, 'Now I am weary; I can work no more.' Thus he laid down with uncomplaining patience the task he had taken up with unflinching courage."

THE CHURCHES.

—Rev. Wm. Moerdyk, after repeated and urgent invitations from the Dutch Reformed church in South Holland near this city, has removed from Milwaukee and has just settled in his new and hopeful field.

—Rev. A. G. McCoy, formerly connected with the Christian Instructor, has been requested by the United Presbyterian Board of Home Missions to go to Minneapolis, Minnesota, and found a U. P. church.

—Thursday last was observed all day at Wheaton by the college and church as the day of fasting and prayer for colleges. Meetings, morning, afternoon and evening were of deep interest, and special meetings will be continued.

—The Wesleyan church at Wheaton has continued special meetings since the week of prayer with very blessed results in the conversion of a number of young people and the quickening of Christians in several churches.

—At Summerfield, Ohio, where ten years ago the renunciation of several Freemasons roused a great interest in reform and resulted in the establishment of two reform churches, there has been a hopeful revival in the Free Methodist church, and one happy result is the conversion of a Mr. Joseph Clary, an avowed infidel for forty years and a member of the Odd-fellow lodge. His renunciation of secretism made a great stir in the place especially when he turned his back on popularity and joined a testifying church.

—Bro. C. W. Hiatt, while pursuing his theological studies at Oberlin, preaches regularly at Gustavus, Ohio. His work has been blessed with a revival and a number have experienced the new birth.

—The Free Methodist church in Evanston, Rev. W. F. Manley, pastor, has received some sixty members since its organization two or three years ago. A wealthy lady gave a $1,500 lot for the new church and has lately contributed $3,500 in property for a parsonage. She contemplates giving thrice as much more to help carry on the work in which the church is engaged.

—The evangelist J. D. Potter is yet laboring in Missouri. Leaving St. Louis he spent a week in Neosho, and began a series of meetings on the 27th ult. at Carthage. His labors are greatly blessed to the churches.

—J. W. Dean, the Chicago evangelist, is now in Sharon, Wis., where meetings of much interest are being held.

—The First Congregational church of this city sustains three branches, each with an assistant minister, and the names of all on the central church roll. Questions of self-government sometimes arise and complicate matters. The church also sustains two other mission Sabbath schools.

—It is announced that Rev. Dr. W. W. Scudder, after a ten years' settlement in a pastorate in Glastonbury, Connecticut, has resigned in order to engage again in missionary service in India. He goes to the old Arcot mission where his parents labored, and where he and his brothers have been engaged in service. Dr. H. M. Scudder, of the Plymouth Church, Chicago, would gladly follow his brother's example, if he could live in India at all.

—Captain Bray, master of the missionary ship, Morning Star, which plies between Honolulu and the Micronesian islands, addressed a large missionary meeting in Chicago the other evening. He described the natives of Micronesia as very degraded, a large number of them being cannibals. Mr. Bray's principal object in coming to America is to raise funds to build and equip a vessel to be called the New Morning Star, the construction of which will be begun in Boston in the spring. The cost of the new vessel will be about $45,000, which he hopes to raise among the churches of America. He last week addressed a number of Sabbath-schools in the neighborhood of this city.

—The Trustees of the Princeton Theological Seminary report that the investments made for its financial support now amount to $1,015,955.95. The real estate and buildings are estimated at $374,000. Total, $1,389,695.95. The income of the institution last year was $60,634.63.

—The American Congregational Union has decided to appoint a field secretary, whose time is to be given entirely to working up an interest in, and increasing receipts for, church building. The proposal now is to attempt to raise $10,000 for immediate use, in shares of $10 each.

—Ten thousand persons have been members of the M. E. church, of Worthen street, Boston, during the past half century. Fifteen thousand have professed conversion at her altar. During the past year six hundred conversions are reported. Nine have entered the ministry, and others still have this service of that of foreign missionaries in view.

—Dr. Brachelli has published the statistics for 1883 of the various Christian faiths of Europe. The twenty-six States which make up the division of Europe, show a total population of 329,879,320, of which 96 per cent is classed as Christian, and only three per cent as non-Christian.

—In honor of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Luther, it has been decided to rebuild the St. Nicolaus Church, in Copenhagen, Denmark. This church was destroyed by fire in 1795.

—The church, manse and school-house, which it is proposed to build at Epworth, in honor of John and Charles Wesley, who were born there, are to cost $25,000.

—The growth of the Tompkins Avenue Church, Brooklyn, has been phenomenal. Its pastor, Rev. George F. Pentecost, has just preached his third anniversary sermon. In those three years the church has added to its membership by letter, 275; on profession of faith, 455; in all 730. Its present membership is 840. The home Sunday-school numbers over 900, with an average attendance of 600. It does not seem to injure Mr. Pentecost's usefulness that he renounced Masonry.

—Union services were held in Grace M. E. church on north La Salle street, Chicago, last week under the charge of W. B. Jacobs and Prof. Excell. Christian people from all that residence part of the city without respect to denomination, filled the house, and the meetings produced a deep and lasting effect. Dr. Arthur Little of the New England church and Pres. C. A. Blanchard, from the "Moody" church, were among the speakers.

—The celebrated Boston Monday lecture course opened on the 4th inst. in Tremont Temple. Mr. Cook is to give, beside the preludes and lectures, interludes consisting of replies to at least twelve questions each week on topics selected from those received by him in his lecture tours, East and West, and from a question box to be kept open in Boston for the purpose. The lectures will treat in a continuous way the most important subject of contemporaneous theology, philosophy, and science. There will be fourteen points discussed on each occasion, two at length in the prelude and lecture, and twelve briefly in reply to questions. In the lectures on progress in theology will be contrasted the broad church and evangelical leaders and systems of thought in England, Scotland, France, Germany and the United States, especially in relation to the current discussions concerning probation and inspiration and comparative religion. The so-called new departure, as well as the English broad church, will receive attention, and there will be somewhat special mention of such preachers and writers as Maurice, Dean Stanley, Kingsley, Canon Liddon, Spurgeon, and Beecher. Much use will be made of the abundant materials collected by Mr. Cook in his travels and not yet touched upon.

—The last mail from Madagascar brings an account o the laying of the foundation stone of a new Anglican cathedral, by the Prime Minister, in the presence of five thousand people.

—The three Women's Boards of Foreign Missions co-operating with the American Board have about one hundred and fifty women in the field, and an income of over $150,000 per year.

—The American branch of the Evangelical Alliance has decided to accept the invitation of the Swedish branch to hold the next World's Conference of the Alliance in Stockholm, Sweden. The Conference will meet in August. Dr. Schaff is to co-operate with the European representatives of the branches in preparing for and in organizing the Conference. The delegates are to be appointed by a committee of five. Prof. Norman Fox has become general secretary of the American branch for the ensuing year.

—One of the ablest and most prominent men in Japan, Mr. Ito Hirobumi, has just returned from a visit to Germany, and it is reported that he has addressed the Mikado urging the truth and importance of Christianity. He states that he formerly supposed that the Emperor William and Bismarck professed to be Christians as a matter of policy, while they had no regard for it at all in their hearts. But now he says that this was a mistaken idea. He found that both were sincere Christians, and both urged him to seek this religion for his own welfare and happiness as well as that of his country. Such has been the influence of Mr. Ito's report that the chief officers in the cabinet are becoming interested in the study of Christianity, and the former court teacher of Confucianism is no longer opposing the gospel, but also carefully reading the Scriptures. In a course of study recently prescribed for all the Shinto priests, the Bible and "Martin's Evidences of Christianity" are included.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

IN BRIEF.

Ann Dunn, who died in London a few days ago at the age of 39, was nearly nine feet high and weighed over 500 pounds. She measured three feet six inches around the shoulders.

The first town to be entirely lighted and have its tram-cars driven by electricity will be Montreaux, on the Lake of Geneva, a company having obtained a concession for the purpose. The motive power will be derived from the water of the lake.

Catherine Kile, who recently died in Richmond township, Pa., at the advanced age of 98 years, had twelve children, eighty-two grandchildren, 128 great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren. Three of her children were born at one time, and these triplets are still living at the age of 72 years. They bear the good old Scriptural names of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

The Philadelphia Press states that Dr. Haensel, a savant of Reichenberg, Germany, has succeeded, after many experiments, in photographing several flashes of lightning. The photographs took in part of the landscape, and made it possible to estimate with accuracy the locality where the lightning struck. It also proved it possible to compute the length of the course traversed by the electric current.

At the close of the war the national debt amounted to $2,756,431,571. The interest on this vast sum was nearly $151-000,000 yearly. During the Lincoln and Johnson administrations $323,659,698 of the debt was paid. During General Grant's two terms $413,496,441 was paid. Under President Hayes $199,625,277 was paid, and so far under the Garfield and Arthur administration there has been paid nearly $281,000,000, making a total of $1,217,649,746, or more than one-half the entire debt of the nation.

There are thirty-nine professorships in the University of Edinburgh. Of these eighteen receive $5,000 or more a year each and five get $10,000. The professor of anatomy receives $16,000 a year, the professor of Latin $7,500, the professor of Greek $6,500, and the professor of mathematics $7,500. Two of the teachers last mentioned are under thirty-three years of age. Ten of the twenty-eight professors in Glasgow receive over $5,000 and three over twice that sum. The salary of the Latin professor is $11,000 and of the Greek and Latin teachers $9,000 and $10,000 respectively.

The trouble which has ended by the closing of every public school in Louisiana began when the legislature in 1882 appropriated only $107,000 for the State —the smallest sum ever known by nearly $100,000—and gave $30,000 of that to some universities; then because of clerical and other blundering New Orleans drew more than its proper share, the courts were appealed to, and finally things got into such shape that everything came to a standstill, and must so remain until the legislature meets next spring.

Here is an instance of good repartee. They were two solid citizens. One was bald, but rejoiced in a fine luxuriant beard. The other had a heavy growth of hair on the head, but was very bald as to his chin. The bald-chinned citizen was a very talkative individual, whose conversation was rapid and incessant. Meeting the bald-headed citizen one day in a company of gentlemen, he opened fire on him touching the bareness of his sconce. "What do you suppose," he said, in his rattling, vivacious way, "what do you suppose, neighbor, is the reason that you have no hair on your head and so much on your chin?" "Well," said the other, very deliberately, "scientists say that men who work with their brains create such a heat in the scalp that the hair is worn off." "That sounds like a likely theory," chimed in the loquacious citizen. "Yes, it does," returned the other, "and I think your case is a striking illustration of its probability. Now you have plenty of hair on your head but none on your chin, which just backs up the scientific theory, because all your work is done with your jaws—there's nothing doing on top!"—Boston Traveler.

Rev. Mr. Browning, a colporteur, reports in a Camden (Ala.) paper concerning his labors in Wilcox county, Ala., that he found in a German family a German Bible, one of Luther's translation, which had been in the family over two hundred years; at another house a large German Bible, published in 1545, large type, and many large, fine pictures in it. This, too, had been in the family more than two hundred years. Another family had the largest Bible, he says, that he ever saw—one of the first of King James' translation, published in 1611, large type, large pictures. A chain was printed in it, in each link of which was the name of the father and son, from Adam to Abraham, and so on down to Christ. These words were in it in large letters: "Ordered to be printed by King James' Majesty." The book cost one hundred pounds sterling.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

SAMARITAN NERVINE — NEVER FAILS.

IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURING Epileptic Fits, Spasm, Falling Sickness, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impoteney, Syphilis, Serofula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.

☞To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all whose sedentary employment causes Nervous Prostration, Irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulent, Samaritan Nervine is invaluable.

☞Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50, at Druggists.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR.

The DR. S. A. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.

For testimonials and circulars send stamp. (18)

POOR people have become rich working for us. We offer a business easy to learn—paying large sums of money in profits. Every one willing to work can get rich. Men, women and even boys and girls, are making fortunes. No capital required. We will start you in business. You run no risk whatever. You need not be away from home. Full particulars free. W. V. R. POWIS, 89 Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

THE FLORAL WORLD.

A suberb illustrated $1.00 monthly free 1 year to all that enclose this ad. to us now with 12c. for postage. FLORAL WORLD, HIGHLAND PARK, ILL.

GET A MODEL PRESS.

Price, complete with Type, &c., $5 to $10 and up. Prints Cards, Circulars, Labels, Tracts, everything for Business, Schools, Churches, &c. It is very durable and rapid, and so simple that any boy can work it and earn hundreds of dollars a year. 12,000 sold. Send 2 cent stamp for 40 Page Catalogue, with gorgeous floral card and other work done on a Model Press. J. W. Daughaday & Co. Mfrs. 721 Chestnut St. Philadelphia

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address Dr. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

"The Christian Statesman deserves a VERY LARGE CIRCULATION. It fills a place supplied by no other."—HON. JUDGE STRONG.

The Need of the Nation

Can only be supplied by an acknowledgement of Christ's authority and an acceptance of His Divine Law as the

BASIS OF NATIONAL LIFE.

To secure this, and maintain all existing Christian features of the American government, is the object of the National Reform Association, an organization undenominational in character, with a membership of many thousands, including leading ministers, educators, authors and jurists all over our nation.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN,

A large, elegantly printed sixteen-page journal, advocates the principles of this Association, and discusses all public questions in the light of the Christian religion. The Maintenance of our Sabbath Laws, and of the Christian Law of Marriage and Divorce, the use of the Bible in the Public Schools, the Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic, the Mormon Question, the Rights of the Indian and the Chinaman, receive constant attention in its columns. It gives thorough expositions of the International Bible Lessons, and their bearing on national questions is not overlooked. Price, $2.00 per year. ☞Sample copies free. Address,

JOHN WAGNER PRITCHARD,
1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN

"In its course has been manly and consistent, its editorials able, and its success, under the conditions of apathy and prejudice which surrounds the whole subject, marvelous."—THE REV. S. F. SCOVEL, PRESIDENT OF WOOSTER UNIVERSITY.

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD
Attorney and Counselor at Law
79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

T. HUDSON J. L. STRATTON
—Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of—
HARDWOOD LUMBER.
Have on hand a large amount of Dry Ash, Red and White Oak, Hickory, and Basswood.
Prompt attention given to orders and satisfaction guaranteed. KALAMAZOO, MICH.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS,
WHEATON COLLEGE.
Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in the schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.

How to rear and manage poultry. Send a ten-cent piece to H. H. Stoddard,

Hartford, Ct., for a copy of THE Poultry World, and it will tell you.

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live, readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

I EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements confirmed by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. BUT EVERY SUBSCRIBER to the CYNOSURE who SENDS TO THE OFFICE $2.50 shall have both FOR THE YEAR. Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

25 YEARS IN THE POULTRY YARD

108 Pages. It teaches you how to rear them to care for them, to feed, to have them lay eggs in cold weather, to prevent and treat all diseases of old or young, to be a "successful" poultry man. Only 25 cents in stamps. A Fifty-page book FREE FOR ALL with it.

A. M. LANG, Cove Dale Farm, Concord, Ky.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

THE PUREST IS THE BEST.

In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are

COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.

The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading and foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.

The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing

FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS.

They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

IN CLUBS OF FIVE OR MORE,

THE PEARL	12c	PURE WORDS	10c
THE LILY	12c	SUNSHINE	10c

Be sure and send for samples before you order your next supply of papers.

SAMPLE COPIES SENT FREE.

We are prepared to furnish any other Sunday-school papers in the market at publishers' prices, so that schools can order all their supplies from us, and thus save the complication, labor and expense of sending to several parties. We handle a full line of Sunday-school Tickets, Reward Cards, helps and other requisites.

☞Send for our new catalogue of Sunday-school cards and other requisites, with discounts. Sent free to any address. Address T. B. ARNOLD, 104 & 106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW Vegetables — GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE — A Specialty

1854.-1884

My Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1884, the result of thirty years' experience as a Seed Grower, will be sent free to all who apply. All my Seed is warranted to be fresh and true to name, so far that should it prove otherwise, I agree to refill orders gratis. My collection of vegetable Seed, one of the most extensive to be found in any American Catalogue, is a large part of it of my own growing. As the original introducer of Eclipse Beet, Burbank Potatoes, Marblehead Early Corn, the Hubbard Squash, and scores of other new Vegetables, I invite the patronage of the public. In the gardens and on the farms of those who plant my seed will be found my best advertisement.

JAMES J. H. GREGORY, Seed Grower, Marblehead, Mass.

Peter Henderson & Co's COLLECTION OF SEEDS AND PLANTS

embraces every desirable Novelty of the season, as well as all standard kinds. A special feature for 1884 is, that you can for $5.00 select Seeds or Plants to that value from their Catalogue, and have included, without charge, a copy of Peter Henderson's New Book, "Garden and Farm Topics," a work of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a steel portrait of the author. The price of the book alone is $1.50. Catalogue of "Everything for the Garden," giving details, free on application.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS — MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A HINT TO PAINTERS ON SATIN.—If you are an amateuer and wish to paint on satin at home with oil, and arc troubled by the oil spreading, try this method of preventing it. Dissolve some shellae with alcohol, and rub it over the wrong side of the satin; then, if the precaution is tak en to take any of the oily paints out on blotting-paper, you need not fear to proeeed.

A CULINARY HINT CONCERNING CARROTS.—Young carrots are an appetizing addition to a dinner of boiled beef. Do not scrape the tender skin from the carrots, but wash them in two or three waters, and after they are eooked, rub the skin off with a coarse towel. These, if quite small, may be arranged around the beef on the platter: if not, serve in a vegetable dish, with a little butter, cream, and pepper and salt.

LAMB-BROTH.—A broth for invalids may be made from lamb which will be very nourishing, and yet so delicate that it will not distress or nauseate a weak stomaeh. For a teacupful of broth boil a small sliee cut from the hind-quarter, with the bone left in, of course. Cover this with eold water, and sprinkle a little salt in; let it simmer gently; skim off the scum, and when the lamb has cooked until is is white, and the juice is all extracted, strain it, and carry it while hot to your invalid. The first time, and possibly the second, give it with no other seasoning than the salt; the next time you may add a little pepper, or put a spoonful of well-cooked pearl-barley in.

WHOOPING COUGH SYRUP.—Two ounces thoroughwort, two ounces flax-seed, two ounces slippery-elm, two ounces stick licorice, one teaspoonful pulverized blood root. Steep all together thoroughly and strain, and then add one pint best molasses, and one pound loaf or cut sugar. Dose, from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful according to age, and as often as necessary, if it is a dozen times a day and night. It is a sure cure for whooping cough if made according to directions and taken thoroughly. I have used and recommended it for a dozen years, and never knew it to fail of a complete cure, and in several instances it has effected a cure so soon that people have doubted their children having the whooping cough at all. Cut this out and save it.

EATING LEMONS.—A good deal has been said through the papers about the healthfulness of lemons. The latest advice is how to use them so that they will do most good, as follows: Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know that it is more than doubled by taking another at night also. The way to get the better of the bilious system without blue pills or quinine is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as appetite craves, in as much ice water as makes it pleasant to drink without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning, on rising, at least a half hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficacy, without any of the weakening effects of calomel or congress water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear, the powerful acid of juice, which is always most corrosive, invariably produces inflammation after a while, but properly diluted so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its medical work without harm, and when the stomach is clear of food, has abundant opportunity to work over the system thoroughly, says a medical authority.—Sel.

STOP THAT COUGH.—Coughs and colds are prevalent now, especially among children, too often from the ignorance or carelessness of their elder guardians. Many mothers appear to accept with resignation the repeated and violent colds from which their children suffer as providential and unavoidable. A cold is by no means always due to exposure. Indigestion, constipation, a lack of scrupulous cleanliness, the unwise habit of sleeping in much of the clothing worn during the day, unaired bed chambers—all, or any of these things may have far more to do with your child's tendeney to cold than the keenest breath of the bracing winter air. And in great measure these things are under your control. Mothers should understand that it is a fact, whether they can see how it is or not, that numerous colds and sore throats are directly traceable to indigestion and dietic errors. Quantities of greasy food, fried meats, pastry and the like, ill-ventilated rooms, and continued constipation, have to answer for many cases of croup, and putrid sore throats. All these things weaken the system and render it far less able to resist changes of temperature. Give every bedroom a thorough airing every day, more especially if several children are obliged to sleep together or with their parents. This is to be avoided, if possible; if not, always lower a window slightly from the top—or if this cannot be done, raise it from below. There is frequently bad air enough generated and breathed in the sleeping apartment of a family with small children, to supply them all not only colds, but with a number of so-called "malarious" diseases to last a year perhaps longer. Neglect of bathing is another prolific source of colds. A child from three to ten years old should certainly receive an entire bath twice a week in winter. A warm bath at night, taking special care to avoid any chill after, will frequently break up a sudden cold. Keep children from playing in chilly, unused rooms in autumn and winter weather. Let them play out of doors as much as possible, taking care to have their feet warm and dry. A flannel suit and rubber overshoes will often save much cough medicine and doctor's bills. Keep them warmly clad, but do not be content with thick coats and worsted hoods, while short skirts barely cover their knees, leaving the limbs chilled.—MRS. LUCY RANDOLPH, in American Agriculturist.

The largest bell in the world is in Kioto, Japan. It is 24 feet high and 16 inches thick at the rim. It is sounded by a suspended piece of wood, like a battering ram, which strikes it on the outside, and its booming can be heard for miles. Nobody knows when or by whom it was cast, and though its surface is covered with characters, no scholar has yet been able to translate them.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

For Sick Headache.

Dr. N. S. READ, Chicago, says: "I think it is a remedy of the highest value in many forms of mental and nervous exhaustion, attended by sick headache, dyspepsia and diminished vitality."

The standard restorative—especially in cases of nervousness—is Samaritan Nervine. $1.50.

"I am perfectly cured," said Jas. Corbin, of Washburn, Ill., "thanks to Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine." At Druggists.

A Suffocating Cough.

In a letter from Mrs. Charlotte Lisle, of Chicago, a lady well known as a contributor to the Western press, she ascribes the cure of a dangerous cough, accompanied by bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My cough," she says, "threatened to suffocate me * * * * but the Honey of Horehound and Tar has removed every trace of it." The letter was to a lady friend in this city, who has placed it at the disposal of C. N. CRITTENTON, 115 Fulton street, N. Y.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

Scalps Tormented with Dandruff or Scald Head are made healthy with Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Of all druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, black or brown, fifty cents.

Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic.

For adults travelling, a wineglassful may be taken three times a day with great advantage. Its tonic and nutritive qualities are sufficient to sustain the body without the addition of solid food. It is now recommended by the faculty as the best remedy for consumption, debility, loss of appetite, weakness, indigestion, dyspepsia, fever, ague, malaria, and all female and children's maladies.

CAUTION—See that the signature of T. COLDEN is on each bottle, as imitations are on the market.

NOTICE.

Persons write occasionally, saying, "I sent a remittance so and so, but the tag on my paper it not changed." Such inquiries are proper, and the explanation is this: when a subscription is received it is entered at onee on the book and the letter filed for future reference if needed, but the printed mailing list is not changed until a sufficient number are received to require the printing of a new list. If but few subscriptions are received, the change may be delayed for a month or more, but when the list fills up rapidly it requires frequent revision. If the date on your paper is not changed within four weeks after you remit it is the safest way to drop a card to this office

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 837 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

An Honest Offer

If you are not enjoying good health we will on certain conditions send you ON TRIAL our Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, and if they fail to cure or greatly benefit you within a month we make no charge. Prices very low. They are the marvel of the age. 75,000 Cures made during 1883. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once

ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO.,
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE.
R. S. & A. P. LACEY,
Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.
Send description of your Invention. L. BINGHAM.
Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY. Proprietor, Wheaton Ill.
General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best.
STRAW, BLACK, GOOSE, RASP BERRIES, GRAPES, and other Small Fruits.
Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience.

Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

SHALL WE MEET BEYOND THE RIVER?

By H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.
THE AUTHOR'S COMPLETE EDITION of this favorite hymn, sung the world over, but of which only ONE-SEVENTH part appears in the hymn books; mailed to any address on receipt of a stamp. For 15 cents we send the hymn with H. L. Hastings' papers three months on trial:

THE CHRISTIAN: Monthly. $1.00 a year. A large, live, 16-page, Illustrated Paper. Free from pills, puffs, politics, and sectarianism; devoted to practical Christianity, Gospel Temperance, Pictures, Music, Religion and common sense. Also the LITTLE CHRISTIAN: Twice a month. 25c. a year. For the young.

"My husband is very busy, but takes the time to look through your paper—a thing he does not do to others. He is much pleased with them. He would also be glad of the other volumes."—Mrs. D. L. Moody. Mr. C. H. Spurgeon said: "The Christian is the best paper that comes to me." Agents Wanted.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, 47 Cornhill, Boston.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Sickels' Freemasons' Monitor. Containing the degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic illustrations, together with tactics and drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also forms of Masonic documents, notes, songs, Masonic dates, installations, etc. By D. Sickels; 32mo. In tuck, $1.50.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Oddfellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 50
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	25
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.
EZRA A. COOK, Publisher. 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE.

311,000 references. The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's a child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2 50; half Russia, $3. Postage, 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY. 10 books, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Teaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now issued. The whole lot for $11.48.
Single copy, postpaid, 10c; 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.

Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil-
11 Newlyn House. [dren.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Susette.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May.
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
20 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwei.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bernie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Miss'n, Lit. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Haylands.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
52 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Failure.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer. [Marched.
57 Hugalda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I,
61 Tempest Tos'd.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hope.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself.
72 Lyman.
73 Kenneth.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl.
77 Margery Kramer's School-
78 The Quartette. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Lulu Preston's Trials and Triumphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror.
85 Joe and Harry
86 Fred, the Backwood Boy.
87 Bloomfield Rock.
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 Nu Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Sanders.
93 Peg of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit;
109 The Harker Family. [Life.
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Tim's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
116 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Poll and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Fearndale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium.
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; John Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Telfourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Louis' School Days.
151 Blossom and blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Bruey.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips.
156 Digging a Grave with a Wine-glass. Little blind May.
157 The Manor House Mystery. May's Sixpence.
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Job Lufton's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.'
163 Little Faith. The Diver's Daughter.
164 Dora's boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe.
166 Danesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear
168 Drift. [ful bondage
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list. Nos 95, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168, are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4, any 12 copies for $1; 10c each.

Reform Note Paper & Envelopes

This is good heavy paper, 5¾x8¼ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scriptnre and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with an "ad" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100.

Address—
EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO. ILL.

Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.
Price postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches.
Published by EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book. Complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is, Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume. Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates. By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by Eli Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, facsimiles of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $[illegible] 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings. Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers. By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering. All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order, Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter. Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

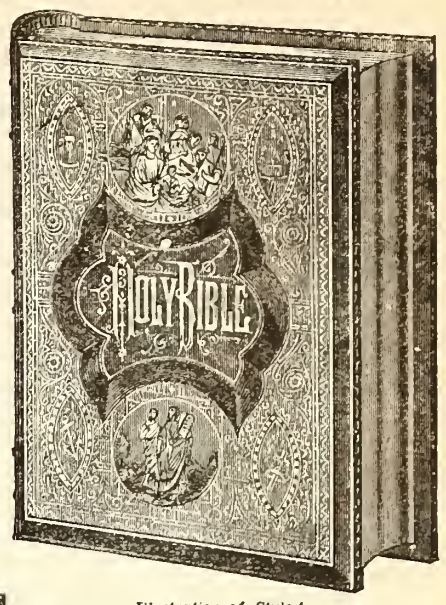

Illustration of Style 4.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10½x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and Family Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible. Harmony of the Gospels, Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 1.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4, with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society. Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—
EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Established 1875.

DAVID C. COOK, Publisher of SUNDAY SCHOOL REQUISITES.

PUBLICATIONS:

Primary Grade. The Primary Teachers Quarterly. Illuminated Lessons. Primary Scholars Quarterly. Primary Weekly. Dew Drops. Little Learners' Paper.

Juvenile Grade. Juvenile Teachers Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly (abridged). The Coral. Sabbath Home. Giant Killer. Truth Seekers.

Intermediate Grade. Intermediate Teachers Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly (abridged). Duplicate Lesson Leaf. The Sunday School Gem. The Young Folks Friend. Careful Builders. His Jewels. Sabbath School Weekly.

Advanced Grade. Advanced Teachers Quarterly. Advanced Scholars Quarterly. The Royal Road. Gracious Words. Our Own Sabbath School Paper. Conqueror's Herald. Weekly Magnet.

Bible Class Grade. Bible Class Teacher. Bible Class Scholar. Church and Home, (weekly). Church and Home, (semi-monthly).

Average combined circulation each issue over Three Million Five Hundred Thousand copies. Samples forwarded on application.

"I do not hesitate to commend them as far the best of any."—Rev. E. Corwin, D. D., Racine, Wis. "Their excellence can not be overestimated. Prices defy competition."—S. W. Hayes, Wheeling, Mo. "They give unbounded satisfaction."—J. L. Hodge, Oyer, Kan. "Superintendent ten years; have found no helps so good."—W. R. Davidson, Arabi, Ky. "Best publications in twenty years' experience."—L. B. Davis, Lodi, Mich. "The interest has increased fifty per cent."—J. L. Lassiter, Branchville, N. C. "Prospering gloriously; due to Cook's supplies."—T. A. Davison, Kellerville, Ill. "Our school is the best in this part of the country, and we owe it to your supplies."—Geo. W Finch, Auburn, Cal. "Doubled our school in a few weeks."—E. Timmerman, Jasper, N. Y. "School gaining every Sabbath."—Thos. Purvis, Sunderland, Ont. "School has grown nearly twice as large."—E. F. Wilson, Centre, Tex. "Our school has built up greatly."—J. M. Worth, West Salamanca, N. Y. "Better pleased than ever. We are having a precious revival."—Henry Cobb, Metropolis, Ill. "The Holy Spirit is blessing our school with a knowledge of the Word we never had before."—A. Hamilton, Stewartsville, Ont.

GOLDEN CENSER: "By far the cheapest publications for quality, quantity and frequency. Everything Evangelical, pure and helpful." CHAUTAUQUA DEMOCRAT: "When we mention his name in connection with any Sunday-school literature, it is sufficient guarantee of its excellence." CENTRAL METHODIST: "Whatever Mr. Cook puts his hand to is given life and energy." BOSTON CONGREGATIONALIST: "Mr. Cook advertises truthfully. 'Enormous saving to Sunday-schools.'" BALTIMORE METHODIST: "A leading, if not the largest publisher of Sunday-school supplies on this continent."

Publishing House Elgin Ill., Office and Store 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CONGRESS.

—The anti-pologamy bill reported last week from the Senate Judiciary committee embraces the principal features of the Edmunds bill, with some additions. The laws respecting marriage are made more strict, women are disfranchised, and the corporations of the Mormon church so far as they are chartered are rendered illegal bodies.

—The Senate ordered an investigation of the Danville, Va., and Copiah, Miss., massacres on motion of Senator Sherman.

—The Fitz John Porter relief bill passed the House by a vote of 184 to 78 and only awaits the President's signature.

THE COUNTRY.

—At a meeting of the State Central Committee of colored men in Chicago a call was issued to the colored men in the Eastern, Middle, and Western States to meet in general convention at Pittsburgh, Pa., April 29, 1884.

—The Brigham Young Academy, a Mormon school at Provo, Utah, in which were 400 students, burned. There were many narrow escapes.

—The first discovery of tin in this country has been made in King's Mountain, Cleveland county, N. C.

—The members of the Grand Army of the Republic in Illinois increased 10,000 members during the past year.

—Last year's act of the New York Legislature prohibiting the manufacture of cigars in tenement houses, has been declared unconstitutional.

—An explosion of dynamite cartridges in the office of contractors for the Canada Pacific Railroad near Michipicoton, a week ago, killed five workmen.

—At Greensburg, Pa., a body of men formed an oath-bound society, pledging themselves not to buy French products, and to boycott persons who sell them, until France relieves the embargo on American pork.

—Henry B. Holmes, a dairyman, was burned to death in his barn at an early hour Feb. 1. The origin of the fire is a mystery. Thirty cattle and all the contents were destroyed.

—About six miles from Chattanooga, an immense rock which rolled from the mountain wrecked the locomotive of a passenger train Thursday, mortally wounding the conductor, and injuring six other train men. The passengers who escaped unhurt presented the engineer with a purse for remaining at his post.

—Owing to faults in construction the bridge over White River at Grand Ripple, Ind., collapsed Thursday morning under an air-line passenger train. Three cars plunged into the water, but only part of the wreck was submerged. The overturned stoves caused fire to break out and six persons were roasted to death, two were fatally injured, and seven others, together with a gang of workmen who were repairing the structure, were wounded. The coaches and bridge were entirely consumed. Of some of the victims but a few bones and pieces of flesh were found.

—Fire almost destroyed the business portion of Belmont, Wis., Thursday morning, entailing a loss of $25,000, with small insurance.

—A new sheep disease in the Montana ranges is decimating the herds. The animals suddenly swell up, bleed at the nose and expire in a few minutes. Hundreds die in a day and there is no means of diagnosing or preventing the malady.

—During the past three years 135 organizations with contrivances for the transmission of intelligence have been incorporated in the State of New York, under the telegraph companies act, and the capital represented aggregates $225,000,000.

—The death of Mr. Holbrook reduces the Republican vote in the Iowa House to 50—not enough to pass a prohibition bill. Already the Democrats have begun a canvass for Holbrook's seat, and it is alleged will invoke all the money power of the saloon interest to their aid.

—A Dallas, Texas, special says that a strange and fatal disease is reported as broken out among the cattle in the western part of the county, and large numbers have died. The disease fails to yield to treatment.

—An explosion in a three-story structure at Rome, N. Y., Wednesday morning blew out the front wall, killing two persons and injuring a third. Subsequently, fire destroyed the building.

—The explosion of a barrel of gasoline in the store of Frank Orr, at Alliance, Ohio, Friday afternoon completely wrecked that structure and the building adjoining, the upper floors of which were occupied by families. Fire broke out among the debris, and before it was subdued three other business houses were in ruins. The charred remains of four persons were taken from the wreck, five others are still missing, and are supposed to have perished, and it is stated that several parties who were in the store at the time of the explosion are lost. Windows and doors for squares around were shattered by the detonation.

FOREIGN.

—Owing to fears of Socialistic disturbances, the Austrian Government has proclaimed a kind of martial law in Vienna and two other districts, and trial by jury has been suspended.

—Every available steamer, barge and boat on the Nile controlled by Thomas Cook and Co. have been engaged to convey troops, stores, etc., to Upper Egypt, and will also bring people down from Khartoum in case that city is evacuated.

—In a speech at Birmingham Wednesday night John Bright assailed the land reform theories of Henry George, saying they were an insult to the intelligence of England, and that their practice would be as great an outrage upon landlords as it would be to again make slaves of the negroes freed by the American civil war.

—The astronomer, Klinkerfus, committed suicide Monday in the observatory at Gottingen. "The undevout astronomer is mad."

—Baker Basha, with 1,600 troops, landed at Trinkitat Monday, Jan. 28, and an additional body of 2,000 men landed Tuesday, completing the force for the relief of Tokar. Nearly 20,000 rebels are between Trinkitat and Tokar. The first battle will probably be fought where Captain Moncrief, British Consul at Suakim, was killed by the rebels, seven miles distant, as the rebels are massing at that point. Small bodies of the enemy which approached within 4,000 yards of the camp, were shelled by the British gunboat Sphinx.

—Students, under the leadership of priests, attacked an Englishman and a native at Astorma, Spain, Sunday, because they were distributing Bibles. The police remained inactive watchers of the commotion.

—Reports of disasters by the storm in England show that the ship Juno foundered in the Mersey, and the crew of twenty-five men perished; the Austrian bark Cviet was wrecked off Land's End, two persons being drowned; a church at Newcastle-upon-Tyne was unroofed and the spire damaged; a train was overturned in Ireland, and a large portion of the Northern Railway embankment was swept away. Within a radius of ten miles of Ayr 200,000 trees were blown down, 100,000 on the estate of the Marquis of Ailsa.

BUSINESS.

SAMPLE COPIES.

Back numbers of the Cynosure will be sent to all who wish them for distribution among their neighbors.

The plan is to send them to you in packages of ten or twenty and have you act as distributing agent. If you want subscription blanks and envelopes, please so state when you write; but understand that they will be sent without charge upon application, if you will only undertake to scatter the light as contained in the Cynosure.

Please send for the papers at once; we have now on hand quite a large number.

Many of our friends are, perhaps, prejudiced against the paper and that because they have never read a copy, who, after reading, may be led to send on their subscription.

If you enclose ten cents for postage with your order it will be acceptable, and if any balance remains after paying postage it will be credited to general work.

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

PAPER COVER, PRICE 75 cents.

The former price was 60 cents. We cannot send this book hereafter except upon receipt of 75 cents.

"FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE."

An exposition of the first three degrees of Freemasonry in every village! How can it be done? By sending to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer N. C. A., for a 32-page pamphlet, containing 40 illustrations with explanations, with the legal attestation of the pastmaster of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, as to the correctness of said exposition. We will send, postpaid, thirty (30) of these pamphlets for one dollar; sixty-five (65) for two dollars, and 165 for five dollars.

Edmund Ronayne says: "One of these pamphlets put in each family will do as much good as a public exposition would do."

Many have written: "Send a lecturer to our place, we need one very much.' This is often impossible, but the above plan is much better than no lecture; does not need a church or hall, which often cannot be had; and costs but a fraction of what a lecturer usually costs. Will you see to it that you have one of these lecturers, silent as sunlight and as powerful, in your town. If you cannot afford the dollar or five dollars yourself, you can soon collect from friends for this purpose the needed funds.

N. B. With each "Glance" will be sent an N. C. A. tract, and as the pamphlet gives an exposition of the ceremonies of the lodge the tract will give an exposition of the character of those ceremonies.

Not less than thirty sent on the above terms, and only to one address. Single copies 6 cents.

DELINQUENT SUBSCRIBERS.

Are you in arrears on your subscription to the Christian Cynosure? Did you receive notice with a request to renew? We have endeavored to give each delinquent a fair warning, and then wait patiently for returns. In some instances we have been disappointed, even after a second trial, but we are not discouraged. We intend to exercise the largest forbearance consistent with the financial safety of your paper, and where you show sufficient interest to write and state your case we will consider it with the largest practicable liberality. In cases where we receive no reply, there is nothing left for us to do but to remove the name from the list and charge up the amount.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		91¾
No. 3		80
Winter No 2		98½
Corn—No. 2		52⅝
Oats—No. 2	33	@36½
Rye—No. 2		58
Bran per ton		14 50
Flour	2 25	@6 25
Hay—Timothy	5 00	@9 50
Mess pork per bbl		16 70
Butter, medium to best	18	@36
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	75	@2 20
Eggs	24	36
Potatoes per bus	30	34
Seeds—Timothy	1 15	@1 40
Flax		1 41
Broom corn	02	@ 08
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	16	@37
Cattle—Extra	6 60	@7 00
Common to good	4 80	@6 50
Hogs	5 40	@6 75
Sheep	3 25	@5 75

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 80	@6 90
Wheat—Winter	65	@1 15
Spring		1 02
Corn		61½
Oats	39	@47
Mess Pork		16 00
Eggs		41
Butter	10	@41
Wool	10	@45

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	4 75	@6 20
Hogs	5 85	@6 30
Sheep	3 70	@4 50

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED.

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.

C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

WM. W. FARWELL

Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.

76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

McShane Bell Foundry

Manufacture those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogues sent free. Address H. McSHANE & Co., Baltimore, Md.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

PATENTS NO PATENT! NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent FREE

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Send stamps for NEW LAWS. COL. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

WANTED HELP. Entirely New. PROFITABLE. Outfit Free.

We want an AGENT in every locality. Something entirely new. Our Agents are sweeping the field wherever they go, and making money rapidly. Men, women, boys, girls, all do equally well. Will send you full outfit on receipt of 2 cent Stamp. Don't delay. Address at once, S. S. PUBLISHING CO., Brownwood, Texas.

Vick's Floral Guide

For 1884 is an Elegant Book of 150 Pages, 3 Colored Plates of Flowers and Vegetables, and more than 1,000 Illustrations of the choicest Flowers, Plants, and Vegetables, and Directions for growing. It is handsome enough for the Center Table or a Holiday Present. Send on your name and post office address, with 10 cents, and I will send you a copy, postage paid. This is not a quarter of its cost. It is printed in both English and German. If you afterwards order seeds deduct the 10 cents.

Vick's Seeds are the Best in the World!

The FLORAL GUIDE will tell how to get and grow them.

VICK'S FLOWER AND VEGETABLE GARDEN—175 Pages, 6 Colored Plates, 500 Engravings. For 50 cents in paper covers; $1.00 in elegant cloth. In German or English.

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY MAGAZINE—32 Pages, a Colored Plate in every number and many fine Engravings. Price $1.25 a year; Five Copies for $5.00. Specimen Numbers sent for 10 cents; 3 trial copies for 25 cents. JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship," the secrets, together with a discussion of the character of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a discussion of their character.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

LUCILE VERNON.

cloth.....75 cents.

IT belongs to the class known as the religious novel. It is a love story written in the Pansy style, and so constructed as to teach sound moral and religious principles, in connection with quite an interesting narrative. Indeed, when the writer sat down to examine it, he commenced as a critic on the sharp lookout for blunders, but soon he became absorbed in the story, and forgot altogether his critical duties. He also noticed that when the members of his family commenced to read it, they had but little time for anything else until it was completed. Tried as a work of art by the practical test, it must be regarded as a success. Its influence will doubtless be good in correcting false views, and in helping the reader to sounder principles and to a better spirit. * * * Some may think some of the scenes depicted are not true to nature, but the critic would be likely to find, on inquiry, that the very incidents which he would select as unnatural are actual facts. "We often find that truth is stranger than fiction."—D. A. W. in the Christian Instructor.

For sale by the

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 21. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1884. WHOLE No. 720.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.
J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Editorial Correspondence 8
Wendell Phillips..... 8
CONTRIBUTED:
Lodge Stupefaction..... 1
The Hearts of the People 2
An Unaccountable Historical Contrast..... 2
Faith Healing..... 2
Ebal and Gerizim 3
SELECTED:
To the North Star (Poetry) 3
My Obligation..... 3
Women, War and Drink.. 3
REFORM NEWS:
From the Wisconsin Agent; A Good Start; New Hampshire Notes; From Sauk Co., Wis.... 4
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7
The Rights of Labor..... 4
A Washington Lodge Banquet..... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
The W. C. T. U. in Elgin, Ill.; Farmers' Open Alliance; Feasting and Dancing; Adultery and Lodgery; Joined to Idols; Pith and Point.. 5
Well Done..... 8
AMERICAN POLITICS:
The Prohibitory Convention; American Platform Right; Throwing away One's Influence... 9
THE N. C. A..... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
LITERARY..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
IN BRIEF..... 13
HOME HINTS..... 14
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS 16
MARKETS 16

THE FIFTEENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION

FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF THE SECRET LODGES.

By vote of the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association a NATIONAL CONVENTION will be held in Washington, D. C., on the 20th, 21st and 22d of February, 1884, to discuss in the political center of the New World and in the presence of our nation's executive, judicial and legislative bodies, the principles fundamental to government and religion which are assailed by the secret orders, and also to co-operate for the overthrow of these orders with the convention already called at the same time in favor of political action against the dram shop and the lodge. Able speakers will be in attendance and the very best arrangements for the accommodation of delegates will be made by the local committee. A grand feature of the Convention will be the formal inauguration of the work in Washington for which the National Association has purchased a fine building at No. 215, 4½ Street, N. W., and for which hundreds of its friends have liberally contributed. Every State, county and local society, and all churches opposed to secret societies are urged to send representatives to this Convention and arrange if possible for their expenses: and the N. C. A. Board by vote hereby request all friends of the reform who can not attend this Convention in person to send contributions and collections to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer of the N. C. A. in Chicago, to defray the expenses of this great meeting.

W. T. MELOY,
Chairman N. C. A. Board.

HENRY L. KELLOGG,
Secretary.

ENTERTAINMENT AT WASHINGTON.

Delegates and visitors to the convention in Washington February 20–22 will please notice carefully the following facts. A few persons, who cannot afford to pay board, can have free entertainment provided they write beforehand. Only a few places can be furnished free and worthy persons needing them should write soon. Fair board and lodging can be obtained for a few persons at 70 cents a day; other places charge $1 or $1.25 a day. One good boarding house offers to take 20 delegates at $1.25 a day. Those wishing to economize should write to the undersigned stating how much they are willing to pay and arrangements will be made accordingly. On arrival in Washington delegates should report at No. 215 4½ St., N. W. If they arrive during the sessions of the convention they should report at Lincoln Hall. For further information address,

E. D. BAILEY,
215, 4 1-2 St., Northwest.

The "civil rights" issue is making itself more widely felt day by day. Hon. Richard Nelson, proprietor of the Galveston Spectator, was the other day traveling in Texas, on the Texas and St. Louis railway, with the sick wife of a friend. To make up for something about the color of his skin he was ordered into the smoking car, and upon a very proper refusal to the indignity, he was forcibly put out of the car. He will sue the company, and if wishing him success in the case could effect anything, he should have abundance of help. But what can he expect? He can do no more than an ordinary Anti-mason who attempts a suit against a Hiramite with Masons on bench and jury.

Another "civil rights" case is the decision of the Grand Lodge of the "Junior American Protestant Association" which was in session the other day in Reading, Pa. A Cincinnati colored lodge (perhaps expecting the flood), knocked for admission and started a small tempest. At first the question was said to have been put over for a year, but finally the white vote prevailed and colored men were shut out. Now if the latter were sensible men they would accept the situation with a vote of thanks. The privilege of keeping out of a lodge is yet left to their race. Let them improve it. But they will not, but hobble along, like a lame sheep trying to keep up with the flock.

The Ohio river is dangerous company. Last year it rose at Cincinnati to over sixty-six feet above low water mark, and inflicted immense damage all along its banks. Continuous rains and warm weather first flooded the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers last week, and Pittsburg suffered severely; but Wheeling was more unfortunate, the people of that city being unprepared and the flood being almost beyond precedent. Cincinnati hoped this year to escape the calomity of last, but at noon Monday the tide was rising steadily with every prospect that it would surpass last year's record before night. At Cincinnati preparation has been wisely made to meet the disaster, and relief committees are carefully organized, expecting to have no difficulty in providing for the suffering of the city. The Red Cross Society, lead by Clara Barton, is already on the ground and directs all relief to be sent to Cincinnati, from whence distribution will be made to other points. The demand will be greater probably than last year, and every one who can share with these unfortunates should hasten forward their benefactions.

The Grand Army of the Republic has proved once more how useful and convenient an organization it is for the political plotters. Logan has worked it for years, until it is now one of his most reliable aids in his scheming for the Presidential nominations. The Illinois meeting at Decatur on the 30th ult. was a rendezvous of politicians, who are as keen-eyed for their prey as a Virginia buzzard. Politics was the constent theme outside the meeting, and the list of wire-pullers fills a considerable paragraph in the press report. No wonder the roll has been run up in Illinois this year to over 16,000 members. It is good that the voting machine be well loaded. The more the better for the man who can control it. It is, perhaps, as well that this secret order should be so used. It will the sooner become corrupt and be deserted of good men who have been cajoled into joining it by the fellowship of adventure and suffering in war.

An infidel meeting held lately in Boston organized a Freethinkers' Association. Their by-laws demanded that churches shall not be exempt from taxation; that the judicial oath be abolished; that all laws enforcing the observance of the Sabbath and Christian morality be repealed; that the Bible be removed from the public schools, and that government aid be refused to sectarian schools. It would be of some interest to know what morality would be left when these persons have banished that which is Christian. Their proposition would reduce men to savagery—flying at each other's throats—with no law but that of the strongest. The fact is, although it may in part be hid from their eyes, the only trouble with those who are so filled with denunciation is their hatred of Christ and his holy character. This makes them the most irrational and bigoted of men.

Clinton Locke, rector of one of the Episcopal churches of Chicago, observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of his engagement the other day. The daily press was abundant in flattering notice of the event. One paper attributes the long pastorate of Mr. Locke's to his keeping out of church difficulties. "He has not been a John the Baptist," says the editor, "but a disciple of him who came eating and enjoying the comforts of life, and accepting the amenities of society." This is a very convenient way for human nature to harmonize the life Mr. Locke with that example which he professes to imitate, the One who trod the winepress alone, despised and rejected of men, who had not where to lay his head. The example Mr. Locke follows in his Masonic relations is not badly pictured. As a Freemason of thirty-two degrees, and late Grand Prelate of the Grand Encampment of Knight Templars, he has been far removed from the life of a John the Baptist, but naturally engaged in "eating and enjoying the comforts of life." And he not only did this but taught men so. Rob Morris (who, we grant, speaks the truth here), says of him in his "Knight Templar's Trumpet:" "In the Master Order he has found persons who, perhaps inadvertently, have drifted into skepticism or religious indifference, but under knightly influences, such become enlisted in the army of Christ to fight His foes even unto death." That is, Mr. Locke by his Masonic gospel is able to turn Blue Lodge infidels and unbelievers in pious Knight Templar Christians, ready for martyrdom! The editor of the daily is right, but we fear the one he marks as Mr. Locke's example is not the man Christ Jesus.

TO WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Senza posa—senza paura.

Untiring, fearless, grand in thy repose,
If seldom found a pauser in the strife
Which just men, greatly stamped, must face in life,
Phillips, chief thinker in the rank of those
Who stood for freedom, even to the knife—
For thee New England's living laurel grows!

Large was the sacrifice which thou couldst lay
On our land's altar; vast the trust assigned
Thee for the downtrod. Thou didst use thy dower,
Working and waiting—speaking words of power
And swaying crowds with music of the mind.
All broken souls, that smart with wrong, shall say,
Born for the highest place, the lowly born,
He stooped to serve, and gave ambition scorn.

—T. W. Parsons in Boston Advertiser.

LODGE STUPEFACTION.

BY PRES. H. H. GEORGE, D. D., GENEVA COLLEGE.

It is a matter of increasing wonder to me that men, who are undoubtedly men of good sense, of acknowledged candor and integrity in everything else—good neighbors, frank, free, Christian-appearing men—should allow themselves to be hood-winked by the fraternities of secrecy. It is not charitable to say they have never given the matter serious and careful consideration, but have gone through the round of ceremonies, making confessions, giving pledges, and swearing oaths, without stopping seriously to enquire what they all meant? Have they not taken the whole thing blindfolded?

Put before these men anything else, business, profession, or what you please, bearing the same marks as these fraternities, and they would reject it with scorn. Ask a carpenter to take the Bible, his handsaw and foot-adze as symbols of three great lights in joining, and he would say, Absurd! Ask a lawyer to take the Bible, the judge's gavel and the clerk's inkstand as the three great lights in the court room, and he would laugh at you. Ask the minister to take the Bible, a communion pitcher and the deacon's collecting-box as symbols of three great lights in the sanctuary, and he would say, Ridiculous, if not profane!

Again, ask a banker, merchant or miller to draw a cable-tow around with him in his business, or on the street, or when he sits down to dinner with his family, or anywhere else but under the covert of secrecy, and nothing would induce him to do it.

Again, ask a minister in his conference or his session meeting, after some earnest religious discussion to take an oath with frightful death penalties, that he would never reveal a syllable of what had been said, or utter a breath of what had been done in such conference or session mecting to his wife or son or daughter, and he would shudder at the very idea of such a thing.

It is passing strange that men who would never dream of doing such deeds, saying such words, and taking such oaths anywhere else, could be persuaded to do so behind the blinds of secrecy.

I can but think that if thoughtful men would take time to reflect, seriously reflect upon the steps they have to take in passing through the various degrees, they would be compelled to say, there is something wrong somewhere. Their lodge life is so different from their home life or their business life, one or the other must be wrong. The free and open daylight liberty of the home is so essentially opposite to the nightly, closely-guarded, sworn secrecy of the lodge, both cannot be right.

Nor does it matter how good the aim or design of the lodge may be. Let it be for benevolence, or charity, or good-will, the better the aim the less the need of locked doors and blinded windows and oaths of secrecy. If the objects are only good why not proclaim them upon the house-tops?

Thus did the world's Saviour in all his words and works of benevolence. As expressed by himself, "I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing."

It is something to be anxiously longed after, and devoutly to be prayed for, that the words and character and example of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God and Saviour of men should be more carefully studied and more conscientiously conformed to by men in all relationships of life.

Beaver Falls, Pa.

"THE HEARTS OF THE PEOPLE."

We overheard a young man the other day—an average American perhaps of the present times—say that he had been to see Sergeant Mason at the museum in Philadelphia, where he is now being presented to the eyes of his admirers.

This Sergeant Mason, it must be remembered, claims the exceeding great political value we believe, of being born in Virginia, and of having adopted Ohio as his residence; and also of having aimed to commit murder under circumstances that rendered the act peculiarly atrocious, inasmuch as he sought to take the life which he was especially charged with preserving. While a prisoner was undergoing a trial by the courts of law, and Sergeant Mason was charged with holding him safe for that purpose, he, Sergeant Mason, set up a lynch-court of his own, in which he himself stood as judge, jury, and executioner; deliberately aimed his musket at the prisoner and fired. For this exceedingly foul and treacherous act, he was tried and sentenced to a term in prison. The President of the United States finally pardoned the criminal, at the instigation of thousands of Mason's admirers, and probably of the Grand Army to which he belonges, and a museum-keeper in Philadelphia engaged him as a popular spectacle, at a considerable sum per week. He was being brought forward upon the stage and introduced to the people as one of their favorite heroes; his chief claims to that character being an effort at deliberate murder, and a breach of trust of the most flagitious character.

The young man alluded to was one of this hero's admirers; had been to see him, found him to be a very good-looking man, and declared that he "had the hearts of the people." There was a swagger, a bravery, and a self-satisfaction about the young man that could not be mistaken. He was one of a crowd that had trampled upon every sense of decency, and he was bravely satisfied with the conquest! It would have been in vain to tell him that the crowd whom he called the people, were not the people, but only a disorderly crowd, low, vulgar and criminal in their tastes which needed a decent education. He seemed to feel persuaded that all the American people were admirers of Sergeant Mason; approved his crimes, and would re-elect the President who, by pardoning him, had played into the hands of the museum-keeper and the vulgar crowd. If the museum had presented for admiration an adulterer caught in the act, who had killed both the woman and her husband in making his escape, and had been pardoned by the President of the United States, we would hardly doubt that the young man would have gone to see the sight and to declare that the hero "had the hearts of the people."

Now what is the moral of this tale? It is this, viz: that our public schools are neglecting their duty. No child whose manners have received proper attention from teachers would ever choose such an object for hero-worship as Sergeant Mason. If the admiring crowd around such a character is large enough to lead a young man to think that they are the American people, and that what such a crowd admires is therefore right and proper, it is evident to us that there is a very important branch of education which our public schools have neglected.

Our educators and statesmen are greatly alarmed when they contemplate the evidences of illiteracy among us, but illiteracy is not so dangerous to the Republic as the shapeless, uncultivated, brutal manners of those who make heroes of monstrous criminals. The apologists of these brutal manners tell us that it is not admiration but a simple innocent curiosity that leads the crowd to popularize criminals. The answer to this apology is that curiosity was the impelling motive that induced our mother Eve to eat the forbidden fruit. There is no excuse for gaping at criminals where those criminals have "the hearts of the people." Such monsters are as dangerous to society as their crimes are repulsive to the thoughts of well bred folks.

For our own part, we do not believe that Sergeant Mason has "the hearts of the [American] people," but we feel assured that he has only too many of them; and that the best possible corrective of hearts of such inordinate tastes is to educate them to good manners in our public schools. Where is the heterogeneous mass of our children to receive instruction in good manners if not in our public schools? How many of our families are American? How many of them are capable or desirous of giving good manners to their children? Nay, how many of our schools ever give any instruction whatever that would prevent a child from admiring criminals, reading yellow-backed novels, and shooting his playmate with a pistol that he "did not know was loaded?" We may see even at our railroad depots and other public places more efforts to correct bad manners than in our public schools, so far as any sufficient system or method is concerned. When "the hearts of the people" run in direct opposition to the laws and the courts of the country, and in favor of licentiousness and anarchy, it is time that all who strive to preserve the blessings of republican liberty should take some measures for its defence. And what better measures could be taken than to begin with the manners of our school children? Nothing could be more absurd than to suppose that good American citizens could be made out of children whose manners are so much neglected as are those of our public school pupils. There is no branch of instruction of more importance to the Republic than manners, and there is none to which so little methodic attention is given.

When it is remembered that the Masonic lodge is actively at work everywhere, even in our churches and school houses, brutifying our manners, it will be seen that there is a strong additional reason why we Anti-masons who are striving to restore the purity of our American institutions, should insist upon manners being systematically and scientifically taught in our schools. Our young Americans should be taught to have more respect for the people than to believe that He who "letteth the runagates continue in scarceness," will let the most respectable portion of our citizens remain in that condition. It is an ill-bred insult to the American people to suppose that such heroes as Sergeant Mason have their hearts. This confidence in the supremacy of the bad is encouraged and strengthened by the Masonic lodge, and not till Freemasons are put out of our school committees and school boards can the manners of our schools be properly cultivated.

AMERICAN.

AN UNACCOUNTABLE HISTORICAL CONTRAST.

I.

In discovering America Columbus seems to have been strongly impressed with the duty of Christianizing the Indians. Therefore his church, the Roman Catholic, early sent over missionaries as colonists.

The object of the Pilgrim Fathers was to establish a church home where they could be secure from persecution. The first Congregationalist church was organized in Massachusetts in 1620. The "Brownists," the first move towards this system of church government, had arisen in England only about forty years previous.

Roger Williams, persecuted for believing in immersion, founded the Baptist sect in Rhode Island in 1639, or only about nineteen years from the time that this denomination had started in England.

The first American Presbyterian church was organized in 1684. The year 1573 is celebrated as the anniversary of the Reformation in Scotland, but it was a long time in making much headway and did not become the established religion till a few years after the American branch was started.

The Methodists began here in 1796. The separation from the English church took place about thirty years before, and Wesley began his revival in 1729.

II.

Masonry often claims to be as old as the fall. Its more moderate defenders claim its origin to have been about 926. Its opponents fix a still more recent date. For the present purpose our argument would be stronger the farther back we can date. If it had been 1492 (the first recognized discovery of America) it is conceded on all hands that the first American lodge was not chartered till 240 years later.

The Odd-fellows were organized in England in the latter part of the last century. But last spring the American order was celebrating only its sixty-fourth anniversary.

I believe no other secret orders claim a higher antiquity unless it be some heathen mysteries, from which these have largely plagarized, and which have never reached our shores.

REMARK.

Our forefathers always saw the importance of religion and the above facts (taken from a source probably not at all prejudiced against secretism), show that many of the leading sects we now meet were either welcomed soon after they had been started in the old country or immediately on the settlement of this. If, as it is so often asserted, "Masonry is the handmaid of religion," why in their difficult work of founding a model government did the American pioneers so long deprive themselves of its aid?

EDGES.

FAITH HEALING.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

Health comes from conformity to physiological law. It ought to be preserved as a sacred trust, because it is essential to our highest usefulness and because the laws of life are the laws of God, and cannot be consciously violated without sin. Those who sin against themselves, as truly sin against God, as though they sinned against others. Disease is nature's protest against violated law. It is often, if not always, the struggle of nature to throw off the incubus that has been imposed upon her.

Since health comes from obedience to, and is most pleasing to God, its preservation becomes a part of Christian duty, and its recovery when lost is to be sought as something of great interest to him who made us for health and not for suffering.

The removal of a cause does not always put an end to the effect; for sometimes these effects become secondary causes and are self-perpetuating; but in the great majority of cases the protest of nature ceases when the occasion of that protest is removed, and hence the first indication in every case of disease, is to consider what laws we have violated and to place ourselves in harmony with them. This is not only a physiological, but a Christian duty. It is rarely that more than this is essential to the restoration of health, and if carefully attended to, physicians and medicines might be remanded to those curiosities of science that are more wonderful than practical.

There are, however, many cases of disease, the causes of which are inscrutable or unavoidable. Sometimes sickness comes as the result of sin, and sometimes when we are manifestly in the way of duty and is a part of the sacrifice by which we become partakers with the sufferings of Christ and in a measure bear with him the sins of the world. It was for these cases, the sufferings of God's people, that the apostle wrote, "Is any among you sick? let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he has committed sins they shall be forgiven him," (Jas. 5:14, 15,) which means that God will bestow both physical and moral healing to those who pray in faith. I do not say that we may not ask help from God in all cases of difficulty or ailment, but that there is a class of cases in which we are constrained to say, "My soul, wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from him." Ps. 62:5. That this admonition of James was not intended for the primitive church merely, but is together with its promises applicable to all lands and all times is evident.

1. Because it is in harmony with a great multitude of similar promises that are universally regarded as perpetual in their nature. Thus, the same apostle says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not and it shall be given him." Jas. 1: 5. Now the grant of Divine wisdom is just as truly an intervention in human affairs as the healing of the sick. The one belongs to the supernatural as truly as the other. Again the promise to heal the sick is coupled with that of moral healing. All Christians believe in the latter, but is the former any harder with God? Is it not a greater work to heal the soul than the body?

2. The denial of this gift of healing tends to unsettle the faith in the other promises. Thus, Jesus says, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." John 15: 7 and 16: 23. Surely these promises were not restricted to the apostolic age, and just as surely they include the promise given by James. Did not our Saviour know that we would long for the healing of the sick, and ask the Father in his name, that it might be granted?

3. The church has in all ages to a greater or less extent believed in and practiced faith healing, and notably so in these last days. It has been supposed that miracles and remarkable answers to prayer were more necessary in the apostolic age in order to establish faith in the supernatural; but I believe that there is greater need of this aid to faith now than then. Ours is eminently a utilitarian and rationalistic age. Almost all events are being traced to natural causes, and faith in the supernatural is counted as superstition. It was not so in the beginning of the Christian era. Then amongst both Jews and Greeks there was no want of faith in the power of God to intervene in the affairs of men. The great miraculous fact, that Jesus rose from the dead, met with less objection than would a similar fact from the scientists of to-day. If then, it was needful for the establishment of the faith of the primitive church that there should be signs and wonders, not less is it needful in an age of which it is said, "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?"

Far greater than the question of healing, is that in which it is involved. May we come boldly to a throne of grace and find help in every time of need? God is calling out a peculiar people in the last days who can testify to the truth, and let none dispise or reject their testimony.

Baltimore, Md.

EBAL AND GERIZIM.

As we said before so say I now again, If any man preach any other Gospel unto you than that ye have received let him be accursed. Gal. 1: 9.

Take notice. Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship do this. Ebal. The ministers and laymen of our Methodist Episcopal churches, with some exceptions are Masons, Odd-fellows, etc. Ebal. After twenty or thirty years of assiduous labor and much expense the church to-day is not stronger. Ebal. A large number of our Quaker friends have from time to time been inducted into the lodges. Ebal. In revival work they fraternize and unite with Methodist lodgites to convert sinners and augment the membership. Ebal. Quakerism thus uses secretism in furtherance of Christ's kingdom, he being rejected in the lodge. Ebal. They baptize converts into the church with their secretism unmolested. Ebal. Why do ministers join the wicked lodges, unless because they perceive a golden wedge in them? Ebal. They greatly ignore our reform work, some hate it heartily and do not "come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Ebal. They guard not the young and inexperienced from the snares of the lodge. Ebal. Some persuade the youth to join and render aid and comfort to those Christless fraternities. Ebal. Some having "heard the voice of the oath" and being aware of the evil, yet through fear of man "bewrayeth it not." Ebal. Some preach with much zeal upon other subjects but never declare the counsels of the Lord upon this. Ebal. Some, going to travel into distant lands join the lodge, esteeming Christ alone not quite sufficient. Ebal. Adam and Eve went into a secret lodge under promise of the Grand Worshipful of a new light. Ebal. Some guilty Israelites took their false gods into a secret place. Ebal.

Christ's doctrine and practice condemn the lodge. Gerizim. Paul abstained from the appearance of evil and declared the whole counsel of God. Gerizim. Our church people are respectable but do they know all their duty? QUAKER BOY.

TO THE NORTH STAR.

Aye, there thou shin'st, unchanged, the same,
As when thy light first met my gaze,
As if the radiance of thy flame,
Burned with the light of other days:

Embedded in eternal blue,
Boreal light around thee thrown,
Old as creation, and yet new,
Grand, beautiful, alone.

Ever above the horizon's line,
Comes down thy light sublime,
Undimm'd by distance, cloud or storm,
Thou changest not with time.

O, it is sweet, where all things fade,
Where the fairest bloom to die,
Where life grows dim—its lights have fled,
And fond hopes withering lie,

To turn the eyes to thee, Lone Star;
Thy clear unchanging rays
Still gleaming from their home afar,
As first they met the gaze.

How oft in life's fair morning hour,
I've watch'd thy radiance bright,
And dream'd of friendships, hallowed there,
True, as thy changeless light.

And now I turn to thee, again,
And think of Bethlehem's star,
Which sweetly sheds o'er life's dark main
Its beacon light afar.

The mariner on the troubled sea,
When chart and compass fail,
Oft turns with anxious gaze to thee,
And rights his varying sail.

And so would I, when tempests lower,
And storms and dangers come,
When the tried spirit feels the power
Of darkness and of gloom,

Still turn to Bethlehem's changeless ray,
Our cynosure, 'tis given,
To light the dark and treacherous way
And point the soul to Heaven.

—Miss E. P. Phelps, in the Midland.

"MY OBLIGATION."

In our last issue we called attention to "the binding force of a vow," viewed from a Masonic standpoint. At the present writing we shall look at this subject as it appears to the uninitiated. It may be possible that one class of vows is more solemn than another; and yet we cannot conceive of an obligation having sufficient binding force to warrant a person in breaking a known law of God. It may be true that a vow taken at the altar of Baal imposes a greater obligation on a man to do as he has promised than has one taken at the altar of Hymen. Be that as it may, many persons act as though such a difference existed in fact and not in imagination only. If a man violates his Masonic obligation by disclosing some of the so-called secrets of the order, he is denounced far and near as a "perjured villian," and is held up to the scorn and contempt of the community in which he lives, if measures are not secretly taken to do him a personal harm. But how is it with the man who breaks his marriage vows and abuses the woman whom he has solemnly promised, before God and in the presence of witnesses, to love, cherish and defend? In some cases women promise, whilst at the marriage altar, to love, honor and obey their husbands until death shall them separate. Had that vow as much binding force as had one which was rashly taken, and which required the murder of an only daughter in order to keep it inviolate? We think a woman ought not to be sworn to obey her husband when she does not know what he may require at her hands. But if she takes that oath, she ought to be careful to keep it, or else openly recant, and the meanwhile speak kindly of these men, who at the altar of Baal swore to obey the rules and edicts of an order, when as yet they knew not what they would be, and who, when they found out, in the fear of God, openly repudiated their obligations as something which had no binding force. Ladies as a usual thing are severe in their treatment of a sister who has violated a certain portion of her marriage covenant, and at the same time seem to take no notice of violations in other directions. Nay, more, some of them will smile complacently on the partner of the fallen one's sin, whether he has or has not a bill of divorce in his pocket, and no matter how frequently he may have broken those vows whose binding force are second to none which a human being can take. But what shall we say of that Christian, who, at the altar of prayer in the sanctuary enters into a covenant with God, promising to be his for time and for eternity, and then, sooner or later breaks those vows again and again, until men doubt whether there is any binding force in an obligation, whether it be made at the marriage altar, at the communion-table, on the witness-stand, or in the jury-box, unless it is enforced by a throat-cutting or body-severing penalty. Yes, Christians will enter into a covenant with a church, and then live, week in and week out, confirmed covenant-breakers—staying away from prayer-meetings, neglecting to attend Sabbath-school and preaching services, and even absenting themselves from the Lord's Supper without one twinge of conscience, and meanwhile priding themselves on the pious indignation which they manifest toward those persons who violated their Masonic obligations. Circumstances alter cases, and it makes a difference whose ox is gored.—The Olathe Free Press.

WOMEN, WAR AND DRINK.

In the United States as a whole the overwhelming majority of women are wives and mothers; only a very meagre minority remaining outside of married life. * * * There are a million and a half of unmarried women in Prussia. In Baden thirty-five per cent. of women earn their own living. Mr. Bloomfield tells us, in his work on "Brittany," that "it is poverty that fills the convents of the country, not religion." A poor man has a large family of daughters; and, as marriage without fortune is less easy in France than in England, he places them in the convent, and they are cared for during life. The same is true of Italy, where it is not denied by the people that one use of convents is to provide for "superfluous daughters." There is not a nation of Europe in which women do not out-number men. In England and Wales forty-three out of every one hundred women, of the age of twenty and upwards, are unmarried. The census of 1860 gave three and a half millions of women in England working for a subsistence, of whom two and a half millions were unmarried.

What are the causes underlying this great surplus of women in Europe? It is not, as some declare, because more female than male infants are born into the world. The statistics of the world prove that the reverse is true; that, taking one year with another, there are one hundred and six boys born annually to every one hundred girls. But there is great loss of manly life through the desolating wars of Europe now and heretofore. Drunkenness, and other ruinous excesses peculiar to men, have also depleted their ranks; and the decimation still continues. Emigration thins their numbers, as well as a tendency to rove about the world. While among all civilized nations great fatalities attend the pursuits of men in pleasure or business. The elemental forces of nature are now harnessed in workshops, factories, foundries, mines, steamships, and railways; and, when the laws controlling them are violated, there come inevitable casualties, often resulting in large destruction of men.

War is responsible for a frightful depletion of the ranks of men now and ever. The wars of the world have swept men away by countless millions. The histories of the world which have come down to us have been mainly histories of wars and warrior-kings. "The whole history of the world," says Niebuhr, "turns on war and conquest." There is something appalling in the tendency of the race to rush into war, and in the ferocity and savagery which war develops. When you utter the one word "war" you have condensed into one monosyllable every thing infernal.

Twelve millions of Romans fell in the Western campaigns of Cæsar, while as many more were slaughtered of those with whom they fought. Four millions of Frenchmen, with their allies, fell in the wars waged by the world-striding, ambitious Napoleon the First. From the eighth to the fifteenth century—a period of seven hundred years—the followers of Mohammed deluged with blood the fairest portions of Christian Europe and of Asia. They fell in millions by the sword of their enemies, of whom they, in return, slaughtered other millions. In less than eight hundred years England, our mother-country, had twenty-four wars with France, one of her nearest neighbors, which occupied two hundred and sixty-six years. In the same time she had twelve wars with Scotland, and eight with Spain. During these nearly eight hundred years she was at war with some nation almost seven hundred years, having only one hundred years of peace. Edmund Burke estimates the number of men destroyed, from the beginning of authentic history to his own time, to have been "thirty-five thousand millions."

To-day the armed peace of Europe is keeping between five and six millions of men in camp under drill, and in readiness for war. One-sixth of its manliest strength and beauty—for soldiers are carefully selected, are "picked men"—is withdrawn from all productive industries, and largely from domestic life; while, as consumers of food and clothing, they require for their support the labor of nearly as many more. Their places are taken by women, who till the ground and build railroads, become mechanics and market-women, beasts of burden and human machines. Thrust into employments unsuited to them, deprived of domestic life, they become de-womanized, almost de-humanized; and endure such loss,—spiritually, mentally, and physically,—that the age suffers through the destruction of the finest qualities of humanity. The aggregated war-debt of Europe is over twenty thousand million dollars, and the annual interest on this debt is almost a thousand million more. The nations owing this money have nothing to show for it, and the industry of millions of laboring people is taxed to pay it.

The evil of strong drink, which has afflicted the world from the beginning, still further depletes the ranks of marriageable men. While it is possible to make an approximate statement of the loss of life by war it is not possible to give the statistics of death occasioned by drinking-habits; but the popular belief is expressed in the well-known saying, "The sword hath slain its millions, but strong drink its tens of millions." Charles Buxton, M. P., the English brewer, declares, that, if we "add together all the miseries generated in our times by war, famine, and pestilence,—the three great scourges of mankind,—they do not exceed those that spring from this one calamity of drink." Rev. H. R. Haweis, incumbent of St. James, Marylebone, London, in an essay on "Drunkenness," recently published, estimates the dipsomaniacs of England, Scotland, and Ireland at six hundred thousand. When we take the calculations of Dr. Willard Parker of New York—who shows from statistics that, for every ten temperate persons who die between the ages of twenty-one and thirty, fifty-one intemperate persons die, so that the mortality of liquor-users is five hundred per cent. greater than that of temperate persons—we arrive at a vague idea of the deaths caused by drunkenness, not only in the United Kingdom of Great Britain, but in the United States.

According to the calculations of life-insurance experts the expectancy for life of a temperate person at the age of twenty years is forty-four years. The expectancy of an intemperate person at the same age is only fifteen years. A few English life-insurance companies have a separate section for total abstainers, and refuse all who are more than "careful drinkers;" and their statistics show that any use of intoxicating liquors tend to shorten life. It is estimated that between sixty and one hundred thousand persons die annually from the effects of strong drink, not only in Great Britain, but also in America. In the latter country this mortality is chiefly among men—mainly young men; but in Britain there is more drunkenness among women than is found in our country. Among all Anglo-Saxon or Teutonic nations the evil of drunkenness prevails to a frightful extent. It is no less an evil in Russia; and one needs but little experience among Latin races to be convinced that they are not exempt from the desolating vice, which thins the ranks of men, destroys health, and vitiates manhood. If it were possible to obtain the statistics of drunkenness, we should see that its draughts on the male population exceed those made by war. For while there are periods of time exempt from the ravages of war those caused by drunkenness continue through times of war and times of peace.—Mrs. Livermore.

THE RIGHTS OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5, 1884.

Last night a very large meeting of workingmen was held in Lincoln Hall of this city and was very ably addressed by leaders in the movement. Whatever concerns the interests of labor concerns all men, for the command, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground," has come to all men. To the general object of this convention I would extend my warmest sympathy. I rejoice also in the fact that they, unlike some similar societies, recognize the interests of woman as a laborer, and especially that they extend fraternal sympathy to the six millions of colored Americans who are almost exclusively toilers and producers.

But here our commendation must cease. I dissent entirely from their methods and many of their statements and doctrines. If the interests of labor are the interests of humanity they need no secret methods for their promotion. They will commend themselves to the sympathies and the justice of humanity. All secret combinations with oaths of concealment and penalties for failure to obey the behests of the order, that are unknown to either Divine or human law, are not only inconsistent with individual freedom and manhood, but bear the impress of cunning and selfish craftiness, most damaging to public sympathy and well calculated to excite similar combinations of an opposite character and thus perpetuate the oppressions of which they complain. When therefore these leaders boast of a secret combination of five millions of Knights of Labor, and glory in their power, in the exercise of which they are responsible only to themselves; when too they parade the interests of this order as in antagonism with the interests of others, our sympathy gives place to suspicions and fear. This is especially so when we find the power of these organizations used to oppress, intimidate, afflict, and sometimes to kill such laborers as choose to recognize and obey the laws of the land rather than commands of the lodge.

There are three points of especial denunciation by these orators in all of which it seems to me they are wrong and hostile to the general interests of all. They are of labor-saving machinery, contract labor by the government, and the immigration of laborers. Labor-saving machinery and contract labor alike make labor more productive, and diminish its cost to the employer. It is not denied that it may work temporary disadvantage to day laborers, but it adds to the wealth of the world, diminishes taxes and all of the inevitable burdens of society. Together with the vast multiplication of labor-saving machinery in the last seventy-five years there has been a corresponding increase in the demand for labor and a diminution of the burdens and oppressions of the laborer. Contract labor is generally cheaper and better and generally to the advantage of both contracting parties, but when any advantage accrues to the government by reason of a contract such advantage is to every citizen in a degree.

But we see how tenderly their leaders love the poor laborer in the following utterance: "That the most dangerous menace to the free and intelligent laborer of America to-day consists in the importation, by manufacturers, of white coolies, under the contract system, of the ignorant pauper classes of Europe." They instance that six poor foreign laborers have recently come to Washington. Now since 1808 we have had a law prohibiting, under death penalty, the importation of such persons as are brought here contrary to their consent. We have also a law requiring the return of those who come as paupers, but until within the last few years our policy has been to invite the poor and oppressed of all nations. It is now proposed that this policy shall be given up.

It is not forced or pauper immigration to which they object, but to the voluntary coming of poor laborers who seek employment under more favorable conditions than are found in Europe. These Knights o Labor would needs erect a Chinese Wall not only on the Pacific coast to protect us from Mongolians, but on the Atlantic to shut out the industrious and peaceful Germans and Britons who have done so much to produce our wealth, who are our own kinsmen and constitute so large a share of our citizens; because, forsooth, they are laborers and they are poor. And this is sympathy for labor! From this and all such sympathy may the good Lord deliver us.

H. H. HINMAN.

A WASHINGTON LODGE BANQUET.

THE PRINCIPLES OF FREEMASONRY TO BE MET AT THE CAPITAL.

[From the National Republican, Feb. 5th, 1884.]

The annual banquet of the Masonic veterans was held in the hall of the Scottish rite, corner of Seventh and D streets, last night. Covers were laid for ninety guests, and the tables were handsomely decorated with pyramids of fruit and choice bouquets. Gen. Albert Pike, the venerable president of the organization, sat at the head of the table. On his right sat Senator Dolph, of Oregon, while Col. Corkhill occupied the left seat. Directly in front of Gen. Pike was a magnificent floral Masonic design, with the letter "D" in cardinal immortelles in its center. The address of welcome was delivered by the president.

A magnificent menu, consisting of ten courses was prepared by brother W. T. Crump. The toasts were as follows:

"The brotherhood of Freemasonry—sanctified by solemn obligation and consolidated by tradition and prescription, its ties are not weakened by political controversy, by collision of creeds, or by civil war," by Senator Dolph.

"The beneficence of Freemasonry, by which it has deserved to be honored among men, and yet hath not done so much either for the living or for those whom the dead have entrusted to its care, that those who are to come after us, having ample opportunity may not win much greater honors," by Vice President C. W. Bennett.

"The political dogma of Freemasonry; the people sovereign over institutions. Their right to the enjoyment of rational and well regulated liberty, to equality in the eye of the law, to constitutional government and to the sympathies of human brotherhood," by Col. Elwood E. Thorne, of New York.

"The philosophy and religion of Freemasonry; the foundation stones on which every religion must be builded; the apostolate of free thought, free speech and free conscience; neither servitude nor hostility to any creed; it can incur the hatred and fear of those churches only that claim the right to persecute," by Judge Upton.

"The universality of Freemasonry—which assembles round its altars men speaking many tongues, in every country in the world, votaries of many religions—the Christian, the Hebrew, the Brahmin, the Parsee, and the Moslem—and unites them on the five points of fellowship," by Hon. E. Keightly.

"The morality of Freemasonry—taught by the great moralists of every age; all the tenets of the moral law included between the two points of the compasses," by Joseph C. Dulin.

"The chivalry of Freemasonry—embodied in devotion to woman. The words that a mother speaks to her children in the privacy of home are not heard by the world, but, as in whispering galleries, they are clearly heard at the end and by posterity. If the loving, closed heart of a good woman should open before a man, how much controlled tenderness, how many veiled sacrifices, and silent virtues would he see reposing in it? Fair women are the flowers in God's garden of the world—tender, fragrant and beautiful. To protect their purity and innocence is the highest duty of a Freemason; for God greatly loves them, and they are nearer to Him than we are," by Col. Corkhill.

At the conclusion of the toasts a Scottish song was rendered by Mr. G. W. Balloch and a ballad by Mr. Robert Ball. Reminiscences of the congress of 1850 were related by Bro. E. L. Stevens. The invited guests present were Hon. J. N. Dolph, of Oregon; Col. Elwood E. Thorne, New York; Col. George B. Corkhill, Maj. William Oscar Roome, Hon. E. Keightley, third auditor treasury; J. A. Benson, California; Col. I. S. Tichenor, auditor, District of Columbia; Gen. D. G. Swaim, judge advocate general; Hon. J. H. Hopkins, Pennsylvania; Thomas Somerville, James Lansburgh, Judge R. F. Crowell, Joseph C. Taylor.

The members of the association present were: Messrs. W. M. Ireland, W. S. Roose, John R. Thompson, John Trimble, F. Webber, G. B. Abrams, G. W. Balloch, J. Goldsborough Bruff, Henry Barton, Robert Ball, Col. W. H. Boyd, John N. Budlong, J. N. Dickson, James C. Dulin, H. G. Eicholz, W. H. Faulkner, John A. Foos, Dr. J. B. Gibbs, Joseph Gawler, William Gibson, R. Goodheart, Dr. T. E. Hatch, H. M. Higbee, P. H. Hooe, D. T. Johnson, Joseph Libbey, A. T. Longley, A. B. Lascallett, E. Lœffler, S. A. H. Marks, D. J. Macarty, W. Mertz, Charles Neale, S. V. Noyes, J. P. Perley, H. J. Playtor, W. R. Singleton, A. J. Sanderson, C. C. Simms, L. Stoddard, E. Salter, R. Grant Wilson, W. Hutchinson, J. P. Jefferis, J. H. Bell, J. W. Moore and W. J. Hay.

The banquet closed by those present forming a circle, hand in hand, and singing "Auld Lang Syne."

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE WISCONSIN AGENT.

Bro. Bancroft writes in a business letter from Vinland, Winnebago county, thus much of his late movements:

I had a very stormy day yesterday; preached but once, but have made arrangements to deliver two lectures here to-night and to-morrow evening, and two at a Baptist church five miles from here Wednesday and Thursday evenings, and then go on to Hortonville for next week. Brethren Lowe and Collins were with me at Strong's Prairie and at Cottonville. Had lectures, and worked two degrees at each place.

At Strong's Prairie I preached in the United Brethren church in the morning and lectured Sabbath evening, but they would not let us have the church to work the degrees in. We got a school-house, however, and worked the first and third on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Had a good deal of opposition, but not so much as to prevent the work. A man who said he was not a Mason offered to furnish the tar to make our coats water-proof, but he could not get the young men enthusiastic enough to put it on, and he was too cowardly himself to apply it, so we escaped safe and sound.

At Cottonville everything went smoothly, though on the first evening there was small attendance. Both churches where I work this week are Free Will Baptist. They seem to be friendly to the cause, in fact I came here by request of one of their elders. His son lives near one of the churches, and he at Hortonville where I am to hold forth next week.

A GOOD START.

Man will read. What they read depends largely on their inclinations and early training. Well has it been said that an empty head is the devil's workshop. Many parents neglect to place good reading before their children, then wonder why they are so naughty.

Bro. J. C. Allis, of Holly, N. Y., believes this, and sends the Cynosure to two of his children who have left the old homestead for new ones. Would it not be well for others to do likewise?

Organizations as well as families must start right if they would be a success. While at Rochester Bro. De Jough, who is fighting nobly for the faith, called with me on several of the clergy, and some that had seceded from various lodges. Many expressed a strong desire that we should have an association there to co-operate with the N. Y. State Association. We will, D. V., start such an association. Let any friends in Monroe county who would like to join such an organization write Bro. H. De Jough, No. 47 St. Joseph strect, Rochester. Mr. Ronayne's work has left a lasting impression on the people of Rochester. Let us pray that this may be but the commencement of a mighty work.

W. B. STODDARD.

NEW HAMPSHIRE NOTES.

I met a man who heard Bro. J. P. Stoddard lecture about four years ago in Farmington, N. H., and was thereby awakened to the naturc of lodgism. He stated that when on the Grand Jury a man was indicted, but afterwards thc foreman of the jury said he was not satisfied with the verdict; that the accused was a leading business man and a good Mason; the attorney general (also a Freemason) was called in to explain the points of law, the verdict was reversed and the accused Mason acquitted.

I also met a lady whose husband had been sick. The Odd-fellow pastor called to sympathize with him. He said to the lady: "What a pity your poor husband was not an Odd-fellow, for then he would have friends to help him." The lady replied: "If you are a minister of of the gospel and do not know any more than that, the Lord have mercy on your poor soul!" The curtain falls.

I see by the Cynosure that some brcthren are puzzled to see how the Americans and Prohibitionists can unite. It is easy enough. The rum-drinking Anti-masons and the lodge-loving Prohibitionists must take a back seat, and evcrything will be lovely. I do not hear of any first-class young men joining the Masons or Odd-fellows in New Hampshire.

S. C. KIMBALL.

FROM SAUK COUNTY, WISCONSIN.

BARABOO, Wis., Feb. 2, 1884.

DEAR CYNOSURE.—We are able to report some work done in Sauk county in the interest of reform by Elder Bancroft, our State agent and lecturer. He entered the county at Prairie du Sac and spoke there, also in the towns of Merrimack, Sumpter, Baraboo and Fairfield. On Sunday, when he was here, he preached in the morning in the Wesleyan church in Lyons, in the afternoon in the German Evangelical church in Baraboo, and in the evening in Fairfield, six miles away. The Advent church in that town was opcned for him on Monday evening. He spoke in all some ten or twelve times.

We found him a very earnest, devoted brother, self-sacrificing beyond what is good for the rest of us, for he bore his own burdens and upbraided not. He handled his subject in a peculiar manner, showing that in Solomon's time there were persons whom God called froward and wicked, who talked by signs with their feet and fingers and eyes, and if the Masonic claim to antiquity was true it was a very good description of the system; but inasmuch as that claim is not true, it still follows that as such men working by secret signs were hateful to God in those days, so they must be now, for he does not change.

He created some consternation in one of the craft by saying that a man could not be a Christian and an adhering Mason at the samc time, for this man was trying to do both. He claimed to be as good a Christian as the average, and is, probably, as good a Mason as the average. Bro. B. feared that this amount of Christianity might prove disastrous.

The Elder's proposition is capable of as clear a demonstration as is the forty-seventh problem of Euclid, which thc Mason's appropriate.

1. To be an adhering Mason is to keep one's Masonic oaths.

2. To be a Christian is to be obedient to Christ in all things.

Now if the two authorities conflict a man cannot obey both; so he cannot serve both and be both.

Let us see. Christ says, "Swear not at all." Masonry swears a man at every fence corner.

Christ says, "Thou shalt not kill." Masonry seals every oath with murderous penalties.

Christ says, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." Masonry swears men under death penalties to never bear true witness in reference to itself. As a consequence, in Masonry a man becomes a perjurer by telling the truth, while in law he can only do so by swearing to a lie.

This contrast can be indefinitely extended, but this is enough to justify Elder Bancroft's assertion. He went north from here through Adams county, from whence his work will be heard from in due time.

Respectfully, J. W. WOOD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE W. C. T. U. IN ELGIN, ILLINOIS.

ELGIN, Ill., Feb. 6th.

Having completed my business here and having a few moments to wait for the train, I dropped in at the rooms of the W. C. T. U. on the corner of Main and Chicago streets for a lunch. These quarters are centrally located and so easy of access from all parts of the city, that no temperancc man visiting Elgin and needing refreshment has any excuse for going elsewhere. It has occurred to me that temperance people are not always careful enough to look up and patronize such efforts. Every hotel and every restaurant with a bar, or selling on the sly, is swelling the desolating tide of ruin and every tempcrance man who voluntarily patronizes them is a guilty participant in their crimes.

All honor to the president of the Elgin W. C. T. U., Mrs. D. C. Cook, and the brave band of co-workers who have "set up their banner in the namc of the Lord," and whose chief hindrance is the indifference or inactivity of friends.

J. P. STODDARD.

FARMERS' OPEN ALLIANCE.

WHEATON, Ill., Fcb. 1, 1884.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I notice that the farmers of Colarado and some other States are forming what they call The Farmers' Alliance—an open organization composed largely of those who had been members in secret organizations for similar purposes. The arguments they offer for the change of form are interesting. They say that they haven't time to spend on the long-winded, puerilc ceremonies and flummery of the secret sessions. They mean business and therefore less fuss. They are building their own elevators, and an estimate of saving in one county for a single elevator soon after their organization was $28,000.

The farmers' and other secret societies have been composed largely of men who wished to secure certain industrial rights, and the mode was to their minds the means to that end simply. When we denounce the methods we should, if possible, show something better. They do not like the fussiness of the secret methods, but have been giving them a trial. They want justice and will not pause long to consider the incidental stripes and spots of the animal they drive if they think it will do them service. Secretism will play out; but it will play out all the sooner if something better is shown in place of it.

A. J. C.

FEASTING AND DANCING.

WARREN, Ill.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the council of the ungodly nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful."

Our little town was favored January 10, 1884, with a Masonic memorial service, or, as it was called, a "silver wedding of the lodge." The report says that the services consisted in making a worshipful master, some deacons, a chaplain, out of Rev. ——, and some other worthies. Short addresses were madc by a worshipful master and a Rev. There was music and feasting and toasts were offered. The first, "The 25th anniversary of our lodge." Responded to by Dr. P., who said, twenty-five years ago to-night, St. John's Day, he was present. They had a good table spread; after supper dancing and a general good time. He said: "Many of those who danced and feasted with us twenty-five years ago to-night have knockcd at the door and been admitted to the Grand Lodge above, into light ineffable; no longer seeing through a glass darkly, but face to face, all Masons good and true."

It is known that many of those Masons "good and true" were profane swearers and unbelievers in Christ.

Second toast: "Masonry and the church; may they and all other associations work harmoniously for the welfare of the community." Responded to by Rev. T., who briefly but eloquently endorsed the sentiment, saying that Masonry lived up to would bring one very near the threshold of Christianity and make the whole world purer and better. Fifth toast: "The true Sir Knights of the past and present." Responded to by the Rev. E. The reverend gentleman confessed his embarrassment in his present position, but would respond to the noble toast, and he did at length and eloquently.

There was dancing and card-playing and varied amusements to fill the measure of enjoyment for each pleasure-seeker. All this for glorifying Masonry. And these Masons claim that Masonry fits them for "light ineffable" without a Christ. Here we have three Rev. divines endorsing this anti-Christ institution by their presence and participation, not so true to their calling as Balaam's ass was when it rebuked the prophet for his madness. If the Apostle Peter were here would he not say, "These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of darkness is reserved forever"?

B. W.

ADULTERY AND LODGERY.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Feb. 4, 1884.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Your readers will remember the case of the Rev. H. O. Hoffman (Knight Templar) who was expelled from the M. E. church and ministry for gross immorality. We reported to you that his "mystic brethren" were going to stand by him (we presuming that he had done nothing unmasonic). Well, some one furnished the means by which he started a daily papcr called the Independent. All understood that through the columns of this papcr he was going to vindicate himself. The paper ran on (at a losing rate we are informed) for a year or so and then died. The cloud still rested on the Rev. Templar's reputation and he abandoned the cditorial tripod.

Next a theatre is engaged for Sabbath evenings, a pulpit is improvised, the crowd gathers in, and the ex-Rev. Knight Templar is installed as preacher. We have heard a part of one of his discourses, which to say the least was peculiar. He says that it is all a mistake that there is only one way to heaven. In his broad philanthropy he does not deny heaven to the wicked sinner who repents. To do this is no more merciful than men are. Then the good moral man who deals justly, loves mercy and walks humbly, is also sure of heaven. He claims that in all his ministry he has never held to anything else. His two ways were plainly stated as: 1st, repentance and faith in Christ; and 2d, by the merit of conduct. This arrangement immediately struck us as a co-partnership of the church and lodge in the soul-saving business.

Mr. H. grants heaven to the penitent sinner and the worthy devotee of the mystic art. Christ and Hiram Abiff arc the firm whose traveling drummer advertises himself at Durley theatre every Sunday evening. So much for the moral and physical support which the lodge can give a ministcr.

To one who stands aloof and looks on at the maneuvers of lodgery in the church, in business and in politics, many things become plain which are perfectly inscrutable to one who makes no allowance for the secret or underhand element in society.

Our attention has been called to one of our large railway corporations, which has made a complete overturning in management within a few months. Old employes who have spent youth and middle age in their service, together with others, have been ruthlessly turned out, without pretending to find a shadow of fault with them. They had to go without the formality of a reason and the fact is that no reason exists but a LODGE REASON. For many years the advent of a new boss in any department has necessitated a rush of employes to his particular lodge, if that could be found out. If not, the unfortunate employe had to pack his traps and "git." Even then many unfortunate toadys found an incumbent already provided for their placc.

We believe the Knights of Pythias have been the inside ring for some time and thc only road to preferment lay through their door. The knights of everything but modesty have all had their little day and dolcd out the places to whomsoever they would; but now some longcr pole than all of them has knocked off all the persimmons and the multiform secret fraternities are fairly outmaneuvered Still there is little hope they will profit from the lesson of thousands before them who have sold their souls to thc devil and been chcated out of the price. We hope there is a good time coming when men will depend on their merits for favors and not eat dirt at the feet of a secret clique to obtain advancement in the honest business of life.

OBS.

JOINED TO IDOLS.

HIAWATHA, Kansas.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have felt for some time as if I ought to send you a little history in regard to the way the lodge leads ministers astray, and uses their sacred office to further its own nefarious work.

Some time ago a very devoted minister held a protracted meeting in our town. I was pleasd with his zeal and earnestness in all his work. I did not suspect him of being a lodge man, but after he had gone I was told that he was both a Mason and Odd-fellow. The next winter he repeated his visit, and before he closed his meetings I invited him to my house and said, "Mr. Davis, I want to have a little talk with you on a very important subject, provided I can do so without injuring your feelings."

Certainly," said he, " you can talk with me on any subject on earth."

"Well," said I, "I have understood that you are a Mason and an Odd-fellow, and it grieves me sorely, as I have learned to love you, and I think those are both very wicked institutions."

Said he, "were you ever connected with those societies?"

"No sir, I never was."

"Well," said he, "then you cannot possibly know anything about them."

"Hold on, just there, Mr. D.," said I, "do you know anything about them?"

"Yes sir, I do," was his reply.

"You have been there?"

"Yes, I have."

"Well now, Mr. Davis, could you tell me all about it, if you chose so to do?"

"Why yes, I could if I chose to," said he.

"Well now, if you were to tell me, I knowing you to be a candid, truthful man, would I have a right to believe you?"

Said he, "I can't see why you should not."

"Well," said I, "there was President Finney, a godly, consecrated man, to whom the whole civilized world gives credit for honesty and truth. He was where you are; he saw what you have seen; he became convinced of the wickedness of Masonry and felt it to be his duty to tell what he knew about it. Now have I a right to believe him? If not, why not?"

He made no attempt to answer me, but evaded, by saying those institutions are truly benevolent and highly scientific. In a few minutes he said, "You have got too much of them in Hiawatha. The lodges are prospering, and the churches are waning."

"Just universally the case," I replied, "where the lodge prospers the church retrogrades universally. But you said a little while ago that those institutions were scientific and benevolent. Can we have too much science and benevolence in Hiawatha?" He was silent, did not attempt an answer, but began on some other topic. When I spoke of excluding Christ from his prayers, he said he prayed in the lodge as he did any other place. When I told him that he might do that in a lodge where there were none to object, but that he could not do so Masonically, he did not dispute it. He told me that if I thought it my duty to oppose those things to do so, "but I beg of you," said he, "not to carry it into the church; you are weak and cannot stand division."

We parted in friendship, but I never think of that interview without sadness,—sad to think that one who might do so much in the cause of the Master should be so misguided by Satan as to submit to all the humiliating exercises of initiation and then pretend to preach Jesus Christ and him crucified.

Much as I have respected Mr. D., I can never sit under his preaching again so long as he holds his connection with the lodge. Hoping, trusting, praying for the good time when everything that loveth and maketh a lie will be utterly banished from the church of the living God.

J. W. MARGRAVE.

PITH AND POINT.

Here is another word about Col. Edward Sawyer who was one of the four men who took Morgan from Canandaigua jail and thrust him into the carriage to begin his fatal ride to the Niagara:

"I would say to the readers of the Christian Cynosure that Colonel Sawyer of Morgan abduction notoriety is still living at Grand Blanc, Genesee Co., Mich., about seven miles from the city of Flint, where he has resided some forty or fifty years, I think. In the fall of 1882 his son told me he was ninety-three years old, making him now in his ninety-fifth year. He is naturally an excitable man, and detests the name Morgan. Is not God sparing his life that he may give testimony in the Morgan trial now before the people? Pray God it may be so. —W. M. BEDEN, Hadley, Mich.

A seceder of Delavan, Ill., who would be glad if lectures could be held in that place, and who noted some of his experiences in the lodge in the Cynosure of Jan. 24, second page, gives another cheering word:

"I believe the people are getting their eyes open to the fact that Masonic oaths have got our courts and officers by the throat, and are seriously obstructing the just action of the law, and my prayer is that the people may have "more light in Masonry." May the ball keep rolling and growing till it becomes a mountain that will completely crush out of existence the "mystic tie," or perhaps more properly the "Morgan killers."—D. VAN DEVENTER.

A praying wife, whose husband is one of the 16,000 who have in a moment of folly joined the Grand Army of the Republic in Illinois, writes for a ritual, and gives some excellent reasons for so doing. What wife has a less right to know about her husband's night associations than he would demand of her? May a renunciation follow this:

"As my husband belongs to that society I have a desire to know what it is. I think that every wife should know just what society her husband was going into. It has caused me to shed many bitter tears, yet my trust is in God. If it had not been for that I do not see how I could have borne it. God wonderfully sustained me. He gave me that charity that endureth all things and is kind."

A brother in Michigan, who has been a reader of the Cynosure from its early issues, sits down and quietly talks with us on paper in a cheering way:

"I can truly say of the Cynosure that it has become as a household companion with me, and as I look back on its meager dimensions and remember the contempt, the frowns, and insolence it met with when I first subscribed for it, and behold it now, sent to the most remote corners of our broad domain, I can say as does Job (17:9), 'The righteous also shall hold on his way; and they that have clean hands shall be stronger and stronger.' Such seems to be the case with your noble paper. To show you how the Cynosure is looked upon by those that have never met with it until recently, and to show you that you are keeping on your way, I will relate an incident. My brother-in-law from northern Ohio, a man of more than ordinary ability, said he took seven or eight papers, but said he had never met with the Cynosure before. Reading it over a short time he looked up and said, 'This is a regular hell-and-damnation paper, just as they used to preach thirty years ago.' Said he, 'They have got done with such foolishness down our way. You don't hear a word about hell fire and damnation down there. No, they preach that God is merciful and good and loving; and that kind of talk is all done away with down there.' Such talk was so unlooked for, and at the same time seemed to stamp the Cynosure as holding on to the old landmarks, that it seemed to present your sterling sheet in its true light, and made it appear to me more in keeping with the word of our blessed Master than it ever had before. May the good Lord renew your age and give you strength to fight on."

A Chicago friend is justly indignant at the delays of men in national authority to take measures for the suppression of the Utah curse:

"Extracts from 'Mormonism Exposed' appeared in Millennial Harbinger, Dec., 1842. In August of that year the editor, A. Campbell, thus spake: 'The meanest, vilest, most diabolical of frauds . . . has grown up to such enormous stature of impudence, arrogance and malignity as to call forth the abhorrence of all well-meaning men, religious, moral and political.' But forty and more years have been allowed to pass while that Upas tree has been growing and flourishing in our country. Our political parties have had too little moral courage to make its destruction a plank in their platform. The moral cowardice of our politicians is proverbial. What shall be the result of truckling and trifling thus with evils destructive to our religion and liberties? Shall we wait another forty years and find ourselves involved in another civil war before we crush it?"

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON VIII.—February 24, 1884.—Thessalonians and Bereans. Acts 17: 1-14.

[Before studying farther get your Bible and read this Scripture carefully.]

GOLDEN TEXT.—These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so. Acts 17: 11.

"Thessalonica." From very early times this city was famed as a commercial center. Under its old name, Therma, we read of it in Herodotus and Thucydides. It was rebuilt by Cassander, and renamed after his wife, Thessalonica, sister to Alexander the Great. This princess received her name to commemorate a victory won by her father, Phillip of Macedon, on the day he received the news of her birth. Before the building of Constantinople, it was really the capital of Greece and Illyricum, and and even now Saloniki is the second city of European Turkey.—Schaff.

"Three sabbath days." These "three sabbath days" by no means represent the length of the apostle's stay at Thessalonica. These three weeks were doubtless devoted to his fellow-countrymen, but Paul must have resided in the great city much longer. We know he left behind him the nucleus of a great and flourishing Christian community, chiefly composed of gentile converts. We read also how, although Paul worked with his own hands for his support while preaching and teaching there, Philippi, in token of its loving friendship, twice sent to his necessities (Phil. 4: 16); and as the two cities were some hundred miles apart this would imply a lengthened sojourn on the part of the apostle at Thessalonica.—Schaff.

"Out of the Scriptures." When Paul spoke of Jesus to the Jews, it is noticeable he never appealed to His miracles, but always referred them to their own Scriptures (the Old Testament), every letter of which they valued as divine; and then, after calling their attention to this or that well-known and often-read type or prophecy of Messiah, he would turn to the life and death of Jesus, every detail of which at least the well instructed of the foreign synagogue well knew, and would ask them, Was not this One, after all, the Messiah, the Christ?—Schaff.

The Epistles to the Thessalonians give us some additional information in respect to Paul's course during this ministry, and its results. He labored by night that he might not be a charge upon the infant church (1 Thess. 2: 9); set them an example of purity and industry (1 Thess. 2: 10-12). His ministry was accompanied with the power, and produced the fruits of the Spirit (1 Thess. 1: 3-5). Apparently at this time a Christian church was fully organized, comprising both Jewish and heathen converts, some of whom subsequently became Paul's traveling companions (ch. 20: 4). It is reasonably surmised, from a comparison of 1 Thess. 5: 1, 2 with Matt. 24: 36, 42, 43, that they possessed a copy of the Gospel of Matthew.—Abbott.

"Set all the city on an uproar." Made such a disturbance as affected the whole city. See how the devil carries out his designs; he sets cities in an uproar; sets souls in an uproar, and then fishes in the troubled waters.—Henry.

"Turned the world upside down." They uttered a great truth without knowing what they said. The religion of Christ is revolutionary. Its aim is to overthrow selfishness, and cruelty, idolatry, and all forms of immorality. What human depravity has accomplished it seeks to abolish.—Revision Com. The Gospel turns the world upside down because the wrong side is up, and the Gospel has come to put the moral world right side up. Whatever wrong is now enthroned, whatever sin is now popular, whatever evils seem to rule men, whatever falsehoods are flourishing, the Gospel will cast down, and nothing can be settled till it is settled right: and there can be no peace till righteousness and love and truth rule the world, and all wrongs and oppressions, all falsehoods, all evils are cast down and destroyed.—Peloubet.

"Search the Scriptures." There is no escape from the conclusion that ignorance of the Scriptures is ignoble. He who has learned from all other books is still a fool if he has neglected this. Plato says, "He who loves voluntary falsehood is not to be trusted; but he who loves in voluntary falsehood is a fool."—Monday Club Sermons. There are some things about religion that can be known. Uncertainty about religious truth, where certainty is attainable, is unmanly.—Horace Bushnell.

How to Search the Scriptures.

1. Let there be daily reading of the Scriptures; an influx of spiritual life upon worldly duties and cares.

2. The Scriptures should be studied sincerely to learn what God would teach us.

3. The Scriptures at times should be searched. Find out all they say on some one topic, as faith, salvation, etc., comparing text with text.

4. The Scriptures should be studied by the aid of such helps as a reference Bible, a Bible text-book, a concordance, a Bible dictionary, and a good suggestive commentary.

5. The Scriptures should be read entirely through, that we may have a general knowledge of all they contain, or we will not know where to find what we need, or even that it is there to find.

6. The Scriptures should also be read specially in those parts which meet our immediate needs and experiences, even though it be but a verse or a promise. A new experience gives a new vision of the Bible.

7. Many passages should be learned by heart, and frequently repeated.

8. Nothing will so ennoble the mind as a continual, sincere, earnest searching of the Scriptures, with the aim to live according to their principles and precepts.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

The Bible is the Fountain of all true Reform.

1. To convince men of the truth we must reason with them out of the Scriptures. V. 2. To simply assert the truth will never convince the world unless we can show divine authority for what we say. This is the reason why the enemies as well as the friends of reform are so anxious to have the Bible on their side. Rumsellers, though they do not believe God's Word, are always very glad when a text is quoted that seems to favor drinking. Masonry has a great deal to say about Solomon's temple; Odd-fellowship acts over the story of David and Jonathan, and our Saviour's parable of the Good Samaritan; and both claim to be founded on the Bible. Thus we see that it is the most important of all books for reformers to study. It was an open Bible that made Luther more powerful than king or pope. Masonry boasts that it circles the earth, and is stronger to day than ever before; but it will fall like Jericho before the battle cry—"Thus saith the Lord"!

2. The truth always rouses opposition. Vs. 5, 6. Great reforms are never popular in their beginning. When the temperance question was first agitated a total abstainer had to meet all kinds of ridicule and some of its apostles were even fined and imprisoned. Those who now oppose the lodge have to bear persecution in various forms, but the opposition they encounter is a sign their work is succeeding. Satan rages the fiercest when his kingdom is in most danger. Reformers are always accused of turning the world upside down when the fact is that the world is already upside down, and they seek to turn it right side up.

3. It is noble to test all truth by the Scriptures. Vs. 10, 11. (1) Because it shows the honesty of the hearers. (2) Because it is honoring to God. (3) Because it proves a readiness to practice the truth.

4. The result—belief. V. 12. Truth is always found of the honest searcher. These Bereans felt the importance of deciding in this great matter each for himself. They felt that it affected them personally. There is not a man, woman or child unaffected by the liquor traffic. The secret lodge can not harm the church, the family and our free institutions, without in the long run harming every individual. Thus we see that it is every one's interest as well as duty to learn what the Bible has to say on these subjects.

Light from the Word.

What do those do who try to defend great evils from the Bible? 2 Pet. 3: 16. What is one reason why Satan rages at any disturbance of his kingdom? Rev. 12: 12. How must we receive the word? Luke 8: 15. Does the triumph of evil hurt everybody? Ps. 12: 8; 11: 10; 29: 2

OBITUARY.

HARRIET A. LATHROP, daughter of L. B. Lathrop of Hollister, California, a few days since was called home to her Saviour and her God. Her promising talents, cheerful piety and earnest sympathy with her father's efforts in reform work make her loss decply felt among a large circle of relatives and friends. The San Benito Advance, Jan. 25th, publishes the following tribute:

"HATTIE A. LATHROP was born at San Jose Oct. 11th, 1861, but was raised in this community. She resided in this town until a few years ago, when she removed to Oakland, to attend Miss Fields' seminary, from which institution she graduated with high honors in May, 1881, being the valedictorian of a large class. She was then offered a position as teacher in the seminary, but declined, and has since resided in San Francisco with her sister, Mrs. Fountain. She was a firm believer in Christianity, and a member in good standing of the Howard Presbyterian church of San Francisco. She was a young lady of marked ability, rare attainments and many personal attractions. Beautiful, accomplished, and with a dis position free, generous and lovable, what wonder she was loved by all who knew her? What wonder that in the whole circle of her acquaintances there is not one who is not stricken with grief at this, her sudden departure. Just in the morning of her career, when all life, with its probabilities and its possibilities, its lights and its shadows, hopes and disappointments, was unfolded to her view, she bids adieu to all, and enters into that unknown world beyond the tomb. The thought is indeed a sad one to those who loved her, and we all loved her. As we all love that which is true, good and noble, so we loved her.

"The funeral took place from Union hall on Wednesday afternoon. Rev. I. N. Hurd delivered the funeral sermon, and the Presbyterian choir sang several appropriate hymns. Many elegant floral offerings from friends in San Francisco, covered the casket from view. Six of the young men of Hollister acted as pall bearers, and the remains were followed to the cemetery by a large concourse of friends and relatives."

REV. JOHN ALSAP died at his home in Denmark, Iowa, Jan. 31st, 1884, at the extreme age of 91 years. He was born in Essex, New York, Nov. 4, 1792.

As a pioneer minister brother A. had a checkered history. In boyhood his parents removed to Vermont, where he learned the art of paper-making. Converted at 18, he soon felt that God had a more spiritual work for him to do. Joining the Wesleyan church he became an exhorter, and, moving westward with the tide of migration, made his home by times in Massachusetts, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Illinois and Iowa. He accomplished his best work in Ohio as an itinerant of the United Brethren church. He was three times married; was the father of two children, neither of whom survive him.

Brother A. was a stalwart opposer of slavery in its day, and of secret societies, and a radical Prohibitionist. The Christian Cynosure was his delight. He aided its circulation, endorsed its utterances and directed that notice of his death should be sent to its columns.

He lived the life of a Pilgrim. His closing days were days of peaceful, joyful expectation. He longed for the glory which was to be revealed in him at the coming of his Lord. "Life's fitful fever over," he sleeps in Jesus. W. E. D.

—The Loring bill to provide for a bureau of animal industry was introduced in the Senate. It is very sweeping in its character, appropriating a half million dollars for the purposes contemplated, which embrace the collection of live stock statistics, the investigation of contagious diseases of animals, the extirpation of pleuro-pneumonia, and the inspection of live stock transportation. All this is to be done under authority of the Commissioner of Agriculture. The Secretary of the Treasury is given anthority to regulate export of cattle and provide such restrictions as will prevent the shipment abroad of diseased animals.

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
FOR 1884.

The national representative of the movement to "WITHSTAND, EXPOSE AND REMOVE" THE SECRET LODGES can now promise for the coming year a more attractive LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS than ever before, embracing some of the ablest writers upon Christian reform topics in over twenty denominations. The Cynosure has been known for fifteen years as one of the most radical and uncompromising defenders of Christianity against the error of false religious systems, especially those now organized and powerful in the SECRET LODGES OF AMERICA.

The Cynosure is a welcome family paper in thousands of homes, having a choice family department, temperance, religious and secular news, farm notes, editorial notes on current events, literary reviews, etc.

The editors, PRES. J. BLANCHARD and HENRY L. KELLOGG, will be most ably assisted by the lecturers and agents of the National Christian Association and its auxiliaries: J. P. STODDARD, General Secretary; E. D. BAILEY, Washington Agent; H. H. HINMAN, PAUL S. FEEMSTER, H. A. DAY, ISAAC BANCROFT, S. L. COOK, M. N. BUTLER, W. B. STODDARD and others; and by the following

Noble List of Contributors,

to which additions are being constantly made:

PROF. J. R. W. SLOANE, D.D.,
Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary.
PROF. J. G. CARSON, D.D.,
Zenia Theological Seminary.
PROF. L. N. STRATTON,
Wheaton Theological Seminary.
PRES. H. H. GEORGE, D.D.,
Geneva College.
REV. JOHN G. FEE,
Berea College.
PRES. C. J. KEPHART,
Avalon College.
REV. A. M. MILLIGAN, D.D.,
Pittsburgh.
REV. W. T. MELOY, D.D.,
Chicago.
REV. GEO. B. CHEEVER, D.D.
REV. C. C. FOOTE.

GEN. J. W. PHELPS,
American Candidate in 1880.
REV. J. C. K. MILLIGAN,
Editor Our Banner.
PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD,
Wheaton College.
GEORGE W. CLARK,
The "Liberty Singer."
EDMOND RONAYNE,
Anti-masonic Author.
REV. HENRY T. CHEEVER,
Worcester.
ELDER J. L. BARLOW,
Willimantic.
REV. WILLIAM WISHART, D.D.
ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.
ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

REV. W. O. TOBEY,
Editor "United Brethren in Christ."
REV. J. D. GEHRING,
Park College, Mo.
PROF. E. G. PAINE,
Wasioja Seminary.
PROF. O. F. LUMRY,
Wheaton College.
REV. P. B. CHAMBERLAIN,
Walla Walla, W. T
PROF. T. E. KENNEDY,
San Jose, Cal.
REV. ALBERT SIMS.
Uxbridge, Can.
JOHN D. NUTTING,
Oberlin.
REV. C. D. TRUMBULL.

REV. DAVID MCFALL,
Chambers St., Ref. Presbyterian Church, Boston.
REV. B. F. WORRELL,
Editor "Frec Press." Olathe, Kans.
REV. WM. MOERDYK,
Dutch Reformed Church, Milwaukee.
PROF. J. A. EDGREN,
Morgan Park Theological Seminary.
ELDER WM. R. ROACH,
Pickering, Canada.
REV. A. J. CHITTENDEN,
College Church, Wheaton.
ELDER A. L. POST,
Montrose, Pa.
C. A. S. TEMPLE,
Reading, Mass.

REV. W. W. AMES,
Menomonie, Wis.
REV. W. T. HOGG,
Buffalo.
REV. WARREN TAYLOR.
REV. WOODRUFF POST.
REV. X.A. WELTON.
THOS. HODGE, ESQ.
REV. E. MATHEWS.
DR. J. G. CLARK.

Our lady writers are as excellent as their numbers are few.

E. E. FLAGG,
Author of "Holden with Cords.
MRS. J. S. COLLINS.
MRS. C. S. KENNEDY.
EDNA SHAW.
MRS. L. E. DEWOLF.
MRS. E. D. BAILEY.
MISS A. J. CAROTHERS.
MRS. M. A. TAPLEY.

FOREIGN.

REV. JOHN BOYES, A.M..
Grimsby, England.
PROF. CLAUDIO JANNET,
University of Paris.
REV. A. D. ZARAPHONITHES,
Andros, Greece.
REV. WM. HAZENBERG,
Cape Town, S. Africa.

Other correspondents are being secured in Germany, England, Armenia, Japan, India, Australia and Mexico.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other standard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

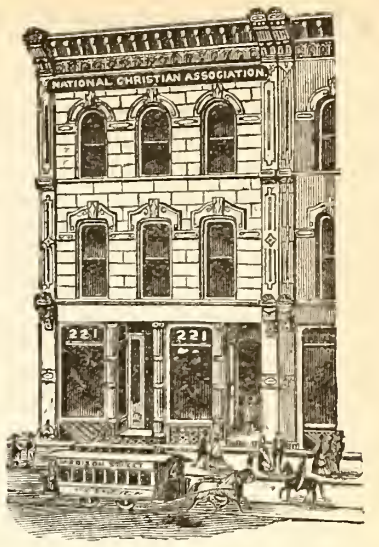
THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.7
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

SPECIAL.—To those who may have had their paper stopped much to their surprise, we wish to say that at this season of the year when there are many subscriptions received for renewal, and there are a number of changes to make on our mail list, there is danger of clerical errors, and if any of our subscribers should not receive the Cynosure as they expect, we would be grateful if they would send us a postal card notifying us that they wish their subscription continued, and we will be pleased to make the correction at once.

ALL REMITTANCES should be made by draft on Chicago, New York or Boston, postal money order, express or registered letter. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. In sending money the amount and what it is for should be distinctly stated. In every instance the name of the writer and his post office address should be given to avoid confusion or mistake.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H oss and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollis ; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; reas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas. C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres., B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.
MASSACHUS TTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas. J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1884.

A GOOD BEGINNING

has been made by the friends of the anti-lodge reform in self-denying, personal efforts for their paper. Seldom, if ever, have the responses been so numerous and hearty. Nobody will deny that this is a good work that should be kept up as much as possible throughout the year; but especially at this season are efforts for the list of the Cynosure successful, and they should be continued with zeal and determination as long as possible. Remember that our cause—that every good cause—prevails only by steady, PERSISTENT, PERSONAL EFFORT.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

FUSION.

The concern lest we should sell our principles by uniting with the Prohibition Home Protection party is both natural and just. The Wirt sketch will show that the rock on which the old Anti-masonic party split, was the rock of "fusion." But "fore-warned is fore-armed;" and we have the experience of their failure to guide us.

One thing is made certain by our very large Washington correspondence, viz.: that every devoted, true Prohibitionist is against secrecy; though some have gone into the lodges under protest.

The New England Convention at Northampton is attracting more and more attention. Some strong men in Connecticut have promised to attend, even before we asked them; and there are more old-fashioned, steady, orthodox Puritan Christians in the west part of Massachusetts than in any other equal population on the globe. Pres. Seelye of Amherst College does not hesitate to avow his sympathy with our cause to ex-Senator Pomeroy, whom he knew while he was here in Congress; and there are, in and near Northampton some of the clearest-headed, purest-hearted women in the world. A note from one of them says that Mrs. Williston's health is recovering. Dr. Tarbox of Boston, writes that he is ready to indorse the convention as soon as the day is fixed, and if our N. E. Convention equals its present promise, a wave of clear, crystal, anti-secret mind will be raised by it which will wash out the malignant secret leprosy from the grand National Prohibition convention which meets in Pittsburg, May 21st. Nevertheless we are pleased when the readers of the Cynosure write us earnest letters, for the price of liberty is eternal vigilance and we have the ruler of the world's darkness to deal with.

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

A LABOR ORATOR, McGuire, claims five millions of "Knights of Labor" of which secret order he is the head; that is one-half the voters of the U. S.! Irish exaggeration.

A GREAT MASONIC BANQUET.—I send the Republican's account of this banquet. "They met on a level," though packed in orders thirty-three degrees high and sworn to concealment from each other thirty-three degrees deep, neither political or religious (see their resolutions)! yet heaped with politicians; all patriots—with Albert Pike at their head!

THE ILLINOIS EDITORS, representing one-twelfth of the newspapers of the U. S. met here in Washington Monday evening, January 4th. After speeches the Republican says, "Dancing was indulged in to a late hour." Did they bring their women with them to dance with?

A MONSTER LABOR MEETING was held last night, Feb. 4th, at Lincoln Hall. Speakers with foreign brogue denounced "furinors;" and demagogues "Pauper LABOR" (not paupers) from Europe. How they love the poor.

THE PATRIARCH Dea. Stoddard, of Northampton, who stood by Lewis Tappan in the martyr days of the Abolitionist, asks about Senator Pomeroy's bribery while in Kansas as Free State leader. He was investigated and cleared by both the Senate and the courts. But charging a man with bribery for using money to build up the Republican party and make Kansas a free State, seems like accusing English farmers of corrupting Highland freebooters when they paid them blackmail to get them not to steal their cattle.

THE INDIANS.—Capt. Pratt has four hundred Indians at Carlisle, Pa. A crowded house greeted his meeting in behalf of the Indians at Dr. Rankin's church on Tuesday, Jan. 22. Senator Dawes presided and spoke ably. So also Representative Cutcheon of Michigan. But Indian Commissioner Price of Iowa spoke with the most popular effect. We will endeavor to give statistics. The Indian cause never was in a more hopeful way. A brass band of Carlisle students played admirably, and were encored by the audience. Capt. Pratt said he could put a thousand Indian boys and girls in good farmers' families in Pennsylvania, but owing to the opposition of secret trades unions scarcely a mechanic would take one.

J. B.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

The tomb has closed upon the "silver-tongued orator" of reform. The iron gates of the old burying ground near Tremont Temple, in Boston, have turned upon their rusting hinges and the body that lately held a peerless, brave and noble spirit is laid beside the dead of centuries, while men who could once have torn him in pieces in rage are eagerly preparing to raise his lofty monument.

This great and representative American had a remarkable career. The son of the first mayor of Boston he received the highest culture and was admitted to the bar in 1834, and soon became known as an eloquent advocate, not only in his profession but as a friend of the anti-slavery and temperance reformers. The Garrison and other mobs about this time deeply impressed the mind of the young lawyer, and in 1839 he threw up his profession and henceforth devoted himself to the advocacy of reform. In doing this he sacrificed not only practice in a profession for which he had spent years in preparation, but also social position and ambitious prospects, such as few young men have ever made. He was well bred, and had a fortune assured without labor; he had all the personal advantages and native gifts of an orator, and there were few positions he could not hope for in his profession. But, on the other hand, he saw a grim prospect. All the wealth and culture were against him, and it meant to fight the world in a very unequal contest. But he did not hesitate. From that time Mr. Phillips devoted himself with unfailing energy to the advocacy of the anti-slavery cause. He was the orator, above all others, by the charm of his powerful logic, his wit, and his command of the English language. And it is questioned whether there ever spoke in America such an orator as Wendell Phillips.

His first great anti-slavery speech was made in Faneuil Hall in 1837, at a meeting called to protest against the murder of Elijah P. Lovejoy. It is said that his eloquence on this occasion amazed, captivated and aroused the audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm, and made him famous as a defender of the equal rights of men. While he could not be called a leader in the anti-slavery reform, like Garrison, Cheever, the Tappans or Gerrit Smith; nor could it perhaps be said that his eloquence produced that effect upon the convictions and hearts of men as the plainer speech of Weld, Finney, Lovejoy, Codding and others, yet as the matchlesss orator, undaunted and calm as an eagle in a storm, amid the yells of the wildest mob, Mr. Phillips will be forever remembered.

His later efforts for temperance, the woman's ballot and the rights of labor have been made in less trying and less famous circumstances, yet they have proved the sincerity of his devotion to whatever could elevate the race. One of his best and probably the most celebrated address upon temperance was his overwhelming reply to the famous speech of Dr. Howard Crosby, a few years ago.

In harmony with the great principles which he was ever enunciating with a force and clearness unsurpassed, he has always spoken with emphasis, detestation and without fear of public scorn, of the infamous lodge system.

These expressions during several years are a guaranty that, had not the weight of years borne upon him, and the fatal disease that at length cut him off already manifested itself, he would have spoken with all his old fire and eloquence against these hateful orders. All his indignation was aroused at the time of the Music Hall mob four years ago, in Boston, and had he not been too unwell for the venture, the Boston Masons would have doubtless heard from him that which would have made their ears tingle with shame. His letter to the National Convention then meeting deserves reprinting at this time:

BOSTON, March 18, 1880.

MY DEAR SIR:—I sympathize with you entirely and deeply in your movement against secret societies. A secret society is wholly out of place under democratic institutions. Every secret society, so far as it is wide-spread and influential, threatens the purity and existence of such institutions, and warps them to private ends and class supremacy. Secret societies prevent the impartial execution of the laws and obstruct the necessary and wholesome action of political parties. The judge on the bench, the jury-man in the box, and all the machinery of politics feel the tyranny of secret societies. No judge, and no executive officer, especially in a Republic, can, with any self-respect be a member of a secret society. He lays himself open to suspicion, besides subjecting himself to dangerous temptation and setting an evil example.

These are general principles. As to the Freemasons, our most influential and dangerous secret society, I look upon their claim to antiquity as childish nonsense, and likely to mislead only the grossly ignorant. Their claim to be a charitable organization rests on the flimsiest and most insignificant foundations; while every fair man sees their hypocrisy in pretending to be a Christian body. Every Freemason swears to break the law, commit the greatest crimes, and repudiate Christianity. History shows them perverting justice, stopping at no crime to protect and conceal their mummeries; controlling politics for selfish and personal ends, and interfering with great danger in national emergencies. Every good citizen should make war on all secret societies, and give himself no rest until they are forbidden by law and rooted out of existence. Cordially yours,

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

—The United Brethren in Christ, Chambersburg, Pa., reports an encouraging increase in its list.

—A card from Florida brings the sad news of the serious illness of Bro. J. F. Galloway, confining him to his bed. His father who is with him is also sick. We sincerely hope this affliction may be but a brief one.

—The temperance prospects in Iowa have been clouded by the death of Mr. Holbrook in the legislature. So close is the vote on prohibition in that body that it is doubtful if prohibitory laws can be carried that shall put into effect the will of the people expressed in their constitutional amendment The wiles of Masonic politicians are likely to postpone the happy day of Iowa's deliverance.

—The Chicago Woman's Christian Temperance Union find their work growing so upon them that they have taken steps to become incorporated with the intention of erecting a fine building suitable for their work.

—The students of Hahnemann Medical College of this city are experiencing the benefits of lodgery. The whole body of students are formed into an Institute which issues diplomas and is an organization much esteemed in the College. Lately a party of fifteen students who had formed a secret fraternity secured control of the Institute by fraud, elected officers from their own number, and propose to manage affairs irrespective of the great majority. The latter are preparing to get an injunction and to punish the thievish aggressors in the courts.

—Our little readers will be pleased to learn that Mr. Hastings, editor of that excellent religious paper, the Christian, of Boston, has a fine page picture in his paper illustrating the story printed in our January 24th number entitled, "Two Ways of Telling a Story." The teacher, Henry K. Oliver, is yet living and revises the sketch over his own name.

—Through the kindness of Mr. Laird, the president of the Chicago Association, we have seen two numbers of an English monthly magazine, the Christadelphian, dated May and June, 1878. These numbers contain articles on "Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and Brotherhood in Christ." These articles contain arguments upon the religion of these orders proving that no Christian can enter them without being guilty of dishonoring Christ. The magazine is the organ of the Christadelphians, an English denomination which has, we believe, a few congregations in this country.

WELL DONE.

FOUR THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED FIFTY-FOUR DOLLARS and FIFTY-FIVE CENTS, paid or pledged on the Washington purchase in one year by reformers is a sign of the times of which the "craft" would do well "to take note and govern themselves accordingly." One more pull and the shore is reached. The sum needed to clear this valuable property of all incumbrance of debt, for purchase price, repairs, taxes, insurance, etc., and put it into the absolute possession of the Association is $1701.27. By action of the Board of Directors on the 9th inst. I am authorized (not instructed) to pay off this debt if in my judgment it is for the interest of the cause to do so.

Friends, I propose to have this matter settled if you will help me as you are able, and we will have the building all paid for in time to have it dedicated on the 22d inst. at the time of our National Convention.

"WILL YOU HELP?

This is the way to do it: When you read this note, just lay the paper down, utter the prayer from your heart, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and then do it, without waiting to give the evil one time to change your mind. If one-half of those who read this note will do this, and send me the results in money or pledges at once, to No. 215 4½ street, N. W., Washington, D. C., I have no fear in pledging to pay the balance (if any remains) required to wipe out the last penny of debt, without crippling our work in any other department. Will you do it? If spared I shall be in Washington when you read this, ready to receive your answers.

J. P. STODDARD.

Before this number reaches the homes of our patrons, some, and I hope many will have made their arrangements to attend the meeting at Washington on the 20th to the 22d insts. It is highly important that all who can should be bodily present, but such as cannot should be instant in prayer for the triumph of the truth. No meeting of equal importance has hitherto been called, introducing as it does a series of conventions, and a plan of work, by which it is hoped to reach and more effectively influence the Christian public, from the nation's heart. Every possible advantage will be secured for reducing expenses and adding to the comfort of those in attendance. Brethren on the ground are men of experience in arranging details and preparing the way for such gatherings, and the able corps of speakers already announced is a guarantee that it will pay to attend the fifteenth annual convention of the N. C. A. J. P. STODDARD.

BUSINESS.

Agents who voluntarily and heartily engage in work for the Cynosure as below are the men the reform needs. Thank God, there are not a few of them, and their labor, though ill-requited possibly here, will not be forgotten hereafter. Earnest, self-denying, PERSONAL effort—this the reform needs more than all else. Read this proclamation to friends in Dakota:

RENEW! RENEW! RENEW!

By this notice I would very kindly invite all the subscribers to the Cynosure living near Mount Vernon to hand me their money to renew before their time expires, and I will remit to the office. Dear brethren, don't fail to do this, and each one make a persistent effort to obtain at least one subscriber and help the cause of God and your country and taste the luxury of doing good. Will not all others go and do likewise? An effort in this direction will greatly increase the spread of light in our lodge-ridden world, and save many a soul from death, and hide a multitude of sins. Let us each remember the words of Jesus, and put ourselves and our cause in his hand, and look to him for the increase. Let mighty prayer and faith unwavering go up continually. GEORGE JOHNSTON.

DOUBLED HIS DONATION.

Since my beloved Lord and Saviour has dealt very graciously with me in opening my eyes to see the great evil of Freemasonry, and since he has given me the Holy Spirit's witness that I am born of God, and the means of helping complete the payment of the Washington purchase, I feel it my duty as well as a privilege to double my former subscription of fifty dollars; which amount of $100 I give for the glory of God and the good of my fellow men. JAMES AUTEN.

Received of James Auten this day, fifty dollars, in addition to an equal sum received heretofore.

Galion, Ohio, Jan. 30th, 1884. J. P. STODDARD.

AN ODD-FELLOW BANQUET.

[By accident only part of this incident was printed lately. We now give the whole story.—ED.]

An adhering Odd-fellow, in the Odd-fellow's department of the Independent Statesman, gives the following experience:

A few years ago it was my privilege to join, by invitation, an Encampment of Uniformed Patriarchs in a visit to a neighboring city, in an adjoining State. We were cordially received, and shown many objects of interest and properly entertained. In the evening we were invited to join in a ball at the City Hall. This proved to be a grand affair; good music, fine hall, and plenty of ladies. Intermission came at 12 o'clock. The visiting patriarchs were invited to partake of refreshments. I thought a bowl of oysters would be just the thing for me at that time, so I gladly accepted the invitation. We passed two or three squares to a saloon said to be kept by a brother. We went in, passed along to the back part of the saloon where we found two long tables. About thirty of us sat down. Soon after being seated one of the committee asked of those at his right and left what they would have? To my surprise one said lager, another whisky, another cider, but most called for lager. When I was asked, I called for oysters, and was told they had none. I then called for a glass of milk, and was glad to see two others calling for milk, one countermanding his order for lager. Now most people perhaps would say there was no harm in this entertainment; but it so happened one of our number took enough whisky to make him silly. He said afterwards he was not used to drinking, and did not know how strong the liquor was.

The three great evils that members of the mystic tie should strive to stamp out of our fraternity are obscenity, blasphemy and immorality.—Masonic Corner Stone.

Now is not that a beautiful note to send out in a leading editorial in a leading Masonic journal? What would you think of the Methodist church should it publish that the three great evils to be eradicated from the organization were "obscenity, blasphemy and immorality?" It is absurd to think of, yet Freemasonry boasts of its great "morality," actually assuming to be the "handmaid" to some of our churches. How proud the cabletowed preachers are of the "obscenity, blasphemy and immorality" as embodied in the rites and ceremonies of every Masonic lodge.—American Freeman.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,

OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,

OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible]intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

NOTE.—In March, 1883, Pres. J. Blanchard resigned the nomination above, subject to the action of the next National Convention of the American party.

THE NATIONAL POLITICAL COMMITTEE.

The National Central Committee of the American party is hereby called to meet at No. 215 4½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C., Feb. 20, 1884, in connection with the "American and Prohibition Convention" called to meet at that time. The attendance of every member of the committee is most earnestly desired and asked. As the convention of the National Christian Association immediately follows these political meetings, a time of great interest is promised. EZRA A. COOK,

Chairman National Central Committee.

AMERICAN AND PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

A convention of the American and Prohibition parties has been called to meet in Lincoln Hall, Washington, D. C., Feb. 20–22, 1884, commencing at 7:30 P. M. of the 20, and continuing through the next two days and evenings. This convention has been called after consultation with leading members of both parties, in the interest of two important reforms, with the purpose of taking steps to fuse these two young and growing reform parties. It is a very important meeting and all friends of reform should make an effort to be present. Entertainment will be provided at the lowest rates and ample provision made both for economy and comfort. Leading members of both these parties have engaged to be present. For further information write to the undersigned at No. 215 4½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C. E. D. BAILEY.

THE PROHIBITION NATIONAL CONVENTION.

So strong an opposition has arisen to the call of Mr. Stewart for a national convention of the Prohibition Home-protection party that there may be an abrupt change in the arrangement. The Illinois State committee aver that Mr. Stewart issued the call upon his own authority and without the consent of the members of the National committee, and intimate that personal ambition is an element in the case. They desire the nominating convention held in Chicago in the latter part of June. The reason for the change is that the old parties will thus have a longer probation, and that a million voters in those parties who are wavering in their faith and await with anxious curiosity the result of their conventions, will find by that time that there is no hope except in a new party with a clean-cut reform policy and men at the helm on whom they can rely. To wait a little for these friends may seem courteous and politic, but it is just as certain today as it will ever be that no reform such as the people demand will come out of the Nazareth of the old parties. The American Reformer says well:

"It is as clear as Colorado sunlight to clear-seeing men, that the next Presidential campaign will be made up, so far as the two old parties are concerned, without any moral or political issue in it. It is to be purely, as between these, a campaign of parties, and in it the quickened conscience will feel no interest whatever. Where, then, shall it turn? To some party, of course, which represents a moral principle, and stands for a real issue. But this party, whatever its name or composition, must make itself attractive by its methods, must prove itself sagacious in its management, must not be too exclusive in spirit or too rigid in its lines. If no such party exists it must be created; and, in the present emergency, if the Prohibition fails to prove itself such a party the creation of another will follow close upon the failure of Prohibitionists to see their opportunity and embrace it, and the failure of Republicans and Democrats to rise above partisan levels and meet the new demands."

THE AMERICAN PLATFORM RIGHT.

CLEARFIELD, Iowa.

The election in Iowa last fall shows that there are many good citizens in this State who are zealous in the cause of temperance, and is a sign that reform is gaining. There are many good temperance men who did not vote last fall, and those that did vote for prohibition were obliged to turn the pure spring water of prohibition into the pail of the corrupt Republican party. That will not bring genuine prohibition. If I turn pure spring water into a dirty swill pail you would not think it pure water. The Republican party is not a temperance party. It has done long ago what it was called into existence to do, and is fully captured and run by the lodge power. It does not matter to the lodge which party is in power; if it controls, the result will be the same, and the country will continue to be used, as kings used conquered provinces, by the invisible empire. Under the present rule, true patriotism that is heaven born would fade out were it not for the reformers, under whose labors we see a patriotic desire manifest at the polls in favor of prohibition. The American party platform contains the necessary planks to float constitutional prohibition to a successful issue. As soon as Americans see clearly what it takes to elevate us as a nation, and the causes that are checking her forward march they will vote more readily against these causes than they did for prohibition last fall. Prohibitionists must all pull against the causes that hinder temperance, and lodgery is behind every evil work and hinders every good work. CYRUS SMITH.

THROWING AWAY ONE'S INFLUENCE.

You throw away your vote, or you lose your influence, say some, by acting in opposition to the majority when you are alone or of a small minority. But, as one's influence depends upon his character, save as affected by reputation, if standing alone is standing for the right, it should increase his influence, as that would give him a better character than to stand with the majority for the wrong.

If the enemies of an upright man destroy his good reputation where he is not personally known (they cannot his character), his influence may be largely diminished where not well known. But in that case his enemies might more comprehensively and truthfully say, We will seek to destroy his influence by destroying his reputation. But where he is known there his influence will be valued according to the estimated value of his character. Perhaps no participator in incipient reforms has escaped such a lessening of his influence for a time, but some at least have received a corresponding amount of honor in a later period of the reform, and others have all the while had the approval that is attached to a consciousness of doing right; and if from a right motive, the approval and the reward of God the Judge of all.

We have then, these reasons for departing from the majority in a wrong course: that we may do right, that reforms may be started, that we may have the well-doer's reward and that our influence may not be thrown away or lost, or worse than these. R. S. N.

—The Union Signal commends thus the effort to unite the political fortunes of Americans and prohibitionists:

"The American party managers—Senator Pomeroy at their head, have addressed an open letter to the executive committee of the prohibition party, asking that there may be such united action of the two parties as will result in one nomination for both. The American party has as strong a prohibition plank as the party committed to that cause and while its main effort is directed against secret organizations as contrary to the spirit of American institutions and true liberty, it nevertheless embraces all the reforms that are dear to the hearts of prohibitionists."

THE HOME.

THE HERITAGE.

The rich man's son inherits lands,
And piles of brick, and stone, and gold;
And he inherits soft white hands,
And tender flesh that fears the cold;
Nor dares to wear a garment old;
A heritage, it seems to me,
One scarce could wish to hold in fee.

The rich man's son inherits cares;
The bank may break, the factory burn.
A breath may burst his bubble shares,
And soft white hands could scarcely earn
A living that would serve his turn;
A heritage, it seems to me,
One would not wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
Stout muscles and a sinewy heart,
A hearty frame, a heartier spirit;
King of two hands, he does his part
In every useful toil and art;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to held in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
Wishes o'erjoyed with humble things,
A rank adjudged by toil-worn merit,
Content that from employment springs,
A heart that in his labor sings;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

What doth the poor man's son inherit?
A patience learned by being poor;
Courage, if sorrow come, to bear it;
A fellow-feeling that is sure
To make the outcast bless his door;
A heritage, it seems to me,
A king might wish to hold in fee.

O, rich man's son! there is a toil,
That with all other level stands;
Large charity doth never soil,
But only whitens soft white hands—
This is the best crop from thy lands;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being rich to hold in fee.

O, poor man's son! scorn not thy state;
There is worse weariness than thine,
In merely being rich and great;
Toil only gives the soul to shine,
And makes rest fragrant and benign!
A heritage, it seems to me,
Worth being poor to hold in fee.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
Are equal in the earth at last;
Both, children of the same dear God,
Prove title to your heirship vast
By record of a well filled past;
A heritage, it seems to me,
Well worth a life to hold in fee.

—James Russell Lowell.

A MAN OF FAITH.

Rev. Dr. Goodell, of St. Louis, was detained a week or two ago from various ecclesiastical meetings in which he had been appointed to perform important duties, by the illness and death of Stephen M. Edgill, an honored member of his church. Who was this man for whose sake congregational councils were disappointed? A writer in the Advance discloses the secret of his life in the following touching and instructive recital:

Ten years ago I met this man in St. Louis. He was a layman in Pilgrim church, which had then a great building, but only little more than one hundred members. Earlier, when the church was in its infancy, he used, himself, to carry bundles of kindlings and baskets of coal to the chapel, and fill the lamps, to save the feeble flock the cost of a sexton. I had not been long out of the seminary, and with others can never forget his helpful way with young ministers who sometimes stood in Pilgrim pulpit. I had heard of his benevolence sometimes amounting to tens of thousands in a single year, of his modest, unobtrusive way of helping the poor and needy, of his pure life unspotted by the world, of his business integrity, the motto of the commercial centre where he had lived for almost half a century. But one incident in his life is more to me than all else that may be said of him, now that he is gone. His pastor, Dr. Goodell, was in Europe, his family away, and his associates in business, occupied. At such a time I received a pressing invitation to come and see him alone in his room. When we were seated, the doors being closed and the curtains drawn, he said:

"You know the troubles in the business world?"

"Yes."

"Did it ever occur to you that while so many others are going down, I might fail?"

"No."

"Please look over these papers."

We spent over an hour on this. At its close he said:

"Now you see how it is. I have been helping these men in other cities, carrying them to save their credit, as I hoped. They have failed or at least suspended payment. They have my money. Stocks have gone down to almost nothing. I cannot see beyond the next five days. It may not be utter ruin but it looks like it now."

Though usually a man of few words, he talked for a long time about these fearful possibilities—of that dreadful, ill-matched pair, old age and want. At last he said:

"You know that I have each year set aside one-tenth of my income for the Lord, and given it freely. You know that I have often gone beyond that. I thought I was sincere in it but God may have seen pride and selfishness, where I suspected it not."

There I interrupted him. I could not bear to hear that. I knew it was not so, for a purer, humbler man I had not known. But he went on:

"When I was converted, I said, Now I cannot speak in meeting as others can. I cannot pray as others do; I have no such talent, but I will make money for the Lord and pray in secret. I will stand in my place and do what I can. But see how it has come out—and—"

All this time he had restrained his feeling and held back the tears, but when he only half mentioned the name of the loved one, the light of his home, he broke down and wept aloud.

"But what is to be done, what can I do?"

"Pray."

And there with the stocks and notes and accounts before us we knelt down, and as did Hezekiah of old, this man spread it all out before heaven and talked to God about it as a child talks to its mother. I never heard such a prayer before, and perhaps shall never again. Then we were silent for a long time. When he arose his face was as the face of an angel. Jacob had met his Lord at the Jabbok and prevailed. God had sent his angel of peace. His tears were falling like rain but they were tears of joy now.

"I do not know just how, but it is surely coming out all right," he said.

It was my turn then, and I proposed a praise-meeting.

He read a psalm from the Bible which he kept always in his desk.

Now, one may have what theories he chooses about special answer to prayer. We shall not quarrel about that. We know that prayer is often answered out of the line of the request; answered in a wiser and better way than the petitioner knew how to ask. In three days the whole situation of this man's business affairs had changed. Those he had trusted did not fail. Stocks went up instead of down, and within a year everything with my friend was as prosperous as ever.

Would you like to know the passage that he read that day? It was the 46th psalm:

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea: Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. There is a river the streams whereof make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High."

MEN WHO CANNOT BE TRUSTED.

"Confidence," said the great Lord Chatham, "is a plant of slow growth." Those whose confidence has been abused and subverted, know by experience how true this is. There must be a sure foundation on which a reasonable confidence can be built; and when men have torn away this foundation they can never be trusted, except by those who are ignorant of their character.

When a man has once been found guilty of falsehood, deception and misrepresentation, he cannot be trusted by those who know the facts. When a judge has decided a case unjustly, when a jury have brought in a false verdict, when a church or ecclesiastical body has violated the principles of Scripture, law, and Gospel, to condemn the innocent, they have placed themselves where no honest man can ever put confidence in them, until by hearty repentance and open confession they show themselves willing to begin a new life.

A man who has broken one agreement, cannot be trusted to make another. A man who has slandered those who have told him his faults, may not have the privilege of having his faults pointed out, but may perhaps be permitted to carry them on to the judgment day, without protest. He who defends himself in wrong-doing is likely to have his fill of wrong, and reap its bitter fruits.

Men who have sold themselves for gain, or have bartered principle for office or bread; men who have winked at lies told for their benefit, and who have gathered the wages of unrighteousness, and stifled their denunciations of wrong lest they should injure their pecuniary prospects, can never be trusted.

We need men in this age who will not lie, and who will not allow any one else to lie for them. We need men who shake their hands from holding bribes,—who cannot be bought, coaxed, or whedled, or frightened; men who stand in the strength and majesty of God; men around whom Satan fawns and frowns in vain; men who rebuke sin in a friend as strongly as in a foe, and who deal with themselves more sternly than they deal with others; men who are often alone with God, and in the white light of his righteousness see their own weaknesses, faults, frailties, and sins, and who, coming forth from his presence, pardoned and purged from all iniquity, walk in the light as he is in the light, in uprightness, in holiness, in purity, and fidelity to the end.—The Common People.

SLOVENLY READING.

The Journal of Progress warns all men, old and young, against an evil thing which has been described as the "prevailing pestilence of slovenly reading." This pestilence has laid low many a one who began life with excellent prospects. It is ruinous both to mind and morals. It is apt even to injure a man's business habits and prevent him from winning success in practical affairs. In time it will confound all his faculties; it will destroy his capacity for clear perception, for precise thought, and for proper reasoning. It will throw into confusion his judgment and his memory. If he does not get rid of it he can never become a good writer, or do any literary work of any kind worth looking at. How many slovenly readers are to be found in these times? They will, in their slovenly fashion, read a newspaper article, perhaps a very excellent one, and when they have got to the end of it, or, as they say, when they have "looked through it" or "glanced over it," you will find that they are unable to give an accurate account of its argument, or that they do not apprehend its fundamental points, or that they have lost one of its links, or that they have overlooked an important illustration, or that they have failed to seize a word which is the very hinge of the writer's thought, or that they have wholly misunderstood the drift and purpose of the article which they have wasted their time in glancing over. These slovenly readers are an affliction to careful and correct writers. When such a writer sees how his reasoning and his language are distorted by them, his mind is apt to become ruffled, and every one knows how a ruffled mind unfits a man for the work of perspicatious composition. We are of the opinion that the prevailing pestilence of slovenly reading is largely due to the slovenly way in which children are taught to read at school. Teachers must be very careful about this thing; they must teach their scholars to read with precision and understanding, thinking of every word, getting the sense of each sentence, and grasping the full meaning of any piece that may be before them.

The fact that religious revivals are not necessarily revivals of righteousness is becoming every day more apparent. If it is quite possible to be as religious as a Hottentot or a Turk and yet have no Christianity, spurious revivals are just what might be expected. A false religion and a false Christ are doubtless among the most efficient means employed by the father of lies to build up his kingdom. In a revival of genuine religion there are conversions to truth, practical as well as theoretical. True conversion is not only a change of heart but of life—a change from evil practices, habits, and opinions to such as are good and pure and upright. The world will not be saved through a church that is unsaved—one that affiliates with and is actuated by the spirit of compromise with evil and wrong doing. In such churches there may be revivals of religion but not of Christianity. Where there is pride, fashion, worldly conformity, love of pleasure and amusement, indulged in and sanctioned by a church, there will assuredly be a revival of the same in their religious in-gatherings. On the other hand, when a church is baptized with the Holy Ghost, and moral purity, honesty, truth and love abound, there will be a revival of the same spirit of power, bringing forth the fruits of righteousness and true holiness.

Think twice before you believe every evil story you hear, and think twenty times before you repeat it. Say to yourself, "This may not be true, or it may be exaggerated," unless you have proof of the veracity of your informant. Persons sometimes tell falsehoods, they often make mistakes, and they sometimes "hear wrong."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

ANGELS.

And do good angels care for me?
Can such a wonder ever be?
Ah! sure they are too great;
Too glorious, in their raiment white,
With wings so beautiful and bright,
Upon a child to wait.

Yet so it is; if good and mild,
I try to be a holy child,
My angel will rejoice,
And sound his golden harp to Him
Who dwells above the cherubim;
And praise Him with his voice.

But if I sin against the Lord,
By evil thought, or evil word,
Or do a wicked thing—
Ah then! what will my angel say?
Why he will turn his head away
And hide it with his wing.

Then let us pray to God, who sends
His angels down to be our friends
And helps us with His grace,
That He our thoughts and words would keep,
Lest I should make my angel weep,
And hide his glorious face.

—Selected.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

ULRICH ZWINGLI.

The boys aud girls who are reading Cæsar's Commentaries do not need to be told about the bravery of the Helvetians, the aneient inhabitants of Switzerland. They know the famous story of the tribe who burned their towns and villages among the mountains and set out altogether to find themselves another home farther west. They know how these Helvetians were met and defeated by the Roman General Cæsar, and how they were compelled—all that remained after a bloody battle—to return to the country which they had left. Cæsar testifies to the courage of these soldiers from the mountains, and acknowledges that on the day when he won the battle no man in his army saw the back of a foe.

From his day to ours the Swiss have been noted for their bravery and love of independence. Their small country, lying as it does between Germany, Austria, Italy and France, has often been fought over and sometimes conquered. Yet, through the wars of many years, the Swiss fought their way to freedom, and liberty is now their preeious possession, as it is our own.

Their country is divided, as your geographies will tell you, into twenty-two Cantous. These, like the thirteen States whieh originally made up the American Union, form what is ealled a Confederation. That is, they are bound to unite in certain things which concern them all, sueh as war against a eommon enemy; but iu regard to its own speeial affairs each Canton is independent of the others.

All this it is neeessary to remember when readiug about Ulrich Zwingli. His name, whieh seems so strange to us, is very dear to the hearts of many of his countrymen, for he it was who taught them to be free in religious matters, as they had already become free in others.

Zwingli began life two months after Luther. He was born on the first day of the year 1484, iu a mountain village ealled Wildhaus. His father was a plain, substantial farmer, who, like the parents of John Huss, knew the worth of a good edueation, and took pains to seeure it for his son.

Young Ulrich studied diligently in the different sehools to whieh he was sent. When he arrived at manhood he had beeome not only a good seholar, but also a polished, agreeable gentleman. Like Luther he was fond of musie and cultivated it suceessfully.

Best of all, he loved to study the Bible, whieh he had learned to read in the original Hebrew and Greek. It is said that he eopied the whole of the New Testament with his own haud, and that by degrees he committed all of it to memory. This study of the Scriptures showed him, as it showed Wyeliffe in England, and Huss in Bohemia, and Luther in Germany, that there were many wrong things in the praetiee of the ehurch in whieh he had been brought up—the powerful and eorrupt Church of Rome.

He beeame a priest when he was twenty-two years old, and was made the pastor of the village of Glarus, near his own birthplace. His preaehing was unlike that of the other priests around him, for while they taught the people to bow down before pictures and images, and to pray to the Virgin Mary and to the saints, he taught them simply about the life and words of Christ.

The Swiss, who had for eenturies been compelled to fight in defense of their fatherland, had learned to love the arts of war too well, aud had got into the habit of hiring themselves out as soldiers to auy one who would pay them for their serviees. Thus it happened that while Zwingli was at Glarus he was three times ordered to aet as chaplaiu to a body of men who weut from there to fight iu Italy. Zwingli obeyed orders aud went, yet he used his iufluence against this dishouorable mode of saerificiug the lives of his eountrymen.

When the men of his parish were going off for a fourth time he removed to another plaee, called Einsiedler, and became a preacher there. At Einsiedler there was a convent that containcd an image of the Virgin, whieh was said to possess the power of performiug miracles. Over the eonvent gate was written: "Here the full forgiveuess of all sins is to be obtained." The stories about the image, and the claim that those who worshiped it should have their sins forgiven, aroused Zwingli to preach very plainly against all sueh teaching. Christ he said, and said truly, was the only saerifice for sin. Through trusting in his blood, and not through the prayers of the Virgin or the saints, could sinners hope for pardon.

It was in 1417 that Tetzel sold in Wittenburg the indulgences which excited the holy wrath of Luther. The next year a seller of indulgences named Samson reached Einsiedler. He was a coarse, rough man, who promised the mountaineers that, if they would buy his wares, they should be forgiven not only for past sins but also for others which they might eommit in future. Of course such promises were both false in themselves and also an encouragement to do wrong.

Zwingli stationed himself at the gate of the abbey and prevented the friar from entering. At the same time he addressed the people on the dreadful deceit which Samson was practicing.

Some time after that the Reformer became a preacher of the Collegiate church of Zurich. Thither Samson also went to drive his wicked trade, and there again Zwingli had the pleasure of preventing him from imposing upon the people. Yet, for all that, Samson went back from Switzerland to Italy with an immense amount of money.

The trade in indulgences was not the only evil which Zwingli opposed. He preached successfully against several wrong doctrines of the Romish church until, at length, he had the satisfaction of seeing the Canton of Zurich throw off its yoke of obedience to the Pope. It was the first Canton to become Protestant. Several others quickly followed.

Then, unfortunately, a war arose between the Protestant and Catholie Cantons. An engagement took place at Cappel, not far from Zurich, and on the field of battle Zwingli met his death. Two soldiers who saw him wounded asked whether he would have a priest to whom he might confess his sins. Zwingli refused. They then told him to commit his soul to the care of the Virgin Mary. Zwingli shook his head. Then one who recognized the Reformer struck him with his sword upon the throat, exclaiming: "Die, obstinate heretie!"

His body was burned by his enemies and his ashes were thrown to the winds. Yet his name still lives as that of a good and brave man who dearly loved the truth and was willing to die in its defense.—Intelligencer.

DUST ON YOUR GLASSES.

I don't often put on my glasses to examine Katy's work; but one morning, not long since, I did so upon entering a room she had been sweeping.

"Did you forget to open the windows when you swept, Katy?" I inquired. "This room is very dusty."

"I think there is dust on your eye-glasses, ma'am," she said modestly.

Aud sure enough the eye-glasses were at fault, and not Katy. I rubbed it off, and everything looked bright and clean, the carpet like new, and Katy's face said:

"I am glad it was the glasses, and not me this time."

This has taught me a good lesson, I said to myself, upon leaving the room, and one that I shall remember through life.

In the evening Katy eame to me with some kitchen trouble. The eook had done so-and-so, and she had said so-and-so. When her story was finished I said smilingly:

"There is dust on your glasses, Katy. Rub it off, you will see better."

She understood me, and left the room.

I told the incident to the children, and it is quite eommon to hear them say to eaeh other:

"Oh, there is dust on your glasses."

Sometimes I am referred to:

"Mamma, Harry has dust on his glasses. Can't he rub it off?"

When I hear a person eritieisiug another, eondemning, perhaps, a eourse of aetion he knows nothing about, drawing inferenees prejudieial to the persons, I think: "There's dust on your glasses. Rub it off." The truth is, everybody wears these very same glasses.

I said this to John one day, some little matter eoming up that ealled forth the remark: "There are some people I wish would begiu to rub, then," said he. "There is Mr. So-and-so, and Mrs. So-and-so, they are always ready to pick at some one, to slur, to hint; I don't know I don't like them."

"I think my son John has a wee bit on his glasses just now."

He laughed and asked:

"What is a boy to do?"

"Keep your own well rubbed up, and you will not know whether others need it or not."

"I will," he replied.

I think, as a family, we are all profiting by that little incident, and through life will never forget the meaning of "There is dust on your glasses."—Observer.

A man met a little fellow on the road earrying a basket of blackberries, and said to him: "Sammy, where did you get such niee berries?"

"Over there, sir, in the briars."

"Won't your mother be glad to see you come home with a basket full of such niee, ripe fruit?"

"Yes, sir," said Sammy, "she always seems mighty glad when I hold up the berries, and I don't tell anything about the briars in my feet." The man rode on, resolving that henceforth he would hold up the berries only and say nothing about the briars.

TEMPERANCE.

We cannot help expressing our surprise and sorrow at the following editorial utterance which appeared in the Congregationalist not long since:

"We are friends of the temperance cause so warm that we are anxious to be judicious ones. And we earnestly hope that such a convention (i. e., in favor of constitutional prohibition)—if held—will first address itself to the most careful consideration of three questions—particularly the last—viz: (1) What reasonable probability is there that such a proposed amendment could be enacted? (2) What reasonable probability is there that, if enacted, it eould be enforced? and (3) Is there not a reasonable probability that the failure to carry such an amendment, and to enforce it, if carried, must leave the future of the temperance cause among us in a worse state than it now is?"

Such an attitude as the Congregationalist here takes would strike the death-knell of any good cause whieh had not as yet reached the ultimate of success. Sueh advice as this would have kept the young men of the hay stack from attempting anything in the way of foreign mission work. It would have kept Phillips and Garrison from doing anything to free the slaves. It would prevent any reform. Thank God, the men and women who move the world upward are made of sterner stuff than to be intimidated and held back by such pusillanimous querying as this. We trust the editors of this paper, which has the power to greatly aid or retard every good cause, will reconsider these unwise words, and throw all their strength into an earnest and unflagging effort to win Massachusetts, yes, and the whole nation, for prohibition. Come, brothers, right about face. With you, or without you, prohibition is coming.—Golden Rule.

TEMPERANCE IN DENMARK.

The Danes are waking up to fight the rum devil. In Copenhagen the number of public houses is to be reduced from 1350 to 300. Landlords are forbidden to serve out drink to any person under age, male or female, or to any one who is already under the influence of drink. A drunken person is to be sent home in a covered carriage at the expense of the landlord in whose house he he took his last glass. No girl is to be allowed to stand behind a drinking bar to fascinate the young men, and beguile them to their ruin.

One of the most horrible features of the drink trade in Great Britain is the bar-maid. Behind the bars all through the kingdom, are to be seen attractive and intelligent young women, whose beauty and sprightliness is their chief recommendation, and who chat with the young men persuading them to drink, that they may bring revenue to their employers, and so pave the way for their own degradation, ruin and damnation.

The Amerieau public would be shocked to see a well-dressed and respectable-appearing young woman either before or behind a drinking bar; but sueh seenes are by no means unusual in Great Britain. We ean easily imagine what snares are here set for young and unwary men; and it needs no prophet to tell the ultimate fate of the young woman who stands behind the bar, deals out the deadly drink to others, tastes it herself, and forms acquaintances and assoeiations which too often lead her into downward paths, and close her earthly history in the potter's field. May God give eourage and success to those who are fighting this deadly evil.—Safeguard.

REGULATING THE ELEPHANT.

Every body had heard that the great elephant was loose, and several families whose gardens he had torn up and whose boys he had trampled upon were eertain of it. There was great excitement and the town held a meeting to deeide what should be done. They did not want to exterminate him; in faet, many of them did not believe they could exterminate him, for he was a pretty big elephant. Besides, he was useful in his proper place—in shows, in India, and in story books.

"Our best plan is to try and regulate him," said an enthusiastie speaker. "Let us build toll gates all along the route we find he is going to take, and make him pay—"

"Yes, but that leaves him roaming round," shrieked an old woman; "and I don't want my boy killed."

"Keep your boy away from him; that's your business. Why, madam, don't you know that an elephant's hide and tusks are valuable for meehanieal and surgieal purposes, and that he is useful in India? Besides, there's the toll he will pay. We shall by this means get money enough into the public treasury to build schools for a good many boys who are not trampled to death."

"That's the plan. Regulate him! Regulate him!" shouted the erowd.

So they appointed a great many eommittees and drafted eonstitutions and by-laws, and eirculated petitions, and by the time the elephant had killed several more boys and trampled down a quantity of gardens, they had erected very comfortable toll houses for the gate keepers aud gates for the elephant; and then they waited in great satisfaetion to see the animal regulated.

Slowly the great feet tramped onward; slowly the great proboseis appeared in view; and, with a sniff of contempt, the elephant lifted the gate from its hinges and walked off with it, while the erowd stared after him in dismay.

"Well!" exclaimed the keeper, eatehing his breath; "we haveu't made mueh money so far, but the regulatin' plan would have been first-rate if the elephant hadn't been a leetle stronger than the obstruetion."

The elephant's name was Whisky.—Kate Hamilton.

LITERARY.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH. A Biography. By Washington Irving. John B. Alden, 18 Vesey St., New York, publisher.

"A Poet, Naturalist and Historian, who left scarcely any style of writing untouched, and touched nothing he did not adorn; of all the passions, whether smiles were to be moved or tears, a powerful yet gentle master; in genius sublime, vivid, versatile; in style elevated, clear, elegant,"—thus reads the epitaph upon the tomb of Oliver Goldsmith, written by his friend and companion, Dr. Samuel Johnson. Few lives have so brightened the recesses of poverty, and those recesses have seldom given to the world a writer of more sweet and touching simplicity and gentle humor. For his biographer none more appreciative of his genius could be found than Washington Irving, whose reputation as a writer of elegance, humor and taste loses nothing in comparison with the best in English literature. With such a subject and such a biographer, little more in a literary way could be desired. The volume is one of the small, beautiful and convenient editions of Mr. Alden, and is sold at the low price for which this publisher has become famous.

TOBACCO: its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects on the Human System, by Dr. William A. Alcott; with notes and additions by Nelson Sizer, author of "Forty Years in Phrenology," "How to Teach," "Choice of Pursuits," etc. 16mo, 150 pp. Paper, price 25 cents. New York: Fowler & Wells, Publishers, 753 Broadway.

Dr. Alcott's work on the use of tobacco published many years ago, has been widely read, and in the new edition Mr. Sizer has added a sufficient amount of matter to nearly double the size of the book, and has brought the information and the facts bearing on the subject down to the present time. It shows the effects of tobacco on the teeth, on the voice and on the special senses; also its effect on the appetite and digestion, and how it leads to various diseases; its effect on the intellect and morals, and points out who are suffering most from its use. The slavery to tobacco is discussed in an extended and interesting account giving the history and confessions of a tobacco chewer, and showing how he gave up the habit.

The work advocates a method of cure peculiar to those who depend upon phrenological theories and self-control. Of the millions who are sinning against their Maker by this vile habit but few could depend upon such a remedy. The best is repentance for the sin and the grace of God to help overcome it.

The Illustrator of the International Sunday-school Lessons is a new help for teachers and scholars in the study of the Sabbath Bible lessons, embracing several new and useful features, making it on the whole one of the best and cheapest publications of the kind. It will stand the test of practical use, we believe, with the best of satisfaction to all who use it. The lesson is treated under "Texts," "Surroundings," "Topics for One Minute Reports," "Practical Scripture References," "Practical Questions," "Practical Suggestions," "Expository Notes," "Central Thought," "Side Lights," "What can I do," and "Primary Teachings." N. Tibbals & Sons, publishers, New York; 60 cents per year.

St. Nicholas, always among the brightest, has some choice things for young eyes in its February number, beginning admirably in its frontispiece, "A Midwinter Night," one of Kingsley's engravings. In "Stories of Art and Artists" are some very fine reproductions of Albert Durer's work. "The Engraver on Wheels" tells by pen and pencil how Elbridge Kingsley engraves from nature. Mayne Reid's "The Land of Fire" is continued, and there is a spirited sketch of the boyhood of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius. Century Co., New York.

The English Illustrated Magazine for February has the following illustrated articles: "An Unsentimental Journey through Cornwall," "The Post Office," "The Character of Dogs," "The Humming-bird's Relatives." The artistic work of this number hardly equals that of the preceding issues, but the writers are from the first rank. MacMillan & Co., New York.

Mr. Nelson, the Edinburgh publisher, says he can find nobody in the British Islands to do for him such work in the way of engraving as is issued every month in the Century and in Harper's Magazine.

Rev, Dr. Charles S. Robinson's "Open Letter" in the February Century on "Artistic help in Divine Worship" will be followed by others from the same writer on the same general subject of church music. "Organs and Orchestras in Church" will appear in the March number, aud "Worshiping by Proxy" later.

SEED CATALOGUES.—Farmers, gardeners, and everyone who has a spot of cultivated ground is beginning to get ready a hot-bed or its substitute and selecting seeds for the season. Among the most attractive of the catalogues is that of Peter Henderson & Co. of 35 Courtlandt St., New York, whose reputation for enterprise in the introduction of improved sorts of flowers and vegetables and for honest dealing has gone through the land. They offer large prizes for some of their vegetable novelties and have a very attractive selection of seeds which are sold at a considerable reduction. Some of their new varieties have qualities that will render them very popular.

Joseph Harris, Rochester, N. Y., issues a catalogue with somewhat less exterior attractiveness, but his seeds are of fine quality and none are more reliable. Mr. Harris is wise in encouraging the boys and girls to engage in gardening, and his efforts at making this work attractive to them and a pleasure mark him as a public benefactor. He furnishes them seeds at a large reduction as an additional incentive.

THE CHURCHES.

—Rev. W. S. Schenck of Vineland, N. J., has received a call from LaFayette Wesleyan church N. Y. and will remove soon to his new field.

—A revival meeting among the poorer classes of Terre Haute, Indiana, conducted by Rev. J. W. McIntosh, has resulted in some twenty or more conversions.

—At Elgin, Iowa, the revival meetings, reported not long since by Rev. Homer Hull, have resulted in the conversion of some twenty-five persons.

—The Telescope last week reported over 600 conversions in revival meetings in the United Brethren churches.

—The labors of Nathan and Esther France, the Quaker evangelists, have been greatly blessed at Topeka, Kansas, some 75 professing Christ. They are expected to begin work in this city next.

—Says the Christian Worker: "Noah C. McLean has been engaged in a series of meetings in the city of Adrian, Mich., for about eleven weeks, during which time scores of souls were brought to Christ. The unabated interest in these meetings during this time was marvelous and the attendance large."

—Revivals are reported in the Free Methodist at Cohocton and Eckford, Mich., Waukesha, Wis., and other places. At Waukesha an aged man who had used tobacco for fifty-five years gave proof of the power of God by abandoning the evil habit. Another, a young business man, had sent his name for initiation in the Masonic lodge, but Christ came and he wanted no more of Masonry.

—Mrs. Quincy Shaw, of Boston, spends $50,000 annually out of her private income in support of thirty kindergartens and twenty nurseries which she has established in those parts of the city where the roughest and most squalid features reign. In addition to this she spends $200,000 a year in other charities.

—The Young Men's Bible Society in its canvass of Cincinnati during the last year found one-fourth of the families visited destitute of Bibles.

—Among those lost on the City of Columbus off Martha's Vineyard was Elizabeth K. Beach, the organizer of the famous McCall Mission Band in this country, auxiliary to religious work in Paris.

—The Methodists in Cincinnati, Ohio, have raised $6,500 to erect in Salt Lake City, Utah, a woman's home for needy women, especially those seeking refuge from the bondage of polygamy.

—An exchange cordially commends as unique and beautiful the custom observed on the first Sabbath of each year by Rev. R. S. Storrs, D. D., the eminent pastor of the Brooklyn Church of the Pilgrims. On that occasion will be seen on the communion table a profusion of flowers and numerous white packages tied with ribbons. The pastor calls by name the baptized children of the church who have reached the age of seven years, gives each a kiss, a bouquet of flowers and an Oxford Bible, in which is inscribed the date of the child's birth and baptism, together with the date of presentation and the pastor's signature. Then, with the little ones grouped around him, he commends them to God in prayer. So he binds the young hearts to the sanctuary and to God, and impressions are made never to be effaced. The children do not receive enough attention in the average churches.

—The German descendants of the Huguenots, who were driven from France by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, are preparing to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the Potsdam decree, which granted freedom of religious worship to all sects throughout Prussia.

—The most important religious event in Austria for years, was the discussion and rejection recently, in the Hungarian Parliament, of a bill to legalize marriage between Jews and Christians in Hungary. The Lower House rejected the bill by a large vote. The scene in the Upper House was very exciting.

—There is said to be a rumor afloat in Europe that the monarchy of Poland is to be restored. Should this come to pass, it is thought that religious toleration would be accorded to the multitude of Jews living within the boundaries of the Kingdom of Poland, and their condition be vastly improved from what it is now under the despotic government of Russia.

—Miss Clara Cushman's school in Peking does not allow the feet to be bound. All the older girls in this school are Christians, thirteen having joined the church recently.

—The first half century of the Presbyterian Foreign Missionary Board is just drawing to a close. The work began with three missions. There are now thirty-one. In 1836 there were four missions and five converts. Now there are 18,656 communicants in the mission churches. One of the first two missionaries appointed, the Rev. Dr. Lowrie, is still in active service as senior secretary of the board.

—The Pall Mall Gazette, of London, thinks that Messrs. Moody and Sankey "have probably left a deeper impress of their individuality upon one great section of Englishmen and Englishwomen than any other persons who could be named."

—The Christian Intelligencer, speaking of the Gospel meetings this winter in London, says: "It is a very significant fact that, in the after-meetings with inquirers and in the general work associated with the services, Mr. Moody has been assisted by a company of young men from Oxford, who were impressed by the addresses he delivered in that university town not long ago. The devotion of such men is proof that the vital truths of revelation are as potent to-day as ever, and that neither ritualism nor scientific nor philosophical unbelief and disbelief are able to resist them. If a large harvest is not gathered in the world over it will not be because prayer is not answered, because the Scriptures have become impotent, because the means always successful hitherto have become antiquated and prove not adapted to the demands of the time, but because the members of the churches are not applying the Word of God faithfully and in love to the hearts and consciences of men, and are not pleading with God for the gift of his Holy Spirit."

—J. E. Wolf, an evangelist of York, Pa., has been spending some time in revival work with the King Street church, Chambersburg, Bro. W. O. Tobey, pastor. The United Brethren in Christ says of his work: "He has Bible reading in the church each day and preaching every evening. Also several times he has had children's meeting in the church in day time. He is a very enthusiastic and pointed dealer in the Scriptures. He has preached some unusually sweeping and searching truths. His preaching thus far has been almost wholly to the church, and many of the truths he has presented have been of so peculiar a nature, and some of them so vastly different from the way in which they are commonly taught, that he has placed the people somewhat in the position of the Bereans—to 'search the Scriptures' whether those things are so, and to examine themselves whether they are really in the faith or no."

—Ben Hogan, the converted prize fighter, is now laboring for the souls of men in the mining towns of Montana. He writes to the Inter Ocean from Butte City: "In this, one of the richest mining camps in Montana, there are over 3,000 men averaging $3.50 per day; the most of this is spent for whisky and gambling, the gambling house being as public as a business house on account of being licensed. I started a reform club and a reading-room, and about 500 have joined themselves together as a band of coworkers in this cause. These men had gone very low through drinking and gambling, but now they are happy with their families in the new life. I am now working in Helena. I have been speaking to crowded houses every night. I have been very successful; hundreds have signed the pledge and are now going to the house of God. For the last fifteen years the dance and gambling house has been their home."

—In a very interesting article on "The Churches of the Huguenots and the Religious Condition of France," Rev. A. F. Beard, D. D., who is now laboring in Paris, makes the statement and sad admission that there are but "nine hundred Protestant pastors and ministers in France." Seven hundred and six of these belong to the Reformed church of France, "of whom more than five hundred are in pronounced evangelical fellowship." These ministers are earnest, godly men, living on small salaries—seldom exceeding eight hundred dollars—and doing valuable work in seeking to win souls. The membership of all these churches aggregates about three hundred thousand persons. Dr. Beard pleads most earnestly with American Christians to remember France in this hour of her spiritual need and awakening. For France is waking up, and ready to receive the gospel of Jesus Christ. He reminds his countrymen of our obligations to France for generous aid in days of deadly peril, when we were struggling for liberty and freedom, and then shows how fitting it is for us now to repay this debt by gifts of men and money for the evangelization of that great nation.—Golden Rule.

—Mr. and Mrs. Willson, the singing evangelists, have closed their three weeks' series of services at Talmage's Tabernacle, Brooklyn, which were attended nightly by large multitudes, and resulted in over a hundred conversions. They are now similarly engaged at the Marcy Avenue Baptist church.

—The agonizing cry of heathenism still rings its pathetic appeal in the ears of Christendom. "O God!" cried a poor Hindoo woman, bewailing the awful, hopeless condition of her sex, "O God, let no more women be born in our land!" Another woman, speaking of the abolishment of widow-burning by the English, exclaimed, "But neither the English nor the angels know what goes on in our homes!" The messengers of salvation with the gospel of Christ are going to the relief of the many millions in bonds of cruel heathenism, but oh, how slowly they move! "Our people are dying so fast. Can't you send us the gospel a little faster?"—Evangelical Messenger.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES WARNED.—A warning to American missionaries in Egypt has been formally promulgated. It appears that the Copts have conceived a bitter hostility toward them, and a popular outbreak is apprehended, and may occur at any moment. Great excitement prevails among both Musselmans and Christians and the Governor of Siout has sent warning to the Egyptian Government of the threatened danger. The following is a list of the missionaries in Egypt. They are all sent out by the Board of Foreign Missions of the United Presbyterian church, whose headquarters are in Philadelphia. The names of the missionaries are: Rev. John Hogg, D.D., Rev. J. R. Alexander, Rev. John Giffen, Mrs. M. E. Giffen, and Misses M. J. McKown and E. E. Newlin. The other missionaries from the same organization in Egypt are as follows: At Cairo, Rev. Gulian Lansing, D.D., Rev. Andrew Watson, D.D., and Misses Eliza F. Johnson, Maggie A. Smith, A. Y. Thompson and H. M. Connor. At Alexandria, Rev. S. C. Ewing and Miss Mary A. Frazier. At Mamsoorah, Rev. A. M. Nichol and Miss Isabella Strong. At Fayoum, Rev. William Harvey. There is a mission training college at Siout, which is attended by over two hundred students, mostly Egyptians, who are educated for missionary work among their native tribes. There is also a training-school for young Egyptian girls.—N. Y. Witness.

IN BRIEF.

The amount disbursed by army pension agents the last fiscal year was $59,906,501. Of this there was disbursed at Washington, D. C., $30,440,610; Indianapolis, $5,154,895; Chicago, $5,856,779, and Columbus, Ohio, $5,684,320.

"Pa," said a little boy, "a horse is worth a good deal more, isn't it, after it's broke?" "Yes, my son. Why do you ask such a question?" "Because I broke the new rocking-horse you gave me this morning."

A big Yankee from Maine, on paying his bill in a London restaurant, was told that the sum put down didn't include the waiter. "Wal," he roared, "I didn't eat any waiter, did I?" He looked as if he could, though, and there was no further discussion.

The main walls of the great Mormon temple were completed last November. They are ten feet thick, of solid granite, and eighty-five feet high. The foundation was laid twenty-eight years ago. The cost to the present time is $4,500,000. It will require six years more to complete the structure.

An effort is again being made to abolish the slave trade in Egypt. Last month a caravan of 250 slaves was captured, and one of the principal slave dealers of Cairo is about to be tried by court-martial. Five female slaves were found in his possession. One of them, a beautiful Circassian girl, declined to be liberated, preferring to be sold to some wealthy Pasha.

The young minister, Mr. ——, of a Western city, was invited to occupy the pulpit in an Albany church. His two sisters, chancing to be near Albany, made their plans to go there for that Sabbath and hear him. After the service a gentleman of the congregation whom they knew very slightly hurried toward them and said: "We are delighted to see you here; but how unfortunate that you should have chosen to-day. Don't, I beg of you, think that this is our minister. Dr. —— is off on his vacation, and we have to take what we can get. But come next Sabbath, if you're in town, and you'll hear a sermon worth listening to."

In 1853 lightning struck the Lockport Congregational church one Sunday morning during service, killed one of the singers in the choir, and severely shocked others. One of them, Miss May Place, was struck insensible, and was ill many months after, during which she had severe pains in her side. A singular fact about the stroke, in her case, was the fact that a long gold watch chain and locket, which she wore at the time, totally disappeared, except some small fused pieces of the locket and particles of glass. On her side a bright red mark, similar in form to the locket and chain, was found. About two years ago Miss Place, now Mrs. Nesmith, discovered a long, narrow protuberance upon her left arm. This was not painful at all, but seemed to be hard in the center. The swelling later became much larger and worked down upon the arm. The result is that now, thirty years after the occurrence, it is discovered that the gold chain, three feet long, so mysteriously spirited away by lightning, is plainly to be seen embedded in her right arm close to the skin.

A singular trial has, according to the Moscow correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, lately taken place at Novgorod. A Russian peasant named Alexeyeff and six women of his village, having accused another woman of having bewitched them, were sentenced by the district tribunal to four months' imprisonment, on the ground that they had pretended to be ill in order to give color to the accusation. The sentence was reversed, however, on appeal to the higher court, and they have now been liberated. The correspondent says that the belief in witches who injure men and cattle by supernatural power is very general in Russia; there is scarcely a village which does not contain its "yurodivi" (inspired idiot), "kaldunya" (witch), or "klikusha" (screaming woman); and the fanatical sect of the "Chlist," whose members reduce themselves to a condition of hysterical mania by constant fasting and castigation, is spread over the whole country. It is remarkable that this illness is only to be met with among the rural population, who as a rule are very healthy and strong, and that not a trace of it is to be found in the towns.

One of the most remarkable phenomena connected with dreams is the shortness of time needed for their consummation. Lord Brougham says, that, in dictating, a man may frequently fall asleep after uttering a few words, and be awakened by the amanuensis repeating the last word to show he has written the whole. But, though five or six seconds only have elapsed between the delivery of the sentence and its transfer to paper, the sleeper may have passed through a dream extending through half a lifetime. Lord Holland and Mr. Babbage both confirm this theory. The one was listening to a friend reading aloud, and slept from the beginning of one sentence to the latter part of the sentence immediately succeeding; yet during this time he had a dream, the particulars of which would have taken more than a quarter of an hour to write. Mr. Babbage dreamed a succession of events, and woke in time to hear the concluding words of a friend's answer to a question he had just put to him. One man was liable to a feeling of suffocation, accompanied by a dream of a skeleton grasping his throat, whenever he slept in a lying posture, and had an attendant to wake him the moment he sank down. But, though awakened the moment he began to sink, that time sufficed for a long struggle with the skeleton. Another man dreamed that he crossed the Atlantic, spent a fortnight in America, and fell overboard when embarking to return; yet his sleep had not lasted more than ten minutes.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

SAMARITAN NERVINE
NEVER FAILS.
THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

A SPECIFIC FOR Epilepsy, Spasms, Convulsions, Falling Sickness, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Syphillis, Scrofula, Kings Evil, Ugly Blood Diseases, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Sick Headache, Rheumatism, Nervous Weakness, Brain Worry, Blood Sores, Biliousness, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Kidney Troubles and Irregularities. $1.50.

Sample Testimonials.

"Samaritan Nervine is doing wonders."
Dr. J. O. McLemoin, Alexander City, Ala.

"I feel it my duty to recommend it."
Dr. D. F. Laughlin, Clyde, Kansas.

"It cured where physicians failed."
Rev. J. A. Edie, Beaver, Pa.

☞ Correspondence freely answered. ☜
For testimonials and circulars send stamp.
The Dr. S. A. Richmond Med. Co., St. Joseph, Mo,
Sold by all Druggists. (17)

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED.

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.
C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

WM. W. FARWELL
Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.
76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

McShane Bell Foundry
Manufacture those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogues sent free. Address
H. McSHANE & Co., Baltimore, Md.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

PATENTS NO PATENT! NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent FREE.

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Send stamps for NEW LAWS. COL. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD
Attorney and Counselor at Law
79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

IT PAYS to sell our Hand Rubber Stamps. Samples free. FOLJAMBE & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

KNABE
PIANOFORTES.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
WILLIAM KNABE & CO.
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y

THE ANTI-INFIDEL LIBRARY.

Published in Monthly Parts.

Each number is a complete treatise in itself, containing from 32 to about 200 pages, the year's numbers making a volume of 500 to 800 pages of fresh, live, readable matter, adapted to the needs of this skeptical generation.

The following numbers are printed:

I. THE INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE.
A Lecture by H. L. Hastings.

I EGYPT IN HISTORY AND PROPHECY;
OR, PHARAOH PROCLAIMING GOD.
By Robert Patterson.

III. INFIDEL TESTIMONY
CONCERNING THE TRUTH OF THE BIBLE.
Scripture statements continued by extracts from the writings of Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Gibbon, Volney, and others.
By H. L. Hastings.

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF CHRIST
TO THE TRUTH OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.
By Robert Patterson.

V. THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT;
TWELVE DOZEN SKEPTICAL ARGUMENTS REFUTED.
A reply to a work entitled "144 Self-Contradictions of the Bible."
By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 160 pp.

VI. REMARKS ON THE "MISTAKES OF MOSES."
By H. L. Hastings.

VII. FRIENDLY HINTS TO CANDID INQUIRERS
WHO DISBELIEVE THE BIBLE.
By H. L. Hastings.

VIII. CORRUPTIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.
A condensed statement of the facts regarding the preservation of the New Testament manuscripts, and the authenticity and accuracy of the New Testament as we now have it.

This valuable library, good for every household, is published for $1.00 per year. BUT EVERY SUBSCRIBER to the CYNOSURE who SENDS TO THE OFFICE $2.50 shall have both FOR THE YEAR.
Address the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, Chicago, Ill.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,
Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. Price, 40 cents.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St. Chicago, Ill.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK

Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

WANTED HELP.
Entirely New.
PROFITABLE.
Outfit Free.

We want an AGENT in every locality. Something entirely new. Our Agents are sweeping the field wherever they go, and making money rapidly. Men, women, boys, girls, all do equally well. Will send you full outfit on receipt of 2 cent Stamp. Don't delay. Address at once, S. S. PUBLISHING CO., Brownwood, Texas.

THE PUREST IS THE BEST.

In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are

COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.

The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading and foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.

The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing

FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS.

They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

IN CLUBS OF FIVE OR MORE.

THE PEARL	12c	PURE WORDS	10c
THE LILY	12c	SUNSHINE	10c

Be sure and send for samples before you order your next supply of papers.

SAMPLE COPIES SENT FREE.

We are prepared to furnish any other Sunday-school papers in the market at publishers' prices, so that schools can order all their supplies from us, and thus save the complication, labor and expense of sending to several parties. We handle a full line of Sunday-school Tickets, Reward Cards, helps and other requisites.

☞ Send for our new catalogue of Sunday-school cards and other requisites, with discounts. Sent free to any address. Address T. B. ARNOLD, 104 & 106 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

Peter Henderson & Co's COLLECTION OF SEEDS AND PLANTS

embraces every desirable Novelty of the season, as well as all standard kinds. A special feature for 1884 is, that you can for $5.00 select Seeds or Plants to that value from their Catalogue, and have included, without charge, a copy of Peter Henderson's New Book, "Garden and Farm Topics," a work of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a steel portrait of the author. The price of the book alone is $1.50. Catalogue of "Everything for the Garden," giving details, free on application.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS
MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

HOME HINTS.

CHEAP AND GOOD FOOD.

T. R. Allison, writing to the London Times, says: Allow me to bring under the notiee of your readers some experiments I have just eoneluded to solve the diffieulty of feeding our poor in London and elsewhere. The ery is that food is so dear that the poor ean seareely live. This ery is true if they want to live an luxuries, but if they will live on wholesome, but plain and healthy fare, they ean do so for very little. A little over a month ago I determined to give up all expensive artieles of food and live almost as eheaply as possible. Having left off flesh foods for nearly two years, and leeturing frequently on the question of food, I knew what to select. Looking over my food aeeounts I found milk, butter, eggs and eheese, with tea and eoffee, were fairly expensive artieles and none of them neeessary, so I gave them up for a time to see results. On Oetober 19 I began my experiment; my weight was then 9 stone 8 ounees. I eontinued this purely vegetarian diet for a month, when my weight was 9 stone 3 pounds 12 ounees, or a gain of 3¼ pounds. My friends said I looked well; I felt well and did my usual work the same as ever. I walked from ten to fifteen miles daily, seeing patients or taking exereise. Here is an aeeount of my dietary, whieh eost me little more than sixpenee a day, and I eould easily live for less without luxuries: Breakfast eonsisted of a basin of porridge, made from a mixture of oatmeal and wheatmeal, whieh I found more palatable than either singly. This I usually ate with bread to insure thorough insalivation. Then eame bread fried in refined eotton seed oil, or fried vegetable haggis. For drink I had a eup of eoeoa or fruit syrup, with warm water and sugar. The eoeoa used was an ordinary one with plenty of stareh in it, whieh makes a thiek drink, and no milk is then required. Dinner eonsisted of a thiek vegetable soup and bread, potato pie, savory pie, vegetarian pie, vegetable stew, stewed riee and tomatoes, etc. For a seeond eourse I had bread plum pudding, stewed riee and fruit, baked sago, tapioea and apples, stewed prunes, figs, raisins, and bread. Tea meal eonsisted of bread and jam, stewed fruit, or some green stuff, as watereress, eelery, tomatoes, ete. I had only three meals a day, and frequently, when very busy, I had only two, and a cup of eoeoa and a biseuit for supper. I always use the whole meal bread, as it is laxative and eontains a good deal of nitrogen, whieh is thrown away with the bran. The cotton seed oil is a cheap and good eooking oil, and is impossible to deteet. This diet I eontinued for a month, and now I only take the animal products when out, not having them at my table.

By means of our diet mueh disease is prevented, and even most ehronie eases of present disease ean be alleviated by it. If we want a cheap dietary we have the following foods to ehoose from: Wheat, oats, barley, maize, riee, sago, tapioea, semolina, hominy, peas, beans, lentils, etc., whieh are all eoneentrated foods and very rieh in nutriment. Potatoes, parsnips, beets, earrots, turnips, onions, eabbage, sprouts, etc., give variety, bulk and flavor; to these may be added the sweet herbs for making savory dishes. Apples, pears, eurrants, gooseberries, plums, strawberries, rasps, blackberries and other fruits, with melons, peaehes, grapes, ete., are high prieed but wholesome fruits. The dried fruits, sueh as dates, figs, apple rings, eurrants, raisins, ete., are eheap and good. To these may be added tinned goods. Thus one can see the immense variety of tasty things we have, and these to suit all purses. We ean add to these milk, butter, eheese, eggs and honey, which are got without killing animals. But if we take animal food, then fish is least injurious, then beef and mutton, while veal, pork, game, etc., are very indigestible and ought to be avoided.—Knowledge.

—"Feed a cold and starve a fever" is an old adage, and one whieh most people still believe in. Dr. C. E. Page, however, writes in the Popular Science Monthly of an opposite method. He speaks of aehieving great sueeess by eonfining himself to two light meals, or even one meal a day, for the prevention and cure of colds, and has tried it himself in some most remarkable ways, such as "rising from bed on a eold, rainy morning, and sitting naked for an hour, writing, and then put on shirt and trousers only, the shirt almost saturated with rain and the trousers quite damp, from hanging by the window—these and similar experiments I have tried repeatedly, but without eateh-ing cold; I beeome cold and beeome warm again, that is all." This may be fun for the Doetor, but we hardly think the amusement of a eharaeter likely to beeome popular. What an enthusiast ean do to demonstrate a theory had an even more remarkable exemplifieation in Dr. Tanner's fasting forty days.—Scientific American.

—A gentleman was very low with fever. The doetor ordered a dose of rhubarb. When it had been prepared he ehanged his mind, beeause he feared the effeets would be weakening on a man already so debilitated. It happened that the goblet containing the rhubarb was left in the room oeeupied by the patient. Soon a pet monkey belonging to the siek man stole into the room, and, seeing the goblet, slipped slyly up and touehed it to his lips. The first taste was not satisfying, as the patient on the bed could see through his half-open eyes. The monkey made a eomieal gesture. Another sip, and he got the sweet of the syrup. Then his keen eyes brightened. He east a glanee around, and then drank it to the bottom, where he got the full strength of the rhubarb. What a faee he made! He serewed his funny eountenanee into all sorts of shapes. He spat out the horrible taste, danced a wild jig of agony, and ended his "monkey-shines" by seizing the goblet and smashing it into a hundred pieees. The scene was so ludierous that the siek man burst into a fit of laughter. When the nurse entered he tried to tell her what had happened, but sank baek exhausted. A gentle perspiration appeared, and he fell asleep. When he awoke the fever was broken and he reeovered—saved by a good laugh at the anties of a monkey.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

In Night Sweats and Prostration.

Dr. R. STUDHALTER, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used it in dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and in night sweats, with very good results."

The most popular nervine tonie in the world is Dr. Riehmond's Samaritan Nervine. $1.50.

"Fits rendered my daughter deaf, dumb and paralyzed, Samaritan Nervine eured her." Peter Ross, Springwater, Wis. At Druggists.

A Suffocating Cough.

In a letter from Mrs. Charlotte Lisle, of Chicago, a lady well known as a eontributor to the Western press, she aseribes the eure of a dangerous cough, aeeompanied by bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My eough," she says, "threatened to suffoeate me * * * * but the Honey of Horehound and Tar has removed every trace of it." The letter was to a lady friend in this eity, who has plaeed it at the disposal of C. N. CRITTENTON, 115 Fulton street, N. Y.

Pike's Toothache Drops eure in one minute.

Scalps Tormented with Dandruff or Seald Head are made healthy with Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Of all druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, black or brown, fifty cents.

Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic.

For adults travelling, a wineglassful may be taken three times a day with great advantage. Its tonic and nutritive qualities are sufficient to sustain the body without the addition of solid food. It is now recommended by the faculty as the best remedy for consumption, debility, loss of appetite, weakness, indigestion, dyspepsia, fever, ague, malaria, and all female and children's maladies.

CAUTION—See that the signature of T. COLDEN is on each bottle, as imitations are on the market.

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures Nose, Throat, Lungs; full idea; 36p. route, cost free.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had plaeed in his hands by an East India missionary, the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent eure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affeetions, also a positive and radieal eure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of eases has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full direetions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

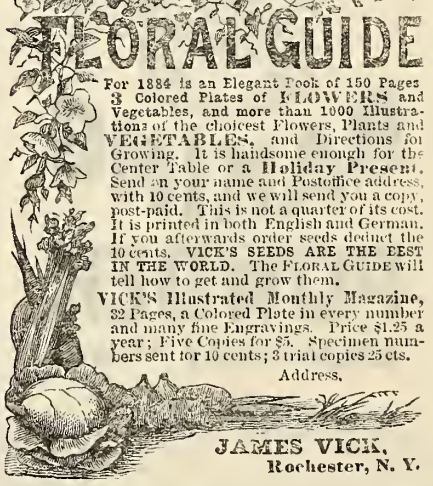
FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.



DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 831 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

For 1884 is an Elegant Book of 150 Pages 3 Colored Plates of FLOWERS and Vegetables, and more than 1000 Illustrations of the choicest Flowers, Plants and VEGETABLES, and Directions for Growing. It is handsome enough for the Center Table or a Holiday Present. Send on your name and Postoffice address, with 10 cents, and we will send you a copy, post-paid. This is not a quarter of its cost. It is printed in both English and German. If you afterwards order seeds deduct the 10 cents. VICK'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD. The FLORAL GUIDE will tell how to get and grow them.

VICK'S Illustrated Monthly Magazine, 32 Pages, a Colored Plate in every number and many fine Engravings. Price $1.25 a year; Five Copies for $5. Specimen numbers sent for 10 cents; 3 trial copies 25 cts.

Address,

JAMES VICK,
Rochester, N. Y.

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE.
R. S. & A. P. LACEY,
Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.
Send description of your Invention. L. BINGHAM.
Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY. Proprietor, Wheaton Ill.
General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best,
STRAW BLACK GOOSE RASP BERRIES, GRAPES. and other Small Fruits.
Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

T. HUDSON J. L. STRATTON
— Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of—
HARDWOOD LUMBER.
Have on hand a large amount of Dry Ash, Red and White Oak, Hickory, and Basswood.
Prompt attention given to orders and satisfaction guaranteed. KALAMAZOO, MICH.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS,
WHEATON COLLEGE.
Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in their schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

A POLE STAR

In the heavens of civil and religious liberty

—THE—

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

A 16-page weekly journal, published by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

an organization whose object is "to expose, withstand and remove Secret Societies....and other anti-Christian Movements."

Able writers from all parts of our own and from foreign lands, and from the different denominations, contribute to its columns. The claims an advaneed position among the advoeates of Christian Education, Temperanee, Government Reforms, Sabbath Observance, and Bible Holiness, to which it adds a thorough exposition and critieal analysis of Secret Societies, pointing out both the evils and the remedy. In brief, it is the paper having opinions on all praetieal living questions and the courage to express them.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

It emphasizes the faet that politieal action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD and SPIRIT of God, and that Christ must be aeknowledged KING OF NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

In addition to these features, it contains a choice seleetion of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and seeular news, market reports, etc.

TERMS: $2.00 per year; speeial terms to clubs. Send for sample copies.

The Master's Carpet.

BY

E. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 429 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY

AT A GLANCE,

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100. $3.60. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

MAH-HAH-BONE,

COMPRISING IN ONE VOLUME,

HAND BOOK

OF

Freemasonry,

Which gives the correct or "standard work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the oaths, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained:

The Master's Carpet

Which explains the true source and meaning every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded: and

FREEMASONRY

AT A GLANCE,

Which illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge, and gives a brief explanation of each, making a most valuable compilation of information concerning Masonry. Bound in fine cloth covers. 589 pages. Price $1 00. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!
Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 60
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	25
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.
EZRA A. COOK, Publisher. 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE.

311,000 references. The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's a child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2 50; half Russia, $3. Postage, 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY. 10 books, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Teaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now issued. The whole lot for $11.13.
Single copy, postpaid, 10c; 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.
Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil
11 Newlyn House. [drea.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What Is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Suscttc.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May.
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
20 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwei.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bernie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth Is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Mission, Lit. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Haylands.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
52 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Failure.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer. [Marched.
57 Hugalda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I.
61 Tempest Tost'd.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hope.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right Is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself.
72 Lyman.
73 Keaneth.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl
77 Margery Kramer's School-
78 The Quartette. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Lulu Preston's Trials and Triumphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror
85 Joe and Harry
86 Fred, the Backwood Boy.
87 Bloomfield's Rock
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 No Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Saunders.
93 Peg of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit; Frank Spencer's Rule of 109 The Harker Family. [Life.
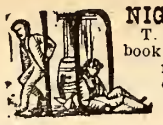
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Tim's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
119 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Pell and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Feardale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium.
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; Johnu Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Telfourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Banyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Louis' School Days.
151 Blossom and Blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Bruey.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips.
156 Digging a Grave with a Wine-glass. Little blind May.
157 The Manor House Mystery. May's Sixpence.
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Joh Lufton's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.
163 Little Faith. The Diver's Daughter.
164 Dora's Boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe.
166 Danesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear ful bondage
168 Drift.
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list. Nos 95, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168 are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4, any 12 copies for $1; 10c each.

Reform Note Paper & Envelopes



This is good heavy paper, 5⅜x8½ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scripture and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with an "ad" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100.

Address—
EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO. ILL.

Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.

Price postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches.
Published by EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM
T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of Intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is, Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N Y Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts "—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pillman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries; fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order, Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter. Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

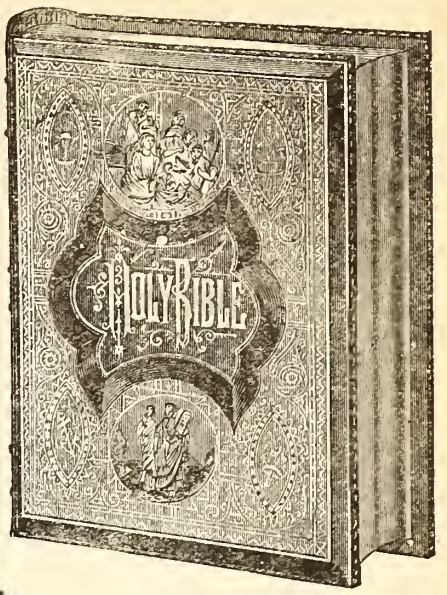


Illustration of Style 4.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10½x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and Family Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible, Harmony of the Gospels, Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 1.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4, with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections, many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—
EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Established 1875.

DAVID C. COOK, Publisher of SUNDAY SCHOOL REQUISITES.

PUBLICATIONS:

Primary Grade. The Primary Teachers Quarterly. Illuminated Lessons. Primary Scholars Quarterly. Primary Weekly. Dew Drops. Little Learners Paper.

Juvenile Grade. Juvenile Teachers Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly. Juvenile Scholars Quarterly (abridged). The Coral. Sabbath Home. Giant Killer. Truth Seekers.

Intermediate Grade. Intermediate Teachers Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly. Intermediate Scholars Quarterly (abridged). Duplicate Lesson Leaf. The Sunday School Gem. The Young Folks Friend. Careful Builders. His Jewels. Sabbath School Weekly.

Advanced Grade. Advanced Teachers Quarterly. Advanced Scholars Quarterly. The Royal Road. Gracious Words. Our Own Sabbath School Paper. Conqueror's Herald. Weekly Magnet.

Bible Class Grade. Bible Class Teacher. Bible Class Scholar. Church and Home, (weekly). Church and Home, (semi-monthly).

Average combined circulation each issue over Three Million Five Hundred Thousand copies. Samples forwarded on application.

"I do not hesitate to commend them as far the best of any."—Rev E. Corwin, D. D., Racine, Wis. "Their excellence can not be overestimated. Prices defy competition."—S. W. Hayes, Wheeling, Mo. "They give unbounded satisfaction."—J. L. Hodge, Oyer, Kan. "Superintendent ten years; have found no helps so good."—W. R. Davidson, Arabi, Ky. "Best publications in twenty years' experience."—L. B. Davis, Lodi, Mich. "The interest has increased fifty per cent."—J. L. Lassiter, Branchville, N. C. "Prospering gloriously; due to Cook's supplies."—T. A. Davison, Kellerville, Ill. "Our school is the best in this part of the country, and we owe it to your supplies."—Geo. W Finch, Auburn, Cal. "Doubled our school in a few weeks."—E. Timmerman, Jasper, N. Y. "School gaining every Sabbath."—Thos. Purvis, Sunderland, Ont. "School has grown nearly twice as large."—E. F. Wilson, Centre, Tex. "Our school has built up greatly."—J. M. Worth, West Salamanca, N. Y. "Better pleased than ever. We are having a precious revival."—Henry Cobb, Metropolis, Ill. "The Holy Spirit is blessing our school with a knowledge of the Word we never had before."—A. Hamilton, Stewartsville, Ont.

GOLDEN CENSER: "By far the cheapest publications for quality, quantity and frequency. Everything Evangelical, pure and helpful." CHAUTAUQUA DEMOCRAT: "When we mention his name in connection with any Sunday-school literature, it is sufficient guarantee of its excellence." CENTRAL METHODIST: "Whatever Mr. Cook puts his hand to is given life and energy." BOSTON CONGREGATIONALIST: "Mr. Cook advertises truthfully. 'Enormous saving to Sunday-schools.'" BALTIMORE METHODIST: "A leading, if not the largest publisher of Sunday-school supplies on this continent."

Publishing House Elgin Ill., Office and Store 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE COUNTRY.

—The "Provident Woodyard," where a man can obtain a meal of victuals if he will saw wood for it, has been opened in this city. The first day so many men applied that the yard could not give them all employment.

—The funeral services over the remains of Wendell Phillips were held in the Hollis Street church, Boston, Wednesday, the edifice being densely crowded. A large concourse followed the hearse from the family residence to the church, and again from the church to Faneuil Hall, where the remains lay in state for three hours. Here a plaster-cast of the head of the deceased was taken, and the remains were then conveyed to the old Granary burying-ground, in Tremont street, and deposited in the Phillips family tomb.

—The Ohio House Tuesday repealed the McConnellsville ordinance, which empowered incorporated villages to decide whether liquor should be sold or not within their boundaries.

—Eleven hundred saloon-keepers in New York have been notified that their licenses have been annulled, because of conviction in court for violation of the excise law.

—Frank Colvin, who last September, in a railroad accident at Wabash, Ind., had his back fractured in two places and five ribs broken, died Friday. His case amazed the medical fraternity.

—Mrs. Mix stood at the open grave of her husband at Steamboatrock, Iowa, Friday, remarked that they might as well be buried in one grave, and pulled out a revolver and shot herself, inflicting a mortal wound.

—The refusal of a prominent Catholic temperance society at Wilkesbarre, Pa., to sell tickets to their ball to Hebrews has caused a commotion in the community, as the Jews and Catholics control the business interests of the town.

—The crushing of their boat by a floating log caused the drowning of Frank and James Henderson, married men, near Lafayette, Ohio, Thursday. James Murphy, who was also in the boat, clung to a passing tree and was rescued three hours later.

—A writ for $200 damages has been issued against the Rev. W. G. Lane, a Methodist minister of Halifax, N. S., who married a soldier and a girl without a license, the former deserting the woman a few days later, alleging that the wedding was illegal.

—Successive explosions of eight tanks of oil, tar and naphtha, in the Standard Oil Works, at Long Island City, L. I., Friday evening, resulted in a fire which destroyed a large warehouse, 700 feet of wharf, and several small buildings, the total loss reaching $73,000. The windows of houses miles away, and on Blackwell's Island, were shattered by the shocks of the detonations.

—Near Horton, Mich., late Friday night, Mr. Brown, a detective, who has been working on the Crouch murders, was met on the road by a carriage containing two men, one of whom, after making sure of the identity of the detective, shot him, inflicting a dangerous wound, and leaving him for dead. There is great excitement over the affair and the assassins are being pursued.

—The spinners' strike in ten mills at Fall River, Mass., began Monday last, three of the concerns closing down entirely, and the Metacomet mill being shut down through the strike of boys. The establishments affected produced 40,000 pieces of cotton cloth weekly, the pay-roll for the same period reaching $24,000. It is stated that three other mills will close to-day, when 3,750 persons will be out of employment.

—Peter Clifford, a young resident of Rendville, Ohio, answered a knock at his door during the night of Feb. 2d, and upon opening it was shot through the breast. Clifford fell into the arms of his wife, exclaiming, "The Hickeys have killed me." The four Hickey brothers and their brother-in-law, Joe Reddy, were arrested, and Sunday night a mob took Richard Hickey and Reddy from the jail, hung the former and took Reddy back to prison after the rope had broken and he had begged piteously for his life.

THE FLOOD.

—The rivers on Saturday were falling rapidly at Pittsburg and rising at Wheeling and Cincinnati. At Wheeling thousands are sheltered in public halls and school-houses. Several dwellings have been carried away and the financial loss is placed at $1,500,000. In Allegheny and Pittsburg the loss is estimated at $3,000,000; it will be weeks after the waters recede before some of the mills resume work. Ten school-houses in Cincinnati are occupied by the sufferers, who are well cared for. At Lawrenceburg and Aurora, Ind., and Catlettsburg, Ky., residents are quartered in the second stories of their dwellings, and at Louisville the inundation is not attended with much privation. At Wheeling there is much destitution, two deaths from hunger being reported Monday, and donations of money, food, and clothing are requested. There is much suffering also at Newport, Ky., but charitable citizens are doing their utmost to help the needy. Cochransville, Ohio, has been entirely swept away, and several dwellings have been carried off at Maysville, Gallipolis, New Richmond, Augusta, and Point Pleasant, the latter village being completely submerged. In many sections the houses were weighted down with rocks, and it is reported that persons have been seen clinging to chimneys. Boats arriving at Wheeling were fired at from the banks, as the waves they created with their paddles threatened the destruction of dwellings already tottering. The stage of water at Cincinnati is expected to exceed that of last year. The destruction of railway and other bridges has been widespread, and travel and business are greatly retarded. Casualties affecting life are few when compared with the immensity of the deluge.

—The predictions from Washington are that approaching heavy rains will cause the floods in the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers to increase. The indications are that the floods of the lower Mississippi, from Cairo to New Orleans, will increase during the next twenty days, and probably equal the floods of last year.

FOREIGN.

—Incendiaries have destroyed a church, two steamers, and a large business house in Bermuda. Rewards are offered, and the penalty is death.

—Invincibles and other Irish convicts in English prisons will be removed on a war vessel, the destination of which is unknown.

—The whaler Thetis, 600 tons burden, has been purchased at Dundee, Scotland, by the United States Government, to be used in the search for the Greely party.

—Near Tokar, on the Red Sea, Baker Pasha, commanding a force of 3,500 men, was defeated by El Mahdi's adherents, Baker losing 2,000 men killed and wounded, four Krupp guns, and one Gatling gun. Later advices state that the slaughter of his forces continued all the way back to Trinkitat. The Egyptians were panic-stricken and fell upon their knees, but their appeals for mercy were fruitless. The Arabs seized them by the necks and thrust spears into their backs or savagely cut their throats. The rebels captured five guns, 36,000 pounds of cannon ammunition, 3,000 rifles, and an enormous quantity of cartridges. Tewfik Bey and 400 followers, who attempted to force their way from Sinkat to the coast, were cut to pieces by El Mahdi's insurgent's.

—Rebels in the provinces of Nam Dinh and Sontay, in Tonquin, have been dispersed by French troops, and dens of pirates have been broken up. The feeling at Hue is said to be excellent, and the king has appointed delegates to assist Admiral Courbet in pacifying the country.

—France has offered to co-operate with English forces in Egypt, proposing that her troops be landed at Suakim and march to the relief of Khartoum, the final settlement of the Soudan question to be left to a conference of the powers. Earl Granville has reserved his reply.

NOTES.

We again wish to call the attention of canvassers for the Cynosure to the necessity of their stating in their letters that there is an extra copy due them, when such is the fact.

1ST. Unless you do state it, the subscription clerk may not think of it.

2D. When you send in a few names at a time, it is impossible for us to keep the account so as to know when each has his quota of subscribers, for we have not the time.

3D. Some have preferred not to take any commission though sending in full clubs. But we wish it clearly understood that if anyone who wishes it has failed to receive his extra number of the Cynosure or any commission due, we hope that they will write us at once that we may correct the error.

4TH. We are doing the business for you, friends and if it is not done satisfactorily we hope you will write us a personal letter.

"FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE."

An exposition of the first three degrees of Freemasonry in every village! How can it be done? By sending to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer N. C. A., for a 32-page pamphlet, containing 40 illustrations with explanations, with the legal attestation of the pastmaster of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, as to the correctness of said exposition. We will send, postpaid, thirty (30) of these pamphlets for one dollar; sixty-five (65) for two dollars, and 165 for five dollars.

Edmund Ronayne says: "One of these pamphlets put in each family will do as much good as a public exposition would do."

Many have written: "Send a lecturer to our place, we need one very much.' This is often impossible, but the above plan is much better than no lecture; does not need a church or hall, which often cannot be had; and costs but a fraction of what a lecturer usually costs. Will you see to it that you have one of these lecturers, silent as sunlight and as powerful, in your town. If you cannot afford the dollar or five dollars yourself, you can soon collect from friends for this purpose the needed funds.

N. B. With each "Glance" will be sent an N. C. A. tract, and as the pamphlet gives an exposition of the ceremonies of the lodge the tract will give an exposition of the character of those ceremonies.

Not less than thirty sent on the above terms, and only to one address. Single copies 6 cents.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		93¾
No. 3		82
Winter No 2	1 01	@1 03
Corn—No. 2		53
Oats—No. 2	32¾	@36½
Rye—No. 2		58
Bran per ton		16 00
Flour	2 25	@6 25
Hay—Timothy	6 50	@10 00
Mess pork per bbl		17 50
Butter, medium to best	18	@32
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	1 50	@2 76
Eggs	24	36
Potatoes per bus	30	32
Seeds—Timothy	1 29	@1 35
Flax		1 56
Broom corn	02	@ 08
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	16	@37
Cattle—Extra	6 60	@7 25
Common to good	4 80	@6 00
Hogs	6 00	@7 15
Sheep	2 50	@6 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 80	@6 90
Wheat—Winter	80	@1 19
Spring		1 02
Corn	51	@62
Oats	39	@47
Mess Pork		16 50
Eggs		45
Butter	10	@41
Wool	10	@45

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	3 30	@6 65
Hogs	6 30	@6 80
Sheep	3 70	@4 50

"The Christian Statesman deserves a VERY LARGE CIRCULATION. It fills a place supplied by no other."—HON. JUDGE STRONG.

The Need of the Nation

Can only be supplied by an acknowledgement of Christ's authority and an acceptance of His Divine Law as the

BASIS OF NATIONAL LIFE.

To secure this, and maintain all existing Christian features of the American government, is the object of the National Reform Association, an organization undenominational in character, with a membership of many thousands, including leading ministers, educators, authors and jurists all over our nation.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN,

A large, elegantly printed sixteen-page journal, advocates the principles of this Association, and discusses all public questions in the light of the Christian religion. The Maintenance of our Sabbath Laws, and of the Christian Law of Marriage and Divorce, the use of the Bible in the Public Schools, the Prohibition of the Liquor Traffic, the Mormon Question, the Rights of the Indian and the Chinaman, receive constant attention in its columns. It gives thorough expositions of the International Bible Lessons, and their bearing on national questions is not overlooked. Price, $2.00 per year. ☞Sample copies free. Address,

JOHN WAGNER PRITCHARD,
1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN

"In its course has been manly and consistent, its editorials able, and its success, under the conditions of apathy and prejudice which surrounds the whole subject, marvelous."—THE REV. S. F. SCOVEL, PRESIDENT OF WOOSTER UNIVERSITY.

DO YOU WANT A Cheap, Clean-faced, Radical, Religious Paper, fearless and outspoken upon all moral issues?

Send for the

VANGUARD,

A paper that is for God and nothing else.

A world-wide range of correspondence. Neutral in nothing.

Only 75 cents a year.

Address C. W. SHERMAN, Editor, 305 N. 3rd Street, St. Louis, Mo.

HAND BOOK
OF Freemasonry,
BY
E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639 Chicago.

Gives the correct or "Standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the Lodge room, order of opening and closing the Lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustriated and explained. In short, it is

A Complete and Accurate Lodge Manual.

The high standing of Mr. Ronayne in the fraternity, his popularity and success as a teacher and lecturer in the Lodge, together with the testimony of high Masonic authority, leaves no doubt of the accuracy of this work. It is rapidly becoming a standard work in the hands of ACTING LODGE OFFICIALS, and those who desire to post themselves on the workings of the order. The price is so low that it is within the reach of all. Sent postpaid securely wrapped on receipt of price 184 pages, Paper covers, 35 cents. Elegant cloth with beveled edges and gilt stamp, $1.00. Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Ill

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Conn., J. L. Barlow of Willimantic.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Kansas, P. S. Feemster, Pearlette.
Missouri, M. N. Butler of Albany.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
Michigan, H. A. Day, Parma.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Vermont, O. C. Bailey.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

S. E. Starry, Clarence, Iowa.
Jas. Furguson, " "
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Promise City, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Baker, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perrry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans
D. A Richards Clarkville Mich

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 22. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1884. WHOLE No. 721.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.
J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
Editorial Correspondence 8
The Prohibitionists..... 8
Campaign Notes..... 8
Peasonal Sacrifice..... 8
CONTRIBUTED:
Washington's Birthday Idyl (Poetry)..... 1
Another Casual Witness 1
Relapsed Drunkards.... 2
Bad Yeast..... 2
Short Sermon..... 2
SELECTED:
Lofty Titles..... 2
Cain's Pistol..... 2
The El-Madhi..... 3
ADDRESS:
Rash Promises..... 3
REFORM NEWS:
The Situation in Kansas; Reform Work in New Hampshire..... 3
Pith and Point..... 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
Prohibition a Good Word for Lodgery also; Note from Southern Illinois; Bro. Clemens to Friends and Objectors; The Second Coming of Christ.. 5
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
OBITUARY:
Elder Bicknell; Mrs. Austin..... 7
AMERICAN POLITICS..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
THE CHURCHES..... 12
HOME HINTS..... 13
FARM AND GARDEN..... 14
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

TO THE READER.

As you take up this paper the convention in Washington will be deliberating. Will you not offer to the true and living God in whose name our brethren are assembled, prayer that his power may be shown for the vindication of his Son, who is the Truth, against all the might of Satan and those who do his bidding among men. Remember this meeting in the public prayer meeting and in household and private devotion.

The indifference of American society toward the lax divorce laws, while demanding national laws for banking for bankrupts and for other business matters, is like the greed of the Gadarenes, who had no thought of sympathy or gratitude in seeing the fierce demoniac of the tombs in his right mind sitting at the Saviour's feet, after they had lost their scurvy hogs. A memorial and resolution in the Iowa legislature last week deserves attention and approval. It enumerates evils arising from the laxity and differences of divorce laws in the several States, whereby a system of legalized polygamy, with a succession of husbands and wives, is being established, and requests the Governor of Iowa to invite the several States and Territories to send two representatives to attend a convention to be held in Des Moines, on the first Wednesday in May 1885, to take this divorce business into serious consideration and recommend law that shall be universally adopted throughout the country.

The interesting conversion of a young Corean nobleman in Japan and his assiduity in translating the Scriptures was not long ago noted in these columns. We have not learned that his task is done; but three Protestant Christians from China, introduced by the Chinese admiral appeared before the king of Corea and presented him with a copy of the New Testament. The poor king was the victim of the keenest conflicting emotions. Should he decline the gift he might dread the power and resentment of China, should he accept he might expect no less trouble from his own people. He turned to his ministers for advice, but there was a strong division among them. One of the number, at the head of foreign affairs, is a fierce opposer of Christianity. Seizing the volume he tore it in pieces, exclaiming, "The men who have given this are violators of our law and should be sent from the country." This opinion and violence was not shared by others and a discussion has arisen, which may result soon in the entire freedom to the professors of Christianity.

Some of the developments of the secret societies of Europe only confirm the universal abhorrence which is felt when their theories of assassination are mentioned. On the island of Mull off the west coast of Scotland, six men belonging to a secret society of that island have been arrested on a charge of conspiring to destroy public buildings with dynamite and subvert the British government. Over in Vienna, police commissary Klubeck was mysteriously assassinated a few weeks since. Shortly after a detective named Bloch was shot dead at Florisdorf. The assassin was arrested and there was found on his person a dynamite bomb, a revolver and a poisoned dagger. When arrested he attempted to explode the bomb and destroy himself and his captors. In the subsequent examinations by the authorities he only repeated: "You will never know who I am. I am one of a powerful organization, which is to reform society and rid it of you bloodthirsty rascals." The governor of Florisdorf and several police officers since have received letters threatening death.

Negrophobia has unintentionally given Secretary of War Lincoln opportunity for a popular stroke. The graduates of Harvard College in Washington in arranging for their annual banquet, remembering that the civil rights law is dead, left off the name of Prof. Greener from the list of invitations. Prof. Greener is slightly colored, but he graduated at Harvard with high honor and during his course was honored by having for his patrons Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips, Ralph Waldo Emerson and other Abolition leaders. He is said to be one of the most learned and accomplished of his race. For six years he has been connected with Howard University. He was the only Harvard graduate within a radius of hundreds of miles who did not receive an invitation. But the arrogant committee in attempting to draw the color line cut off also one of the most distinguished of their guests, for Mr. Lincoln resented the uncalled-for insult and would not recognize by his presence such supercilious snobbery, and added a new honor to the name of Lincoln.

The news from upper Nile country has been of repeated disasters. The Egyptian army though led by brave Englishmen has melted away by defeat and massacre which have followed in quick succession. The hordes of the false prophet give no quarter, and women and children are shown no more mercy than armed men. The defeat near Tokar and the massacre at Sinkat left Suakim and Tokar exposed to the Moslem attack and the unconfirmed news in London Monday afternoon that Suakim was taken and Baker Pasha's army annihilated, made the city tremble. But for the presence at both these Red Sea ports of a British fleet ready for an attack the report might be credited, for the Egyptian army was demoralized. On the Nile, however, over against these ports the situation is more hopeful. General Gordon after an unattended journey across the desert has reached Khartoum and issued his proclamation to the neighboring tribes inspiring the old confidence which they had in his singular and wonderful genius. These disasters have exposed the Gladstone ministry to a sweeping attack in Parliament, from the press and in great public meetings. But the opposition was without organization or a policy, and in one of his great speeches Gladstone utterly overthrew it. He strongly opposed the re-conquest of the Soudan as Egypt had no claim upon that region when she annexed it. She could not hold the country nor can she re-conquer it, nor is England under obligation to undertake the expensive business. She only aims to secure the Egyptian bonds and the Suez Canal and to hold the Soudan ports to prevent the slave trade. This policy is consistent with the settlement with the Boers and with Afghanistan, when Christian conscience asserted inself in British councils against the brilliant but cruel promises of Jingoism.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY IDYL.

BY ALEXANDER THOMSON.

Not in ancient fable,
But in history true,
Lives the wondrous story
I would tell to you,
Of a nation builded
Where no nation stood,
Since the waters lifted
All their billows rude
O'er the highest mountains,
And the shoreless sea
Laughed through all its fountains
At man's destiny.

Not as builds the coral
Rose this barrier reef,
Barrier to oppression—
Freedom's golden sheaf.
But with sudden outburst,
Like volcanic roar,
Rose the fair creation
On Columbia's shore;
Column, dome, and turret
Never half so fair
Rose the poet's dreamy
Castles, in the air.

Live, oh fair Columbia!
Live a thousand years!
Live to build a bridge of hope
Across the tide of tears.
Live to raise the fallen up,
And bring the haughty down,
Live to give to every man,
A scepter and a crown,
The scepter of his manly rights,
A crown of self-control,
While cunning guides the busy han
And honor guards the soul.

ANOTHER "UNUSUAL WITNESS."

BY REV. J. K. ALWOOD.

On the evening of Sabbath, April 29, 1883, in a village church of this (Lenawee) county, Michigan, I heard the pastor saying, in his public lamentations over the direful want of spirituality in the church: "We M. E. preachers are anxious to enroll names in our books and make reports of great revivals. We publish what is not true. Many are taken into the church without repentance. They join the church as men join the Masonic lodge; without a change of moral character. They are not regenerated. 'Ye must be born again.'"

Before the close of service we had before us unmistakable evidences of the truthfulness of his statements; evidences that about ninety per cent. of those who were reckoned as Christians in the church and on their way to heaven, had not care or concern enough about the cause of Christ, nor real religious taste and feeling enough to induce them to "tarry for class." None of the outsiders staid. They expected nothing of interest to occur among those who remained. If they had, disappointment would have been their portion. Probably they could have given a far more interesting account of experience in the line of disappointments when aforetimes they had tarried in hope of hearing religious experiences than even those Christians (?) we sometimes meet who are never content excepting only when they are rehearsing their disappointments. The longings of these outsiders to learn the way of life and salvation have been baffled and disappointed, and checked, and discouraged, and shamed out by the vacant seats of church members in the experience meetings, by the dull formality of those present, by the levity of all and by the endorsement of semi-pagan lodge work by all, till their confidence in all church workers and all religious work has so nearly died that they only go to church for idle pass-time, social enjoyment on the way, or curiosity.

Some of the awful facts of the present hour are:

1. The percentage of the church-going population of our country is rapidly decreasing; 2. The spirituality of the members of the church, i. e., the percentage of spiritual church members, is rapidly decreasing; 3. These two evils prey heaviest upon the young men from the ages of fifteen to twenty-five.

The shortest route to a nation's destruction is by the demoralization of her young men. These will be not only the rulers of the nation in the next generation, but they will be the nation. Their character will be the character of the nation. This nation is committing suicide by the expulsion of spirituality from the churches. That is to say the churches are assassinating the nation by the recognition of a vast unspiritual element as a Christian element. The semi-pagan lodge, which is undeniably a rival religion, is recognized as a Christian institution. Pastors are so anxious for patronage and luxury, instead of "taking pleasure in suffering for Christ's sake," as Paul did—that they gladly enroll any name that offers patronage, and proclaim from the pulpit that a man can be both a Christian and a sinner at the same time. That is to say, a sinner can be on the way to heaven and in possession of a joint title with Jesus Christ to a mansion in glory.

Morenci, Michigan.

RELAPSED DRUNKARDS.

Freemasonry is to a community what liquor is to an individual. It is a stimulus to wrong-doing. And as a relapsed drunkard is in a worse condition than an ordinary one, so a community that has relapsed from Anti-masonry into Masonry is far worse off than one whose lodge-intoxication is only of recent occurrence.

This fact is fully exemplified by the political condition of Vermont. That State was formerly the first republican community of the world. It became Anti-masonic in order to save its Republican character; but just previous to the war of Rebellion it relapsed from Anti-masonry and became Masonic. Its political leaders followed Masonic principles and not Republican principles; and in consequence the politics and religion, and even the educational interests of the State have suffered from the baneful frauds and illusions of Freemasonry. An entire generation has been taught that the dishonest tricks of the lodge are "honorable."

One of the consequences of this state of things is that the State of Vermont has honored the friends of Gen. Butler with high office, while one of their regiments which Gen. Butler sought to disgrace, has received little or no favor. That is, the Masonic politicians of the State have accepted the disgrace which Gen. Butler endeavored to inflict upon the people of Vermont, by politically ignoring the regiment that drew upon itself that high Mason's displeasure. Instead of vindicating their worthy and honorable old Whig regiment by bestowing political favor upon its officers, the politicians of the State have bestowed the highest honors upon Butler's friends and associates. No act of injustice, no caprice of a tyrant could be more monstrous than this work of Freemasonry. For the purposes of the lodge it has consented to the disgrace which a high Mason has striven to fasten upon one of the best regiments of the State. There seems to be no end to the belittling concessions to Democracy and to the lodge which the leading politicians of the State are not willing to make for the sake of political position and party power. The old Anti-masonic Whig character of the State has been prostrated at the feet of the lodge, like a relapsed drunkard on the floor of a grog-shop.

And the two Senators from Vermont in Congress stand as the representatives of this prostituted and corrupt condition of the politics of the State. At a time while the whole country should be looking to Vermont as a standard of Republican character, it is plainly seen that that character has been sacrificed to the Masonic lodge as a man's character is often sacrificed to the jug. The political leaders of the State, instead of playing Anti-masonic and Republican pilots of the ship of state, have shown themselves willing on all occasions to be mere cooks and bottle-washers, or rather bottle-holders to the Masonic party. No man who permits himself to become intoxicated with Masonic politics is fit to be intrusted with the affairs of the State.

The Democratic party, it is true, is very much to be feared; but no greater calamity from a political source can befall the nation than the continuance in power of a party which, while making great pretensions to purity and honor, is making a grog-shop of the Capitol; sending for brandy in the name of "tea," and corrupting the Christian character of the nation by a confessed and unblushing prostitution with the lodge. No politician who does not clear his skirts from that infamy should ever receive the suffrages of American citizens.

VERMONTER.

BAD YEAST.

In Mark 8:14 we have these words of Jesus: "Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and the leaven of Herod." The question arises, "what was this leaven, or teaching of the Pharisees, and of Herod?" The first thought was of that awful example of Herod in taking the oath to give the dancing girl anything she would ask, even to the half of his kingdom! That oath was equally a sin whether the damsel had asked him to reward John or to kill him. The character of her request did not change the character of the oath; for the oath was a plain violation of the Divine law in Lev. 5:4. It is a sin to swear to anything good or evil, if hid or unknown—the swearer a fearful leaven which has killed many more than John the Baptist. The character of all such promises is the same. A little consideration here will show that this principle lies at the root of the lodge system of secrecy. It is the leaven which makes it grow and causes crime! It is a danger against which Jesus warns his disciples henceforth in every age. The Herodians were a political party also. But meantime our one lesson is from Herod himself.

Let us take one lesson also from the Pharisees. In Mark 7:8 Jesus charges them thus: "Ye leave the commandment of God and hold fast the tradition of men." Surely this is a very dangerous leaven. Has it not worked among churches in every age? What has raised Rome into such huge dimensions but this leaven? What swells self-righteousness everywhere over the righteousness of faith and obedience to Christ more than this leaven of human tradition? Let us then "Take heed and beware" of man's leaven and hear and obey our Saviour, then all shall be well with us.

A SCOT.

SHORT SERMON.

TEXT:—As having authority.

MY BRETHREN:—Reform must necessarily use the language of authority; and at the same time nothing is more offensive to established vice than that kind of language. We all know how the Pharisees bristled up, raged, foamed, and gnashed their teeth under it. And so it is with that scarcely less infamous sect the Freemasons; what contempt, what scorn, what wrath and hatred they exhibit whenever their power is questioned!

As the object of the Pharisees was to destroy the Mosaic institutions by pretending to preserve them, so the object of the Freemasons is to destroy the Republic by pretending to serve it. Why did the Pharisees aim to destroy the Mosaic institutions? Because they wished to rule themselves. And that is precisely what Freemasons want to do. They wish to get together in small, select circles; exclude the world from the knowledge of their actions, and there hold, like ancient Egyptian priests, the issues of justice, of truth, of mercy, of judgment in their own hands. Nothing delights little and vicious minds more than to have better men than themselves under their power. Their own littleness, their own vices then become the rule of the society that falls under their hands; and they are delighted to see how easily the honest, unsuspecting world can be misgoverned. This is satisfaction enough for little and vicious minds.

My friends, that was an awfully ominous sight for the Republic which was presented in the Senate the other day when under the inspiration of the Masonic lodge twenty-nine Senators resolutely set their faces against having the Ku-Klux outrages of Danville and Copiah inquired into. You are aware that these outrages were concerted, violent assaults against the lives, liberties and freedom of voting of American citizens, subversive of Christianity as well as of the Republic, and as shocking to all true religious sensibilities as were the horrid proceedings of the Inquisition, which outrivalled those of the infamous Nero himself in the infliction of violence, wrong, and torment upon human beings. Yes, in the light of the present century, under the Christian influences around them, twenty-nine American Senators are found, who deliberately decide that such outrages should not be investigated; that the secret mysteries of the Ku-Klux lodge should not be revealed, and that the rights secured by the Constitution, nay, by the common consent of Christian society shall be suppressed! Nor was this stolid, wicked obduracy in the least mitigated by the fact that the thirty-two other Senators who voted against the twenty-nine were also under the influence of Masonry.

My friends, neither thirty-two Republican Senators, nor even the whole Republican party, can call the Ku-Klux lodge to account; for they are Masonic themselves, and therefore are not invested with authority. The moment the Republican party appealed to the gods of the lodge, which was at the very beginning of its career, from that moment they necessarily lost the respect of all honest, thinking men. Their votes in favor of reform are hollow shams; they amount to nothing. Though they vote to investigate Ku-Klux proceedings, the investigation will end only in volumes of testimony which no one will read, and to which no attention will be given. The thirty-two Senators as well as the twenty-nine both knew that the investigation would never work an injury to the lodge, though the lodge is the bottom of the whole affair. Never once did the thirty-two dare to hint at the lodge as the source of the mischief.

My friends, we must have a party in the United States that will dare to give to reform the straightforward words of authority. We must have a party that will not only investigate crime but will punish and restrict the criminals; a party that, under the pretence of investigation, will not allow the crime to sink into oblivion, while the lodge that commits it is still permitted to flourish. We must have a party that when accused of a horrid outrage against human rights will be the first to call for an investigation and not to prevent it; and in fine, a party that in evidence of its truth, sincerity, manliness, and Christianity dares to declare unending, implacable opposition to the Masonic lodge.

SO MOTE IT BE.

LOFTY TITLES.

At a recent meeting of Freemasons at Philadelphia (held on what is called St. John's day, in order to make Freemasons appear to have something to do with St. John, perhaps), some very lofty titled officers were appointed, or installed. Among these the Right Reverend Bishop Cortland Whitehead, Doctor of Divinity, of the Protestant Episcopal church in America, a resident of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, was made Grand Chaplain of the Right Worshipful Grand Lodge, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons of the Jurisdiction of Pennsylvania; and a man by the name of Augustus R. Hall (whether a saloon-keeper or not is not stated), was made Most Excellent Grand High Priest.

Now it is supposed that Christians never recognize but one High Priest; but Bishop Whitehead, it appears, recognizes more than one. He considers Augustus R. Hall to be a Most Excellent Grand High Priest, as well as is the Saviour of mankind to whom that title (excepting the words Most Excellent Grand) is generally accorded.

In our opinion Bishop Whitehead must occupy this position, viz.: he must either held his own title of Bishop very cheap, thus to associate it with that of Most Excellent Grand High Priest; or he must respect both titles as equally valid, though perhaps unequal in degree. If the Bishop really does consider Mr. Hall's title as anything more than a low, buffoon mockery of the title of the Saviour, he must have a very singular idea of the value of his own title of Bishop. It would be curious to know which title he considers the higher; whether he would permit a Most Excellent Grand High Priest, if a Methodist, to preach in his Episcopal pulpit; whether he would take the mock sacrament of the "Sublime Degree of Perfection" from the High Priest's, or Senior Grand Deacon's hands; whether he considers the horse jockey and livery stable keeper a suitable person to represent on earth that office which is represented in heaven by our Lord, etc., etc.

In short, we should suppose that a Bishop who would allow his sacred office to be associated with any office bestowed by a Masonic lodge, without resenting it as a disgrace to his Christian piety and manly sincerity, is more likely to serve the cause of confusion and error than that of Christian truth. The evil communications of the lodge are wholly unsuited to the manners of a Christian bishop.

CAIN'S PISTOL.

The American Reformer has sense and reason in its protest against the public sentiment expressed during the trials of young Nutt in Pittsburg, and Howell in Batavia, N. Y. Under the above title it says:

"Though of modern origin, the revolver is a product of the civilization of Cain. It needs prohibition by more than Mosaic law. From it come murder, contempt of justice, misdirected sentiment, the canonization of crime. By it Cain is made gushingly immortal, and poses jauntily in his prison for weak-minded popular applause.

"Killing begins to be a virtue; human life is little more sacred that the life of a beast. For slight excuse, or for none at all, one man terminates the existence of another, and is justified in doing it by the courts, or the courts declare him irresponsible for the deed. Manslaughter becomes only man's laughter; tragedy degenerates into farce; reckless passion mocks at penalties and sneers at punishment. 'It is a mad world, my masters!'

"Within the past two weeks, two murderers have been tried for their murderous acts. One of them shot the seducer of his sister, his father having fallen before that villian's pistol; the other shot the paramour of his wife. Both went coolly about their work and were horribly successful. Both were given every advantage possible on their trial, and were accorded special favors by the people or the prosecuting attorney. In the case of young Nutt public sentiment even hissed the prosecutor while in court; in Rowell's case bail was granted to a murderer before his trial began. Both trials were the baldest mockery and the most idle waste of effort. Neither was intended to convict. Open appeals were made for sympathy, and this sympathy found ready utterance in many ways.

"There could scarcely be a more absurd spectacle than such a presentation of justice as that Batavia court-room gave. It was even disgusting; for into that room, rank with the odor of sin and crime, were daily taken the murderer's little children, to hear testimony convicting both their parents, and this that the jury might be wrought upon; while the jury itself was chosen carefully from married men, whose feelings might the more easily be moved.

"No farce like this can be, without still further discounting the value of human life. No such pleas of insanity can succeed without rendering sanity a burlesque and putting common safety in doubt. Law is belittled when thus its guardians become accomplices with vindictiveness, fraternize with crime and condone criminality. Public sentiment demeans itself when it gushes tearfully over murderers and arrays itself hysterically on the side of Cain. There is need of a change."

THE EL-MAHDI.

The time to write the history of this new troubler in the East has not probably yet come. He has risen like a multitude of his predecessors, will run his ill-starred day, and then will probably be swept away by some of the fierce elements or actors of evil which he himself may have unscrupulously and recklessly evoked.

From the numerous statements that have been made of him, it is scarcely possible to give any reliable account of his early history.* That he has ever been a devoted follower of the false prophet, and is a thorough Mohammedan enthusiast, and, perhaps, fanatic, there is no question. In all the region of the Soudan where he has lived, the inhabitants are of the Moslem faith, and in their almost entire destitution of education, they are given up to all the superstitions and forms of their false creed. Over all that vast region Egypt has long had a kind of government and control. But in her professed determination to put down the slave-trade, which has long prevailed over that country, and in the general subjection which was demanded to her authority, there has ever been more or less of resistiveness, and not unfrequently actual bloody wars.

In this state of things Mohammed Ahmed appears. With undoubtedly good natural abilities and much of the spirit of Eastern cunning and intrigue, he assumed two parts. One was that of deliverer of the people of Soudan and the neighboring regions from all allegiance to Egypt. His appeal in this respect was to their desire to be free from foreign restraint and control. Accordingly he rejected all Egyptian authority, gave license to the slave-trade or allied himself with its abettors in all their nefarious work, and made his appeal to the people and to arms, while he assumed to be the deliverer that Allah (God) had raised up to meet the occasion and the need. The other part that he assumed, and the one upon which he could probably most rely for interesting and thoroughly arousing Moslems everywhere to rally around his standard, was that he was the El-Mahdi—the Messiah of the Mohammedan faith, a descendant and the successor of Mohammed—and the one under whom that faith should spread abroad and have all people throughout the world brought to embrace it, and it be made to become, as Mohammed, the false prophet, himself proclaimed it should, the one faith and religion of the world.

* From the latest accounts of this man we may gleam the following:

His real name is Ahmet Suleiman. He was born in Egypt. Under Mohammed Ali, the founder of the present dynasty in Egypt, his brother was sent as an officer to the Soudan. His early training was good. On leaving school he entered into the government service and was soon made Accountant General of Soudan. Afterwards he dealt largely as a merchant in stoves, elephant tusks, gum arabic and ostrich feathers, and when by the treaty between England and the Khedive, Ismail Pasha, the slave trade was to be put down, he led the opposition to the government in the Soudan. He took up the title of El-Mahdi since the present Khedive of Egypt came into power.

In this pretension there was enough to rouse the Moslem heart, and when success in any degree followed him, the hand of God and his prophet was immediately said to be seen to be with him, and thus his false pretensions and his successes, though founded upon a base practicing upon the credulity and superstition of the people, were declared to be attested and approved by God. In all this he is only following many who have preceded him. Mohammed himself, not long before his death—and when he had repudiated Al Arwad, who had claimed to be the prophet of God, but was almost immediately betrayed and beheaded—declared that before the final judgment Islam, or the Mohammedan religion, would be troubled with thirty other impostors or pretenders. In sad reality his words have been verified, and after rising and flourishing for a time, one after another of them has been made to meet by the assassin's dagger, or the sword in war, or some other terrible form, an ignimonious and revolting death.

Time will show whether the present pretender will meet a different fate. Already it is said the professors of the great university at Cairo and the functionaries at Mecca—the two highest Moslem authorities in the world, have rejected his claims and pronounced against him. Ultimately he will doubtless pass away and be known only as another of the wretched wrecks that are to be seen upon the tide of time.

For a time, however, he may do much harm. Not, we think, so much from his military arms or successes, for with all the forces and means he can command where he is, he would probably find it long and difficult for him to overcome all the natural obstacles in his way to Egypt, and to encounter there the trained troops that would undoubtedly meet him. The real danger is from another source. It is that of the wild and reckless spirit of Mohammedan fanaticism being roused, not only in the Soudan, but in Nubia, Abyssynia, Egypt, Arabia, Persia, and every country where Mohammedanism is, and thence go forth to do the dreadful work to which it would doubtless feel itself infallibly called—the work of subjugation to the faith or of extermination—the work of allegiance to the prophet or of death to the uttermost.

It was this view of the matter, undoubtedly, that led a prominent public man in Great Britain to say in a recent speech at Bradford, England, after he had referred to the late Egyptian defeat:

"There is no immediate danger to Egypt on account of the Mahdi's success. It would be impossible for him to cross the Korosko desert with regular troops, if he has any, which I very much doubt. To cross the Korosko desert is a march of two hundred miles, with only one well of brackish water. The road is lined with skeletons of camels that have perished in the journey. To reach Cairo the Mahdi must march along the banks of the Nile, and twelve months under favorable circumstances, that is with no resistance, would elapse before he could arrive at his goal.

"The danger does not consist in the Mahdi's forces; it consists in the Pan-Islamic movement, in the feeling of the Egyptians, of the Mohammedan world, of men ground down by European usurers in Egypt, ground down by taxes on salt in Hindoostan, and who catch at the false prophet even as a drowning man catches at a straw. Each day this movement is growing throughout the East. We have a vast number of Mohammedans and idolaters beneath our rule in India. They have seen us unfriendly to the Sultan, they have seen us strangle in Egypt the aspirations of the national party, they know that the Sultan is powerless, they look upon the Ilbert bill and the Bengal Tenancy bill as signs of the weakness of our government. With another success they will regard the Mahdi as a deliverer. He has already allied himself with slave-dealers.

"It is our duty to put down that traffic, and until he is effectually suppressed there will be no lasting peace throughout our Eastern dominions. A former British officer is now on the march to strike a blow—one in which we are deeply interested—against the false prophet. General Baker, who was hardly treated in England, has sought employment beneath the Khedive. Only let it be supported by British influence and money, and a danger which, although not imminent, is one that must be faced, will be averted from Cairo and from the whole of our Oriental possessions. With General Baker acting on one flank of the Mahdi's line of march with negro troops—for European or Indian would be useless in that country—and a diversion which might be easily made by some Abyssinian forces against Khartoum in exchange for a seaport for themselves, the false prophet would soon find himself in an exceedingly uncomfortable position."
—Rev. J. B. Dales, in Evangelical Repository.

RASH PROMISES.

ADDRESS BY REV. W. T. MELOY, D. D., BEFORE THE CHICAGO CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, TUESDAY EVENING, FEB. 12, 1884.

The subject to which I call your attention this evening is one of the utmost importance. There are some things too sacred to be trifled with. The priests who bare the ark were not allowed to touch it with their hands. A man who reached forth a profane hand to stay it when about to fall was smitten by the Lord. Those days of visible terror have passed away, but in their place we have something even more sacred. Rashness in other times was punished by the Lord with leprosy or with death. When Miriam and Aaron reviled Moses, because of the Ethiopian woman he had married, God's anger was so much enkindled that Miriam became leprous, white as snow. She was only restored by the intercession of the man she had reviled.

There is nothing amongst men more sacred than the promise. Rashness here is altogether without excuse. He who trifles with the promise trifles with a something that is so sacred that the whole structure of society is held together by it. In the formation of the very first relation of life, the promise stands at the threshold—at the threshold of the home. In all social relations, in all commercial transactions, a promise expressed or implied lies at the basis. We handle every day the promise of our Government to pay. We clothe and feed our families with these promises of the general government to pay. All assemblies of men are called together by expressed or implied promises. In a thousand different ways the promise of man to his fellow enters into our business and pleasures. What we did yesterday, what we do to-day, and what we propose for to-morrow, is based not simply on our own resolves or efforts or plans, but on the plighted word of others.

Faith in God, that makes a heroic life a possibility, is not a simple belief in his existence, but rather a perfect trust that what he has promised he will perform. Abraham never would have been called the father of the faithful had he not relied on the Divine promise, believing that what God promises he is able and faithful to perform. Anything which tends to break down man's faith in God is necessarily an incalculable evil to men. Everything which tends to destroy man's faith in his fellow-man is a foe to the best interests of society. Conduct that is at variance with our profession, pledges lightly taken and as lightly kept, promises rashly made and rashly kept or rashly broken, are inimical to the true interests of society. I can find in my heart of hearts no excuse for any intelligent Christian man who burdens his soul with unnecessary and voluntary obligations. What then, is a rash promise? Why do I condemn it? And how may we avoid the danger? These are questions of very great importance.

It appears from what I have already said that we are daily called on to make promises; that we cannot avoid this even if we would; that we are in every relation of life and in every business and in every engagement making and trusting in the promises of men. It is at once admitted that there are varying degrees of sacredness to be attached to the different pledges we make. But it was long ago said, "He that is unjust in that which is least will be unjust also in that which is greatest." And the tendency of infidelity in the smallest matters of life is to unfaithfulness in its greatest affairs. It is worse for a man to lie to God than it is to lie to his fellow man. In one sense it is worse, and in another it is not so bad. It shows a greater depth of depravity. But we may deceive men by our falsity; we cannot deceive God. In order that we may be true it is necessary that we be most careful in all the words of spoken, written or sworn obligation which we take. In order to give my remarks definiteness I will assert, We must not make any promise in ignorance. Read the paper before you sign it. Examine the contract before you affix your name. If in business you act on any other principle, you will smart for it. Doubtless some of you will remember the incident that occurred at the national convention at which President Garfield was nominated, when an attempt was made by Senator Conkling to pledge every member of that convention to support whoever might be nominated. Certain delegates rose in their places and refused to be foresworn, one of them asserting that he proposed to bind his conscience by no foresworn obligation. The sovereignty of his actions he intended to keep under his own hand. What though that convention had pledged itself to nominate no one that was not a true man and a true Republican, his right to determine that question for himself was not to be voted away.

Under no circumstance is a sane man justified in giving over his conscience to the keeping of any man or any combination of men. God made me in his image, gave me the power and right to determine for myself what I shall and shall not do. My conscience may not be so enlightened as my brothers, but it has been given me for my guidance. No other man can think or decide for me. I must reason and determine and act for myself; and before my Creator I am responsible for my own conduct. If reason be dethroned I may commit all decisions to others but while reason is on the throne I am responsible for its exercise. I am about to enter some association and ask a few simple questions. "Ah, my dear sir, these things are hidden from the uninitiated. You must not inquire what is done inside the hall. Wait and you will know." "But I do not know what these laws are; I do not know what these secrets are; I do not know what it is you ask me to do. Tell me, and if I find that there are advantages to be derived, pleasures to be enjoyed, I will not hesitate a moment."

Then I am assured that there will be nothing required of me that conflicts with my duty as a man, a citizen, a husband or a Christian, what not.

But who is this that decides for me? Who is this that proposes to be the lord of my conscience? A hundred men are doing things to-day that they will say does not conflict with their duty to the home, the state, the church. I could not regard it so. It may come with its secrets between the husband and the wife. It may call him away from his home when he ought to be there. It may bind him in brotherly alliance with infidels and scoffers. It may influence his conduct in caucuses and courts of justice. A hundred men are selling intoxicating liquors that fire the brain, madden the heart, and unsheath the dagger; and yet these men will tell you, and not intend to misrepresent about the matter either, that there is nothing in their business that any good citizen or good Christian may not properly engage in. Who is to be the judge of the rightfulness or unrightfulness of any course of conduct? You must decide for yourself and I must decide for myself. And for that decision we are responsible to God and our fellow-men. A man may be sincere in his statements, I do not challenge the fact, but the question is to be decided by my own conscience whether his statements are in accord with the revealed will of God or not. Tell me your secret first and then I will determine by my own sense of right whether it is a something that ought to be hidden or revealed. If you are not willing to do this, keep it to yourself and my soul will not be burdened with it.

Ah, but some one will say, "I know that right well, but you have presented extreme cases." I certainly have not gone beyond the region of possibility or probability. We are apt to suppose that Herodias was worse than many of the women of her time. It may be she was; but I tell you of one that did not think so—her husband. It could do no harm I am sure to make a promise to her and let her be the judge of its rightfulness. The oath was taken—taken in public; and the wily woman asked him to authorize murder. She did it knowing her advantage. Give me here and now the head of John Baptist in a charger. A strange request, truly, for a young lady to make. But you see that Herod had, through the daughter, given up his right to decide into her hands. For his oath's sake and for his reputation's sake he kept the promise, and slew the greatest of the prophets. There were two great errors in the case, but the one to which I allude now is in making a rash promise, and confirming that promise with an oath. He was led into a crime that has caused his name to be handed down throughout the ages as a red-handed murderer. Did he intend it when he made that rash promise? By no means. He only wanted to please his daughter, or the daughter of Herodias, rather.

These promises, made in ignorance of what is to be done, are in every case ensnaring, one of Satan's arts to lure men to the commission of crimes that they in their very souls abhor. How strange it is that wise men will be led into a snare that is spread in their sight. But suppose the statement is true and there is nothing promised that in any sense has compromised my relations to society; have I done wrong in swearing to obey a code of unknown laws? Undoubtedly I have. I have voluntarily given up the right of private judgment. I have laid aside the glory of my manhood. I have allowed a mere man to come between God and my soul and decide for me questions of duty. It might have happened that Herodias would have asked for the release of God's honored servant; it was not probable, but was certainly a possible thing. By his oath he put himself in the power of a fellow-creature, and whether that power was used for the welfare of others or not was not in his control.

There is another piece of history that bears very directly on this point: I suppose that the most of you have it already in mind. There is a man, who after many trying experiences, has been exalted to a high position. He commands an army. He is devout; prays for success; but in an evil hour he makes a rash vow—a vow in ignorance. He will sacrifice the first living creature he meets on his return to the city. He returns a conqueror. The man who was driven from home by his envious brethren returns again in honor. A daughter, who has shared her father's disgrace, now hears of the wonderful victory, and knowing nothing of the rash vow comes out with all a daughter's pride and love to meet him and share his honors. The triumphal procession is turned into one of mourning. Whether Jeptha carried out his rash and wicked promise or not I do not want to discuss, now and here. His whole subsequent life was saddened by this rash promise. Was that vow wrong? Suppose that in place of meeting his daughter, he had met a part of a flock or herd; he might have offered the sacrifice without additional sin. But the crime was committed when he made the vow. Its being right or wrong did not depend at all on the result. Whether the things that are given to the world by you are substantial revelations of the effects, doings, and oaths of the lodge or not, does not enter into the present address. If anybody is unwilling to believe the testimony of more than a thousand witnesses who have renounced the lodge, I certainly will not quarrel with him, to-night. If anybody is credulous enough to believe that anything, known by men for generations—men of so many dispositions and habits in life—could be kept a secret he is to be regarded as a living wonder of credulity, who might be induced to treat Gulliver's travels as a veritable history. But I will not argue the point with him to-night. The only point I press now is that any system that encourages men to swear away their own freedom of conscience is necessarily evil; and the youth of our land are to be warned against it. You cannot swear to obey unknown laws without dishonoring God, whose revealed truth is to guide you, without bartering away your own birthright, the right of conscience, and consequently proving yourself unfaithful to your sacred trust.

When God asks us to obey him, it is not in a blind obedience. He reveals his will to us for our salvation; he asks no man to follow him in blind obedience to the unknown and unrevealed. If this be the ordinary way of God's dealings with men, are we to honor man by following him in the darkness, leaving the question to be decided by man what we are to do and believe? while we dishonor God by allowing any one to bind us by terrible oaths to that of which we are entirely ignorant, the only assurance we have against wrong doing being the conviction expressed by mere man that we will in the fulfilment of that oath find nothing that will conflict with our obligations to God and man as imposed on us by the sacred Word?

But suppose that the rash promise has already been made; what then? Must I keep it? May I break my sworn obligation? Suppose that I do find something that conflicts with my duty; that I find that the oaths are barbaric; that the ceremonies are a mockery of religion; that it is full of false teachings in regard to the only way of acceptance before God; that it dismisses its members by a false hope from the lodge on earth to the lodge in heaven; that it interferes with the administration of justice. Suppose I find any or all of these things; the old question comes up, What is my duty? Shall I keep my oath? That is the very question that Herod discussed. He decided to keep his oath. Was he right or was he wrong? Many have asked the same question and many have decided just as Herod did. Let us see.

A man can never be guilty of a falsehood when he is true to God, to himself, to his brother and to the truth. There is a higher obligation resting on men than their oaths and that is the command of the Lord. The man is true therefore when he meets the highest obligation. He may withdraw. He may feel it to be his duty to do more than this. He may also feel called on to protest, to give warning, to expose the system that has defrauded him, and is defrauding so many others. It may be that I have not done my whole duty when I have withdrawn from evil associations. If I have escaped some dangerous pitfall myself, I ought to give some warning to others who are being led into the same temptation. Let me illustrate: There were forty men who bound themselves by a great oath that they would neither eat nor drink until they had slain Paul. Let us suppose that one of these had seen the evil of such an oath and determined to withdraw; it would not have been his whole duty it may be to quietly get out of the way and let the others go on with their work. I am not just sure how far this principle will apply to the lodge; I will not attempt to interpret duty in the case for any man. To his own Master he must answer. The Word is not entirely silent on this point. Let me read you from Leviticus 5:4: "Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil or to do good, whatever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these."

But a practical question now is, Are these men to be believed? They have broken their oaths; what possible confidence can you place in them now? I confess that this does stagger a great many honest-minded people. But let us suppose that the things are as they represent them, and that God has opened their minds to see the evils described. The question recurs, what shall they do? Is Jeptha always to be branded as a liar because he refused to kill his daughter according to his vow? Is Herod to be regarded not as a murderer but as an honorable gentleman, since he had such great regard for his oath that he beheaded the great prophet and had the bloody trophy of his oath-keeping brought in on a charger? Is the only way by which the forty assassins, who were banded together to slay the great Apostle to the gentiles, can show themselves to be trustworthy and reliable gentlemen, to carry out their purpose and kill him, or failing in that to refrain from all nourishment until they died? Some of you have recently dedicated a monument to a man for refusing to keep an oath which he believed was ensnaring? If these men really kept their oath and starved to death, would it not be well to have a monument erected to their memory as models of truth? And possibly it would save some expense to have one side of it dedicated to that illustrious oath-keeper who removed the wine cups of his royal feast and put thereon the bloody head of him who Christ declared was a prophet and more than a prophet, and that among those born of women there was none greater than he.

The disgrace of the liquor-embellished dinner—perhaps liquor-soaked would be a better term—given by the President of the United States on Jan. 30, was not relieved nor in any sense mitigated by the presence of a bishop and his wife among the guests. If newspaper reports be true, the eight glasses, for the eight kinds of liquor, were set around the plates of Bishop Simpson and his wife, as around the plates of the other guests; and during the twenty-one courses were filled with "chablis, sherry, Rhine wine, claret, champagne, brandy, and liqueurs."

We cannot testify that they drank thereof, for we were not there to see. But one thing is morally certain, that there was no open rebuke on the part of the bishop, or we should have heard of the flutter it occasioned. We have no instructions to give to the various M. E. bodies as to what action they should take to purge themselves of the odium of one of their bishops giving tacit indorsement to the drinking customs of the country by his presence and the presence of his wife on such an occasion; but temperance talk from M. E. preachers will, until this wrong be atoned for, be considered little better than buncombe.—Free Methodist.

REFORM NEWS.

THE SITUATION IN KANSAS.

The Kansas Christian Association, at its late meeting at Topeka, asked me to act as its agent in the reform against the lodge for the ensuing year, and I have agreed to do so, trusting in the Lord and his people for support. Resolutions have been passed not only by the State Association, but by the Wesleyan Methodist and United Brethren Conferences, Covenanter Presbytery and United Presbyterian Synod, some of them pledging, all of them favoring the liberal support of this cause by their several constituents. For all this I am glad, but it is not enough. Resolutions make tough steak, and pay fare on no railroads. We must have money or we cannot move.

HOT OR COLD?

Permit me to say further that no half-way measures will win. The lodge is strong in members, in organization, and in money. Yet we are fully able to go up against it if the Lord will go with us. But the Lord does not go with the lukewarm. Even this reform, however right, will be spued out of his mouth if it is neither hot nor cold. Which will we do, brethren, will we set Kansas on fire, or freeze out and quit? For my part I want Kansas to be too thoroughly ablaze with light and truth for any good man to be decoyed into the lodge or to feel easy if already there.

Can we do it? It really looks as though we could. There are in Kansas: United Brethren, 7,000; United Presbyterians, 2,500; Reformed Presbyterians, 500; Wesleyan Methodists ——, Free Methodists ——, and many from other denominations, making a working force against the lodge (if they will work) not to be despised. If we are hot we can set Kansas on fire. But how shall we proceed?

TWO AND TWO.

When Jesus started his disciples out to wake up the cities of Israel, he sent them two and two. I believe it was wise. Though we boast a great deal of our progress, we are not yet up with the Carpenter of Nazareth. Let us follow his example and send out our workers two and two, a lecturer and a degree worker. The Executive Committee so advise. The only doubtful question is the cost. To determine this we will allow that the workers could visit ten neighborhoods per month, spending an average of two nights at each point. Allowing salary $50 each, $100; expenses $25 each, $50. We have a total expense of $150 per month or $15 for each of the points visited. This is the lowest calculation that can be made with any safety. Based upon this calculation I make to the friends of Kansas the following proposition:

Raise what you can at each point, either in money or subscription, and forward to me, enclosing not less than one dollar of the amount. If you wish a visit from the workers, state that fact, agreeing to furnish a house in which to meet, advertise the meeting, board the workers, if off the railroad to furnish transportation to and from the station, and pay the amount subscribed on the arrival of the workers; but leave the time of meeting for me to fix. On the above conditions I agree to furnish a lecturer, accompanied by a responsible seceding Mason, whenever desired, and to send notice to each point not less than ten days in advance.

Provided 1st. That no work will be done until one month's work is provided for.

Provided 2nd. That no point can claim this promise unless fifteen dollars has been paid or promised either by themselves or by the over-subscription of other places.

Send on your subscriptions promptly. Let us have a lecture and an object lesson on Masonry in one hundred places in the State during this year, and Kansas will be hot.

Address all communications to me at Olathe, Kansas, care of Rev. W. W. McMillan. P. S. FREMSTER.

REFORM WORK IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

I preached Lord's day, Dec. 30th, at Nottingham Center, but with no very marked results. Church low and weather very severe. Spent Sunday, Jan. 13, 1884, at East Rochester; preached for Methodist brethren in the forenoon with great blessing to my soul and good interest on the part of those that heard. Spoke to the Advent brethren in the evening and the presence of the Lord verified the promise. The healing power of the Lord has been often manifested to these brethren and their faith has been thereby greatly strengthened. East Rochester was favored by the presence and labors of Elder Plummer Chesley, of blessed memory, and religiously is far ahead of many villages. Preached Sundays 20th and 27th at

New Durham depot, with growing interest on the part of the people and special blessing to my own soul. The Spirit of the Lord was very manifestly present. This village is three miles from any stated meeting of worship. I attended one week evening meeting held in Farmington under the direction of Elder Mark Stevens. Nearly forty had been hopefully converted and many others had made some effort to be Christians. The Freewill Baptists came in with the Advent brethren and shared the labor and blessing. I met with two cases of conflict between the "church" and "society," and in each case the "society" overbore the church. In one case the minister was notified to leave because he disapproved of church festivals and pressed the importance of Foreign Mission work. "Be not unequally yoked," says the apostle.

I spent some time in Middleton and was forcibly reminded of Zenophon's description of the "uninhabited villages" through which he passed in Asia Minor. Middleton was once a thriving town and the old empty meeting house bears mute witness of better days. I considered myself bishop of Middleton and did what I could to arouse the people to a sense of their duty to God and the possibility of being Christians although deprived of public worship. The old ministers who labored here are kindly remembered. Lectured on secret societies at Meadesboro, Jan. 25th, in Friends' meeting house. In fifteen days I visited and addressed two public schools, conversed and prayed with about eighty families, including many sick and poor, and secured twenty-three subscriptions for the Christian Witness.

S. C. KIMBALL,
Home Missionary of the N. H. C. A.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PROHIBITION A GOOD WORD FOR LODGERY ALSO.

PARKVILLE, MO.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—You will not be surprised to learn that the "Secret Empire" has a branch office in this town. A Masonic and Odd-fellow lodge are in full working order. I am not, as yet, acquainted with the adherents thereof. I found out one of them the other day, formerly the "master" of the lodge, and a K. T. I was informed that he does not now regularly attend lodge meetings, and has refused to serve any longer as "W. M." because that service required too much of his time and money. I didn't learn whether it interfered with his religious duties or not.

On the day when one of our college buildings burned and an adjoining business building was in danger, I noticed some queer trappings brought out of an upper room by the "colo'd ge'men" of the place. Gay colors and gold-leaf were specially prominent. I tried to find out to what particular branch of the devil's "great moral(?) show and menagerie combined" the toys belong, but I found only the numbers "333" and "777" in gilt, on a square box, which was painted in gaudy colors.

We have no saloons in the place, but some of our enterprising(?) business men are now agitating the momentous question whether it would not be good policy to have the town incorporated so that the inhabitants might enjoy the benefits of the license system. But "no saloons" does not imply "no whisky." Plenty of that is sold and drank. One of our druggists keeps a supply and does a "rushing business" in that line, without even running the risk of losing his reputation for honesty and "a good moral character." I don't think, however, that the business will long continue unmolested. We have a strong temperance sentiment, and a noble band of workers, steadily advancing and gaining ground.

Our W. C. T. U., recently organized, requested permission of the editor of the Platte county paper, published at Platteville, to use part of a column of his sheet for temperance items. He was willing to grant the request on condition that "prohibition" should be left out of the discussion(!) They declined. They couldn't do otherwise and be consistent. To my mind that would be treating the temperance question, as it now stands, just as some (would-be) ministers of the Gospel treat the message of salvation, by their persistent exclusion of a crucified Christ. Now, right here is an indication how the battle stands. A man who has a splinter in his foot will limp on that side. It is the sore finger which always gets hurt. "Prohibition doesn't prohibit!" Prohibition, we are told, is sure to swamp the temperance ship. "It's the straw that will break the camel's back."

Oh, yes! We have heard the same kind of logic before. The Masons and kindred cliques are fond of it. "Your fanatical agitation against our noble order can never do any good. You are only hurting yourselves by inviting attention to us. Since your last lecture on secretism in our place our lodge has prospered and increased as never before."

Wonderful logic! Why, then, do these men howl and rage, and sputter and spit, and tremble with apprehension when a "National Christian Association" worker comes along? Why are the church, and, in many cases, the school-house doors closed against him? For the same reasons that a "Turn Verein" will, promptly and emphatically, refuse to let a temperance worker lecture in their hall. How long will a saloon-keeper tolerate a prohibition meeting in his "palace saloon?" Not a moment. Why? Because prohibition means death to the liquor traffic. License means protection, and protection implies approval.

May the day soon come when all who do not believe in secret societies will take and keep the same ground that is now taken by prohibitionists over against the license system.

J. D. G.

NOTES FROM SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

BALDWIN, Ill.

The Globe Democrat (of St. Louis) complains of the unnecessary amount of secrecy connected with the business of the United States Senate. Doesn't the Globe know that most of the Senators have been trained up in the lodge to habits of secrecy, and consequently very naturally fall into that way of conducting business in the Senate.

Judging from the way the Democratic and Republican parties appeal to the people, one would suppose that these two parties were not made up of the rank and file of the voters, but that they were two opposing lodge factions appealing to the people at large to decide which should have the power of administering the governments of the States and of the nation. The nominees of both parties are pretty uniformly lodge men, and divide the lodge vote among them, and the vote of outsiders is largely a matter of mere form, as most likely the candidates of both parties are selected by lodgites. So that in any event the lodge rules. It is high time that those American citizens who do not belong to the lodge should combine and leave its double set of candidates out in the cold.

A gentleman who recently had occasion to interview six or eight Presbyterian ministers in Southern Illinois, found all but one opposed to the lodge, and they for prudential reasons had to keep silent, but longed for the time when the church and its ministry would be delivered from this time-serving slavery.

The lodge is the natural place for heathens to drop into, but what business has a Christian to thus worship at the altar of Baal?

H.

BRO. CLEMENS TO FRIENDS AND OBJECTORS.

CLAYVILLE, N. Y.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since my first letter appeared in your pages, Jan. 10th, I have received communications from some that think as I do and some who do not. May I be allowed a little space in which to briefly reply?

One brother says the M. E. church did not separate herself from slavery, nor will she rid herself from the sin of secretism by the virtue of anything within herself. I supposed that the separation of the M. E. church North from the M. E. church South, in 1840 to '44, was on the question of slavery. Hence my remark was in good faith, you see. Yet I think the M. E. church was shamefully slow in recognizing the truth and the right, and taking proper grounds against wrong. If I am not correct in the above data, I will gladly welcome correction.

To those who have written only words of encouragement and praise, I reply:

Brethren, I do not deserve your words of praise, nor did I take this step in order to call them out. I have done only what I believed to be my duty, with no regard either to the praise or censure of any. Those persons mentioned were especially offended and had their peace of mind much disturbed by my relation to Masonry, and I did what I believe to be the duty of all, to make all wrongs right as far as possible.

The only thing about this that is unpleasant to me is the fact that there are those who I do believe are as conscientious as I am myself, and whose views are opposite to mine; and I suppose I annoy them as they do me. I am happy to-day to feel and to write that the love of Jesus helps me to love in deed, and not in word only, those persons. Yes, more; their presence, and prayers, and testimony are a pleasure to me, believing as I do that that at some time and in some way the dear Saviour will help them to see aright. God bless them all, is my prayer.

Meantime I do not wish to provoke controversy, for "the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God." Hence I give and ask, and indeed claim, the right to think, and speak, and act as God teaches me and leads me from day to day, and my present position is not the result of a wish to annoy or provoke any man or body of men, but it is the result of years of study and reading as I could catch an opportunity, until I have come to the conclusion that all secretism is essentially wrong and should not be allowed in this free land of ours. I have not time or space to give all the reasons why, but refer all inquirers to the works as follows:

Morgan's revelations, Bernard's "Light on Masonry," and Stearn's book written before Morgan's came out; also President Finney's "Character and Claims and Practical Workings of Masonry," and the "Broken Seal," by Green; all of which are correct as far as I have any knowledge and experience. I do also believe that Morgan came to his untimely end by the hands of Masons. I also believe the sworn statement of Thurlow Weed. His character through life forbids any other rational conclusion in me. I could also give personal experience largely confirmatory of the above, but believing it would needlessly irritate any who may chance to read these few lines, I forbear. Suffice it to say, my heart rejoices in the coming victory. I am glad to know that such illustrious names of living men to-day as D. L. Moody and Joseph Cook, the great lecturer, and John Dougal of the New York Weekly Witness, President Blanchard of Wheaton College, President Finney of Oberlin College, ex-Senator Pomeroy, Gen. Phelps, and a host of others, are on this side of this great question. Are these men spiritually or intellectually weak? By no means. They are among the very best and the greatest men who are working upon and moulding human destiny to-day.

But I trust in the success of the American and Prohibition principles, not only because these men are on our side, but in the fact that God is with us, and he will help us, and that right early. Therefore the cause of right has nothing to fear from error. It will ultimately triumph.

With ardent love and fervent charity for all who conscientiously differ from me, I subscribe myself, one of the least of those that labor for the right,

E. J. CLEMENS.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

HARMON, Ill.

I was about nineteen years of age when I first heard the second coming of Christ talked of and preached. I was then living in Jamestown, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. Father Miller's writings on the subject were being read, and the excitement ran high; but most of the church members scoffed at the idea and made light of the subject. A great change has come over the church since that day. Now a great majority of Christians believe that the second coming of our Saviour is near.

If we examine prophecy upon the subject we shall see that his coming is very, very near, "even at the door." The prophet Joel says, "The sun shall be turned into darkness and the moon into blood before the great and notable day of the Lord come. And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved." Joel 2: 31, 32. In Amos 8: 9, it is written, "I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day." These two signs have passed. On May 19, 1780, the sun went down at noon. The legislature of Connecticut were in session, and in the strange darkness they consulted a few moments and then lit their lamps and proceeded to business. The night following was one of awful darkness. Both moon and stars were forbidden to give their light. The moon was turned into blood when I was a little girl. I remember how much there was said about it. An aunt of mine, just before bedtime, opened the door, and oh, what a sight! The moon looked like blood, the air looked like blood, the snow was as red as though blood had been poured over it. Uncle and aunt were filled with fear, for they did not understand the sign. Their two unconverted daughters began to cry for mercy, for they thought that the judgment would come at sunrise. The family sat up all night. Uncle and aunt prayed for my cousins, and they were happily converted to God before day-dawn.

In Matt. 24: 29, 30, Jesus prophesies of his second coming and tells some of the signs. He says, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven, and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." The sign of the falling of the stars took place also when I was a child. It was in the year 1833. Authentic history says it was to be seen nearly all over the habitable globe. In the State of New York a shower of stars, as it were, fell very early in the morning. A minister came to our house the next day, and I remember of hearing him talk with mother about it. He said he opened the door very early in the morning, and behold, the air was full of stars falling like snowflakes! He reached his hand out but he could feel nothing. It was only a sign—a sign that the Saviour's coming was near. Jesus said, the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. In order to understand this phrase we must remember there are three heavens spoken of in the Bible. The first heaven is the atmosphere we breathe; the second heaven is the firmament where the moon and stars are situated; the third heaven is the world of light where God dwells. The powers of God cannot be shaken, hence the Saviour could not mean them. He must have meant the power of Satan and his angels, and the power of carthly kings. And they are now being terribly shaken, and have been many times before since the crucifixion of our Saviour. Satan's kingdom is being terribly shaken by Gideon's band of reformers. They are dealing telling blows against Sabbath-breaking, profanity, intemperance, pride, the heathenish Baal worship of secret societies, tobacco, etc. Secret societies are the devil's strongest fort, and how he and his accomplices do rage when God's artillery are brought to bear against it, and the powers of earth are being shaken. Two of our Presidents, both excellent men, have been assassinated. One Czar of Russia has been killed; another is in great danger of his life. Queen Victoria's life has been threatened. The moment a man takes the leadership of a nation his head is in danger. Indeed, all the powers of earth and air seem to be in commotion. The last sign Jesus mentions is the sign of the Son of man. What is that sign? Perhaps it has already beeu given. Secular papers tell us that last January the people of Wisconsin saw a very strange sight. About an hour before suudown there appeared two suns, one each side of our sun, and nearly as large. At the same time there was a crescent in the horizon overhead having all the tints of the rainbow. On the straight side of the crescent there was a belt of light, and in that belt two more suns nearly as large as the natural sun. If this strange sight was the last sign we shall see, the tints of the rainbow pointed us to the end of the world, and the suns to Jesus the coming Saviour who is the Sun of Righteousness. These signs mentioned by the prophets and Jesus are dispersed over a period of one hundred years. A sign of the coming judgment has been given, and then a few years has elapsed and then another sign has been given. How merciful our heavenly Father is to give sinners so many warnings of their danger.

And now I want to tell you, brethren and sisters, in addition to all these signs, only a few weeks ago the Lord gave me a new, a special sign, that the coming of the Saviour was very near. Oh, how solemn I have felt since that day! Oh, that I had all the sinners in the world in one vast congregation, I would say to them: The judgment day is coming. It is just here. Are you ready for it? Only think the earth on which we tread will soon be on fire. I have no idea the earth will stand as it is forty years longer. Many now on the earth will live to see that day. We are in the Saturday of the world. Oh, that sinners would take warning and flee the wrath to come! The reason that preaching has no more effect at the present day is, we are so near the judgment. Siuners hearts are harder than a rock. The most powerful preaching has no effect on the great majority of them. The present generation are like the people of Sodom, "sinners before the Lord exceedingly;" and the fate of Sodom will soon be theirs. Murder and all forms of wickedness are prevalent almost everywhere; and many professed ministers of the Gospel will lie (it is a shame to tell it) when questioned about the foolish ceremonies and Baal worship of secret societies. Their day of reckoning will soon be here. Isaiah prophesies of them and says, "The sinners in Zion are afraid; fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites." Isa. 33: 14. The popular churches of to-day are nearly full of "sinners in Zion." The number of real converts who will forsake the world utterly and follow Christ in all humility will now grow less and less every year. God says, "I will take you one of a city and two of a family bring you to Zion." Jer. 7: 14. That time is fast approaching; perhaps it is already here; when in some cities there will be only one real servant of God. In such a city we can organize no church. That lone Christian, like Abraham of old, will have to erect an altar (the family altar) and be his own priest or teacher. We are not told that Abraham had any company in the way of salvation excepting Lot his nephew. Noah built the ark, supported his family, and preached the Gospel without charge. In all the years of his ministry he had no converts. As the judgment approaches some of us will have to do nearly the same work. We must hold up the light of God's Word, and hand out the unvarnished truth and leave the result with God.

What is our duty, brethren and sisters, seeing we have but a few more years to work before the door of mercy will be forever closed. Let us double our diligence if possible and do all we can to save poor sinners and snatch them like brands from the eternal burnings. It is now going to be more difficult than ever for God's watchmen to keep those that are in the Narrow Way from turning back. Hence the necessity of holiness among God's children of every name. Holiness makes a man strong. It makes him a giant, so that he can stand firm against the tide of wickedness that he everywhere meets. It makes him fearless to reprove the fashionable sins of the day.

MRS. H. C. HAYDEN.

NOTE.—The conclusions respecting Christian duty are such as every sincere heart will approve. Doubtless the Son of man will come—it may be soon—even as he departed from the disciples on Olivet; but of all the different theories of his manner of coming we doubt if any are realized; and speculations as to the particular manner or the exact time are not approved by the Word. This earnest letter upon a great theme is interesting, but the sister's interpretation of natural phenomena is much too literal.—ED.

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON IX.—March 2, 1884.—Paul at Athens. Acts 17:22–34.
GOLDEN TEXT.—In Him we live, and move, and have our being. Acts 17: 28.

The Religion and Philosophy of Athens.

The Greek religion was a mere deification of human attributes and the powers of Nature. To the Greek this world was everything; he hardly even sought to rise above it.—Howson. It was a common saying about Athens that it was easier to find there a god than a man Schaff's Bible Dictionary places the number of gods at 30,000. Christianity only discouraged art, so long as art was the handmaid of idolatry and vice; the moment this danger ceased, she inspired and ennobled art. It is all very well for sentimentalists to sigh over "the beauty that was Greece and the glory that was Rome." But the flowers which yielded the intoxicating honey of ancient art were poisoned flowers; art was avowedly the handmaid of idolatry, and covertly the patroness of shame.—Farrar. Four great schools of philosophy had their headquarters at Athens, viz.: the Peripatetics (followers of Aristotle), the Academicians (followers of Plato), the Epicureans (followers of Epicurus), and the Stoics (followers of Zeno). Although the two former schools have exercised great influence upon Christian thought, the two latter only appear to have encountered St. Paul. The Epicurcans were atheists and materialists, believing the world was the result of chance; the Stoics were Pantheists, who believed that when we died we returned to the original material of creation, as a drop of water becomes absorbed in the ocean. —Stock.

"Ye men of Athens." The courteous address used by Demosthenes and all Greek orators. The whole speech is full of courtesy. Uufortunately our version gives it an appearance of rudeness in several places.—Riddle. St. Paul spake at length, we cannot doubt, when he stood in such a place and before such an audience. The historian in the Acts gives the barest outline of what was spoken, and can not be thought to have meant his words to be otherwise accepted, seeing that what he has given us would hardly occupy five minutes in the utterance.—Cambridge Bible.

"I perceive....ye are too superstitious." A less skilful man would have denounced their idolatry at once; but Paul had learned to look at the various forms of heathenism as but the gropings of men in the dark after truth. Therefore instead of crying down the error which he saw he went first beneath it to that spiritual craving from which it all sprung. As if he had said, "You still want God, notwithstanding your idols, and that God I am come to make known to you.—Taylor.

"To the unknown God," or to an unknown god. The origin of the altars to unknown gods is accounted for in different ways. There is a legend that in the time of a plague, it being uncertain which god was offended, a number of sheep were let loose, and wherever one lay down, an altar was erected to the unknown offended deity. The real underlying reason appears to be a sense, in the more cultivated Greeks, that all the attempts to "find God" through statues, and altars, and temples, were, after all, in vain, and that he was still unknown.—Abbott.

"Him declare I unto you," or better, this set 1 forth unto you. The very God whom they knew not, the God whose nature is so infinite, whose character is so holy, whose love is so great, that they had no conception of Him, and yet had unconsciously longed for because they needed Him, this God Paul set forth.—Peloubet. It was death for any private person to disturb the religion of the state by the introduction of any foreign god that had not been publicly recognized. But how admirably does Paul avail himself of the inscription on the altar! Who could accuse him of innovation, when he only expounded to the Athenians the attributes of the God whom they had ignorantly worshiped?—Lewin.

"God that made the world." Observe that Paul begins with the foundation. He does not preach Christ crucified as a Redeemer till he has preached the one only God as Creator. In a single sentence he sets forth the fundamental tenet of the Christian religion, in contrast with Epicureanism, which taught that there was no God, and that the world was only a happy accident; with Stoicism, which taught that the world was God, and God was the world; and with popular mythology, which believed in as many gods or goddesses as domains in nature or political divisions in the state.—Abbott.

"Hath made of one blood all nations." The beautiful and true conception of the "common brotherhood of men" has in no little degree contributed to the reception of the gospel amid so many different peoples.—Schaff. And it gives us hope that all nations can be saved and exalted by the gospel. It also lays upon us the duty to help all men, to send the gospel to all men, and to treat all men justly and lovingly, even the lowest races of men. —Peloubet.

"That they should seek the Lord." The whole order of the world's history was planned as part of the education of mankind, waking longings which it could not satisfy, leading men at once to a consciousness of the holiness of God and of their own sinfulness.—Plumptre.

"Though he be not far from every one of us." He is hard to find, not because He withdraws from us, but because we withdraw from Him. Our iniquities separate us from Him (Isa. 59: 2; Jer. 23: 23, 24; Rom. 10: 6, 8).—Abbott.

"As certain also of your own poets have said." This truth he enforces by reminding them that it was admitted in words by their own poets. Aratus, a poet of Tarsus, and a countrymau of Paul, had used this language about 270 B. C., and so had also Cleanthes, another and contemporary of Aratus, used it, who was a disciple of Zeno, the founder of the Stoics. He had addressed it to Jupiter. Grotius says that "what was said by Aratus of Jupiter, Paul adapteth to the true God, because by Jupiter the wisest among the Greeks did understand the Most High God."—Jacobus.

"And the times of this ignorance God winked at," better overlooked. "To wink at" is now used with the meaning of "to connive at." St. Paul, however, only means that God has not imputed to men the errors which they committed in ignorance, but now the case is changed. Men can not plead ignorance who have heard of Christ (comp. Luke 12: 48).—Cambridge Bible.

"But now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." The command to repentance was not something new, for conscience, convicting the gentiles of sin, carried with it a command to repent (Rom. 2: 14, 15). What was characteristic of the now was the fact that this command, heretofore expressed directly by written or spoken word only to the Jews, was henceforth, through the gospel of Jesus Christ, to be carried to all men, everywhere.—Abbott.

"When they heard of the resurrection of the dead." The possibility of resurrection after death was not only no part of the Greek creed, either philosophical or popular, but was positively repudiated as a gross absurdity. —Alexander. To the Epicurean this life was all, and the Stoics teaching, that all should finally be absorbed into the Godhead, forbade the belief that the dead should rise again.—Cambridge Bible.

"So Paul departed." We never hear of his visiting Athens again, nor does he ever in any of his subsequently written letters, make mention of the beautiful idol city. —Schaff.

Whatever may have been the immediate results of Paul's sojourn at Athens, its real fruits are those which remain to us still. That speech on the Areopagus is an imperishable monument of the first victory of Christianity over paganism. It is in Athens we learn what is the highest point to which unassisted human nature can attain, and here we learn also the language which the gospel addresses to man on his proudest eminence of unaided strength.—Howson.

There may be a far off success even in immediate failure. History has justified Paul's faith; the Parthenon became a Christian temple; Athens ceased to be a city full of images; and the repugnance of the Greeks to images and image worship became so great as to be a principal cause of the schism between the churches of the East and the West, in the eighth century.—Abbott.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

The Lodge a System of Natural Religion.

1. The unknown God. Vs. 22–25. The courtesy with which Paul opens his address contains a lesson for all Christian workers. He recognizes the fact that his hearers are "very religious," or as a better reading has it, "much given to religious worship," as one creditable to them, and by a well-turned compliment engages their attention at the outset. In all kinds of reform work we gain a great deal by recognizing the good in those we are trying to reform, and thus enlisting their better natures on our side. Petronius, a contemporary writer, says satirically, that "it is easier to find a god at Athens than a man." But with all their multiplicity of gods these Athenians were not satisfied. They had to build an altar to an unknown deity. False religions never satisfy soul hunger. Paul reveals this "unknown God" as the Almighty Creator of heaven and earth, giving life and breath to all animate beings. The teachings of Masonry are very different. In the lodge He is only the G. A. O. T. U., which means Grand Architect of the Universe. Now the most an architect can do is to change the shape of already existing things. He cannot make a house out of nothing. This would be to create. These Athenians degraded God into the image of men with nature and passions like themselves, but Masonry does as bad or even worse, for it robs God of his divine title of Creator, and gives him the merely human one of Architect or Master Builder.

2. The brotherhood of man. Vs. 26, 28, 29. The world is very slowly learning this great truth only second to one which includes it—the Fatherhood of God. Whether white, red, brown or black, we are all his children. If he has given the white race more power, or knowledge, or intelligence, it is not that they may trample on and oppress the weaker, but be like kind elder brothers who use their superior strength to help the younger ones. Our own country has a shameful record in this respect. We have driven the Indians from their lands, and ill-treated the Chinese; and though we have now no slaves in our borders, yet the colored people in many places can not claim their civil rights. The only remedy is more Christianity. If we had more Christian voters at the polls we should be able to put Christian statesmen into our halls of Congress. But voters controlled by the lodge and Masonic politicians can never work any change for the better, because Masonry does not recognize this truth of the brotherhood of man. It only recognizes as brothers "FREE WHITE MALES."

3. The superiority of revealed religion. V. 27. Men who say of Masonry or Odd-fellowship, "It is as good a religion as I want," prefer natural religion to revealed religion. Natural religion is like the fogs in which people lose their way and sometimes even perish within a few yards of their own door. If we choose to grope after God by the dim twilight of Nature there is great danger that though close beside us we shall never find Him.

Light from the Word.

What are false religious like? Jer. 2: 13. What mistake are false worshipers very apt to make? Ps. 50: 21, m. c. How is this shown in Masonry?

OBITUARY.

ELDER JAMES BICKNELL.—In justice to the memory of a brave Christian warrior it should be recorded of Elder James Bicknell, that he had courage equalling his convictions. He unhesitatingly advocated what he believed, treating the opinions of others courteously, but oblivious to personal or pecuniary consequences to himself. He was a pioneer preacher of rare natural endowments and of great tenacity of purpose when his decision was taken. His life began amid the "deep tangled wild woods," where cabins even were scarce, and civilized men and sacred songs were less familiar sights and sounds than heroes of the tomahawk and scalping knife, the howl of the wolf and the serpent's hiss; and passing through almost ninety years of change, he rose above the "lower lights" and shades on the 24th day of January, 1884. As his willing feet dipped in Jordan's waters at sunset the mists rolled away and ministering spirits clothed with light celestial, bearing "leaves from the tree of life" came with courage and hope in their message to the victor in his last conflict with "the world, the flesh and the devil," and to attend the coronation of one more redeemed, at the "Right Hand."

When at Bro. Bicknell's home near Rome, N. Y., on the 16th of last December, he related incidents of thrilling interest, which can not be reproduced with equal force as when couched in his own language. "Thou God seest me," taught him by a pious mother in infancy, seems to have been the first conviction that took possession of his sensitive soul. Later, in early boyhood, he was distressed with a sense of guilt and alarm by a constant apprehension of God's presence. Still later he was impressed that he was lost, but after a long and desperate struggle while alone in the woods, he received full assurance of his acceptance and found peace in believing. He was a staunch opposer of the lodge, the personal friend of Elders Stearns and Bernard, and for more than half a century pastor of the Baptist church in Westmoreland, where his body rests with more than one hundred of the flock to whom he so long ministered. J. P. S.

The following from a notice of Elder Bicknell's death in a Rome, N. Y., paper, will be of interest:

"A good man has gone, a watchman on the walls of Zion has fallen. Jan. 24th, at the ripe age of 88 years and three months, he, who has long been known throughout this region as Elder Bicknell, passed from sickness and pain, without a doubt, to the haven of eternal rest. His last hour was a sermon to those friends who were fortunate enough to be present, and his last words were: 'Where shall I go, but unto my Redeemer, who hath redeemed me from all sin. Amen! and Amen!' The funeral services were held in the North Baptist church of Westmoreland, where he has been pastor ever since the building was erected, over 40 years ago. Rev. Dr. Corey, of Utica, officiated at the funeral, and delivered a sermon that will not soon be forgotten by the house full of sympathizing friends and neighbors. His home for many years was on a farm about one mile east of the church where he preached so long, and from which farm he obtained his living, as he never had a salary for preaching. Besides doing his farm work, he made it a point to visit each family in his parish every year. He was a very strong man, and to illustrate his power of endurance we are told of an incident that occurred while he was in his prime. He, in company with another man, one winter took a job of chopping wood, and it was their custom to cut and pile six cords of hard wood each day; but one day, in a spirit of rivalry, they undertook to see which could cut the most. They commenced at daylight and cut and split until night; then they piled it by moonlight. The elder had 4¾ cords and his partner 4¼. He began preaching about the time he lived north of Rome, but after returning to Westmoreland worked on his farm during the week, and preached Sundays until the infirmities of age reudered much manual labor impossible, when he sold the larger part of his farm, retaining a portion, where he died. Probably no man would be more missed from the town of Westmoreland, than will Rev. James Bicknell.

MRS. MARY S. AUSTIN, wife of Apollos Austin, died in Clayton, Wisconsin, Jan. 14th, 1884, in the 71st year of her age. Deceased was born in Franklin Co., Vermont, Oct. 18, 1813, and moved to Wisconsin in 1850, since which time she has lived in Clayton. She was dearly loved by all her friends and highly respected by all her neighbors. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn their loss, and to rejoice in her triumphant death.

"Go, tell the friends I've left behind
To weep no more for me;
I've passed through all my storms of life,
I've crossed its angry sea.

Oh! tell them there was no mistake,
They must not shed a tear,
But join me in my thankful song,
That I am well up here.

And now, if 'mid this jubilant praise,
I may lift one more prayer,
It is that all from yon dear home,
Through Christ may join me here."

Skepticism was routed when the people knew the virtues of Samaritan Nervine. No cure no pay.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other standard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.7
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Conn., J. L. Barlow of Willimantic.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Kansas, P. S. Feemster, Pearlette.
Missouri, M. N. Butler of Albauy.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
Michigau, H. A. Day, Parma.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Vermont, O. C. Bailey.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Secedcrs.]

S. E. Starry, Clarence, Iowa.
Jas. Furguson, " "
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blauchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Promise City, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Baker, Mo.
A. D.Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perrry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans
D. A Richards Clarkville Mich

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.

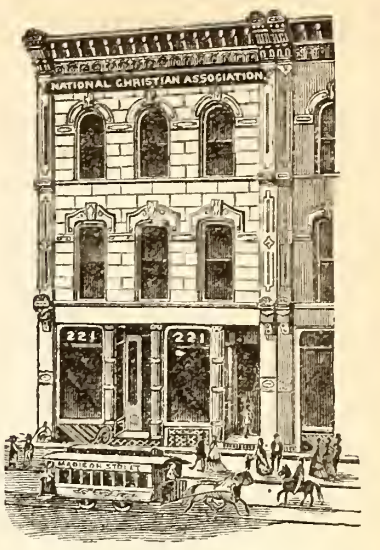
Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.



ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.,
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H. Ross and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; See'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1884.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE MINISTERS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

On a late Sabbath heard a sermon of wondeful power and excellence from the Bishop Simpson, in the crowded Metropolitan church. He preached that Christ "Shall not fail nor be discouraged till he have set judgment in the earth, and the isles shall wait for his law;" Isa. 42:4. Bishop Simpson argued the final prevalence of Christ's kingdom from its history and its tendencies.

1. The word of a young Judean peasant had met the myriad gods of ancient polytheism and they had all vanished before it. There is now not a worshiper of Jupiter, Apollo or Diana upon the earth. Their worships only sustain themselves by perpetually changing their forms and names.

2. And present tendencies prove the certain final conquest of Christ. The words of a young man who died at the age of 33, uttered by the hillsides and lakeside of Palestine are now the familiar maxims of the civilized world. And "the Lord's prayer," as given by him is to-day repeated by more persons on our globe than that at any time in its previous history. And the triumphs of art, by which the races of men are brought together, face to face, are steadily diminishing the number of tribes and nations and hastening the time when the sword will be a plowshare and the spear a pruning-hook indeed, and the art of war be forgotten.

For above an hour Bishop Simpson enlarged his argument for Christ's coming reign with instances, enforced it by arguments, and illustrated it by anecdotes, which held the vast crowd spell-bound, so that the discourse which was a long one seemed short. This wonderful man has preached two Sabbaths and spent the intervening week here in the capital. I have written of some things that he did here. You are interested to know some things which he did not do. He did not come to attend some conference, or Methodist meeting, for the salvation of men. There is a conference near, but Bishop Foster is to attend that. He did NOT attend the Methodist preachers' meeting Monday evening. I was present, but he was not. He did not, in the old Methodist style, put up with some preacher or in a private dwelling, but in a nice hotel, kept by good people it is true, but where politicians easily congregate; and I saw by the papers that he was an invited guest at President Arthur's state dinner, where there were said to have been six wine glasses to each plate! There was of course no harm in his going there. If he did, and refused the wine he did good. But if his presence here and at the White House means, by consultation with the leaders of the Republican party, to enable that party to retain the vote of Methodists while it also retains the votes of the brewers and distillers, then his errand here was a grievous fault.

But further. Bishop Simpson is a keen observer of men and society. He told us precisely how many tribes or principalities there were in Mexico; and to how many the number had shrunk when he was there. Now, there are 190 secret orders, many of which have separate local lodges, posts, or councils in this city. The order of United Workmen here has thirteen local bodies under its head-center, and that is a comparatively new order. This is a city of clerks and employes; and the men who run these secret orders, keep the books and collect the dues, contrive to make the impression that membership in them with prompt payment of dues is the way to get and keep their desks here in the departments. Now we should do discredit to Bishop Simpson's intelligence to suppose he is not aware that the Methodists of this city pay nearly as much or more money into these secret societies than to their respective churches. These orders are actually starving the families and ministers of their members! That is not all nor the worst. All these secret orders have chaplains, prayers and worships. This, too, your Senior Bishop well knows. Yet in his sermons he is utterly silent, while these secret mills are grinding up the wages and souls of the Methodists of this capital. This is not all, nor the worst. There are in and near this capital fourteen Methodist pastors, thirteen of whom belong to Masonic lodges. This I am told by one of them who is himself a member of the lodge! Of course if these ministers belonged to the "Southern (Masonic) Jurisdiction" they are under sworn obedience to a "Sovereign Grand Commander" here, who not only is no worshiper of Christ, but who does not believe the Bible, and is said, by an ex-Senator from Tennessee, to be translating the Vedas. This same Sovereign Grand Commander brought some fifty Indians here from our Indian country and had them sworn to obey him in the lodge here, and then commanded two regiments of them to fight and scalp our Union troops at Pea Ridge. I asked my informant how he knew? He said he heard them called "Pike's Indians," and himself helped to initiate them by the aid of an interpreter.

Now Bishop Simpson's word would be all-powerful with the Methodist ministers, who are many of them interesting Christian gentlemen. Why is that word not spoken? Why does Bishop Simpson prove, with great ability and clearness, the divinity of Christ in the pulpit and do nothing to save his ministry from the organized deism of the lodge? and such deism!

Yours for the redemption which is in Christ Jesus.

J. B.

THE PROHIBITIONISTS.

Gideon T. Stewart's call for a National nominating convention of Prohibitionists at Pittsburg, May 21st, meets head winds. We see not why it should. The argument against a May and in favor of a June convention is weak and inconclusive. Men will not follow halting leaders, and those who wish to stand and see what the old parties will do are halting leaders.

The National Prohibition Home Protection party was formed in their great three days' convention in Farwell Hall a whole year and a half ago. We were present though not a member; and heard the arguments. J. B. Grinnell (Mason and Republican) was bent on preventing open, manly, third party action and was beaten overwhelmingly. He wanted to make prohibition a tail to the Republican kite. Gideon T. Stewart went for independent action. Grinnell boasted that the Republican party had won the 30,000 majority in Iowa, and was a good enough prohibition party. Soon after his prohibition Republican Governor Sherman betrayed the prohibition cause, and cancelled the fines of the vilest saloon-keeper in that or any State; and Republican judges found a quibble on which to reject the Prohibition Amendment, backed by 30,000 majority! This is J. B. Grinnell's vaunted prohibition party!

Besides, everybody who knows anything about politics knows that the Republican party must have the brewers' and distillers' votes or sink; and they do not mean to sink. They mean to carry prohibition on one shoulder, and a distillery on the other, and like every man or body with a foot in two boats must sink between them.

The insinuation that Gideon T. Stewart has called a convention for purposes of personal ambition, is contemptible. His call is a good one, wisest and best for the cause, and ought to be sustained. He has devoted large time from his large business to Prohibition, and the committee of which he is chairman are scattered all over the country and could not be got together.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

PROHIBITION POLITICS.

Gideon T. Stewart, chairman of the National Prohibition and Home Protection party, has called a national nominating convention of Prohibitionists to meet in Pittsburg May 21st. The Masonic wing of the Prohibitionists revolt, and demand that Stewart recall his May convention, and call one at Chicago, June 25th, which will hitch the prohibition life-boat behind the old Republican and Democratic tugs.

A Methodist presiding elder is supposed to lead in this revolt against the regularly-called Prohibition convention; and Bishop Simpson is brought here to Washington to hold a week's perpetual Republican caucus at the Riggs House. Will the temperance Methodists stand being made pawns on the Republican chess-board for a few offices? and will they sell out Miss Willard and prohibition? We shall see!

REPUBLICAN POLITIES.

The rose-colored speech of Congressman Davis in favor of Arthur delivered in the meeting of the Republican State committee at Chicago last week by one whose nomination as District Attorney was rejected by President Arthur, is very instructive. The meeting was called by the Republican committee, and is, of course, semi-official. Mr. Davis's argument is that Arthur's being a "negative President" is just the thing needed. "Even a fool when he holdeth his peace, is accounted a wise man." And a mother once told her weak-minded boy to be perfectly still and the visitors would not "find him out."

But Mr. Arthur has been positive on liquor, though negative in all else. After Mrs. Hayes had cleansed the White House, so he could easily have followed on the same track, he has made it a national saloon Logan, too, suggested liquor-tax education, and Blaine beat him with his own card.

A farmer built a square log wolf-trap, and in the morning found an Indian, a wolf, and a wild-cat in three corners, and the old sheep chewing her cud in the other. Neither dared attack her lest the other two should be on his back. Logan, Blaine and Conkling occupy three corners of the Presidential wolf-trap and Mr. Arthur, the "negative President," the other.

PERSONAL SACRIFICE.

"The trouble with this work, just as it is in the church," said a devoted and successful Chicago pastor the other day, "is that men who believe in its principles are not willing to deny themselves and make personal sactifices to promote the reform." Few useful pastors but can say as much from their experience. There are in most churches two or three who do all that can reasonably be asked of them, perhaps more; but this rare class you can count of the fingers of one hand in most of our thriving towns.

A heavy load was stalled. The driver shouted and lashed at his four stout horses, but only one put his strength to the load. "Whip up the old gray!" shouted a by-stander. But "old gray" was the only willing beast, and already doing his best. It is time the rest of the team were straightening into the harness and rolling the load along the highway in the church and in every Christian reform. God requires of you, brother, and of you, sister, your own personal work and sacrifice. No one can do it for you. The sacrifice may be by way of labor or of giving. In either case the rule is, if one does his duty a score or two are hanging back and the chariot wheels of God's truth which should fly roll on wearily and slow.

The peerless spirit that leads on the bands of temperance women gives her followers a beautiful lesson of self-sacrifice for that cause in a late number of the Union Signal, and makes her commendation with tenfold force by giving it a beautiful and touching application. Miss Willard takes up the suggestion of a Texas lady, that all who can contribute to the W. C. T. U. some article of jewelry to be disposed of for the temperance cause, and calls for a "National W. C. T. U. Jewelry and Souvenir Fund," sending her own gift with this tender story:

"For myself I have hut little jewelry aside from my watch, the gift of a rich lady at 'the Hub.' Earrings I have not, nor could I wear them if I had since I witnessed, in 1870, the 'spoiling of the Egyptian' women on the Nile hanks hy reason of one ring in each convolution of these persecuted members. But 'I do remember me that in my youth,' when about seventeen years of age, I took a prize offered by the Illinois Agricultural Society for the best essay on 'The Embellishment of a Country Home.' It was a silver cup. How proud and grateful I was when that prize came to me in my lovely hut lonesome 'country home,' near Janesville, Wisconsin, and how 'my four' (father, mother, sister, hrother) rejoiced with me over that precious prize. I think I shall never—in this life—know another moment quite so full of fresh, upspringing joy. They are all gone now save mother and me. To-day we have consulted over the matter and I hereby give that cherished cup to the National W. C. T. U."

What say the friends of the N. C. A? Do any of them need the spur of such an example that their work may show them to have faith in our reform?

—The General Secretary started for Washington on Tuesday afternoon, stopping briefly on his way at Pittsburg.

—It deserves to be repeated, that Lewis Tappan, whose life was sketched lately in these columns, was a renowned opposer of the vile tobacco habit, and through his influence the American Missionary Association for years would not employ a missionary or agent who was given to the use of the poisonous weed. Whether this excellent rule has been abated in later years we do not know.

—We had the pleasure of sending a $25.00 draft to Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes of Andros, Greece, the other day, being various contributions that have been sent to the N. C. A. treasurer by friends who wish to support a foreign missionary who stands with us opposed to the lodge and all for which it stands. The treasurer has also sent lately to Bro. Hazenberg of South Africa, and to brethren Brown, Galloway and Tapley, contributions from various friends.

—Let no reader of this number of the Cynosure neglect to read carefully the argument of Dr. Meloy before the Chicago Association last Tuesday evening. The storm of freezing rain made it impossible for many to get out that evening, but our readers may be congratulated that they may in a sense become a part of the audience. After the address an interesting conference was held by the Association for about an hour in which Rev. Jos. Travis, of the Free Methodist, Mr. Thomas Hodge, and others, took part.

—A letter from Bro. Hazenberg came last week and is in type. He tells of his experiences among the Mohammedans of Cape Town, to whom he seems drawn providentially.

—The Cynosure is fortunate in obtaining from a Dakota parsonage a graphic and touching sketch which will continue through five numbers and we believe the unanimous vote will be to put it in pamphlet form for circulation by the thousand. It pictures the spiritual desolation of a lodge-ridden church and community and the happy transformation produced by the entrance of the light of divine truth. We promise our readers genuine enjoyment as they go through the story and see many touches that bring out their own experiences in reform work.

THE KANSAS CONVENTION.

Bro. P. S. Feemster, Kansas State agent, in a brief note indicates somewhat of the programme of the Olathe convention which is to be held next month. He has planned for a grand meeting:

"The Olathe convention is finally fixed for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the 5th, 6th and 7th of March next. We depend on Rev. H. P. McClurkin, D. D., of Nebraska, and Rev. D. H. Coulter, of Winchester, Kansas, to represent National Reform; Gov. St. John will hold the fort for prohibition; and the anti-lodge reform will be in the hands of brethren Stoddard and Stury, aided by Rev. A. L. Vail of the Baptist church of Platte, Rev. W. M. Adams and Dr. Taylor of the Free Methodist church, and others. Now if the dear Saviour will bless us the convention will be a success. Friends, pray for this meeting."

PITH AND POINT.

PROF. SLOANE'S ANSWER.

Permit me to say to my kindly interrogator in your late issue that his inquiries open an interesting chapter in anti-slavery history. My health at present precludes such a statement as I would be pleased to give. I believe the anti-slavery churches, those which admitted no shave-holder to their communion, were: Reformed Presbyterian (O. S.); Reformed Presbyterian (N. S.); Seceders, called the "Secession" and the "Associate;" Associate Reformed (North); Free Presbytcrians (as a body I think extinct); Free Methodists; Wesleyan Methodists.

J. R. W. SLOANE.

Would not Prof. Sloane include also the Quakers and United Brethren in Christ? ED. CYNOSURE.

BRO. FOOTE, WILL YOU ANSWER?

It is written of John the Baptist that he was "sent by God to bear witness of the Light." He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light. "That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. John 1: 6–9. Now this Light is the Son of God, for Jesus says of himself in John 8: 12: "I am the Light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Then again in John 1: 29, John the Baptist "seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." In describing the final abode of the blest the revelator speaks of its having "no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb was the light thereof." Rev. 21: 23. In these passages cited we see that Jesus, the Lamb of God, is both the light of earth and heaven. Now we wish Rev. C. C. Foote or some other able Christian writer would tell us through the Cynosure in what sense Jesus is the light of the world; and how he is the light of heaven.

M. P. N.

MRS. FRED DOUGLASS.

In the notice of Hon. Frederick Douglass' marriage in your Jan. 31st paper, you speak of Miss Helen M. Pitts, the white lady he married, as from "Avon," N. Y., whereas she was born and reared at the village of Honeoye Flats, in Ontario county, thirty-five or forty miles southeast of Rochester, N. Y. She is well educated, and an intelligent, bright, good woman, forty-five to forty-eight years of age; is a thorough and active reformer; has taught the freedmen; has taken an interest and an active part in the temperance cause and in woman's suffrage. She has an uncle, Hiram Pitts, Esq., who has been in the United States Treasury Department at Washington a good many years. Her father, Gideon Pitts, Esq., is a wealthy farmer at Honeoye Flats. He was one of the first, as he has always been one of the most earnest and energetic Abolitionists and temperance men in the country. The contracting parties and their families have known each other for many years. All the Pitts were friends and supporters of the noble and indefatiguable William Goodell, so well known throughout the anti-slavery world. GEO. W. CLARK.

INFORMATION WANTED.

To seceders and others:—Sometimes a person is seen to clasp his hands and then suddenly release them as if he had accidently imprisoned a coal of fire. I have looked over "Secret Societies Illustrated," but it is not included in that publication. Will any one be so kind as to inform me through the Cynosure of what society and degree, if any, this interesting diversion is a sign; and state its signification? B. T.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,

OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,

OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible] intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with book[illegible] of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

NOTE.—In March, 1883, Pres. J. Blanchard resigned the nomination above, subject to the action of the next National Convention of the American party.

DRAW THE LINE ON LODGE AND LIQUOR.

COLUMBUS, Miss., Feb. 8, 1884.

Organized secretism and intemperance have never yet been tried right, that is, in one solid body by vote.

FRIENDS:—It is time that all Christians unite in opposing secret orders and intemperance. If we would only stand together in our efforts we would be much stronger. Samson did great things alone because the Lord gave him great bodily strength to work with, and sent him to work in that way. He now gives to you the power to work for him by vote, and the plain duty before us at the present time is to unite and vote down the liquor and the lodge together. Let the American and Prohibition parties unite and become one honest political party. Let Christ and his people and all who wish to stand with him be on one side, and Satan and his be on the other, and begin quickly and try the matter honestly, earnestly, and without ever ceasing, and the Lord will show on which side is the majority and the victory.

ELI TAPLEY.

ILLITERATE VOTERS CONTROL THE ELECTIONS.—According to a table prepared for the House of Representatives by Mr. Willis to accompany his bill for federal aid to education, in the thirty-eight States there are 1,871,217 illiterate voters. In South Carolina more than half the male citizens are unable to write; in Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, North Carolina, and Virginia one-half the male population are totally uneducated. In the last Presidential contest thirty States, with 298 electoral votes were within the domination of sovereigns who could not read the very charter of their liberties, but whose votes combined could overturn the majorities given for one side or the other.

—Hon. Wayne MacVeagh contributes to the March Century a paper on "The Next Presidency," in which the ideal president is pictured, and the author ventures the opinion that the political party nominating the man who approaches nearest that ideal will be successful in the coming election.

The whisky power is as active as the allurement of the dollar can make it, and that its infernal work is successful the criminal reports in any paper abundantly show. It is for the people to say whether this flood of criminality and pauperism shall flow on forever, or whether it shall be checked. It is the question of the hour; it is a question which, in importance to the country, is above slavery, above tariff, above any question that can possibly come before the people. It is home against the rum mills. It is purity against corruption. The very perpetuity of republican institutions is involved in it. The one question in America, as in England, is how best to pulverize the rum power.—Toledo Blade.

EXTRA COPIES.

Next week an extra edition of the Cynosure will be printed to supply the demand for special copies of the report of the Washington Conventions. These copies will be sent postage paid on receipt of two 2-cent stamps to any address. Order early as the edition will probably be exhausted soon.

THE SEASON approaches for beginning out-work. The shrubs and trees that ornament the grounds and furnish those berries and fruits that are year by year becoming, for the best of reasons, more used upon our tables, must soon be engaged and set in their places. The West will be flooded with catalogues and circulars from Eastern nurseries, and their agents are already engaging all the trade possible. After one experience with these agents with their high prices and poor stock, nobody will deal with them again. Altogether the safest and most satisfactory investment can be made at Western nurseries; and of these we doubt if any can be found with prices more reasonable or with better stock than that at WHEATON, Ill., owned by Prof. O. F. Lumry, and advertised in the Cynosure during the past year. A fine descriptive and illustrated catalogue sent to all applying, but it is no more than fair to enclose a stamp or two for it.

—Champion (liquor dealer's organ, Chicago): By the statistics of the Brewer's Congress recently held in France, the popular impression of the Teutonic capacity for beer being unrivaled is incorrect. The Briton tops the roll. One third of all the beer brewed annually in Europe is produced in the British Islands. Counting men, women and chidren, every native of Great Britain drinks nearly 143 quarts of beer a year, whereas Germans drink ninety-four, and Austrians no more tnha thirty-one.

CHEAPEST AND BEST.

In the whole range of the literature of our reform there is nothing cheaper than the Cynosure. Compute the amount of reading in each number and multiply it by fifty-two, and the result will be a surprise that so much can be furnished for $2.00. No book or pamphlet provides so much in proportion to the cost. As for the variety and quality of their work, the writers for the Cynosure are among the best and most conscientious and intelligent Christians in the world. To surpass their work would be difficult. Let them be sustained by increasing the circulation of the paper by thousands.

If each one will add to his effort for a good cause the name of a new subscriber, enclosing $4.00 for both, the sender may have also his choice of the following valuable pamphlets:

1. The Batavia Convention pamphlet, with the great speeches on that occasion, illustrations of the Morgan Monument, etc.; or

2. Egypt in History and Prophecy; or, Pharaoh proclaiming God, by the celebrated Robert Patterson, from Hasting's Anti-infidel Library; or

3. The Anti-masonic Scrap Book, a new and enlarged edition now in press, containing all the tracts published by the N. C. A.; or

4. The Island of Madagascar; the excellent history written by Gen. J. W. Phelps and noticed in a late Cynosure.

5. Copies of any of the pamphlets sold by the N. C. A., to the amount of 25 cents.

A CLUB OF FIVE

trial subscribers (two months for 25 cents) will just now be a valuable accession to the Cynosure list. To every friend who will get one up and enclose the $1.25 and addresses plainly written we will send either of the documents mentioned above.

FOR A CLUB OF TEN the sender may choose any two from the above list.

Get the Cynosure circulated in your town. The lodge does not thrive where it is read.

AN EASY TASK.

To get two month's subscribers for 25 cents will not be found a difficult work, if you fail in securing a yearly subscription. Each copy of the Cynosure is equal to an ordinary pamphlet of 80 pages. Eight such pamphlets for a quarter of a dollar is not extravagance by far. Let every reader of this paper present this matter to his neighbors.

THE HOME.

EXAMPLE.

We scatter seeds with careless hand,
And dream we ne'er shall see them more,
But for a thousand years
Their fruit appears,
In weeds that mar the land
Or healthful store.

The deeds we do; the words we say,
Into still air they seem to fleet;
We count them ever past;
But they shall last—
In the dread judgment they
And we shall meet.

I charge thee by the years gone by,
For the love of brethren dear,
Keep, then, the one true way
In work and play,
Lest in the world their cry
Of woe thou hear.

—John Keble.

A MAN WHO LACKED MORAL COURAGE.

A few years ago I went to close a meeting, and said: "Are there any here that would like to have me remember them in prayer? I would like to have them rise!" And there was a man rose, and when I saw him stand up, my heart leaped in me for joy. I had been anxious for him a long time. I went to him as soon as the meeting was over, and took him by the hand, and said: "You are coming out for God, are you not?" He says, "I want to, and I have made up my mind to be a Christian, only their is one thing stands in my way." "What is that?" I said. "Well," he says, "I lack moral courage." Naming a friend of his, he said, "If he had been here to-night I should not have risen; and I am afraid when he hears I have risen for prayer he will begin to laugh at me, and I won't have the moral courage to stand up for Christ." I said, "If Christ is what he is represented in the Bible, he is worth standing up for; and if heaven is what we are told it is in the Bible, it is worth our living for." He says, "I lack moral courage," and the man was trembling from head to foot. I thought he was just at the very threshold of heaven, and that one step more was going to take him in, and that he would take the step that night. I talked and prayed with him, and the Spirit seemed to be striving mightily with him, but he did not get light. Night after night he came, and the Spirit still strove with him; but just that one thing kept him back—he lacked moral courage. At last the Spirit of God, that had striven with him so mightily, seemed to leave him, and there was no more striving. He left off coming to church, was off among his old companions, and would not meet me in the street; he was ashamed to do so. About six months afterward I got a message from him, and found him on what he thought to be his dying bed. He wanted to know if there was any hope for him at the eleventh hour. I tried to tell him there was hope for any man that would accept Christ. I prayed with him, and day after day I visited him.

Contrary to all expectations, he began to recover; and when he was convalescent, finding him one day sitting in front of his house, I sat by his side, and said, "You will soon be well enough to come up to the church, and when you are, you will come up; and you are just going to confess Christ boldly, are you not?" "Well," says he, "I promised God when I was on what we thought to be my dying bed I would serve him, and I made up my mind to be a Christian; but I am not going to be one just now. Next spring I am going over to Lake Michigan, and I am going to buy a farm and settle down; and then I am going to be a Christian." I said, "How dare you talk in that way! How do you know you are going to live till next spring? Have you a lease of your life? He says, "I was never better than I am now; I am a little weak, but I will soon have my strength. I have a fresh lease of life, and will be well for a good many years yet." I said, "It seems to me you are tempting God," and I pleaded with him to come out boldly. "No," he says, "the fact is I have not the courage to face my old companions, and I cannot serve God in Chicago." I said, "If God has not grace enough to keep you in Chicago, he has not in Michigan." I urged him then and there to surrender soul and body to the Lord Jesus, but the more I urged him the more irritated he got, till at last he said, "Well, you need not trouble yourself any more about my soul; I will attend to that. If I am lost, it will be my own fault. I will take the risk."

A FEARFUL DEATH-BED.

I left him, and within a week I got a message from his wife. Going to the house, I met her at the door weeping. I said, "What is the trouble?" "Oh, sir, I have just had a council of physicians here, and they have all given my husband up to die; they say he cannot live." I said, "Does he want to see me?" She replied, "No." "Why did you send?" "Why," she said, "I cannot bear to see him die in this terrible state of mind." "What is his state of mind?" "Why, he says that his damnation is sealed, and he will be in hell in a little while." I went into the room, but he turned his head away. I said, "How is it with you?" Not a word; he was as silent as death. I spoke the second time, but he made no response. I looked him in the face and called him by name, and said, "Will you not tell me how it is with you?" He turned, and fixed that awful deathly look upon me, and, pointing to the stove, he said, "My heart is as hard as the iron in that stove; it is too late, my damnation is sealed, and I shall be in hell in a little while." I said, "Don't talk so, you can be saved now if you will." He replied, "Don't mock me, I know better." I talked with him, and quoted promise after promise, but he said not one was for him. "Christ has come knocking at the door of my heart many a time, and the last time he came I promised to let him in, and when I got well I turned away from him again, and now I have to perish without him." I talked, but I saw I was doing no good, and so I threw myself on my knees. He says, "You can pray for my wife and children; you need not pray for me, it is a waste of your time, it is too late." I tried to pray, but it seemed as if what he said was true—it seemed as if the heavens were as brass over me. I rose and took his hand, and it seemed to me as if I were bidding farewell to a friend that I never was to see again in time or in eternity. He lingered till the sun went down. His wife told me that his end was terrible. All that he was heard to say were these fearful words: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved." There he lay, and every little while he would take up the awful lamentation, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved." And just as the sun was sinking behind those Western prairies he was going into the arms of death. As he was expiring, his wife noticed that his lips were quivering, he was trying to say something, and she reached over her ear, and all she could hear was, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and I am not saved;" and the angels bore him to the judgment. He lived a Christless life, he died a Christless death; we wrapped him in a Christless shroud, nailed him in a Christless coffin, and bore him to a Christless grave. Oh, how dark! oh, how sad! I may be speaking to some one to-day, and the harvest may be passing with you, the summer may be ending. Oh, be wise now, and accept the Lord Jesus Christ! May God's blessing rest upon us all, and may we meet in glory, is the prayer of my heart!—D. L. Moody.

THE COMING AGAIN.

The coming again of our Lord Jesus Christ, literally and visibly, to this earth, for the purpose of ending this dispensation and inaugurating his own reign, is a subject of Christian thought and study that seems to have been, for a thousand years or more, singularly and sinfully ignored by Christ's own people. The truth itself as Biblically revealed—the Scriptural setting forth of the momentous fact of the next advent—the inspired announcements of both Testaments concerning our Saviour's second personal coming—are so frequently and distinctly urged, that the inattention and indifference of the church in relation to the subject seem unaccountable. Just now, the truth of our Lord's second coming is gaining notice among his people, and we doubt not that there will be from henceforth a share of attention given to this blessed theme that will cause it to come more immediately to the front, as one of the principal subjects of Christian contemplation.

The modern church is totally unlike the ancient church in regard to its treatment of the great and precious truth of the second coming of our blessed Lord. In the primitive church, the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ was anticipated with delight; and the prospect of the Saviour's speedy return was the occasion of their constant joy. Their eager expectancy of the immediate return of Jesus to this earth, caused them to err on one side—our sleepy unexpectancy of his coming, and our fond imagination that such a coming is indefinitely distant, cause us to err on the other side. They were given to the most restless inquiry as to when should be the "times and seasons" of their Lord's return—we are given to the most listless unconcern on the whole subject, apparently not caring whether our Lord shall come at all. They were incessant and urgent in their asking, "When shall these things be?" We are asking, if we are forced to any asking on the subject, in the very words of all primitive and modern infidels; "where is the promise of his coming?" If extremes have been touched, certainly we are one of them, and the worst one at that. What may be true or untrue concerning this grand theme of revelation, one fact is unchallengeable.

It is observable in church history that where God's people have adjourned the coming of Jesus to some remote date of the far off and shadowy future, religion has fallen into coldness, worldliness and formality. And when, on the other hand, the people of God have been vigilantly observant of coming and passing crises, and have regarded them as premonishing the near advent of Jesus, the church has returned to spirituality and has seemed to imbibe much of the watchfulness and zeal of apostolic times. Such being the voice of history, and such the high moral effect of this great truth, it is certain that the calling back of the church's attention to the long-ignored truth of our Lord's second coming is a duty that interests all who stand as teachers of the church at this day. If the unspirituality and coldness, and worldliness, and formality, and unfaithfulness, and inconsistency, and carnal-mindedness, and covetousness, and disobedience, and idolatrous loves and practices of the now-a-days-church do not make an occasion for the introduction of some urgent and startling form of religious doctrine that will shake the Christian world out of its deep slumbers, then we confess our inability to imagine a condition of churchly declension that would create such an occasion.

No doubt this sad and doleful condition of lapsed churchism is the prime cause of the current ignoring of the great event herein spoken of. The church of to-day (we speak in the general) is not ready for the Lord's coming, and is not seeking to become so, and hence its unwillingness to anticipate that event, and its growing scepticism as to the truth of the predictions which relate to it. But even in this, prophecy finds its fulfillment, for there can be little doubt that the non-belief which Peter reproves in his second general epistle is a form of infidelity that pertains to the church—to such as are the professed people of God.

But the Judge will come. And he will come to receive to himself all who look for his coming with joy, and to visit upon those who do not "love his appearing," whether within or without the church, the long-threatened damnation.

"Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him."—Banner of Holiness.

MARKING TIME.

Two sailors happened to be on a military parade ground while the soldiers were on drill, going through the evolution of marking time. One observed the other watching the movements of the company very attentively, with eyes fixed and arms akimbo, and asked him what he thought of it.

"Well, Jack," replied his comrade, "I am thinking there must be a pretty strong tide running this morning, for these poor fellows have been pulling away for this half hour, and have not got an inch ahead yet."

We fear that in many of our churches and Sabbath schools this is a kind of movement that is very common. There is activity, regular and orderly; a "going through the motions" according to the latest edition of the manual, but no real progress, nor any real thought of it. Each service is only a "performance," and the leading idea is to have it artistically "rendered." The proprieties may be preserved, but there is no lofty conception of an ultimate end, no glimpse of a serious goal, no steadfast pressing forward to it with utmost strain of faculty; there is only a martinet issuing orders, and a company marking time.—Sel.

A WORD TO THE AGED.—It is well for the old to be cheerful. They may have much to depress them. Health is failing. Friends are passing away. Another generation is on the stage. Other hands take up the world's work. They feel, perhaps with bitter regret, that they are not needed as they once were. Nevertheless they should cultivate every source of happiness which remains. The love of children and grand-children, the greater dignity and larger leisure of life, and the quiet hours they can have for communion with God, should be appreciated highly. They should get into the habit of saying good-morning every day to this world, where they have had so many eager busy, happy, and holy days.

A CLEVER REPLY.—Some time ago a working man was urged by his employer to do some work on the Sabbath. The man courteously but firmly declined to do it. "Why!" said the employer, "did not our Lord himself say that 'the Sabbath was made for man?'" "Yes, sir," was the shrewd reply of the workman; "you are right—the Sabbath was made for man, and is therefore not to be taken from man."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

"LITTLE CHILDREN, LOVE ONE ANOTHER."

A little girl with a happy look
Sat slowly reading a ponderous book,
All bound with silver and edged with gold,
And its weight was more than the child could hold;
Yet dearly she loved to ponder it o'er,
And every day she prized it more,
For it said—and she looked at her smiling mother—
It said, "LITTLE CHILDREN, LOVE ONE ANOTHER."

She thought it was beautiful in the book,
And the lesson home to her heart she took;
She walked on her way with a trusting grace,
And a dove-like look in her meek young face,
Which said just as plain as words could say,
"The Holy Bible I must obey;
So, mamma, I'll be kind to my darling brother,
For little children must love each other.

"I'm sorry he's naughty and will not play;
But I'll love him still, for I think the way
To make him gentle and kind to me
Will be better shown if I let him see
I strive to do what I think is right,
And thus, when I kneel in prayer to-night,
I will clasp my hands around my brother,
And say, 'Little children, love one another.'"

The little girl did as her Bible taught,
And pleasant indeed was the change it wrought,
For the boy looked up in glad surprise,
To meet the light of her loving eyes;
His heart was full, he could not speak,
But he pressed a kiss on his sister's cheek;
And God looked down on that happy mother,
Whose little children loved each other.

—Sel.

CHARLES SUMNER, THE SCHOOL-BOY.

Of Charles Sumner, who entered the Latin school in the same year with myself, not much can be written out of any memorials of mine beyond what the world has already found recorded. He was a boy, a real boy; not affecting to be a man; without any affectations of dress or manner, or speech, or character. He played hard, and he studied hard, at least in studies that took his fancy—some studies he paid little attention to; and it is well-known that some fellow-students of unknown lives and far inferior capacities stood much higher in the average of studies than he did. He had no care for "rank," the school-boy's rank; if he had had the care he could always have stood first, as we knew that we could never measure mind and knowledge with him. He was a leader in play, whether in the open square where the statue of Franklin now stands, or in the empty halls and great stone staircases of the court house, and in the cellar of the same, in which places we played "intere-mintere-cutere-corn," and chased one another in hiding-places, or went together to the wharves, when the boys went in swimming. He used to come running down the street with great splay-feet, full of eagerness and honesty.

If he had the usual faults of an over-animated boy, he had no meannesses. He had none of that haughtiness and arrogance, or exclusiveness, or other ill-temper that was charged upon him in his later days, after he had endured the blows of Brooks and suffered that serious nervous disturbance which might impair the temper and manner of any man. I think he felt himself not far from the equal of his teachers in what he knew; and I believe we boys would have trusted as much to his statement of a translations, or a point of history, or any recondite matter, as we should to theirs. And he remained a school-boy to the last of his life. He never escaped the influence which the idea of learning, prevalent in his childhood and youth, had worked upon him, not even with all his foreign travel and commerce with the great world and with various kinds of men; but, in a better sense, he was a boy to the last—in his simplicity and purity, and still more in his happy remembrance of his old school-fellows, whom I know he greeted as long as they met with the same eager cordiality and with the same happy smile that he would have met them with on the play-ground in 1821–6. Yes, and he loved them more at the last.—From the Springfield Republican.

AN AVALANCHE ON THE MATTERHORN.

Sitting there, gazing at the seven or eight thousand feet of the Matterhorn's height and breadth that were still higher than my resting place, and drinking in the influence of the vast, silent scene around and beneath, I perceived a movement upon the left hand outline and a large surface of the adjacent front of the mountain. The upper fourth part, apparently, of the mountain's height, from the left-hand edge to about the middle of the front, was already bare and black, like solid rock. The movement of the mass, at the outset very deliberate, was first perceptible from the widening distance of the dark surface between its upper edge and a crest of bare rock that stood out upon the profile above. Then it was plain that the entire weight of snow, for a thousand or two feet below on that side of the mountain and nearly to the midst of its front, as I viewed it, was moving; and I felt the strange, false sense of being lifted with the whole steep, mossy bank on which I sat facing the avalanche. Swiftly it gathered momentum, and its imuensity became more comprehensible when its greater part, fifty to one hundred feet thick, shot out over a crag that had not been visible under this great thickness of snow, and down through the clear air, in one vast sheet, striking upon a less inclined surface two thousand feet below, where it was dashed into a million fragments, and there flashed up a vast cloud of fine dusty snow. Rapidly massing itself, it again surged forth from the fleecy bosom of the snow-cloud over a precipice of nearly vertical wall for a mile or more, into its final depths, leaving a large area upon the mountain black and barren, and tossing upward throughout the broad abyss another and more widely spreading snow-cloud, while its sudden displacement of air produced a rushing wind, which reached to where I sat. As you first see the distant artillery's rushing smoke and then hear the roar, so here arose—far beneath and a mile or two away, a rolling, white, misty cloud, and then the astounding thunder of the concussion. The interruption of this avalanche in its progress doubled its sublimity. Had it rushed all the way down one incline, with no intervening crash between the loosening of the mass and its plunge into the depths, or if it had shot off clear into the air and struck into the very bottom in a solid mass, it could not have carried with it such majestic movement of awful deliberation nor produced such prolonged and terrific roar.—Detroit Tribune.

THE GREAT EASTERN.

For twenty-nine years little has been heard of that once famous British queen of steamships, the "Great Eastern."

This vessel was for a time the wonder of the world. The building of the huge vessel that was to revolutionize the carrying trade of the sea was began on the 1st day of May, 1854.

The iron that entered into the construction of her hull weighed over 8,000 tons, while the weight of the vessel when completed was over 12,000 tons. The number of iron plates employed in the construction of the hull was over 10,000, and these were secured by over 3,000,000 rivets.

Her length was 692 feet (about one-eighth of a mile) and her breadth 83 feet. The depth of the hull was 60 feet and the weight of the vessel when fully laden was over 25,000 tons. Her engines represented the power of 11,000 horses. She was propelled by side-wheels and a screw at her stern.

Her cabin furnished accommodations for 4,000 passengers. She carried twenty life boats, and two life preserving steamers, the smaller of which was larger than the largest of the ships which were in the fleet of Christopher Columbus.

When under sail she could spread from four masts 7,000 yards of canvas. She was the first vessel with four masts, and she was also the first vessel fitted with steam steering gear, which was a grand success, and the steam steering gear has been in use ever since. She had ten anchors and nearly 6,000 feet of chain cable.

The expenses attending her launching amounted to over $600,000. She was launched in January, 1858, but did not make her trial trip till nearly two years afterward. She was designed for carrying passengers and freight to and from India, and it was the intention to place sufficient fuel on board her to last the round trip. It was expected that while the vessel was building others as large or larger size would be built. The Great Eastern (which might have been appropriately called Great Expectations) never realized the anticipations of the projectors. She remained idle for nearly two years after she was launched, when she was bought for a sum equal to the cost ($600,000) of getting her from the shipyard to the water.

She made her first trip to America in 1860, bringing but thirty-six passengers. The voyage was highly successful so far as speed and safety were concerned; but the second trip was not made till nearly a year afterward. She subsequently made two trips across the ocean. On one she brought 2,000 soldiers to the fortifications of Quebec and on the other, 400 passengers. On this occasion she was disabled in a storm and compelled to put back to the port of Cork. She was engaged in laying ocean cables in 1865 and 1866.

While laying cable in June, 1865, half her task was completed when the cable broke and was lost beneath the waves.

Her attempt to lay a cable in '66 was successful. And then repairing to the scene of her former failure she picked up the lost cable, joined the severed strands and successfully relaid it. After that a French company chartered her for a single experimental voyage. Since that time her ownership has changed twice. And now the report comes that the grand old vessel is soon to be employed to bring coal from the Firth of Forth for the supply of London.

After remaining idle most of the time for thirty years, it is proposed to make her pay.

Years ago it was proposed to bring her to a watering-place, excavate a hole in the beach in which the hull might rest and convert her into a hotel. The Mayflower was employed after she brought the pilgrims to Massachusetts in 1620, to bring slaves to the South, and the ship in which Sir Francis Drake sailed across the Pacific ocean has been made into chairs, tables, etc., to commemorate the event. The ship in which Captain James Cook sailed around the world was at last devoted to carrying coal. A French vessel that won many victories is now engaged in the guano trade.

The Great Eastern was a very costly and unsuccessful experiment.—Christian Worker.

Little Mary was reproving her younger brother for fibbing. "Now, Russell," she said, drawing down her face and frowning threatening on the tiny culprit, "dust you remember, never, never to tell auother of your wrong side-out stories to me."

TEMPERANCE.

In the Irish famine year nearly $50,000,000 was consumed in liquors by a people who say they cannot pay their rents and debts.

The Medical Temperance Hospital, of Great Britain, where no alcohol is used as a medicine, has a death-rate of only four and a half per cent, which is lower than in general hospitals in the country.

A man was seen passing through California on his way to Washington Territory. He said he was going where there were no pesky "fanatics." The fact leaked out that he had just served three months in jail in the State of Kansas for selling liquor.

A new scheme for developing the temperance spirit in Detroit is to be tried; a series of parlor temperance meetings will be held; these meetings will be held in some of the finest houses in the city, and those who have organized them anticipate grand results.

In 66 out of 81 counties in Kansas, the number of saloons has been reduced, under prohibitory law, from 708 to 313. In 41 counties there is not a single saloon. Four hundred and sixty cases against liquor sellers have been tried in the district courts, 351 of which have resulted in conviction. In justices' courts 572 hove been tried, with 378 convictions. The fines amount to $95,000; 81 saloon keepers have been imprisoned.

U. S. Senator Blair says: "There is not a single State of the American Union to-day in which the people do not as a whole believe the liquor question to be the most important one which politically concerns the public weal. * * * It is very evident that a vast mass of the voters of the country are prepared to break from old party affiliation unless they find within the organizations to which they now belong an honest purpose to prohibit the traffic in alcohol by both State and National law. The nominees of no party will receive their support in the next Presidential campaign which does not explicitly pledge itself to submit by Congressional action a prohibitory amendment to the people in the ordinary method of amending the Constitution."

Mason Long is one of the temperance preachers of the West. He travels through Indiana and Ohio in a wagon drawn by a span of handsome horses, like tooth-powder venders, and is accompanied by four singing students, two from Oberlin and two from Delaware college. At night the wagon is lighted up with torches, and he harangues the listening multitudes in the open air after the singing has brought them together. He tells them that six years ago he was a drunken reprobate, but a little girl persuaded him to sign the pledge, and since then he has been a happy man. Mr. Long is further described as a man of no special advantages, save perhaps in the matter of sheer lung-power, and yet through his earnestness he interests large audiences, and serves the cause well. His method of "reaching the masses" is certainly worth considering, and a credit to the head and heart that conceived it.—N. Y. Witness.

Georgia had an interesting campaign on the liquor question during the past week in the five leading counties. The wholesale liquor dealers, whose business is being badly broken up by continued restrictions upon their trade, sent out agents with barrels of whisky to influence the voters. In Taylor county Cooper King, a drummer of a Macon wholesale house, after buying twenty-five votes with twenty-five drinks, was arrested and is held under twenty-five warrants. The county was carried by the whisky men. In Meriwether a little fight was made, resulting in a victory for whisky. In Floyd prohibition was also defeated. Campbell county, however, voted prohibition, and so did Cattoosa county. Actual prohibition now prevails in over one-half of the State. In the election to come the wholesale whisky men at Atlanta, Macon, Augusta and Savannah will enter with vim, furnishing all the liquor needed free. Free whisky absolutely controls the negro vote. In Worth county, where prohibition now prevails, merchants have resorted to the subterfuge of selling brandy-peaches. The grand jury now in session has taken hold of the matter, and the merchants are begging for a chance to reform.

MARRYING A DRUNKARD.

The Supreme Court of Iowa has in a recent decision given practical application to the old proverb, "As you make your bed, so you must lie on it." John York made a contract with Susan Mosier by which she was to become his wife, and he was to make specified pecuniary provision for her. They were duly married. In less than two months the bride abandoned her husband on account of his drunkenness. Soon after, John died, and the widow sought to enforce the terms of the ante-nuptial contract; but the court decided against her. It appeared that John was a drunkard before the marriage, and the court held that his wife was not justified in leaving him; that, in short, she had not lived up to her part of the agreement. The widow urged in extenuation that he promised before marriage that he would reform, but the court answered:

"His failure to keep this promise did not justify her in deserting him. All the world knows that such promises, made by a drunkard, are always broken. In a few words, as she knowingly married a drunkard she must be content to be a drunkard's wife."

The decision in this particular case seems like a hardship, but the lesson contained in it should be taken to heart by women who have not yet elected to become the wives of drunkards.—Archive.

THE CHURCHES.

—Bro. C. C. Foote, of Detroit, returned lately to his home in Detroit from East Saginaw, Mich., where he was assisting Bro. Davis in his noble work among the lumbermen. A blessed work was begun and many professed conversion. Bro. Foote, while preaching, was attacked by a sudden illness, which affected his voice, so that he was almost unable to utter a sound. He is slowly regaining his health.

—A revival of much power has been following Elder Rathbun's labors in Wayne, Iowa. The exaltation of the church makes the lodge power tremble, for among the converts and inquirers are several Masons. One has already renounced the order. More than thirty have accepted Christ.

—The revival at Gustavus, Ohio, continues with remarkable power. Over fifty conversions are reported, all but three being adults. The meetings are attended from miles around, the people crowding every corner. There is little outward excitement, but a deep, quiet, powerful conviction and frequent weeping for sin. Bro. Hiatt has for several weeks given up the Seminary at Oberlin to continue the glorious work.

—The American evangelists abroad—Moody, Sankey, Whittle and McGranahan—are expected to finish their labors and return about the 1st of June.

—The flood at Pittsburgh was so high as to reach to Dr. A. M. Milligan's church (Reformed Presbyterian) on Eighth street, and covered the first floor several inches. A number of other churches had water on the first floors, while in the case of still others cellars were filled, and services could not be held on Sabbath.

—The Wesleyan church at Wheaton has enjoyed a precious revival season in which other churches of the place have participated. The meetings have been continued since the week of prayer and fifteen or more have found Christ.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley has just returned to Wheaton after several months evangelistic labor in the East. He will assist in special meetings in the college this week.

—Dr. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate, New York, is a Freemason. He has been learning something of the ways of the lodge as he grows older and confesses it in replying to the question: "Is a Methodist minister justified in negotiating for his appointments?" thus: "He is not justified in asking individual members of churches to work for him. If he does it as a Christian minister he lowers himself; and if he undertakes to do it as a Mason or an Odd-fellow, working through members of his order, (a thing that we once did not believe had ever been done, but which we have found has been done,) he pursues a course which shows him to be unworthy of the appointment he seeks.

—Rev. Alvin Grout, who was one of the earliest of the missionaries to South Africa, having spent thirty-five years among the Zulus, completed his eightieth year recently. It is forty-nine years since he went to South Africa, where he labored with great success, not only in evangelical work, but in the reduction of the language to a systematic and written form, and in the translation of the Bible.

—"If Christianity, as even a Max Muller confesses, be a missionary religion in its nature, 'Converting, advancing, aggressive, encompassing the world,' a non-missionary church shows that she has departed from the idea, and the duty of Christianity—that the hand of death is upon her."—Dr. Christlieb.

—Rev. Joseph Cook had a great audience Monday noon, Feb. 11th, at Tremont Temple, Boston. A large number of clergymen had seats on the platform. The subject of the prelude was the Mormon problem. If polygamy continues ten years longer in Utah from 500,- to 1,000,000 will be the number of its adherents. The new West Education Commission is doing a noble work in Utah, and it would, some time before the millenium, root out polygamy. But more urgent measures are needed. Priestly despotism and the endowment house, with blood atonement, must be eradicated, as well as cutting the tap root of polygamy. Of three measures, moral, legal and military, the first he judged too slow; the last he deprecated, and therefore recommended the second, which President Arthur has brought forward. He earnestly favored a territorial commission, sequestration of the endowment house funds, and a constitutional amendment prohibiting polygamy in the States as well as in the Territories. At the close of the prelude, by an almost unanimous vote, the audience, rising, endorsed President Arthur's scheme of governing Utah by a commission.

—In a communication to the Wesleyan Methodist Prof. Stratton tells of an interesting mission work done in this city last year: "In the spring of 1883, Rev. D. Frew, bearing a license from the Pittsburg Wesleyan church, and signed by Rev. C. F. Hawley, chairman, came to Chicago and entered a missson on West Lake street. With his good wife he opened his labors with a half-dozen 'street Arabs.' From May 20th to January 16th, 1884, he had an attendance of 8,159. Requests for prayer, 1,066. Conversions, 26. Pastoral visits made, 170. Bibles and Testaments given away, 40. Tracts, 410, and 204 signed the temperance pledge. Now for want of funds and other causes the benevolent gentleman of Cleveland, O., who has stood at the back of the foregoing mission, has closed it for the present." Bro. Strattan has agreed, if the mission continue, to raise the support of the missionary and hopes the Mission Board in Syracuse will pay rents.

—The revival effort at Havana, N. Y., under the direction of the Rev. Edgar Davidson, has resulted in the conversion of more than one hundred persons. Of this number twenty three were recently baptized, several of whom were students in the Academy. A number of other students wait to join the churches at their homes.

—Tokio, Japan, has its twelfth Presbyterian church. The government daily paper advertises the Bible for sale. "In ten years Tokio may be a Christian city," was the prediction of its young men at the late conference of churches in Japan.

—A large hall, says Rev. Henry Loomis, was begun in Tokio by the opponents of Christianity, and it was proposed by a series of lectures to destroy its power in Japan. Before the building was completed the founders of the enterprise disagreed, and it passed into other hands. This was the place where Joseph Cook dealt such fatal blows to infidelity, and it was also used for a series of lectures by some of the ablest men in Japan in defence of Christianity.—Central Presbyterian.

—That skepticism has not destroyed piety among the scholarly class in Germany is proved by the fact that the students of nine German universities have united to contribute and collect funds for the support of Italian students of theology.

—One of the foremost men of the day is the Chinese Prime Minister, Li Hung Chang, who is called, not inaptly, the Bismarck of China. Most of the material progress in the empire, during the last fifteen years, is the result of his wise and far-seeing policy. Though not an avowed Christian he shows a lively interest in mission work, substantial proof of which may be seen in the hospital at Tientsin founded through his generosity. In a public address not long since, he declared that the religion of Jesus must be a power for good since it led its followers to such deeds of true philanthropy and self denial. Testimony of this kind from such a source carries great weight.—Congregationalist.

—There are nearly one thousand Romanist converts in the Protestant churches of Rome, as the result of ten years' mission work.

—That skepticism has not destroyed piety among the scholarly class in Germany is proved by the fact that the students of nine German universities have united to contribute and collect funds for the support of Italian students of theology.

—A new lifeboat, suitable for navigation purposes, and the property of the Central Africa Mission, has just been launched on the great Lake Tanganyika to the immense delight of the natives. She is called the Morning Star (Nyota Xa Assubi).

—In the Maratha Mission, India, a remarkable advance is reported in the direction of self-support, the sixteen pastors being wholly paid from their native funds. While there is but one more ordained missionary than in 1873, the number of native helpers has increased from 41 to 83, and the church membership from 620 to 1,421.

—On September 3d a society for co-operative evangelical labor in the Erzrum field (East Turkey), was organized by the Erzrum and Hundus churches, and the Passan community, together with the missionaries resident at Erzrum. This society takes the entire care of the evangelical and educational work maintained by the people or by the American Board in that region. The missionaries will remain, as heretofore, disbursing agents, but the selection of the objects to be aided with funds—i. e., the estimates for expenditures—will be made by the society. At present this association is able to pledge for executing its objects one-fourth as much money as is appropriated by the Board. This association at Erzrum, like the one organized several years ago at Bitlis, is quite in the line of the recent action of the Board at Detroit as to co-operation in Turkey. How much more might have been accomplished in Armenia if this arrangement had been made years ago.

—The religious question in Japan now is certainly "Christ or Buddha." The Buddhist faith has been formulated so as to present an opposing front to the whole series of Christian doctrine. A training school for the indoctrination of young Japanese in Buddhism has been established. A Buddhist journal advertises Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" as an annihilating answer to Christianity. The battle is, or soon will be, set in order.

—The revival that attended the day of fasting and prayer for colleges at Park College, Mo., is noted in a letter of Prof. Nelson to the St. Louis Evangelist: "Meetings were held during the day, and all felt the solemnity of the day devoted to special work of this nature. At the service held in the church in the evening, the presence of God was most graciously manifest and the meeting was a precious one. Many testified most gladly of the value that Christ had been to them, as a shield from temptation and a support in difficulty and trial. But best of all, a great many were moved to confess their failures, and ask the prayers of Christians that they might start anew, while still more rose for prayer that they might be taught how they were to begin the service of the new Master. It was an occasion long to be remembered, and the earnest prayers that were offered will ring in our ears for a long time to come. At length we separated with a deep assurance that the evening had been spent with God himself. The day following was one of quiet joy, and at night we met again for prayer. After the meeting an opportunity was given for enquirers to talk and pray with Christians. For a long time this work went on with an activity that clearly showed its origin to be from above. Many a one expressed a new-found hope in Christ, while others made new resolves to seek their Master's honor more zealously than ever before."

—E. K. Alden, Home Secretary of the American Board, replies in the Advance to this question: "Are the churches organized by the missionaries of the A. B. C. F. M. organized as Congregational or as Presbyterian, as was the case in the Sissiton Mission, Dakota?"

"As a rule, all churches on missionary ground, under the care of our Board, have been organized as churches of the Lord Jesus Christ, without any distinctive denominational name, very much after the style graphically presented in the early numbers of the Missionary Herald, edited by Luke, the beloved missionary physician, extracts from which have come down to us in that interesting pocket missionary manual, entitled "The Acts of the Apostles." These churches conduct their own affairs and elect their own officers, and do all which seems to them helpful for mutual edification and for aggressive Christian activity, taking counsel of each other and of their missionary instructors, adapting their methods to the circumstances in which they are placed. What denomination do such churches belong to in Japan, in China, in India, in Africa, in Turkey and among the Micronesian Islands? Suppose we should pass along the question to the churches themselves; their replies, of course, would be in "the several tongues wherein they were born," in Japanese, Chinese, Tamil, Mahratha, etc., etc. Would the Prudential Committee, upon the reasonable supposition that they understood these different tongues, be able to translate them into English? I have serious doubts upon this point, and we should probably be obliged to say, after careful consideration of the whole subject, that there seem to be evangelical churches of the Lord Jesus Christ very much after the pattern of the early apostolic churches."

THE BRETHREN CHURCH.

In answer to an inquiry respecting a preacher of this church who was suspected as a Mason the Brethren's Evangelist says:

"The same slander having come to our hearing before, we asked brother Ullery about it, and learned that he was not a Freemason, and had not been for ten years. He was one of the unfortunate persons who are led into the lodge innocently, but when he came to himself he abandoned it. There are scores of men in the German Baptist church who once were Masons or Odd-fellows. All that can be demanded of such is to cease working with the order and attending the lodge. If they can be persuaded to denounce the institution it is still better."

Yes, very much better. A renunciation of the lodge along with the rest of his sins is the least any church should ask of those who are proposed as members. It being also said that with the Bible alone members of the church could not be kept out of the lodge, the editor says:

"Well, if the Gospel does not forbid it, who else has a right to do so? If there is nothing in the Gospel to prevent men from going into Freemasonry and other forms of oath-bound secretism, then it may not be such a bad thing after all. But the Gospel is definite enough to forbid members of the church belonging to such orders, for it says: 'Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers.' Freemasons are unbelievers, idolators, infidels, Jews and anything else, and for a Christian to be united with them by one of the strongest bonds that men can devise, would certainly be a very unequal yoking. Again, the Gospel says: 'Swear not at all;' 'Let thy yea be yea, and thy nay be nay,' and anything more than this cometh of evil. Freemasonry requires more than this. It demands an oath of the most shocking kind. Therefore the Scriptures clearly forbid members of the church from belonging to secret oath-bound lodges of all classes, and as the Gospel is our creed, the Brethren church also forbids it."

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	3

HOME HINTS.

THE BABY'S COMPLAINT.

O! mother, dear mother!
No wonder I cry!
More wonder by far
That your baby don't die.
No matter what ails me;
No matter whose here;
No matter how hungry
The poor little dear;
No matter if full
Or all out of breath,
She trots me, and trots me,
And trots me to death.

I love my dear nurse,
But I hate that great knee;
I like her to talk,
But, woe unto me!.
She can't be contented
With talking so pretty
In washing and dressing
And doing her duty,
And that's very well,
I can bear soap and water,
But, mother, she is an
Unmerciful trotter.

Oh dear! is that she?
Is she coming so soon?
She is bringing my dinner
With teacup and spoon.
She'll hold me with one hand,
In the other the cup,
And as fast as its down
She will just shake it up.
So thumpty thump,
With the greatest delight,
Her heel is going from morning till night,
All over the house
You may hear it, I'm sure,
Trot, trotting—just think what I'm doomed to endure!

—Selected.

AMUSING THE BABY.

Little babies are often tortured by well-meaning but inconsiderate nurses and friends. If they show any uneasiness or nervousness they are trotted and bounced and jolted, till at last perhaps they fall asleep from very exhaustion. How would grown people love to be tickled on the soles of their feet, to be roughly clutched in the pit of the stomach and shaken, to be tossed to the ceiling, sometimes just after a hearty dinner, to have their cheeks pinched and kissed by anybody who happens to admire them?

Is it sure that the baby likes these things, he can't speak to object, if he doesn't. To be sure, he laughs nervously when tickled but the laugh is often almost indistinguishable from a cry, and if he becomes desperate and sends forth a very audible protest, he is called "cross."

Poor, much-enduring baby! Your father would defend himself against any one who attempted to treat him as you are treated. He considered himself insulted and abused when tossed in a blanket in his school-boy days. The sickening sensation of dropping from a height is supposed to be much more agreeable to you than it was to him then. Your mother counts it a bad night in which she dreams of falling down, down, from some high elevation.

Some young children undoubtedly do enjoy rough play. They are of the hardy, reckless kind, who will be endangering themselves continually as they are growing up, and have numberless hair-breadth escapes recorded in their histories. My plea is more especially in behalf of the sensitive, delicate children, who are frequently excited and rendered wakeful by injudicious strain upon the nervous system. Such need the gentle exercise administered by loving hands, which check them ere pleasure becomes a weariness. Let us be considerate of the helpless little ones entrusted to our charge.—Christian at Work.

RULES FOR THE CARE OF INFANTS.

"NO LAUDANUM, NO PAREGORIC, NO SOOTHING SYRUP."

NURSING OF INFANTS.

Over feeding does more harm than any thing else; nurse an infant a month or two old every two or three hours.

Nurse and infant of six months or over five times in twenty-four hours, and no more.

If an infant is thirsty, give it pure water, or barley water, no sugar.

On the hottest days a few drops of whisky may be added to either water or food; the whisky not to exceed a teaspoonful in twenty-four hours.

FEEDING INFANTS.

Boil a teaspoonful of powdered barley (ground in a coffee grinder) and a gill of water, with a little salt, for fifteen minutes, strain, then mix it with half as much boiled milk, and add a lump of white sugar, the size of a walnut, and give it lukewarm, from a nursing bottle. Keep bottle and mouthpiece in a bowl of water when not in use.

For infants five or six months old give half barley water and half milk, with salt and a lump of sugar.

For older infants give more milk than barley water.

For infants very costive give oatmeal instead of barley. Cook and strain as before.

When your breast-milk is only half enough change off between breast-milk and this prepared food.

In hot weather, if blue litmus paper, applied to the food, turns red, the food is too acid, and you must make a fresh mess, or add a small pinch of baking-soda.

Infants of six months may have beef-tea or beef-soup once a day, by itself, or mixed with other food; and, when ten or twelve months old, a crust of bread and a piece of rare beef to suck. No child under two years ought to eat at the table.

Give no candies, in fact nothing that is not contained in these rules, without a doctor's orders.

SUMMER COMPLAINT.

It comes from over-feeding, and hot and foul air; never from teething. Keep doors and windows open.

Wash your children well with cold water twice a day, and oftener in the hot season.

When infants vomit and purge, give nothing to eat or drink for four or six hours, but all the fresh air you can. After that time give a few drops of whisky in a teaspoonful of ice water every ten minutes, but no more until the doctor comes.

Whenever there is vomiting and purging give no milk. Give no laudanum, no paregoric, no soothing syrup, no teas.—New York Health Department.

Lady Barker recommends airy bedrooms for children. She says: "The fondest and fussiest parents do not always understand that on the most careful attention and simple rules depend the straightness of children's spines, the strength of their limbs, their freedom from coughs and colds, and, in fact, their general health. But few consider that half of a young child's life should be spent in its bed. So that unless the atmosphere of the room they sleep in, the quality of the bed they lie on, and the texture of the clothes which cover them are taken into consideration, it is only half their existence which is being cared for."

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multidude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 831 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

NEVER FAILS.

IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURING Epileptic Fits, Spasm, Falling Sickness, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Syphilis, Scrofula, and all

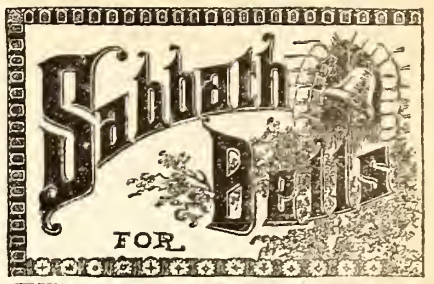
Nervous and Blood Diseases.



To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all whose sedentary employment causes Nervous Prostration, Irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulent, Samaritan Nervine is invaluable.

Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50, at Druggists.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR.

The DR. S. A. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.

For testimonials and circulars send stamp. (18)

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

SOCIAL MEETINGS, ETC.

'84 LATEST BOOK OUT '84

All we ask of parties wishing new books for their Sunday Schools, is that they send for a sample copy of SABBATH BELLS before adopting any other. IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF. What people say who have the book:

"Is unusually bright in stirring and joyful songs."
"Is a very superior book."
"A grand Work."
"Its songs are Golden."
"In my judgement, I have never examined a better book"
"The quality of songs together with its new and convenient arrangement make it a most desirable work."
"An examination proves to anyone its superior merit."

Single copy 35 cents; per dozen $3.60. One sample copy will be sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents. Is printed in both round and character notes.

Address FIRESIDE FRIEND PUB. CO.
Springfield, Ohio

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE.
R. S. & A. P. LACEY,
Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.
Send description of your Invention. L. BINGHAM,
Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

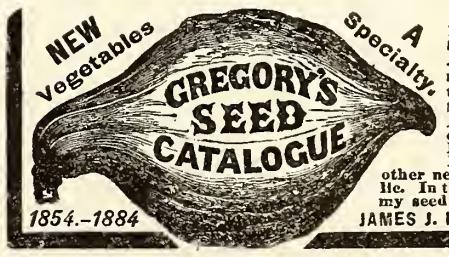
WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY. Proprietor, Wheaton Ill.
General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best.
STRAW, BLACK CAP, GOOSE BERRIES, RASP GRAPES, and other Small Fruits.
Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

T. HUDSON J. L. STRATTON
—Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of—
HARDWOOD LUMBER.
Have on hand a large amount of Dry Ash, Red and White Oak, Hickory, and Basswood.
Prompt attention given to orders and satisfaction guaranteed. KALAMAZOO, MICH.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS, WHEATON COLLEGE.

Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in their schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.



HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

POOR people have become rich working for us We offer a business easy to learn—paying large sums of money in profits Every one willing to work can get rich. Men, women and even boys and girls, are making fortunes. No capital required We will start you in business You run no risk whatever You need not be away from home Full particulars free
W. V. R. POWIS, 89 Randolph St, Chicago, Ill.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

My Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1884, the result of thirty years' experience as a Seed Grower, will be sent free to all who apply. All my Seed is warranted to be fresh and true to name, so far that should it prove otherwise, I agree to refill orders gratis. My collection of vegetable Seed, one of the most extensive to be found in any American Catalogue, is a large part of it of my own growing. As the original introducer of Eclipse Beet, Burbank Potatoes, Marblehead Early Corn, the Hubbard Squash, and scores of other new Vegetables, I invite the patronage of the public. In the gardens and on the farms of those who plant my seed will be found my best advertisement.
JAMES J. H. GREGORY, Seed Grower, Marblehead, Mass.

Peter Henderson & Co's COLLECTION OF SEEDS AND PLANTS

embraces every desirable Novelty of the season, as well as all standard kinds. A special feature for 1884 is, that you can for $5.00 select Seeds or Plants to that value from their Catalogue, and have included, without charge, a copy of Peter Henderson's New Book, "Garden and Farm Topics," a work of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a steel portrait of the author. The price of the book alone is $1.50. Catalogue of "Everything for the Garden," giving details, free on application.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

FARM AND GARDEN.

THE MISTAKES FARMERS MAKE.

An exchange, published in the interior of the State, speaks of the departure of an old settler for Dakota, where he will take up a quarter section of land and start in life again at the age of seventy. The case of the man is so near that of thousands of others, that a few comments may not be out of place. The man had a nice farm near a splendid town where he had lived and brought up a family. He got tired of farming, sold the farm for six thousand dollars, moved to town and went into the livery business, and in three years went through everything except a team and a lumber wagon, and now he has packed up and gone to Dakota, with a heart heavier than his pocket-book, and he will die out there. The number of farmers that decide to go to town to live every year, and go into business, is appalling. Every town has them and nine out of ten become poor. They get an idea that town business men are the happiest people on the earth, and have an easy time, and they get to brooding over their hard life, and they think anybody can run a store, a grocery or a livery stable, and they sell out the farm and go into business, because it seems so easy to weigh out sugar and tea. They can always find a groceryman who will sell out the remains of a sick stock of groceries for ready cash, and when the farmer first sees his name over the door of a grocery, he feels as though he was made, and puts his thumbs in the arm-holes of his vest. He uses his money to stock up, pays cash, and his credit is good, and he buys everything that is shown to him. The commercial traveler who strikes the farmer grocer has it all his own way, and pretty soon the grocery is full. It generally takes a farmer two years to go through a 500-acre farm in the grocery business. Instead of the business being an easy, run-itself sort of lay-out, it requires the best management of any branch of trade. The profits are small, and the waste is terrible. A grocer has got to be sharp as tacks. The farmers' girls and boys soon realize that they are merchants' sons and daughters, and they have to keep up with the fashions. There has to be many things bought as merchants that would never be thought of as farmers. The farm-house furniture is not good enough, the democrat wagon gives place to a carriage, the old mares give place to high steppers, and the girls dress better, and do not work. The family lives out of the grocery, the boys play base ball, and the girls go to entertainments. The farmer is a good fellow and trusts many other good fellows who can't pay, and in some cases he gets to drinking. Bills begin to come in, and he can't collect enough enough to pay rent. Friends that would help him out with money when he had a farm, will now tell him money is mighty scarce, and he will have to give a chattel mortgage on the stock.

The stock runs down until there's nothing left but a red tin can of mustard with a bull's head on it, some canned peaches and cove oysters on the shelves, a few boxes of wooden clothes-pins, six wagon loads of barrels with a little sugar in the bottom, a couple of dozen wash-boards, a box of codfish of the vintage of 1860, a showcase full of three cent wooden pocket-combs and blueing, hair pins and shaving soap, some empty cigar boxes that the boys have smoked the cigars out of, and a few such things that do not bring enough at an auction to pay for printing the auction bills. Then the farmer breaks up and goes west, leaving a lot of bills in the hands of a lawyer for collection, who manages to collect enough to pay his commission, and the family that was so happy on the farm, and so independent, becomes demoralized; the girls marry hostlers in livery stables rather than to go west, the boys go to driving hack or working threshing machines, or tending bar, and refuse to go west, and the old folks go to Dakota alone. This is the history of thousands of farmers who get tired of the old farm. If they would but realize that they are better fixed than nine-tenths of the merchants in towns, and that they can not become successful merchants any more than merchants can become successful farmers, they would learn something that would be valuable to them.—Ex.

"My child is rosy cheeked and cured; Samaritan Nervine did it." Mrs. Wm. Schelpeper, Nichols, Iowa. $1.50 at Druggists.

A MODERN RESURRECTION.

A MIRACLE THAT TOOK PLACE IN OUR MIDST UNKNOWN TO THE PUBLIC— THE DETAILS IN FULL.

(Detroit Free Press.)

One of the most remarkable occurrences ever given to the public, which took place here in our midst, has just come to our knowledge and will undoubtedly awaken as much surprise and attract as great attention as it has already in newspaper circles. The facts are, briefly, as follows: Mr. William A. Cromble, a young man formerly residing at Birmingham, a suburb of Detroit, and now living at 287 Michigan Avenue in this city, can truthfully say that he has looked into the future world and yet returned to this. A representative of this paper has interviewed him upon this important subject and his experiences are given to the public for the first time. He said:

"I had been having some peculiar sensations for a long while. My head felt dull and heavy; my eyesight did not seem so clear as formerly; my appetite was uncertain and I was unaccountably tired. It was an effort to arise in the morning and yet I could not sleep at night. My mouth tasted badly, I had a faint, all-gone sensation in the pit of my stomach that food did not satisfy, while my hands and feet felt cold and clammy. I was nervous and irritable, and lost all enthusiasm. At times my head would seem to whirl and my heart palpitated terribly. I had no energy, no ambition, and I seemed indifferent of the present and thoughtless for the future. I tried to shake the feeling off and persuade myself it was simply a cold or a little malaria. But it would not go. I was determined not to give up, and so time passed along and all the while I was getting worse. It was about this time that I noticed I had begun to bloat fearfully. My limbs were swollen so that by pressing my fingers upon them deep depressions would be made. My face also began to enlarge, and continued to until I could scarcely see out of my eyes. One of my friends, describing my appearance at that time, said: 'It is an animated something, but I should like to know what.' In this condition I passed several weeks of the greatest agony.

"Finally, one Saturday night, the misery culminated. Nature could endure no more. I became irrational and apparently insensible. Cold sweat gathered on my forehead; my eyes became glazed and my throat rattled. I seemed to be in another sphere and with other surroundings. I knew nothing of what occurred around me, although I have since learned it was considered as death by those who stood by. It was to me a quiet state, and yet one of great agony. I was helpless, hopeless, and pain was my only companion. I remember trying to see what was beyond me, but the mist before my eyes was too great. I tried to reason, but I had lost all power. I felt that it was death, and realized how terrible it was. At last the strain upon my mind gave way and all was a blank. How long this continued I do not know, but at last I realized the presence of friends and recognized my mother. I then thought it was earth, but was not certain. I gradually regained consciousness, however, and the pain lessened. I found that my friends had, during my unconsciousness, been giving me a preparation I had never taken before, and the next day, under the influence of this treatment, the bloating began to disappear and from that time on I steadily improved, until to-day I am as well as ever before in my life, have no traces of the terrible acute Bright's disease, which so nearly killed me, and all through the wonderful instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy that brought me to life after I was virtually in another world."

"You have had an unusual experience, Mr. Crombie," said the writer, who had been breathlessly listening to the recital.

"Yes, I think I have," was the reply, "and it has been a valuable lesson to me. I am certain, though, there are thousands of men and women at this very moment who have the same ailment which came so near killing me, and they do not know it. I believe kidney disease is the most deceptive trouble in the world. It comes like a thief in the night. It has no certain symptoms, but seems to attack each one differently. It is quiet, treacherous, and all the more dangerous. It is killing more people, to-day, than any other one complaint. If I had the power I would warn the entire world against it and urge them to remove it from the system before it is too late."

One of the members of the firm of Whitehead & Mitchell, proprietors of the Birmingham Eccentric, paid a fraternal visit to this office yesterday, and in the course of conversation Mr. Crombie's name was mentioned.

"I knew about his sickness," said the editor, "and his remarkable recovery. I had his obituary all in type and announced in the Eccentric that he could not live until its next issue. It was certainly a most wonderful case."

Rev. A. R. Bartlett, formerly pastor of the M. E. church, at Birmingham, and now of Schoolcraft, Mich., in response to a telegram, replied:

"Mr. W. A. Crombie was a member of my congregation at the time of his sickness. The prayers of the church were requested for him on two different occasions. I was with him the day he was reported by his physicians as dying, and consider his recovery almost a miracle."

Not one person in a million ever comes so near death as did Mr. Crombie and then recover, but the men and women who are drifting toward the same end, are legion. To note the slightest symptoms, to realize their significance and to meet them in time by the remedy which has been shown to be most efficient, is a duty from which there can be no escape. They are fortunate who do this; they are on the sure road to death who neglect it.

A Suffocating Cough.

In a letter from Mrs. Charlotte Lisle, of Chicago, a lady well known as a contributor to the Western press, she ascribes the cure of a dangerous cough, accompanied by bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My cough," she says, "threatened to suffocate me * * * * but the Honey of Horehound and Tar has removed every trace of it." The letter was to a lady friend in this city, who has placed it at the disposal of C. N. CRITTENTON, 115 Fulton street, N. Y.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

Scalps Tormented with Dandruff or Scald Head are made healthy with Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Of all druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, black or brown, fifty cents.

Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic.

For adults travelling, a wineglassful may be taken three times a day with great advantage. Its tonic and nutritive qualities are sufficient to sustain the body without the addition of solid food. It is now recommended by the faculty as the best remedy for consumption, debility, loss of appetite, weakness, indigestion, dyspepsia, fever, ague, malaria, and all female and children's maladies.

CAUTION—See that the signature of T. COLDEN is on each bottle, as imitations are on the market.

LUCILE VERNON.

cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

For sale by the

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

A POLE STAR

In the heavens of civil and religious liberty

—THE—

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,

A 16-page weekly journal, published by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

an organization whose object is "to expose, withstand and remove Secret Societies....and other anti-Christian Movements."

Able writers from all parts of our own and from foreign lands, and from the different denominations, contribute to its columns. The claims an advanced position among the advocates of Christian Education, Temperance, Government Reforms, Sabbath Observance, and Bible Holiness, to which it adds a thorough exposition and critical analysis of Secret Societies, pointing out both the evils and the remedy. In brief, it is the paper having opinions on all practical living questions and the courage to express them.

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

It emphasizes the fact that political action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD and SPIRIT of God, and that Christ must be acknowledged KING OF NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

In addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

TERMS: $2.00 per year; special terms to clubs. Send for sample copies.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS.

Cloth, $1.00. Paper, 50 cents.

PRESS NOTICES:

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the tresures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"The story is inteusely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Master's Carpet.

BY

F. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 429 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY

AT A GLANCE,

BY

E. RONAYNE,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

Illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge and gives a brief explanation of each. This work should be scattered like leaves all over the country. It is so cheap that it can be used as tracts, and money thus expended will bring a bountiful harvest. 32 pages. Price, postpaid, 6 cents. Per 100, $3.60. Address.

National Christian Association,
221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 50
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	25
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.

EZRA A. COOK, Publisher, 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE

311,000 references. The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's is child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2.50; half Russia, $3. Postage, 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Preaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now issued. The whole lot for $11.48. Single copy, postpaid, 10c, 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.

Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil
11 Newlyn House. [dren.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Susette.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
20 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwei.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bertie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth Is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Miss'n, Lit. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Hayfands.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
52 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Failure.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer. [Marched.
57 Hagarda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I.
61 Tempest Tost'd.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hope.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right Is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself.
72 Lyman.
73 Kenneth.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl
77 Margery Kramer's School-
78 The Quartetts. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Lulu Preston's Trials and Triumphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror
85 Joe and Harry
86 Fred, the Buckwood Boy.
87 Bloomfield Rock.
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 No Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Saunders.
93 Peg of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit; Frank Spencer's Rule of 109 The Harker Family. [Life,
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Tim's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
119 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Poll and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Fearndale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium.
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; John Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Telfourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Banyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Louis' School Days.
151 Blossom and blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Bruey.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips,
156 Digging a Grave with a Wine-glass. Little blind May.
157 The Manor House Mystery. May's Sixpence,
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Job Lufton's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.
163 Little Faith. The Diver's Daughter.
164 Dora's boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe,
166 Danesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear
168 Drift. [ful bondage.
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list, Nos 96, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168, are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4, any 12 copies for $1, 10c each.

ANTI-LODGE PUBLICATIONS.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Oddfellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers; price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal: or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Waltera. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2.00

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Reform Note Paper & Envelopes

This is good heavy paper, 5¾x8½ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scripture and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with an "ad" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,

13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.

Price postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches. Published by

EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering. All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order, Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter. Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10¼x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and Family Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible. Harmony of the Gospels, Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 4.

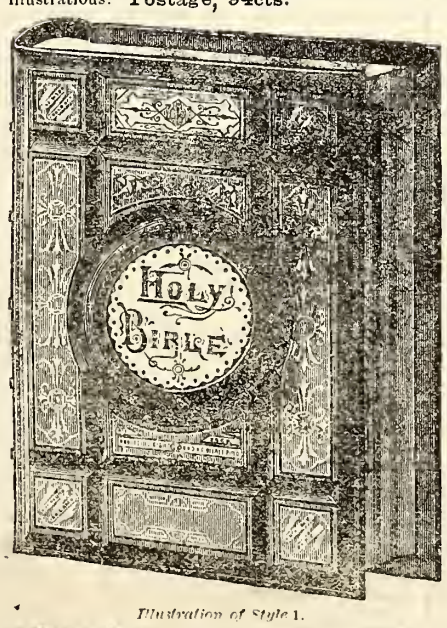

Illustration of Style 1.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4. with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S. Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume. Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates. By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by Eli Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac similies of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $[illegible] 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings. Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers. By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society. Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,

13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

—A National Council of the National Union League has been summoned to meet at Washington, March 6.

—Secretary Lincoln's proposed trip to Chicago has been abandoned, he deeming it proper to give his whole attention to the management and distribution of the award to the flood sufferers.

—Representative Curtin introduced a bill providing that any person disabled during the late war and was furnished with an artificial limb by the War Department since 1870, be entitled to receive a new limb every three years thereafter.

—An additional appropriation of $200,000, making the total amount $500,000, for the relief of the flood sufferers, passed both houses of Congress Friday.

—Senator Logan introduced in the Senate a bill to provide that persons honorably discharged from the military or naval service of the United States shall be preferred for appointment to civil offices, provided they possess the necessary business capacity.

—The friends of the bill extending the whisky bonded period are very much more hopeful of its ultimate success than they have been. Senator Beck has received a letter from Commissioner of Internal Revenue Evans strongly approving the bill.

—The House Committee on Postoffices and Postroads has agreed to report favorably the bill amending the section of the Revised Statutes authorizing the Postmaster General to stop the delivery of registered mail or money orders to fraudulent lottery companies by striking out the word "fraudulent," thus including all lottery companies in its provisions.

—An agreement has been reached between Senator Dawes, Mr. Holman, and others interested in the opening of the great Sioux Reservation. The proposition finally agreed upon is to open the reservation strictly for homestead settlement. It does not permit settlers to commute their claims, but obliges them to live the full five years on their homestead.

THE FLOOD.

—The Ohio flood of 1884 will be remembered as the highest ever recorded, the river at Cincinnati being a trifle over 71 feet above low water mark early Friday morning. On Sunday the city of Paducah was one third under water with the probability that the whole city would be flooded. The storm waves Wednesday night destroyed hundreds of buildings at Portsmouth and Ironton, Ohio; Point Pleasant, W. Va.; Newport, Uniontown, Aberdeen and Maysville, Ky., and in the eastern section of Cincinnati. Metropolis, Ill., has also been devastated by the floods, and Utica and Clarksville, Ind., are almost entirely submerged, At Lawrencetown the storm and ensuing cold weather were severely felt, and hundreds are housed in the upper sections of two halls, a school-house and the court house. The inundation has increased at Aurora and the place has been cut into three sections by the rushing river. Jeffersonville is in a sad plight and the ruinous work along the Kenawha is reported as fearful. The water was from ten to thirty feet deep in the streets of Shawnectown, Ill. Several houses were destroyed by waves Thursday night. The people are on the hill-tops, and many cases of sickness are reported. Great distress prevails at Uniontown, which has been partly deserted, and mountainous waves are destroying the structures which remain erect at Lawrenceburg. The devastation at New Albany continues. Distressing reports are narrated by persons on the relief boats which now ply up and down the Ohio. The work of relief continues and contributions are coming from all sections.

—Since the subsidence of the flood at Powhattan, W. Va., sand and water are thrown high in the air at intervals in geyser fashion. The phenomenon attracts much attention.

—The rear wall of two adjoining buildings in Pearl street, Cincinnati, used as boarding houses, and occupied by thirty-five persons, collapsed early Friday morning, resulting in the drowning and crushing to death of ten persons. The search for other bodies will be continued when the water lowers.

—The many losses along the Ohio from Pittsburg to Cairo will reach the enormous amount of $40,000,000 or more. Add to this the sufferings, and the damage by a flood, the like of which no living man has ever before seen, can be estimated.

THE COUNTRY.

—The Liquor Dealers' Protective Association of Chicago have appointed Albert Greenough their agent to prosecute druggists who sell liquor by the glass.

—The Boot and Shoe Association held a special meeting at the Palmer House, Chicago. It was decided not to give the annual banquet, but to make a donation of $400 to the Ohio sufferers through the medium of the Red Cross Society.

—Non-union miners are being visited at night in the district about Shaners, Pa., by masked bands, after the Mollie Maguire fashion, and warned to leave. Some of the men are terror-stricken, and the operatives will apply to the sheriff to stop the nocturnal visitations.

—David C. Keller, pilot of the Scioto, sunk in collision near Mingo Junction, July 4, 1882, and fifty-four lives lost, was found guilty at Parkersburg, W. Va., Thursday, of voluntary manslaughter, but recommended to mercy.

—The United States Circuit Court at Boston last week rendered an opinion in the case of the Credit Mobilier against the trustees under Oakes Ames and the Union Pacific contract. Ten million dollars is involved, and the judges agreed that the trustees have received several million which they have not accounted for, and by their negligence, misconduct and mismanagement the stockholders have suffered loss.

—A call has been issued for the woolgrowers of Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Utah, Wyoming, and New Mexico to assemble in convention at Denver on March 12 to take steps to prevent a reduction of the wool tariff. President Enos Brown, of the Colorado association signs the call.

FOREIGN.

—An unknown man seized Premier Gladstone in Bond street, London, Thursday, and brought him to a stand. The Premier disengaged himself, and proceeded to the House of Commons.

—A waterspout at Arequipa, Peru, caused the drowning of several persons and great damage to property.

—The submission of the Merv tribes to Russia is regarded in Berlin as a menace toward England's Indian Empire. Russia being now the "immediate neighbor of India," in case of hostilities with England, it is alleged the frontier tribes could, under Russian protection, invade the rich provinces of Hindostan.

—Bismarck has returned the Lasker resolutions to the German Minister at Washington, instructing him to return them to the House of Representatives, as they are not acceptable to Germany, and ask for their recall. The London Times states that there is considerable ill-feeling between the Washington and Berlin Cabinets.

—The relief expedition for Tokar left Cairo Friday. General Wood's proposal that the Egyptian army co-operate in this expedition has not been sanctioned by English Government, which claims that the latter force was raised for the defense of Egypt outside of the Soudan. The expenses of the expedition will be defrayed by Great Britain.

BUSINESS.

CYNOSURE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Received from the following persons from Feb. 4th to 16th, 1884: C G Callison, J S Woodmanse, W R Fleming, W McMillan, W C Bissell, Jackson Burke, A Hinekley, S S Cotton, J P Blake, Jos Markey, W D Lowreys, T W Baird, W C Keizel, O P Pitcher, Eli Austen, G P Stevens, J E Verkler, J H Creager, Gardner Gale, Wm Trump, Mary H Waterman, J A Iliff, Jacob Grove, H N Crosby, Henry Smith, Abby Walcott, W N Holden, Robt Moore, Rev S McClurkin, D Crawford, Dr A Bonham, L D Felt, Rev J S Amidon, E C Spencer, Eliza Bradley, C Watson, J C Young, John Tusk, C G & Geo Sellers, A C Moffatt, W Milligan, E A Washburn, Ansel Main, Ezra Bradbury, A Megrave, J H Wilcox, A S Salesburg, Jno Chapman, A C Bundy, P Bacon, Dr J Mattinly, E Bascom, H R McRae, J H Sloan, J T McKee, Eld P S Butler, F L Garrison, Saml Russell, A Stouffer, Wm Parkis, J A Laird, J W Snidter, J L Moore, E S Grattan, P. O., Lena Ill., no name, Mrs R D Nichols, Bancroft, A C Lamm, Jas Shigley, J N Norris, Rev W H Ross, W Ramsey, C Cole, Rev A Charles, Rev B Burke, R F Irwin, H H Hinman, Gorman Briggs, Stephen Higginson, M B Stoddard, S E Starry, Alex Baldridge, S P Boohrer, Sarah Edgerton, Frank Austin, W F Baker, Dan'l Hyde, Richard McClelland, E Z Derbyshire, P Reams, A Sargent, Rev J Hatch, Rev H A Day, E B Gillett, Mrs D R Keir, Sam'l L Morse, S A Quale, D L Gower, P Guthrie, G M Read, Sahab Heller, Wm Souter, W B Dawson, Lewis Gishwillen, T K Ford, W N Lovell, Mary Olney, Margaret Lowe. Austin Bliss, David Keister, Jno Libby, W T Sleeper, Richard J Griffin, W B Stoddard, Woodruff Post, W Milligan, F W Capwell, Wm Wilkenson, Cornelius Denham, Thos Hartley, Jas Lindsay, M Dettrick, A F Brockman, Saml Graham, J H Nieloy, Simeon Bagley, Abner Orr, J Breckenridge, B S Cutter, J T Rose, J W Allen, Jno E Whitmack, Mrs L Coon, A Taylor, Charles T Collins, J H Bridge, E F Sox, J Talbot, Thos Lowe, D S Farris, G W Danner, Z S Wood, John M Round, E Miller, William McCracken, C W Sterry, J W Wood, Ira J Bradley, James Schouten, M M Morse, Dea Ebenezer Smith, J T Johnston, E Brace, B A Bailey, P B Chamberlin, Rev James Squier, A C Staples, T B McCormick, H D Whitcomb, E M Harrison, Geo W Clark, S M Crobarger, Rev Wm Moerdyke, Moses Pierce, N C Tyrell, Jno M Surett, J S Shoemaker, Mrs A Crofoot, W H Earl, P Carpenter, J Blanchard, Sam'l McMurdy, Mary E Waterman, A Hawkins, N D Clay, T & S C White, Jno McClure N B Britten, J H Brockman.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

In Debility.

Dr. W. H. HOLCOMBE, New Orleans, La., says: I found it an admirable remedy for debilitated state of the system, produced by the wear and tear of the nervous energies."

SPECIAL.—To those who may have had their paper stopped much to their surprise, we wish to say that at this season of the year when there are many subscriptions received for renewal, and there are a number of changes to make on our mail list, there is danger of clerical errors, and if any of our subscribers should not receive the Cynosure as they expect, we would be grateful if they would send us a postal card notifying us that they wish their subscription continued, and we will be pleased to make the correction at once.

ALL REMITTANCES should be made by draft on Chicago, New York or Boston, postal money order, express or registered letter. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. In sending money the amount and what it is for should be distinctly stated. In every instance the name of the writer and his post office address should be given to avoid confusion or mistake.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2	94½	95½
No. 3	88½	93
Winter No 2	1 01	@1 03
Corn—No. 2	54	@55
Oats—No. 2		@33
Rye—No. 2		58
Bran per ton		15 50
Flour	2 25	@6 25
Hay—Timothy	6 50	@10 00
Mess pork per bbl		18 30
Butter, medium to best	18	@32
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	1 50	@2 76
Eggs		24
Potatoes per bus	27	33
Seeds—Timothy	1 29	@1 35
Flax		1 56
Broom corn	02	@ 08
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	16	@37
Cattle—Extra	6 50	@7 00
Common to good	4 60	@5 80
Hogs	6 35	@7 65
Sheep	3 50	@5 50

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 80	@6 90
Wheat—Winter	89	@1 21
Spring		1 04
Corn	53	@62
Oats	42	@48
Mess Pork		18 00
Eggs		45
Butter		@39½
Wool	10	@45

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	4 80	@5 75
Hogs	6 65	@7 15
Sheep	3 70	@4 50

DO YOU WANT A Cheap, Clean-faced, Radical, Religious Paper, fearless and outspoken upon all moral issues?

Send for the

VANGUARD,

A paper that is for God and nothing else.

A world-wide range of correspondence. Neutral in nothing.

Only 75 cents a year.

Address C. W. SHERMAN, Editor, 305 N. 3rd Street, St. Louis, Mo.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED.

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.

C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

WM. W. FARWELL

Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.

76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

McShane Bell Foundry

Manufacture those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogues sent free. Address H. McSHANE & Co., Baltimore, Md.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

PATENTS NO PATENT! NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent FREE

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Send stamps for NEW LAWS. COL. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD

Attorney and Counselor at Law

79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

KNABE

PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y

How to rear and manage poultry. Send a ten-cent piece to H. H. Stoddard,

Hartford, Ct., for a copy of THE Poultry World, and it will tell you.

GET A MODEL PRESS.

Price, complete with Type, &c., $5 to $10 and up. Prints Cards, Circulars, Labels, Tracts, everything for Business, Schools, Churches, &c. It is very durable and rapid, and so simple that any boy can work it and earn hundreds of dollars a year. 12,000 sold. Send 2 cent stamp for 40 Page Catalogue, with gorgeous floral card and other work done on a Model Press. J. W. Daughaday & Co. Mfrs. 721 Chestnut St. Philadelphia

MODEL IMPROVED.

THE FLORAL WORLD.

A superb illustrated $1.00 monthly free 1 year to all that enclose this ad. to us now with 12c. for postage. FLORAL WORLD, HIGHLAND PARK, ILL.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address Dr. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres't. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 23. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1884. WHOLE No. 722.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.
J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Editorial Correspondence 8
Knights of Honor..... 8
THE WASHINGTON CONVENTIONS:
Address of E. D. Bailey.. 9
Resignation of Pres. J. Blanchard..... 4
CONTRIBUTED:
The Great Orator..... 1
Week-day Sermon..... 2
The Salvation Army and Secret Societies..... 2
Are Secret Societies Hostile to the Church?..... 2
From South Africa..... 3
The Query of the Lodgeville Church..... 3
Notes and Comments..... 4
Odd-fellow Prayers..... 4
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
Our Public Domain..... 7
AMERICAN POLITICS:
On to Washington; The Washington Movement; Illiterate Voters..... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
A Seceder at Work in Alabama; Jericho Still on Defensive; Unity of the Spirit; Don't Want the Testimony; A Word upon Several Orders... 5
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
LITERARY..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 12
FARM AND GARDEN..... 13
IN BRIEF..... 14
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

THE CONVENTION REPORT.

The readers of the Cynosure will be disappointed in not seeing the report of the Washington meetings in full in this number, as has been the uniform custom with other national conventions. We share their regret and can explain it in part by the slowness of the mails. Editorial letters covering two days appear in this number, but the detail report of the first evening only came in by Monday noon. Instead of giving so small a portion, it seems best to publish the whole together next week along with the addresses of Hon. Frederick Douglass and others.

Friends who have sent for extra copies of the convention paper will receive the next number.

A FORETASTE

of the full report of the grand meetings in Washington last week will be read with zest in the present number. The speeches and papers herein are well worth a second reading. But we must tax the patience of our readers for a few days before the best of the feast can be spread before them. For next week we can promise the report of both conventions and a good part of the addresses of Frederick Douglass, Gen. Birney, John G. Fee, Hon. Hiram Price, late Indian Commissioner and others.

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTIONS.

RESIGNATION OF PRES. J. BLANCHARD OF HIS NOMINATION AND THE ARGUMENT FOR HON. S. C. POMEROY.

To the Convention met in Lincoln Hall, Feb. 21st, 1884.

FRIENDS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS, MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN PARTY:—Soon after the election of President Garfield, and before his assassination, a large and harmonious convention in my own State, placed my name at the head of the Federal ticket for 1884, associated with a worthy and excellent gentleman, Mr. J. A. Conant of Connecticut.

I make no apology for advising and accepting the nomination. It was made thus early to assure an infant party, scattered from Oregon to Florida, that we were in earnest; and that the movement was neither local or transient. This has now been done. And though I felt my inadequacy to the post, I had seen one President of the United States plunge the country into war with Mexico to gain room for four new slave States, under pretence of "enlarging the area of human freedom!" I had seen another Democratic President send a U. S. schooner off the coast of Connecticut, to seize the Amisted captives, escaped by their prowess, from slave-traders, and delivered them up to their pirate captors! I had seen another Democratic President send governors to enslave Kansas; and when those governors turned Republicans, I saw him send Col. Sumner with United States troops to quell free State men; and then saw him sanction the Lecompton Legislature, elected at the point of slave State bayonets and all for Democracy and liberty! And, with no wish to dishonor the dead, I had seen another President still inaugurated in a condition which suggested that our noble National Capitol should cease to be a liquor saloon. And though I hope I was sufficiently modest, I thought, if, as in politics, to-day at least, no one "knows what shall be on the morrow;" if against human probabilities, I should in the conflict of parties chance to be elected, I still had hope that I might equal Mr. Polk in sincerity, Mr. Van Buren in humanity, Mr. Buchanan in patriotism, and Mr. Andrew Johnson in the principles of prohibition.

In March last (1883), the end for which you nominated me having been accomplished, I withdrew my name from the ticket, and nominated ex-Senator Pomeroy to lead us in the canvas of 1884, now at hand; leaving, however, the old nominations to stand till this convention.

These following, are a few of the many reasons for Mr. Pomeroy's nomination:

1. He was a successful free State leader when Kansas was the battle-ground of the Republic.

2. He harangued the surging crowds in Pennsylvania avenue, from Willard's balcony, while Beauregard's guns were bellowing against Fort Sumpter; and while Union patriots in this city were "Whispering with white lips."

3. He took the seat in the Senate then just vacated by Jefferson Davis, and sat there, and spoke, and drew bills, and voted, till we had again one country, one Union and one Flag, making a diversified general record, excelled by no Senator there.

On that night when our beloved and trusted Lee forsook us and took command of rebel troops Mr. Pomeroy went to President Lincoln and Secretary Seward and urged his prompt arrest; as General Jackson, had he been President, would have arrested him before he left Arlington Heights. It was by just such wise and merciful action at St. Louis, by the brave, loved, and lamented Gen. Lyon, that Missouri was saved to the Union, and rivers of fraternal blood damned up. And it is no derogation from those great and good men, Lincoln and Seward, to say, that, in urging that advice on that terrible night, when policy had failed and force was inagurated, Mr. Pomeroy better represented the American people, and was in that matter wiser than Lincoln and braver than Seward.

But these, though resplendant, are not the reasons why Senator Pomeroy should head our ticket in 1884.

In 1869, Mr. Pomeroy, then a popular United States Senator, was at Chicago, to receive some blooded cattle imported from England. He came into our first annual Convention in Farwell Hall, and spoke against the secret lodge in a clear, calm, statesman-like manner. He told us, that going up the Kaw river into Kansas, he was assured by friends that he must become a Freemason to save his life—that he could no longer depend on the government and laws to protect his person and property, but must join a secret order, some of whose members would murder him as a simple citizen of the United States, but would shield and save him as a Freemason! He refused to join the lodge. He decided to take the risk of his life under the U. S. flag, and is with us to-day.

That Chicago speech cost Senator Pomeroy his seat. That dark power which acts upon the assassin maxim, "Strike, but conceal the hand," soon found him guilty of corrupting Kansas politicians, by bribing them to go for the Republican party and a free State; a crime about equal to that of the English border farmers, who gave money to the Highland freebooters to hire them not to steal their cattle; and so corrupted the morals of those freebooters by bribery! True, Mr. Pomeroy was acquitted triumphantly by the Senate and the Kansas courts; but good men, whom an old Puritan called "God's silly sheep," lost confidence in Pomeroy and so put in men who, when they use money to carry elections now use it in favor of liquor and the lodge.

Mr. Pomeroy does not need our votes; but we need him; the country needs him.

As religion underlies everything else the Mormon and lodge question is THE question of this nation. Mormonism now lifts up its head and shows its fangs. It already controls one Territory, and is tightening its coils around others. At Salt Lake, during our war, Gen. P. Edwards Connor said to me, "Every Mormon is a rebel." They are rebels still. Theirs is the completest despotism that men and devils ever devised, except a Masonic lodge; and Mormonism is a lodge. Now to send Masons to suppress Mormons, is like what happened in Mexico when the Scotch rite Masons formed themselves into an anti-secret society to suppress the York Masons! It was like foxes suppressing wolves. Both Masons and Mormons owe, and in their books openly profess to owe, supreme allegiance, not to the United States, but to a Secret Empire of their own. How then can one convert the other to loyalty!

Now we want a statesman at our head who has felt the teeth of the lodge and has not flinched and will not flinch: and Senator Pomeroy is that man; and events have sanctioned his nomination. This Washington convention sanctions it.

Senator Pomeroy has suggested, in view of the vast and certain increase of our numbers that we now make no positive nominations until our National convention in Chicago next June, when the open wing of our Prohibition-Home-Protection brethren can aid us in selecting candidates. His suggestion is statesman-like and modest, and, perhaps, may be followed.

But if it is followed and no positive nominations are now made, I hope without fail, that the convention will notice appropriately the great good Mr. Pomeroy has already done us and our holy cause, by his signally able Chicago speech, by his judicious political advice, and by his consenting, when requested, to our use of his name.

And now, with a grateful sense of your kindness, in conferring it, I have only to return my nomination into the hands of the AMERICAN PARTY.

Very truly and very respectfully
Yours in Christ,
J. BLANCHARD.

THE GREAT ORATOR.

BY GEN'L J. W. PHELPS.

In notices of the death of the late Wendell Phillips the idea is again advanced that our Constitution, instead of being a positive compact in favor of liberty, was a mere compromise with slavery, giving slavery a covenanted right to grow and thrive, and possibly to assume the ascendency as the ruling power of the country. But there was always too much room for interested motive in this idea to give it any weight. It is absurd to suppose that our fathers ever intended to institute slavery, and it is doubly absurd to pretend that they accomplished that purpose by such an instrument as the Constitution, which breathes liberty at almost every sentence. The word "slave" is not even mentioned in it. The persons mentioned in it as "held to labor" consisted of three classes, apprentices, redemptioners, and slaves, and the return of these to their masters no more obligated the government to maintain slavery than the return of a rebel soldier to Jefferson Davis was an acknowledgment of the validity of the rebellion.

It is true, slavery was tolerated by the framers of the Constitution; but from toleration it proceeded to aggression, and from aggression to armed invasion. And from that moment it is idle to talk of constitutions, the law of self-defence being imposed upon the government by the rebels themselves.

The law of self-defence admits of no limitations; it must be equal to the emergency in the opinion of the party assailed. The only restrictions that the assailed party need observe are such as are imposed by the considerations of mercy and humanity; and these were all on the side of the prompt recognition of the negro's manhood in accepting his services as a soldier from the very beginning of the war. The delay to do so was but wretched prudery, a miserable mockery of moderation, which served hundreds of bad purposes to one good one.

No true man of sound understanding can doubt that Wendell Phillips in his anti-slavery labors represented the interests of the Republic; and the question must often occur to thinking men, how long the Republic can exist that puts off the recognition of such labors until they are paid by a tombstone. It is by moral enlightenment that the Republic can alone be maintained; but people must be quicker to see the need of reform, prompter to apply the remedy, and more discriminate in awarding the meed of honor than they have been in the slave-question, or their institutions are likely to fall into anarchy.

The long reign of slavery, kept alive by mercenary political interests, has led to a laxity of law, morals and manners for which no provision was made in the administration and settlement of the rebel war. The want of vigor in Lincoln's administration aggravated these evils instead of applying some remedy for them.

Education is the first need of the Republic. Slavery suppressed education; but Lincoln's administration made no provision against this great evil. He was controlled and misdirected by the councils of the lodge, a power that found its interest in passing off criminal procrastination as the virtue of moderation. Lincoln's administration did no honor to our public schools, nor did it in any way redound to the interest of education. The character of the officers appointed to the negro regiments which he finally accepted with reluctance, were not chosen in a way to do the least honor to education. It honored demagogues and misleaders of the people, and not such men as Wendell Phillips. And a course like this is called noble! Giving true men a back seat, and bringing bad men to the front is called "Christian magnanimity!" Leaving a war unfinished and exposing our citizens to the havoc wrought upon them by the Ku-Klux lodge, in which probably as many have fallen as during the war—this is called moderation!

Such teaching as this comes from the lodge, not from the church. It is fraud and deception practiced under lofty pretences. He who lauds a Phillips, and at the same time extols the Republican administration, deals in bad logic and begets moral confusion, in which anything may flourish except good and just ideas. The inconsistencies of the Republican party are numerous, and are becoming more glaring every day. They are evidences of dissolution, and show plainly that the party was never possessed of that moral strength and dignity which was adequate to the work assigned to it, and which the people supposed it to possess. The party is animated by the spirit of the lodge rather than by that of our American institutions. This fact must be acknowledged and acted on with decision and promptness, or that reform necessary to the life of the Republic will be impossible. Such a party may assign high places to a Phillips, a Garrison and other true men in the next world, but it has lost all power to honor them in this. No true man can prosper where the lodge holds sway as it now does in the United States.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Among the most remarkable of Christ's miracles is the healing of the dumb man posessed with a devil —remarkable, not because as put down in the calm passionless narrative of the Evangelists we can detect any element of superior power to that displayed in numerous other instances, for it is certainly no more wonderful to make a dumb man speak than to still the storm or feed five thousand with a few barley loaves but because of the malicious, self contradictory accusation,—"He casteth out devils by the prince of the devils," which showed that Satan was fairly at bay, and glad to have any weapon to fling, however pointless.

There are so many dumb Christians in the church that it becomes a legitimate question whether the arch adversary does not now some times take possession of our organs of speech, and whether he is not equally disturbed when the power of the Holy Spirit sets them free. But this latter thought is to be credited to Mrs. F., who had a story to tell me by way of illustration.

For thirty years the church in her native place had been without a revival. For thirty years (this being the period of life-long settlements) the pastor of that little country sanctrary had preached to his diminishing flock without so much as a stirring among the dry bones. That he belonged to the Masonic lodge may have had something to do with this state of affairs. Certain it was that the church stood a withered tree in the garden of the Lord till one day the sap began to stir in the dead limbs. A great revival was sweeping over the land and like the sacred stream of Ezekiel's vision it overflowed the desert places. Anxious souls thronged the inquiry meeting, and the evangelist in his temporary scene of labor, comforted and counseled: but one heart he could not reach to still one throe of its spiritual pain—a sweet, lowly, tender woman's heart, that a foolish shepherd instead of leading to the green pastures and still waters of salvation had left to stray on the Dead Sea shore of a cold barren morality.

"Cousin Sarah joined the church when she was quite young, and had always been a most consistent member," said Mrs. F., "but now for the first time she felt convicted of sin. She believed that her day of grace was past, and felt sure she had committed the unpardonable sin. Her agony was dreadful and we began to fear for her mind. One night she was sitting a little apart from the rest of the inquirers when Mr. F. came, and taking a seat beside her began to talk. He afterwards told me that he seemed to feel as never before Satan's personal presence wrestling with him for that soul. After he had talked with her a little while he inquired 'if she did not feel any better? 'Yes, Mr. F., I think I do, just a little,' she answered. 'Then,' said he, 'if you feel that the Lord has let even one ray of comfort into your darkness I want you to get right up onto your feet just where you are and tell us so!' 'O, Mr. F., don't ask me to do that, I can't;' she said. But Mr. F. insisted. He believed that the very effort if she could only be induced to make it would break the spell of the adversary. I sat where I could see her face, and I knew that she was passing through a terrible struggle. In a moment she was standing up, white as a sheet before us all, stammering and faltering, but she kept right on speaking and her face began to glow and shine, and her last words before she sat down were almost a shout of joy. Everybody in the room was weeping. The dumb spirit was cast out and he never entered into her again. She was the happiest and most devoted of Christians to the day of her death."

Oh, this dumb spirit that ties our tongues when they ought to be speaking for Jesus, that seals our lips in shameful silence before his foes! We ought to speak more of our joy in him, our daily experience of his goodness, our expectation of the glory to come. We need to speak more against sin. Can it be that the steady increase of worldliness in the church, her fellowshiping of Baal, her loss of Pentecostal power, is because so many Christians who know the right from the wrong are possessed with a dumb spirit? Let us pray that it may be cast out,—out of our own souls that we in turn may cast it out of the souls of others.

THE SALVATION ARMY AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

BY ELDER A. SIMS.

For some time past the public has been wondering at the great stir this body is making. If one-half of their converts are truly converted to God, they are doing more good than any other people in the land. One great mystery with us has been this: If the leaders and officers of the army preach against all sin—especially the popular sins of the day, and require all their members to renounce all maxsim, politics, fashions, and associations that are not strictly Scriptural, how is it that such vast numbers join them? To satisfy ourselves, we made enquiry of one of their leading men. We asked him:

"Does the army teach the sin of secret societies?"

"No, we say nothing against them."

"Do you allow members of secret societies to join your ranks?"

"Yes, some of our prominent members here are Freemasons and Odd-fellows!!!!"

The Michigan Holiness Record comes out with the following letter from the Salvation Army Headquarters on this subject. The editor says:

When we first met the Salvation Army and found the Captain in charge here to be a member of a secret lodge and in warm sympathy with Masons and Odd-fellows, we felt it our duty to learn the position taken by the army in regard to secrecy from Headquarters. In order to do this I wrote to Gen. Booth, the Commander in Chief, who has the same power in the Salvation Army that the corresponding officer has in the regular army. The following is his reply sent through Railton, one of his head officers. May the Lord keep all holiness people from endorsing or overlooking the terrible idolatry of secrecy.

THE SALVATION ARMY, HEADQUARTERS
101, Queen Victoria Street. London, E. C.
Jan. 4th, 1884.

The Rev. S. B. Shaw, Greenville, Michigan, U. S. A.

Dear Brother:—We are much obliged for your kind letter and wish every one would take the trouble to inquire of us in a similar way before censuring the Army.

We do not profess to direct the movements of the Army in any foreign country in detail as we think that each nation should have its own distinct national characteristics and feelings met by those whom God sets apart for it. Having spent myself more than a year in the United States, I am well aware of the strong ground taken by many holiness teachers with regard to secret societies but I had not then—nor have any of us here—any inclination to coincide with their views.

In this country we have not a word to say to our people on the subject of secret or trade societies; our experience in the matter is that, as in this country such societies very generally meet at saloons, converts get out of them in the natural course of things from very unwillingness to go to such places, or to associate with the men with whom they have associated previously. Yet at the same time, there is no doubt that many of our men continue to be connected with Trade Unions and some—I dare say—with secret societies. We know nothing of the matter, and do not concern ourselves with it, only urging upon every man that he must never allow anything as to which he does not feel clear in the sight of God, or which would lessen his devotion or usefulness.

We have no recollection of hearing Major Moore express any opinion upon the subject, and would recommend you to write him at his address: Lyceum, Brooklyn; but I should myself think it would be an extremely foolish thing for the Army to express any general objection to secret orders or trade societies, thus probably blocking the way of its good offices and services to the great mass of the working classes whom it is our duty to lead to Christ. We always insist upon putting out of the way every question that obscures that Great One; certain that any man who is once brought into proper connection with God will do right with respect to every detail in his life. RAILTON.

Truly, it is not all gold that glitters!

Uxbridge, Ont.

ARE SECRET SOCIETIES HOSTILE TO THE CHURCH?

AN APPEAL TO MINISTERS OF THE GOSPEL. BY REV. T. RICHARD GRIFFIN.

DEAR BRETHREN:—It is a demonstrated fact that secret societies have grown to be a power in Christendom calculated to seriously impede the progress of Christianity and measurably disfraternize the brotherhood known as the church of Christ. It is plainly observable that not only is the church injured by the malignant influence of secretism, but that our social structure is also verging toward demoralization. With malice toward none, but love to all, the writer in fear of God would ask, Can it be consistent with the true dignity of Christian manhood to submit to the degrading and silly rites, commonly known as initiation in these societies? Is a man who is in full possession of sense and liberty justified in kneeling before a fellow-creature and obligating himself to a prescribed mode of conduct under blood-curdling and unlawful oaths?

Are conviviality, absurd titles, and the pomp and vanities peculiar to these clans of such weight and great inducement as to cause a Christian to imperil his soul's interests by remaining in bondage to any one of them after realizing that the "light" sought for is not that which is Christ? To each of these several interrogations it is hoped that those who are interested may have the Spirit of God to assist them in coming to a decision.

How many of you, my brother ministers, have been made to suffer in one way or another by the influence, directly or indirectly, of this evil. Your prayer and class-meetings as well as business convention have been neglected because several of your officers were compelled to be present at the lodge on those particular evenings. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon," was declared by the Lord Jesus Christ in his sermon on the mountain; notwithstanding, idolatry in high places can go no further than is practiced by some of the infatuated devotees of these Christless bands as is evidenced by the strict conformity with which they meet the demands of their masters while the temporal and spiritual necessities of their church are contemptously ignored. Surely must Malachi have had this class among others in view when charging the people with robbing God of the titles and offerings that were his just due. But again, dear brethren, have you not been afraid to touch upon certain subjects in your discourses, or adopt certain beneficent measures in the economy of the church because of the imminent prospect of being hurled from your pastorate by some prominent leader of your membership, who was opposed to you and at a mystic word could summon sufficient followers around him to effect any desired object? If these are truths, we are indeed confronted by a powerful and subtle danger.

Brethren, the time has come when a studied neutrality is inexcusable, when cowardice before such an enemy is offensive in the sight of God. To you are committed grave responsibilities, and where the alternative of pleasing God at the risk of sacrificing our friends is presented, it invariably must be accepted. Let us then in emulation of the noble men and women who are raising their voices in press and pulpit against this crying evil, pray that the church may be purified and a brotherhood established having as its cementing principle pure and open love, sanctified by the Holy Ghost, himself bearing witness of our oneness in Him who is Father of us all by the spirit of adoption in Christ Jesus.

Let love be the motive power in our ministration to the sick and needy whenever found; remembering that we have been instructed by the very highest authority as to who is our neighbor. Let love uncircumscribed by iron bonds of secrecy, or unterrified by midnight orgies and unhallowed rites, sweetly unite us all as we journey along the King's highway under the piercing rays of the glorious center and embodiment of eternal truth, even Jesus Christ the Righteous, as with one accord we cry unto him, "Sanctify us through thy truth. Thy word is truth."

St. Louis.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

WORK AMONG THE MOHAMMEDANS.

Some time ago I gave information in regard to this work to the readers of the Cynosure, and they may like to hear more about it.

It appears to me the Christian world ought to be interested in this class of people, since they are doubtless descendants of Ishmael, the son of Abraham, the father of the faithful. His connection with Abraham causes him also to be a divine favorite. "Abraham said unto God, O that Ishmael might live before thee! As for Ishmael, I have heard thee; Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation." (Gen. 17). Abraham prayed in behalf of Ishmael his son, and was heard also, after which he circumcised Ishmael, as his son, as being in some way a participant of the blessings in and with faithful Abraham.

We know the Mohammedans have committed great crimes in regard to the Christian church, but the guilt of the Jews in murdering the Son of God, may be considered still greater, the more so because they were favored with a divine revelation; and yet great promises are made toward Judah, in connection with the coming kingdom of Christ. My prayer for the Mohammedans seems to be the more fervent whenever I use the prayer of Abraham for Ishmael, that he may live, and when I plead the promised answer which Abraham received.

While we were on the ocean towards Africa, God made it known unto me that we had to preach the Gospel to them, which we have done according to circumstances. I really love these people with a kind of love which God only can give. This is not at all the case with the other colored people, called the Hottentots, of whom there are also many in Cape Town. As I love the Mohammedans, which they perceive, so they, to say the least, generally respect me, and even some say that they love us, and show it too. God has even used them to supply our wants, in time of need, without their knowing it, for we make known our wants to God alone. The Mohammedans are generally despised by the Christians (so-called) in this land, and therefore working among them is not very popular, and not much support is to be expected from them for the work. Not one of all the denominations in S. Africa, at present, puts forth any effort to evangelize them. As Christ suffered in consequence of the love he bore toward humanity, so we, to some extent, have to fulfil in our flesh the sufferings of Christ, because we try to save these poor descendants of Abraham. Aside from God himself, we do not expect much sympathy in this difficult work. The work is exceedingly difficult, in view of the false doctrines they have been taught, and also the opposition of their own priests.

Some readers of the Cynosure will likely remember, that at a previous time we gave a favorable account of the daily meetings we held in their behalf. Several hundreds, no doubt, have attended these meetings, and the good which has been done to them will only be revealed at the day of the resurrection from the dead. Very often from forty to sixty attended our meetings, and many of them listened attentively to the truth, and showed, as we believed, signs of conversion; but an averse circumstance arose, which we may not conceal. After we had held these meetings about two months, their usual month of fasting came around, during which they take breakfast at about 3 A. M., and use neither food nor drink before sunset, after which hearty meal they attend their own places of worship, by means of which they imagine to advance much in holiness and in the favor of God.

Until the fast, our meetings were crowded with them, whereas, during and after that season, almost none appeared. Before the fast they said unto me, "Ouwe baas" (old master), which is quite an honorable title, "during the coming month we cannot attend your meetings, because we have to worship in our own churches, but after that you will see us here again." We have, however, good reason to believe, that the priests, during this month, warned their people against attending our meetings, as being dangerous for their religion, the effect of which was that they unanimously stayed away. Afterward, now and then, some came again, but they appeared to be afraid that they should be noticed by the others, and reported to the priests, for they are the willing slaves of their leaders.

Finally, on this account, our meetings being reduced to a few of the other colored races, we concluded to close them for a time, and I learned it to be the will of the Lord to make a trip in the country, to sell some books, Anti-masonic, and other religious books, and healing at the same time the sick by the prayer of faith, where I might find occasion to do so. English books, and especially Anti-masonic, sell very slowly in this country, since the Boers prefer the Dutch. The Lord blessed me in this tour, helping me to sell some very good religious books, giving me now and then a chance to preach, and also to heal some sick people, for whom the doctors could do nothing.

This glorious doctrine of healing is too much neglected everywhere. The majority of Christendom are used to having their bodies spoiled by poisonous drugs, and their money squandered away, which might be devoted to religious purposes. We may believe that this will not entirely be done away with before the coming of Christ, yet let everyone whose eyes are opened in this respect, do whatever he can to effect a reformation in this line. How blessed it would be if every man, and especially every Christian, would immediately make application to Christ, in case of sickness, to be healed by him, instead of resorting to medical men, which has very often expensive and fatal results.

After having been in the country for some time, I returned again to Cape Town, where we still live, and paid also again a visit to the Mohammedans. Yesterday a Mohammedan woman told me that they talked much about me at the wash-place, which is outside the city, and asked where I staid so long, telling one another how much they had been benefitted by my prayers for their bodily healing, and that they longed to see me again. Formerly I gave them medicine, for which reason they still call me doctor. Improvement seldom fails after I have prayed for them, which they appreciate, often asking me, in case of illness, to pray for them.

Yesterday I came in the house of a priest, who is very friendly with me. Not long ago he bought a book from me written by Rev. A. Murray, the title of which is in English, "Like Jesus." This is a very remarkable book, and will soon appear in the English language. I asked him how he enjoyed this book, and he said, "Very much." His son-in-law, living with him in the house, being sick, asked me to pray for him, and I prayed also for two others in the same house.

Some time ago I visited occasionally a sick Mohammedan, who asked me always to pray for him according to the present symptoms. While I was in the country he died, and I heard from his relatives that in the last he had still called upon the Lord Jesus for pardon. I find this faith-healing among the Mohammedans an excellent means of leading them to Christ, in whose name I pray for and command their healing. The Holy Spirit effects the cure, the result of which is an inducement to accept Christ as Saviour.

A few months ago I read an article in the English Christian, headed: "Medical Mission to the Mohammedans," and when I thereupon sent an article to that paper for publication, about the use of faith-healing missions to the Mohammedans. It was refused; God's way is counted inferior to man's way. Please pray for our work.

WM. HAZENBERG.

Cape Town.

A CONVICT'S ANSWER.

When the notorious James Robinson, or "Jack Sheppard," as he is known to the detectives, was sentenced at Philadelphia to three years in the Eastern penitentiary, he was advised by the judge to try to lead a better life, which lay entirely with himself. "Yes," answered he, "I worked three years in your State Prison, and I know as much about shoe-making as I do about watches. They taught me in your prison to be dishonest. My principal work was to paste leather and pasteboard together to make a thick sole to impose upon the public. The man having the contract was a Christian, a member of the church, and at the time I called his attention to the pasteboard business, he was foreman of the grand jury. They send me to the State Prison to make me honest, and that is the way they do it."—Sel.

—Bro. Joseph Kidder, P. G. M. and G. S. of the N. H. G. L. says it takes from $400 to $3,000 and considerable "dramatic talent" to start and run an Odd-fellows' lodge.

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

CHAPTER I.—In which the reader is made acquainted with some of the Lodgeville folks.

"Why, father Thompson! Did you tell the girls they might go to that ball to-night?" There was less of inquiry than of astonishment and reproach in the voice, and the little woman's eyes opened wide and looked keenly at her husband, who sat by the large kitchen table scanning the columns of the weekly newspaper as if a ball were the farthest of all things from his thoughts.

"Ball?" returned that gentleman, slowly laying aside the paper and elevating his spectacles, "they didn't call it a ball. Cad said there were going to be some 'doings' at the hall to-night and ventured the information that she and Debbie were going. I suppose I said 'all right,' or something of that sort."

"It is a Masonic ball," persisted little Mrs. Thompson, "and that Mr. Vallance is to wait on Carrie there. This will be the first time the girls have ever attended a dance of any kind. Do, father, put your foot down here and now," and the speaker fairly trembled with excitement.

"Oh—I—don't know, mother," in a deprecating tone, "their minds are set on going; let them go this time."

"Let them go this time! Why T-i-m-o-t-h-y T-h-o-m-p-s-o-n!" There was a long chapter of rebuke in this prolonged exclamation, which Mrs. Thompson would probably have enlarged upon had not voices in conversation been heard nearing the house, and giving vent to her distressed feelings in a whispered, "O dear!" she sought the room where her daughters, Carrie and Debbie, were arraying themselves for the event of the evening.

"I'm sorry, girls, you didn't tell me of this before," she said, in a tone somewhat severe. "You know you have never been allowed to go to such a place and that I would not have given my consent. It is not too late now to change your minds. Invite Tom and Mr. Vallance to spend the evening here."

"Oh pshaw!" came impatiently from the lips of Carrie, the elder of the two, "Pa said we might go. All the girls are going—Blanch Gillman and the Trowley girls and—"

"Which is, of course, no reason why you should. O girls! I had so hoped that—that—"

"That we'd turn to be of the goody-goody kind and eschew all such wickedness," interrupted Carrie. "For my part I think we're just as good as—"

"Don't talk to mother that way, Carrie," said the younger sister in a pitying tone. "If you don't want us to go, mother—" But just then a familiar voice came ringing through the house—"Aunt Tilda, where are you?"

It was Tom Rees' voice, who always called Mrs. Thompson "Aunt Tilda" since a day years before when she had taken him in her arms to try to soothe the little heart that gave vent to its sorrow for the dead lying in another room, in the plaint—"I wants my mamma, I do; I wants my mamma." From that day forth she had been to him "Aunt Tilda," and though the uncle with whom he had since lived had recently intimated that some time in the future he would be obliged to change this form of address, he put a stop to further teazing by answering promptly, "Like as not."

"I don't want you to go, dear," said Mrs. Thompson, in answer to her daughter's unfinished sentence. But the voice came up again loud and cheery, "Hurry up, Debbie," and whisking her hat from its bandbox she hastily fastened it on and hurried after her sister, who was already descending the stairway.

Mrs. Thompson stood for a moment or two in deep thought, then clasping her hands she sank beside a chair and poured out her heart's sorrow into that ear that bows down to listen, and when she heard the footsteps of her loved ones die away in the distance, joined her husband by the kitchen fire.

Mr. Thompson sat with his elbows leaning on his knees, his head in his hands, his eyes fixed intently on the glowing embers. Presently he spoke: "What do you think of Vallance, Tilda?"

At this question another occupant of the room, the only son of the Thompson household (a youth of seventeen or thereabouts,—quiet, some said a stupid boy, who never expressed an opinion unless compelled to do so. who seldom spoke at all, in fact, unless spoken to), looked up with a quick flash of the eye, and then drawing the paper towards him began perusing its contents.

"Oh, father, I am so troubled," was the indirect reply. "What are we all coming to? It reminds me of the passage, 'Because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold.' Here we are at the end of a three week's protracted meeting with almost the only ones who manifested any feeling on the subject of religion our own daughters, and now they go off to a Masonic ball!" And Mrs. Thompson arose and busied herself about the room unable to remain quiet under the pressure of nervous agitation.

"It is strange, Tilda, very strange. They sent us their 'biggest gun' and we expected something would be done. Now what's the trouble? I've asked that question a hundred times I guess and I can't solve it?"

Again came a quick sharp look from the eyes behind the newspaper. Mr. Thompson continued, "I can't make it out, Tilda, unless the Lord has forsaken this place altogether. This makes the fourth winter we've tried to have a revival and without any success. The place is growing worse instead of better. Think of that minister's grand sermons last week with a dozen or so to listen to them, and that saloon and billiard hall crowded. I don't understand it."

"And one of the prominent men in the church allowing his daughters to attend a ball directly after the meetings are closed," suggested his wife.

"I know it, Tilda, I'm discouraged. I don't believe I ever felt so wicked in my life. I had my mind made up that the meetings would accomplish something this year. Why won't people here turn out to religious meetings, Tilda? Why isn't somebody converted?"

Little Mrs. Thompson took several turns about the room busying herself with this and that, then stopping near her husband asked: "Timothy, how many men are there in the church who don't belong to the lodge?"

Another quick lifting of Daniel Thompson's eyelids and then, though his gaze was fixed on the words before him, it was evident he was awaiting the reply.

"How many men in the church don't belong to the lodge? Why, there's Hornely, of course, and Trowley, and—and—I guess that's all. Why do you ask, Tilda?"

"Because, father, I believe that hall over the saloon is a wicked place, too. I believe that lodge is a rival to the church. Can we expect that God will honor the labors of men who one night claim him as their master, and the next meet in a place where his name is cast out; where the most impious oaths are taken to bind them to secrecy and—but there, Timothy, it makes me almost angry to think about it. I believe our church must come out from the lodge, so to speak, before God will work through it."

"Pooh, Tilda, what do you know about it?" Now—"

"I think that is the reason, Timothy. Your lodge stands in the way of the onward progress of God's Zion, and all I can say is I hope something will be done to remove it out of the way."

[To be continued.]

ODD-FELLOW PRAYERS.

A correspondent asks that the prayers used in the Odd-fellow order be published for the satisfaction of all who are in doubt whether the name of Christ appears in them. We print below the prayers at the opening of a lodge and of an encampment, which are all the forms used according to the latest ritual, which is given in "Odd-fellowship Illustrated," sold at this office. It will be seen that the name of Christ does not appear, and that the use of the word "Saviour," representing one of the offices of Christ, as believed by Christians, is so attached to the name of God as to have no Christian significance, for the gods of the heathen all exercise the same office according to the teachings of their superstitions. The prayer in the lodge reads thus:

"Thou King eternal, immortal, and invisible! the only wise God, our Saviour! Thou art the Sovereign of universal nature, the only true object of our best and holiest affections. We render Thee hearty thanks for that kind providence which has preserved us during the past week, protecting us from the perils and dangers of this life; and for permitting us now to assemble in Thy name for the transaction of business.

We humbly beseech Thee, our Heavenly Father, to preside over our assembly, to breathe into our hearts the spirit of love and of a sound mind; and may each and all be governed by an anxious desire to advance Thy glory and ameliorate the condition of mankind.

Let Thy blessing rest upon our order, upon all the lodges, Grand and subordinate, belonging to our entire family of brothers. Let Friendship, Love and Truth prevail, until the last tear of distress be wiped away, and the lodge below be absolved by the glory and grandeur of the Grand Lodge above. This we ask in humble dependence upon, and in most solemn adoration of Thy One mysterious and glorious Name. Amen."—Grosh's Manual, p. 181.

In the opening ceremony in the encampment degree the following prayer is used:

"Heavenly Father, we pray Thee to look with favor upon this meeting. Guide us in our efforts to improve the time before us; let Thy care and the good we receive at Thy hands instruct us in our duties toward each other; and so direct all our acts that Thy name may be magnified now and forever. Amen."

NOTE AND COMMENT.

To reward with honors and profit those old Democratic leaders who led their followers into war and rebellion against the Republic, is like paying firemen for putting out fires which they had set themselves.

How long a step is it from the Grand Army of the Republic to a grand standing army? The organization of this great political, pension-getting machine is due to three formerly distinguished slave-power, Democratic leaders, Generals Butler, Logan and Sickles, for whose services the Republicans have given an immense consideration. Honors bestowed on such men are a discredit done to true loyalty.

When the interests of the lodge are concerned, secret society men will always be found drawn up in a line together. Senator Bayard, whose investigation into Southern outrages was so severely in favor of the Ku-Klux, and Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, are both in favor of American officers receiving decorations and honors from foreign potentates. They could hardly be otherwise so long as they favor the reception of the honors, titles and decorations bestowed upon American officers by the Masonic lodge. An idea of what Senator Hoar's opinion of good manners is, may be derived from his calling it "boorish" in Congressmen not to aid foreign potentates in bestowing their aristocratic titles upon American citizens. We can understand what a thorough hold the lodge has upon the receivers of its honors in the Senate when we learn that only two Senators voted against the growing fondness for titles and decorations. A Massachusetts Senator who receives his office from the lodge must needs find it boorish not to receive such honors.

One Dukes outrages a family, shoots the father, is acquitted by a jury and received into the bosom of a "reform" State legislature. Then the murdered father's son shoots Dukes, and is acquitted by a jury. Our Masonic press comments on these facts, but never once alludes to the agency that the Masonic lodge probably had in the affair. How many members of the first jury and of the legislature and of the American press are Freemasons? This is the most pertinent question in the case. Was not Dukes a Freemason?

If the army summoned forth by the people to save the Republic against rebellion could be incorporated into one single man, could the people say to him, "Well done, good and faithful servant?" Has that army removed obstructions to the laws? Has it restored peace? Is it safe for honest, loyal men to go among the Ku-Klux? Have not thousands of our confiding citizens been shot down there like dogs? Are not these men's relatives more entitled to pensions than tens of thousands who receive them? Have Senators Bayard and Hoar ever distinguished themselves by a protest against these foul Ku-Klux murders? Have not these murders been "ever concealed and never revealed" by the Senate, so far as any effective measures, remedial or repressive, have been taken against them?

The stout, good ship of Boston, the Columbus, was recently run upon the Devil's Bridge right in the full blaze of a well-known light-house, and was shipwrecked under circumstances of the most appalling loss of life and property. The captain is much blamed for the disaster. But what shall we say of those political leaders of Massachusetts who, in the full light from Plymouth Rock, are running the good ship Columbia right on to that devil's trap, the Masonic lodge?

The victims of African slavery were easily distinguished by their color; and so are the followers of the Republican and Democratic parties by their enslavement to the lodge. Vote against their leaders and you vote against slavery of the worst kind. The interests of the Republic would be safer in the hands of the freedmen than in the hands of those who are enslaved to the lodge.

The man who votes for a lodge-leader thrusts his own eyes into a Masonic hoodwink.

The tenacity with which some Republican leaders hold on to the idea of crushing Gen. Porter, after having honored all kinds of criminals, is like a woman who should hold on to the means of painting her cheeks with a healthy color after her virtue is gone. The dismissal of Gen. Porter is the only evidence of virtue that the Republican party has left. It has long since ceased to be a virtue.

Our political Jesuits who, under the guise of Know-nothingism, brought the lodge back into favor, appealed to native American sentiment for this purpose. But behold! The lodge is well filled with foreigners, and doubtless with Jesuits, who may control it; so that an appeal to native Americanism has resulted in subjecting the country to the rule of foreigners. Such is Jesuitry, and such too is Freemasonry.

The spectacle of a U. S. Senator bringing forward measures in the Senate for restoring law and order where some twenty years ago his distinguished brother had been invested with all the means necessary for that end; had failed to accomplish that end; had received high honors; had finally retired as too old for service, and is yet brought forward as candidate for the most difficult of all offices—such a spectacle is an evidence of party weakness and inefficiency that presents the Republic as in the last stage of wretchedness. The Generals of the Republic were furnished with twenty-six hundred thousand men and resources to correspond, for restoring peace, law and order. Why was not this done? These Generals have received all the credit of good work—why was not the work performed? If they failed to do the work then, what evidence is there that they would do it now?

Not until our Senators dare to pronounce that terrible open sesame—"The lodge!" right out plain—"The lodge must go!" the door of safety will never be open to the Republic.

OBSERVER.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

SAMUEL C. POMEROY,

OF KANSAS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,

OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible]intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

THE NEW CANDIDATE.—On Thursday last Pres. J. Blanchard presented his formal resignation to the American convention in Washington, which was accepted, and the nomination of Hon. S. C. Pomeroy was unanimously made subject to confirmation by a convention to be called by the National Committee.

ON TO WASHINGTON.

The great war cry or key note of the triumphant Union army as it marched onward to victory from conquering to conquer, was,

"ON TO RICHMOND."

To rebels it had the portentious death-knell sound in it. It came to them with no inspiration, except that which the desperation of a lost cause begets in a last and failing struggle.

"On to Richmond" meant the failure of the rebel cause. It meant disgrace and shame to its leaders. It meant bitter disappointment to its misguided patrons. But "On to Richmond" inspired the bounding hearts of every royal patriot, of every true American. It meant the end of the bloody, cruel war. It meant happy reunions of surviving victors.

ON TO WASHINGTON by the anti-secret, anti-clan, anti-liquor army means the death of organized secrecy, rebellion and monopoly. On to Washington by the temperance party means "Down with the liquor traffic."

ON TO WASHINGTON by this crusade of sturdy reformers means rescue to the nations from the combined power of secret societies and their powerful ally, intemperance or the rum traffic. To unfurl the banner of American freedom, to float its flag over the headquarters of these sturdy reformers, means victory to the cause of freedom, it means liberty to the captive, it means rescue to the victims of the liquor traffic.

ON TO WASHINGTON sends dismay through all the ranks of the secret, sworn, cunning foes of our nation's freedom. It means to give battle to the enemy in his headquarters. It means to watch the enemy, to withstand and expose his secret schemes of monopoly and rebellion. It means shame and exposure to those who strike a blow at our nation's liberties. It means protection of all the interest that are most dear to a free people. It means freedom and equal rights to equal merit.

Then rally, ye sons of freemen; rally once again around the standard of liberty. Marshal in the freemen's army and fight the battle of principle. Win a nation's victory over her secret-sworn foes. Break the cruel tyrant's chain of intemperance, and crush out once and forever the curse of intoxicating beverages. Then shout the victor's triumph, as homeward, heavenward you return for a glorious reunion.

JOEL H. AUSTIN.

THE WASHINGTON MOVEMENT.

There, too, the American movement has at least secured a foothold. The National Christian Association is in possession of a building and real estate within a stone's throw of the Congressional Halls. That means it is there to stay. A political publishing company has been chartered and organized, naming one hundred thousand dollars as its ultimate capital stock, for the purpose of shortly issuing from Washington an American party newspaper. This movement can thus not only reach the representative politicians and law-makers of the land but it can flood the entire country with literature. Nowhere else is lodgeism so brazen-faced as in the city of Magnificent Distances. There is the place to strike. And this is only the beginning of the end. By and by there will be a grand emporium of campaign supplies ready for use throughout the Union. Thousands of American party clubs will yet look to Washington for light. Her paper laden with startling intelligenees will make its weekly visits to hundreds of thousands of American firesides. What if the work does go slow; it is nevertheless sure. What if the lodges do look with disdain at the gentle zephyr stirring the fetid atmosphere so long undisturbed? That zephyr will become a political cyelone that will thrash the old parties to atoms.

Let the men who are working, hoping or praying not hesitate or falter. The darkest hour is just before the dawn, and man's extremity is God's opportunity no less in state than in church. Thousands of Americans will yet embark in a square business enterprise with such a mission in view. Who would not gladly risk a share in so noble and grand a work? Did I say risk; nay verily, truth is mighty and will prevail. A man never loses anything in the long run by venturing a few paltry dollars in any work that has right and patriotism in view. He is a very coward, unworthy the name of man, who would not invest a little cash for his principle especially when morally sure to win in the end. Let those who do not attend the meeting ponder these things and be ready to act as becomes patriots. And in the mean time pray that He who rules in the affairs of men and giveth power to whomsoever he will may lay bare his mighty arm for the cause of justiee and liberty against the workings of iniquity.—Am. Freeman.

ILLITERATE VOTERS.—In addition to a former note on the table prepared by Representative Willis to accompany his bill for Federal aid to education, this table shows that illiteracy holds the balance of power in fourteen Northern and all the Southern States. In thirty-eight States there are 1,871,217 illiterate voters. Only one voter in five can write his name. In the Southern States the illiterate voters in South Carolina are more than one-half; in Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Georgia, North Carolina, and Virginia, one in two; while Missouri, with one in nine, presents the best record. In the Presidential election of 1876, New York, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana, California, Nevada, Ohio, Oregon, Wisconsin, Illinois, Rhode Island, Michigan and Pennsylvania were ranged on the side of illiteracy. In the last Presidential contest thirty States of the Union, with 298 electoral votes, were again within the domination of sovereigns who could not read the very charter of their liberties. The majorities which they gave could have been overthrown by the combined vote of their illiterate voters, even if those majorities had been five as great as they were. In 1876 sixty of our seventy-six Senators, 259 of the 292 Representatives, were in the grasp of illiteracy. In 1880 fifty-eight of our seventy-six Senators and 292 of our 325 Representatives were in States and districts where illiterate voters held the balance of power.

The Pennsylvania Peace Society has formally protested against the decoration of the City Hall of Philadelphia with statues of military heroes, declaring that the practice of decorating public places, especially those dedicated to civil purposes, with monuments and statues of military men, is keeping alive the war spirit and obstructing the growth of a higher civilization.

—The programme of the Washington convention which was we suppose carried out in full, is given thus in the bills:

Wedneseday evening: Addresses by J. P. Stoddard and E. D. Bailey. Address on "Civil Rights" by Hon. Frederick Douglass

Thursday afternoon: addresses by Revs. B. T. Roberts of Rochester, N. Y., and H. T. Cheever of Worcester, Mass.

Thursday evening: addresses, "Driftwood in Politics" by A. A. Miner, D. D., L. L. D., of Boston and "National Reform" by T. P. Stevenson, D. D., of Philadelphia.

Friday afternoon: addresses by Pres. S. T. Scovel, D. D., of Wooster University, Ohio, and Pres. J. Blanchard on "Freemasonry and Frec Government."

Friday evening: addresses by Gen. Wm. Birney on Prohibition, by Rev. John G. Fee of Kentucky and Hon. Hiram Priee of Iowa.

The situation in Egypt is approaching a crisis. The forces of the False Prophet have taken Tokar, and it is now believed will invest Khartoum on the Nile. The British expedition has landed at Trinikat, and is advancing rapidly to meet the rebels who arc reported to number 10,000 in the vicinity. Khartoum is 400 miles from Trinikat. General Gordon is there and has conciliated the native tribes by proclaiming numerous reforms from the oppressive Egyptian rule.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A SECEDER AT WORK IN ALABAMA.

WALKER CO., Alabama.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I have been a close reader of your valuable paper for several months, and have concluded some notes from this far-off South will not be uninteresting to the friends of this great and much-needed reform. I am what is called in this country a Missionary Baptist minister. I have been a public advocate for temperance for religious considerations for the last fourteen years, but for the last three years I have taken the more advanced position—full and complete legal prohibition.

In 1868, through the influence of those I thought to be my friends (and yet think they were), I joined the Masons. I was disappointed in taking the first degree, but as I had begun, and being a minister it was costing me nothing, I concluded to proceed, scanning each step closely. So I went through three degrees. I then carefully investigated Masonic claims on me as a Christian minister, its obligations; in a word, the whole paraphernalia. I clearly saw that I could not live up to the obligations I owed to God and his Son, the church and the world, and those I had taken in the lodge. I therefore never attended another meeting of the lodge after the night I was raised to the Master's degree.

Moving into another part of the State I was asked by a neighbor if I was a Mason. I gave him the facts; whereupon he invited me to attend his lodge, telling me that the lodge had delegated him to make this invitation. I accepted the invitation and went, and found the lodge had decided to have some half-dozen funeral sermons preached for their dead brethren who had died during eight or ten years. They wanted me to preach one of these funeral sermons, and of course to eulogize Masonry. This I declined to do, which is the only time I've been in a lodge of Masons since I was by them made Master.

I of course have had but little to say against the lodge and nothing for it, until some six or seven months since, and now I only do my talking privately to select persons, generally Masons who are members of the church, and whom I believe to be really converted to Christ. At the present stage of enlightenment on this subject in this country I am sure that I can do more good in this way than by a public expose or opposition of Masonry, and I am laying the foundation deep and broad on the rock of truth, for future work.

Last fall there was a query sent to our Association from one of its members upon this subject, which caused no little flutter among Masons both in and out of the church. So you see this subject is getting some attention from some minds in this country, and I assure you that they are leading minds, too. BOAZ.

JERICHO STILL ON THE DEFENSIVE.

SABETHA, Kansas.

A Master Mason's widow entered the grocery store of another Master Mason (who also is a member of the quarterly conference, and class-leader) and said to him: "You may tell that man for me that he need not bring me that wood, as I have no money to pay for it. I'm too unwell to work. Oh, dear! I don't know what I shall do."

He replied, "You should not mistrust Providence. Have you no faith?"

She evidently had little in the Masonic lodge, which had done little or nothing for her husband in his last sickness, but swarmed like buzzards to bury him when dead, although the county bore the expense. This same class-leader carried the Bible at the funeral. "Wheresoever the carcass is there will the eagles (buzzards) be gathered together."

We had a county ticket last fall, and the papers here gave us the credit of having elected one man—the county coroner. They failed to see the propriety of our first record in politics—when a man, or party of men, are dead his services are needed to render a verdict as to what caused their death, and as both the old parties so long dominant may ere long be numbered with the dead, we think the election of coroncr was very appropriate in the American party.

A prominent business man failed here lately for between $30,000 and $40,000, having first ordered large lots of goods from wholesale Eastern firms, then deeded his real estate and made his assignment to his wife, mother and brother. Some of the car lots did not reach here until the consignors beeame aware of the situation and telegraphed, and thus stopped the transfer and saved some goods. Claims were received by our banks against him for many thousands of dollars. There may be nothing significant in the fact that two Master Masons, one of them the W. M. of the lodge, were appointed to take an inventory of his stock; but it becomes immensely suggestive in view of the fact that he is their "true and lawful brother Master Mason." You may rest assured that the fox is at home when his tail hangs out of his hole.

I have been importuned to join a G. A. R. post, but as it is not an open society, and is a secret society, and as such deserves the contempt of every loyal citizen, I could not entertain the idea of joining it. A secret society proceeds upon the assumption that a minority in this nation shall know all that is passing in society, while the majority must be so deceived as to the nature, or true character of secrecy, as to form a bulwark behind which it can hide and draw its supplies.

GEO. T. DISSETTE,
Seceded Master Mason and Old Soldier.

UNITY OF THE SPIRIT.

I am pleased with Elder Callender's article on the "Unity of the Spirit," which appeared in the Cynosure of Jan. 31st. The spirit is excellent, and the index fingers all seem to point in the right direetion. I wish to add a thought which may prove another way-mark pointing toward that oneness for which we all devoutly pray.

I presume it will be granted that the true spiritual church of Christ in any loeality is composed of the children of God in that locality and no others. It will be granted, too, that the visible or organized church ought as nearly as possible to embrace the same persons. Thus much granted.

The problem to be solved is clear enough. We are to gather the children of God in each locality into one body. But here we strike the breakers. The children of God are already gathered into the sect churches and each one is zealous for his own. If organic union is ever attained it must be on one of two plans. To all human appearance no other way is possible.

The first plan is to induce God's children who are in the sect churches to come out and unite in one common church. This is the plan usually adopted by church union men, so far as they have adopted any definite plan.

The second plan is to organize the children of God into one general church without requiring them to leave the sects of their choice. This appears to me to be the more consistent plan. If I acknowledge that they may be Christians while retaining their sect membership, and yet refuse to admit them into my church, by that very act I confess that my church is itself but a sect, a fragment cut off from the main body. I thus justly expose myself to the charge of building one more sect on the battle-cry of no-sect. But I rise higher than this when I plant myself squarely on the ground that every child of God proving himself such by his walk and conversation is entitled by the very fact of his sonship to all the privileges of God's house whether he belongs to one or a hundred sects.

It may be replied that they will not all unite, and I answer, very likely not. But if I organize a church on the true basis; if I invite all of God's children to unite without any condition whatever except that they prove by their walk and conversation that they are God's children, if they do not come that is their fault, and not mine. But if I organize a church and agree to take in any of God's children, provided they will leave their sects, that they do not come may be my fault and not theirs.

Let us adopt the Bible plan and leave results with God.

P. S. FEEMSTER.

DON'T WANT THE TESTIMONY.

DETROIT, Mich.

In January revival meetings were being held in the "Tabernacle M. E. Church." My friends told me that the pastor was a thorough holiness man. I went. The preacher is from Baltimore. He seems to be able and intelligent. The first night he insisted on making the Word of God prominent, as everything must be tested by it.

A woman, a stranger, told her experience. Her testimony was clear and Scriptural. When God sanctified her he saved her from the desire for worldly adornments, amusements, vanities, and everything contrary to the Word of God.

The pastor immediately arose and replied. He believed all she said. but he did not believe that any one present should get the impression that they would have to take such a course. If God should require any of them to give up anything, whether it were jewelry or their families, or anything else, they would have to obey. But he did not believe that they would have to do any such thing. A certain lady had to lay off her breast-pin before she could find liberty. But when she met the test, the Lord allowed her to put it on again. In all such cases it was simply a test of obedience. If faithful to that test, we might resume what we had given up. However, unless their hearts were on such things, they would not have to give them up. He had been exhorted to lay off his gold watch-chain and such things, but he should never do it unless the Lord laid it on him to do it.

After meeting I asked him in presence of the people if he did not believe that the Bible was the rule of our faith and practice. He said the Bible was all right, but its commandments were not binding unless the Spirit led us to obey. The Word did forbid the putting on of gold, but that was no law to any one unless their conscience led them to comply with the commandment.

He said to me, "Please do not mention such things in my meetings." Being reminded that I should obey the Lord, he said he did not want any such cranky talk there. "What!" said I, "Do you consider plain Bible, cranky talk?" He said, "Yes."

The next evening the preacher and a large number of the members went forward for prayers—"to get nearer the Lord." It was one of the saddest things I ever saw —still and dead! Bro. Hopson spoke with much freedom. It stirred them some. Suddenly the Spirit moved me to speak, and I told them what the Lord did for me. When I said I had been a Freemason the pastor whirled around in his chair and requested me to say but little about that. I told him if he but knew how near hell it took me and how much my peace of mind depended on obeying God, he would not dare interrupt me. He said, "Go on, then."

I told them of my miraculous deliverance from the clutches of the devil, and I was unspeakably filled with glory. The lodge men raged. The pastor sprang to his feet and said he believed all I had said was true. He presumed the Masonry was my test. But he wanted all to be careful not to get the impression that they would have to take such a step. He was not a Mason, but he was chaplain in an Odd-fellow lodge. Hereafter, nothing could be said in his meetings about lodges, dress, or anything else that would disturb the people. "If that brother ever speaks in that manner in these meetings again I will sing him down." I said, "Praise the Lord." "Well," said he, "if I do not succeed in that I will conclude that you have the spirit of the Old Boy!"

He closed the meeting and came immediately to me and tried to apologize. All he cared about was, he was afraid I would lead others out of the lodge. I told him my fear was that with such a preacher no such thing would happen. He asked me if I did not notice how the Masons acted while I was speaking. "Yes," said a woman, "they always act so when their idols are touched."

The preacher said the words "Father, Son and Holy Ghost," were used in the Odd-fellow ritual. Bro. Frey, who had been an Odd-fellow, disputed him. He then said he was sure the name of Christ was used in the printed lodge prayers. Bro. Frey denied it and he was silenced.

I asked him how he came to think that others would get the impression that they would have to leave the lodge, seeing I simply told my experience without exhorting. "O," said he, "that would be a natural inference."

"Holiness preachers!" Professing to believe the Bible, but really perverting or denying it! Professing to be ministers of Christ, but really enemies of the cross of Christ! The lodge is the school of infidelity and falsehood!

My brethren, are you doing all you ought to do to save men?

A. H. SPRINGSTEIN.

A WORD UPON SEVERAL ORDERS.

ST. PAUL, Minn.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A sermon was preached here on a late Sabbath on "Christian Fellowship and Secret Societies." The preacher (a M. E. minister) stated that fellowship could only be on grounds of equality and for a pure motive; that a person could go to many a strange place, but if he went there for a good purpose it was all right.

In a conversation I had with this brother previous to this he hinted that possibly Christian men went into secret lodges to carry salvation there, but I notice that regular attenders of these societies are all dried up and need healing themselves. He attempted to make a comparison between a person going in to see and pray with a saloonkeeper's child that might be sick, and a man going into a lodge for the purpose of offering up Christless prayers for his oath-bound brethren. It is strange what comparisons men will make!

He said he belonged to three secret societies, viz.: Good Templars, Grangers, and Sons of Veterans. The former was for the purpose of reforming drunkards. I was once a member of this order myself, in Ireland. If the ceremonies here and there are the same, surely the god of this world has blinded the eyes of anyone who would say that it would reform men to take four such degrees as those I took. These reformers sadly need reforming. The Sons of Veterans, he said, was a body of men whose purpose was to decorate the graves of those who were killed in the late war. But methinks if some of the old soldiers who laid down their lives for freedom's cause could see their progeny enslaving themselves by taking oaths contrary to God's holy law for the purpose of keeping their graves green, that they would prefer to be forever forgotten.

The Odd-fellows he believed to be a good institution because his father had been a very conscientious man and an Odd-fellow. An argument of this kind needs no refutation. As to Freemasonry, he did not know much about it, nor did he think any outsider did. There had been so-called exposes, to be sure, but they conflicted. At any rate, he said, the most pious man in their conference was a Mason, and so were two-thirds of the balance, which apparently settled the matter with him.

Ignorance on these matters is of the same kind that takes thousands to hell. People do not know Christ died for them because they do not want to, and the same about Masonry. This man claims he is led by the Holy Spirit, but God's Spirit cannot contradict his Word. "He that sayeth unto the wicked, Thou art righteous, him shall the people curse." Prov. 24: 24.

May the Lord hasten the day when Christians shall separate themselves from a people not zealous of good works.

H. AGNEW.

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON X.—March 9, 1884.—Paul at Corinth. Acts 18: 1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT.—I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee; for I have much people in this city. Acts 18: 10.

As Athens was the seat of culture, so Corinth was the seat of commerce in the south of Greece. The city, at this time the political capital of Greece and the residence of the Roman proconsul, stood on the isthmus which united the Peloponnesus to the mainland, and through it all land traffic between the peninsula and the rest of Greece must pass, while its two harbors, one on each side of the neck of land on which Corinth stood, made it the resort of seafaring traders both from east and west.—Cambridge Bible. Impurity was by no means the only vice for which Corinth was notorious. It was a city of drunkards; it was a city of extortioners and cheats. Corinth was the Vanity Fair of the Roman Empire, at once the London and the Paris of the first century after Christ.—Farrar. It is to-day a significant fact that while almost every vestige of the ancient city has disappeared, the doctrine of "Jesus Christ, and Him crucified," which Paul there proclaimed, is as mighty as ever in the salvation of every one that believeth.—Taylor.

"Aquila....Priscilla" (a diminutive of Prisca, which occurs in 2 Tim. 4: 19). It appears that Priscilla was a woman of marked ability, being not only mentioned as sharing in the hospitality of the family, but also in the theological instruction of Apollos. From the fact that her name is always mentioned first, it has been inferred that she was the more energetic of the two (Chrysostom thought it was because she was the more fervent in spirit), but it is a fact worthy of note that the two are always mentioned together, from which we may conclude that they furnish a happy example of harmony and sympathy in Christian life.—Abbott.

"Commanded all Jews to depart from Rome." Suetonius says that Claudius drove the Jews from Rome because they were incessantly raising tumults at the instigation of a certain Chrestus. Chrestus was a common name, Christus was not; the two were often used interchangeably; the pronunciation was the same, or nearly so; hence the surmise is not unreasonable that Christianity had already reached Rome at this time; that the Jews instigated riots against their Christian brethren, as in other places in the Roman Empire—Corinth (ver. 12), Berea (ch. 17: 13), Thessalonica (ch. 17: 5),—and that Suetonius, who wrote half a century after the event, formed the impression that this Christus or Chrestus was somehow responsible for the outbreaks, and therefore represented him as their instigator. The decree, whatever it was, did not remain long in force, for we find Aquila not long after in Rome (Rom. 16: 3), and many Jews resident there (ch. 28: 15).—Riddle.

"Paul was pressed in the spirit." We see from 2 Cor. 1: 19, that Silas and Timothy took an active part in the proclamation of the Gospel at Corinth. We see also from 1 Cor. 2: 3, where the apostle says that he was among the Corinthians "in weakness (referring perhaps, as some suggest, to some bodily sickness or weakness, 'the thorn in the flesh') and in fear and much trembling," that he was in a state of mind to need urgently the presence and sympathy of such coadjutors.—Hackett. Accordingly their arrival was followed by a fresh outburst of missionary zeal, and he bore witness with a yet more impassioned earnestness to his Master's cause.—Farrar.

"Be not afraid." He felt keenly the trial of seeming failure and comparative isolation. His converts came chiefly from the slave or freedman class, and those of a culture like his own, whether Greeks or Jews, were slow to accept his preaching (1 Cor. 1: 26, 27). And then, too, he carried, as it were, his life in his hands. The reviling of the Jews might any hour burst into furious violence or deliberate plots of assassination. The temptation of such a moment of human weakness was to fall back, when words seemed fruitless, into the safety of silence, and therefore the command followed, "Speak, and hold not thy peace."—Plumptre. Even the most eminent saints, and men endowed with an heroic faith, have had seasons of weakness and hours of temptation, in which they needed encouragement and strength from above: Abraham before Abimelech; Moses in the wilderness; Elijah under the juniper tree; John in the prison; Jesus in Gethsemane; Luther in his temptations.—Lange.

"If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness" (villany). The Roman judge's answer to the Jewish accusation against the Christian Paul was: "If what you allege this stranger to have done partook of the nature either of wrong (an act of injustice, fraud, dishonesty) or of wicked lewdness (a wicked crime), then I would have gravely considered the charge; but, by your own showing, nothing of the nature of crime is involved in your accusation.—Schaff.

"Reason would that I should bear with you." The very turn of the phrase expresses an intense impatience. Even in the case supposed, his tolerance would have required an effort. As it was, these Jews were now altogether intolerable.—Plumptre.

"Then all the Greeks." The better manuscripts simply read, "Then all took, etc." There is little doubt that "all" refers here to the Gentile or Greek populace, who, ever ready to show their hatred to the Jews dwelling among them, took this opportunity, when the despised people were being driven ignominiously out of court, of venting their dislike upon the Jewish leader.—Schaff.

"Sosthenes." Perhaps the successor of Crispus, or belonging to another synagogue, and certainly the head of the accusing party. It is very improbable that this was the same Sosthenes as the apostle afterward calls his "brother" (1 Cor. 1: 1.)—J. F. and B.

"And Gallio cared for none of those things." An often misapplied text. It does not refer to religious indifference to Christian truth, for there is no indication that any Christian truth was brought before him; he did not even hear Paul speak.—Abbott.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

Encouragement to Reform Work.

1. The dignity of honest labor. V. 3. At the present day there is a tendency to despise honest manual labor, yet here we see Paul, the acute logician, the eloquent speaker, learned in all the polished wisdom of the Greeks and skilled in the keenest subtleties of the Rabbinical schools, laboring with his hands. God for wise purposes has decreed that to attain the best results the labor of hand and brain must go together. His own divine Son worked at a carpenter's bench, and if we read the lives of the good and great of all ages we shall find that by far the larger part were reared in homes of honest toil. A man who does not know how to employ his hands usefully is but half a man; a woman who despises household duties but half a woman. As a rule reformers have been poor in their youth and obliged to labor with their hands. It was thus that their faculties of mind and body were strengthened and developed for their great work. Garrison, the friend of the slave, Gough, the apostle of temperance, and the noble champions who are now fighting against the lodge are illustrations of the fact that reforms always originate in and derive their chief power from the working classes.

2. God is with all faithful reformers. Vs. 6, 9–11. Only brave men and women have the courage to attack any firmly entrenched error, but the bravest of these sometimes get discouraged and feel that the odds are terribly against them. It is likely Paul was feeling so when God gave him this special encouragement. To human view Jewish bigotry and prejudice on the one hand, and a vast system of idolatry on the other, reaching far back into the mists of antiquity, and identified with every interest of pleasure or business, seemed like two great millstones between which he must inevitably be crushed. Thus it is now with the twin evils of liquor and the lodge. There are said to be to-day nearly 13,000 rumshops in New York city, giving a bar-room to every thirty drinkers in the community. But God is stronger than the liquor power, and he says to all temperance workers, "Be not afraid for I am with thee." Many people say, "Masonry is too powerful to be overthrown," but the Christian men and women who are laboring to put it down know better. God is mightier than all the forces of the lodge.

3. The Gallios of reform. V. 17, l. c. Gallio acted the part of a wise and just magistrate when he refused to be a judge in matters of conscience. It is only as a man that his indifference grows culpable. The temperance cause is now so popular that few people are willing to profess a complete apathy to it, but anti-secrecy finds twenty Gallios to one out and-out friend or opposer. On the farm, in the shop and the market, we constantly meet people who say "they do not know or care anything about Masonry." We find Gallios among ministers, editors and politicians, but these have still less right to be indifferent to such a great question, for they ought to be leaders and guides of others.

Light from the Word.

What prophet was a herdsman? Amos 7: 14, 15. Why does God never choose reformers from the rich and great of this world? 1 Cor. 1: 26–29. Name an ancient reformer who once got discouraged? 1 Kings 19: 4. What is apt to be the result when our public teachers are Gallios? Matt. 15: 14.

DON'T! DON'T!! DON'T!!!

Don't join the secret crew my friend,
Oh enter not their den,
Never give up your manhood
To be enslaved by them.

Don't seize upon their glittering bait,
Oh there's a hook within!
Now warning take, and rest assured
That all such oaths are sin.

Don't swear nor promise them my friend,
Oh don't be lured like Eve!
Ne'er yield thine independent will,
Their talk doth oft deceive.

OUR PUBLIC DOMAIN.

No price was paid for the lands acquired from Great Britain or ceded by the States. The purchase from France was made in 1803, under President Jefferson. Napoleon Bonaparte, who was then First Consul, acted for the French Republic. This purchase embraced all of Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Oregon, Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Indian Territories, and a part of Alabama, Mississippi and Minnesota. The cost was $15,000,000, besides certain liabilities assumed by the United States, which ultimately brought the cost up to over $27,000,000. This sum seemed at that time a very large one; but as the tract contained 757,000,000 acres, the cost was only a trifle over three and one-half cents per acre.

Florida was purchased from Spain in 1819, in Monroe's administration, for $5,000,000, paid in bonds on which about $1,500,000 of interest accrued before their maturity; so that the cost was really about $6,500,000, or $0 .171 per acre, as it contained about 38,000,000 acres. There were two purchases from Mexico; one in 1848 under President Polk, and another in 1853 under President Pierce. The first included California, Nevada, Utah, and part of Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado. It contained in round numbers 334,500,000 acres, and cost 15,000,000 or four and one-half cents per acre. The last, known as the "Gadsden purchase," included a strip of land called the Mesilla Valley lying in the present territories of Arizona and New Mexico, on their southern boundaries. It contained 29,000,000 acres, and cost $10,000,000 or thirty-four and three tenths cents per acre.

The purchase from Texas was made in 1850, under President Fillmore. It included about 65,000,000 acres lying in Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico, and cost $16,000,000 or twenty-four and four twelfths cents per acre. The purchase of Alaska from Russia was at the lowest price per acre of any land that Uncle Sam has bought. It included about 370,000,000 acres, and cost $7,200,000, not quite two cents per acre, or only one and nineteen-twentieths cents per acre.—H. A. HAIGH, in American Agriculturist for Jan.

What is the most popular form of government? "That," said Bias, "where the laws have no superior." "That, "said Thales, "where the inhabitants are neither rich nor poor." "That," said Anacharsis the Scythian, "where virtue is honored and vice detested." "That," said Pittacus, "whose dignities are always conferred upon the virtuous, and never upon the base." "That," said Cleobulus, "where the citizens fear blame more than punishment." "That," said Chilo, "where the laws are more regarded than the orator." "But that," said Solon, "where an injury done to the meanest subject is an insult upon the whole constitution." These apothegms of the ancients are interesting and instructive. They are all good, and have entered more or less into the constitution of all states. Law must partake of their characteristics. The very existence of law recognizes human responsibility, and is a strong argument against infidelity and in favor of the Divine right of Christianity. The sermon on the mount by the Great Teacher embodies the germ and elements of all morality, all good government, and all religion. The old theology said, "an eye for an eye," but the newer theology commands a kiss for a blow. And the newer is better.—Christian at Work.

Statisticians of London are a little surprised in a review of their figures to find that the reported actual wealth of the United States exceeds that of the United Kingdom by nearly $10,000,000,000. Taking into account houses, furniture, cattle, lands, bullion, etc., the United States is worth $49,770,000,000, while the other power has in round numbers $40,000,000,000. There is, however, a smaller average of individual worth here, being but $995 to their $1,160 per capita. The percentage of remuneration to labor is much greater here, being 72 parts, while it is but 56 in Great Britain.

A bill for a ship canal around Niagara provides for its construction in Niagara county, New York, to connect with navigable waters of lakes Erie and Ontario, and the beginning of surveys for the work within six months after the passage of the act. The location of the canal is to be made by a board of five commissioners, to be appointed by the President.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

In Constipation.

Dr. J. N. ROBINSON, Medina, O., says: "In cases of indigestion, constipation and nervous prostration, its results are happy."

The balsamic healing and soothing properties of Samaritan Nervine are something marvelous.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other standard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.7
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Conn., J. L. Barlow of Willimantic.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Kansas, P. S. Feemster, Pearlette.
Missouri, M. N. Butler of Albany.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
Michigan, H. A. Day, Parma.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Vermont, O. C. Bailey.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroe

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

S. E. Starry, Clarence, Iowa.
Jas. Furguson, " "
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa.
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa
A. Mayn, Promise City, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Baker, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perrry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans
D. A Richards Clarkville Mich

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches: Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.

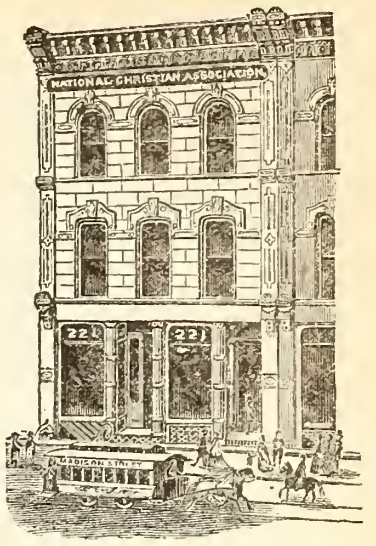
Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.' Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.



ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.

J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.

WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.,
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H. Ross and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.

CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.

INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.

IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Cor. Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J. A. Laird, Wayne.

KANSAS.—Pres., B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.

NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.

NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.

OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.

VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins, Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1884.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SUCCESSFUL AND HAPPY OPENING OF THE WASHINGTON MEETINGS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20, 1884.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—We have had a glorious night! The great hall was filled and the galleries full on one side. I cannot give a list of the good people here from abroad and will not begin. I did not reach the hall till after Mr. Stoddard and Senator Pomeroy had spoken; but I heard the singer, Mr. George W. Clark, who seems destined to realize the fable of the dying swan, whose last notes are the sweetest. Then came Prof. Bailey whose opening speech you will get. He had read it to me, and I told him it exceeded all of the many speeches he has read me in the years that are past. It was applauded throughout. Then came Mr. Douglass, pronounced by Gerrit Smith, "The greatest orator he ever heard." The crowd greeted him with long applause, and were simply entranced by his eloquence. If my strength permitted I could give an almost verbatim report of his magnificent utterances. But if I stand this exciting convention I must trust somewhat to the cold pens of reporters, whose sketches you will receive. Mrs. Douglass was there, blushing like a young bride, and as beautiful, while praises were showered upon her husband. Eight years of her girlhood were robbed from her by disease. Then health came back; and though she has the years of a matron, she has almost the aspect and mien of a girl. Some of her friends and relatives were offended at her marriage. But she enjoyed a triumph to-night, when the remote and delicate allusion by her husband to his marriage, was greated by long and joyous applause from that great intelligent and refined crowd of people, in the popular hall of this popular metropolis.

Mr. Douglass spoke on "CIVIL RIGHTS." But his brief general allusions to the lodge were terrific and crushing. "Innocence," he exclaimed, "seeks and rushes into light, but guilt calls to rocks and mountains to hide it from the face of the Omniscient Judge. And if any one has got anything which he refuses to have examined, I advise him to examine it himself, and abandon it."

Gen. Wm. Birney was there, son of Jas. G. Birney, "the first Liberty candidate." He speaks to us on Friday night in the interest of Prohibition.

I send you these scintillations to-night (the best I can do) for our next paper, from a meeting which has illuminated this metropolis.

FEB. 21.—I add a word this (Thursday) morning before mailing.

Those who have paid money for "headquarters" here will rejoice to know that no outlay has excelled it. There is quite a throng here for counsel and greeting: Mrs. Jones and daughter of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison of New York—I need a small volume to write them all—and all as happy as crickets in a warm winter's hearth. And I should fail of duty were I to omit that the two young women here, Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Tanner her counsellor and assistant, receive company and manage the house with signal ability and cleverness. Mrs. Bailey had but indifferent health, but she seems to bear a charmed life, and the increase at her table from four up to twenty and thirty produces no jar in the household, which like some sewing machines, seems to "run without noise."

As to Douglass my mind seems grown to him. If God has not chosen him for uses beyond mortal eyesight, then my spiritual vision fails me. I will try and write of him by-and-by. J. B.

SPEECH OF A. A. MINER, D. D., L.L. D., OF BOSTON—A TERRIFIC INDICTMENT OF THE OLD PARTIES.

Feb. 21.—This remarkable man, Dr. Miner, is a hereditary Universalist and facile princeps of that denomination in the United States. He is a tall, elegantly formed and dressed gentleman, and a large-hearted Christian man. Many years ago, I heard him in Tremont Hall, Boston, advocate the recognition of Christianity in the United States Constitution. Alluding to Garrison and Theodore Parker as ignoring and deriding the Bible, Dr. Miner said:

"I think, sir, the pendulum of toleration has swung to the wall and must come back. If men call themselves Christians, I think it is time they explain what they mean by Christianity, and stand by it, or else cease to profane the name by taking it, while they deny or deride the Bible which contains it."

I went across the stage and gave Dr. Miner my hand at the close of that speech, and have loved him ever since; nor can I understand how he turns the word of Christ out of its plain Greek and English meaning, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment," but on the supposition that his mind is swayed by his large humanity and love of ancestry and his strong abomination of "Orthodoxy," as misrepresented by some of its leaders about Boston, "who hold the truth in unrighteousness."

But O, such a speech as he has given us here! I can only outline it and give some paragraphs. He spoke on "Driftwood in Politics." "He said, "I have been, till lately, on the side of the Republican party, while that party was held together by the principle which produced it. It was then full of leaves and fruit and is entitled to the record it has made. But it is now the drift-wood of public opinion, thrown up whenever the stream forms an eddy around an office.

"As to its pretensions to be a prohibition party, the Chicago Convention which nominated Garfield, consumed, by the hotel clerks' books, sixty thousand dollars worth of liquor. How is that for a temperance party of moral ideas? (Great applause.)

The Democratic party he said "is in no danger of being mistaken for a prohibition party, yet there are strong, decided prohibitionists in that party."

"But will some one tell us what those two parties are doing for the country? Does not every man know that in yonder Capitol they stand watching each other like dogs about to fight; each hoping to turn the others mistake into political capital, and, by those mistakes, gain control of the government in the next Presidential election now at hand?

"The truth is, these two parties are sieves, and sieves can hold no water. A prohibitionist, elected by the Republican party, will be Republican first, every time. Both have survived the principles which formed them and are but mere ghosts of their former bodies in the grave-yards of the issues which gave them existence, and made them useful."

Dr. Miner spoke in the above strain near an hour and a half.

This able man has given encouragement that he will attend our convention next June, and we hope by all means that he will speak in our Northampton New England convention next May. We shall see and our readers shall know. J. B.

THE KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

Several inquiries have come in for information respecting this order. No ritual has ever been published, nor any effort made to secure one, so far as we are informed, since the society has not been regarded as having a very strong hold upon the lodge-loving classes, and having little influence aside from the expectations of insurance which it holds out. It is, so far as we are informed, a secret lodge with life insurance as its ostensible object; but answering as a training school for Freemasonry, inoculating its members with the lodge poison which too often inflames the victim like the tarantula bite, until he ends in ruin of soul and wreck of fortune somewhere amid the dark heathenism of Freemasonry. Though without a literature by which its principles might be made known to the public, its membership has increased until it has gained an unworthy recognition along with a number of similar organizations, as the Royal Arcanum, Chosen Friends, United Workmen, Foresters, Red Men, and the German and the Jewish lodges.

The activity of the legally incorporated life insurance companies is partly accountable for these organizations, by creating a thirst for some human dependence for the household on the death of its head, aggravated by the insinuating hope of receiving a large sum in return for a small investment. But it is found that to satisfy these expectations raised by the companies a round sum year by year is demanded, and soon becomes a burden which in the changeable character of American life is not easily carried. Here rests the popularity of the insurance lodges. They promise a moderate death benefit to be sure, but the expense is a small one, mutually borne. There seems no way by which the officials can accumulate such vast sums as are hoarded by the wealthy insurance companies of the East. This "mutual" insurance makes a fine sugar-coating for the lodge pill, and as the secrecy is reduced to a homeopathic proportion, thousands are snared by this form of lodgery who would repel the invitation to join the Freemasons.

The first argument to be made against these orders is that they are against the example of Jesus Christ and the precepts of the Word of God: in their fellowship with the ungodly, in their pledges or oaths of secrecy, and in their petty religious formulas by which, since they require no heart allegiance to the only true God, they are manifestly of the religions of this world.

But in their fair pretension of insurance they may also be shown to be fraudulent in character. This has been shown occasionally in these columns in years past, and lately in a reprint of a part of the following circular which some unknown friend is circulating usefully and we hope widely under the title "Co-operative Life Insurance. The whole thing in a nutshell:"

"The Knights of Honor now claim a membership of about sixty thousand who are to receive at death the sum of two thousand dollars each. Thus is created a liability of one hundred and twenty million dollars.

"The sum of twenty dollars per annum is their largest estimated cost to each member. Now thirty-five years would be an unusual average expectancy for insured lives, but for the sake of argument, we will admit an average expectancy of forty years. Sixty thousand members contributing $20 per year for forty years, would be $800 each, or an aggregate of 48,000,000.

"Now see what this amounts to.

Aggregate liabilities.....	$120,000,000
Aggregate collections from members...	48,000,000
Deficiency.....	$72,000,000

"How this deficiency is to be made up is the question that must be answered by all co-operative insurance companies of whatever name, before they can be relied upon by those desiring to provide for their loved ones.

"No insurance has ever proved permanently successful except such as has been based upon the average rate of mortality, combining at the same time the principle of compound-interest on money held in reserve against each policy obligation."

—Hon. S. C. Pomeroy was fittingly made president of the American and Prohibition convention last week. Rev. S. C. Kimball of New Hampshire, Rev. Mr. Brooks of Philadelphia, and W. I. Phillips, our N. C. A. treasurer, were made secretaries and in a long list of vice-presidents nearly all the States were represented.

—Bro. Isaac Bancroft, Wisconsin agent, has been called home to Monroe to attend his sick wife. He hopes that her illness will not be long, and that he can safely leave her for his work again. He urges that another lecturer be engaged for a part of the year beside himself—so much needs to be done in Wisconsin.

—Rev. A. Mayn, whose name has appeared in the list of Anti-masonic lecturers for some time, has lately removed to Bloomington, Indiana.

—Among the delegates to the Washington convention were Rev. Joseph Travis of the Free Methodist, M. R. Britten of the N. C. A. Board, and W. I. Phillips, Treasurer of the N. C. A. The party from Chicago was not so large as we had expected, and went on at different times and by different roads, as they could make the best arrangements for rates.

—A note from Bro. Feemster of Kansas anounces that the Olathe Convention, which was to meet next week, and for which some excellent preparation had been made as appeared in our last, is given up. This failure is to be regretted extremely. We do not understand that the blame, which should fall with some severity where it belongs, is attributable in the least to any one who has been identified with our reform, but to the personal spite of a clique leader in Olathe. Bro. Feemster writes thus of the matter: "It would be useless to detail the causes of the failure. Suffice it to say that the convention was a beast having seven heads and ten horns (more or less), that it was rising painfully out of a stormy sea, and mid the storm one of the heads was wounded unto death and the deadly wound was not healed."

—A letter from Bro. Heaton of Fairfield, Iowa, received too late for insertion in last Cynosure, shows that there is some good local work being done in Iowa. He writes: "We intend holding a meeting of our Association on the 22nd of this month in the Free Methodist hall in this city. Washington belongs to our side of this reform question; and while the Masons and the G. A. R. and other secret societies celebrate his birthday by dancing and carousing, we will have our meeting in the interests of home and human freedom."

—Past Grand Master Joseph Kidder, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of N. H. Odd-fellows, prophesies a falling off in the membership of that body on account of the difficult and expensive character of the new ritual. May there not be other and more fundamental causes of decline. "Coming events cast their shadows before."

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

ADDRESS OF E. D. BAILEY AT THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one part of the people to antagonize another part, a decent respect for the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. To me has been assigned the task of explaining the character of this convention and briefly describing the objects of the movement of which it is a part.

Several important reforms are represented in our platform. Distinguished advocates of each reform have been invited to address the convention. The gentlemen who are to speak do not all of them wish to be responsible for the final action of the convention, nor will the convention be responsible for their utterances. This is, for the time being, a free platform for free discussion, where every speaker may bring whatever of wisdom or understanding he may have and contribute to the enlightenment of every unbiased hearer. On this basis the convention is to be favored with addresses from some of the first orators of the land.

I am requested to explain briefly the principles of the American party. The Hon. President Julius H. Seelye, of Amherst College, says, "The American people are too earnest and have fought too many battles for principle to be content long to struggle where there is no principle involved." That party alone can have substantial success which grapples with the living questions of its day.

The American party directs its course in the sea of politics by the fundamental fact that "ours is a Christian, not a heathen nation." The enunciation of this principle does not mean a union of church and state. Neither does it signify a purpose to "cram religion into irreligious people. Our Lord told his disciples that "the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them." This describes accurately the despotic character of the governments which have existed outside of Christendom. Our Lord proceeded to announce a new principle. "Whosoever will be great among you let him be your minister, and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." To remember the difference between the governmental ideas of despotic heathen powers and democratic Christian nations is vastly important to our welfare.

We hold also that it is the province of a righteous government to legislate for the promotion of the best possible moral state of society. Now, "God requires and man needs a Sabbath," and the American party believes it to be for the highest good of the laborer to throw the sanction of law around the Sabbath. We are not ignorant of the fact that the Bible has been a great civilizer, and we therefore would advocate its proper use among the books to be studied by our youth. French atheism, in its madness, once abolished the Sabbath, and wrote over the cemetery "death is an eternal sleep," but the sea of blood in which the nation was bathed disclosed the danger of a system which brought decay to the moral natures of its citizens.

The eloquent gentleman who is to follow me (Hon. Frederick Douglass) will doubtless convince you that the plea of our platform for the civil equality of all American citizens is a living issue of a magnitude requiring the earnest attention of the best statesmen. The Democratic party has always made wry faces at "civil rights," and lately even the Republican party has fallen from grace. So long as the chief issue at every federal election is the sectional issue the negro must suffer. Whoever wins, he loses; whoever is happy, he is miserable. The Republican party kicks him from behind to make him vote, and the Democratic party stands in front with shotgun in hand to keep him from the polls. The Republicans love him before election because he is liable to vote for them, and the Democrats hate him for the same reason. The Republicans hate him after election because he wants to share the spoils, and the Democrats look on and smile. When new issues come before the people the negro will have a chance. Instead of becoming the prey of every party he may become an equal before the law.

But omitting other principles set forth in the American platform, I come at once to the prohibition plank. We believe "that the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question." In three States of the Union prohibitory amendments to the constitution have been submitted to the people. In Kansas the voice of the people was overwhelmingly for prohibition, but the leader of the movement was struck down by his own party. In Iowa the amendment was carried to the music of 30,000 majority, but a Republican governor and courts paid no heed to the voice of the people. In Ohio, in the face of Republican opposition, 324,000 votes rolled up for the amendment. These are significant facts. It is safe to say that these votes were cast by the best classes of citizens in their respective communities. The liquor traffic has had a fair hearing at the bar of public opinion. Its best arguments have been set in array by able men. It has argued that we have no right to legislate against their property investment, but the same argument which answered the property argument of the slaveholder has answered them. They have rung all the changes on the plea for personal liberty, but it is demonstrated that all personal liberty must be regulated by law. The six hundred millions of dollars spent annually in the saloons is a ruinous drain on the labor of the country which cannot long be endured. The social and domestic suffering have filled the land with groans and our hearts with sympathy. The moral degradation following in the wake of the saloon is a menace to free government and the precursor of decay. A reform of such magnitude demands an open field and a fair fight. Neither the Republican nor Democratic party is willing to assume the responsibility of this reform. Every movement of these parties is calculated to suppress the rising prohibition sentiment, which, they fear, will break their hold upon the voters. There is no more likelihood that either of those parties will undertake this great national issue, than that the Pleiades will leave their starry abode in the heavens to locate in Washington. The Democrats cannot be entrusted with the interests of the negro, and the Republicans cannot be entrusted with the prohibition reform. The only hope that the hundreds of thousands of prohibition voters in the country have of the triumph of their principles is in the formation of a new party where the full strength of the cause may concentrate.

Let it be granted that, in the matter of finance, legislation has been in the main wise; let it be granted that the existing political parties are able and willing to work out the tariff problem satisfactorily; let it be granted that civil service reform is making reasonable progress, it still remains a fact that these parties are unfriendly to the moral reforms which are rapidly becoming the paramount issues.

There is a class of institutions in this country which by their nature and tendency retard every reform and are inimical to republican institutions. When Charles Sumner came to Washington to enter the Senate he wrote to a friend in Boston: "I find two powers here in Washington in harmony, and both are antagonistical to our free institutions and tend to centralization and anarchy—Freemasonry and slavery; and they must both be destroyed if our country is to be the home of the free as our ancestors designed it." In the year 1793, a few days before the corner-stone of the Capitol was laid, the first Masonic lodge was organized in this city. The growth of Masonry in the country was rapid. Perhaps no more correct idea of its progress can be obtained than from the language of one of its advocates in 1825, thirty years after the first lodge was instituted in this city. Says Brainard: "What is Masonry now? It is powerful. It comprises men of all ranks, wealth, office and talent, in power and out of power, and that in almost every place where power is of any importance; and it comprises among other classes of the community, to the lowest in large numbers, active men, united together, and capable of being directed by the efforts of others, so as to have the force of cement through the civilized world. They are distributed too with the means of knowing each other, and the means of keeping secret, and the means of co-operating in the Desk, in the legislative hall, on the Bench, in every gathering of business, in every party of pleasure, in every enterprise of government, in every domestic circle, in peace and in war, among enemies and friends, in one place as well as another! So powerful indeed is it at this time that it fears nothing from violence, either public or private; for it has every means to learn it in season, to counteract, defeat and punish."

There are now more than ten times as many Masons in the country as when this was written; they are better organized and more powerful. There are men now living in this city who remember how treason lurked in these lodges in 1860, when the nation rocked before the billows of war. Sumner felt its power seven years before the war.

Long before that John Quincy Adams had said, "The oaths, obligations and penalties of Masonry cannot by any possibility be reconciled with the laws of morality, of Christianity, or of the land."

Chief Justice Marshall said, "The institution of Masonry ought to be abandoned." Wm. H. Seward, in an address with others, said, "The Masonic fraternity tramples upon our rights, defeats the administration of justice, and bids defiance to every government which it cannot control."

These opinions, shared by thousands of others, were the result of a long and critical study, analysis and experience of the institution. Freemasonry dreads nothing so much as investigation. Fifty years ago or more, in the State of Massachusetts, the legislature undertook to investigate its misdeeds, but the lodge hastened to surrender its charter a few days before the resolution was passed, in order to avoid exposure.

In this city a few weeks ago (Feb. 4,) a Masonic banquet was held, over which General Albert Pike presided. One of the toasts on that occasion was the following: "The philosophy and religion of Freemasonry, the foundation stones on which every religion must be builded." This is no unusual language. It is the claim of Masonry that it is a universal religion. Hence the popular phrase "nothing whatever to do with religion" is a myth. It is, in fact, a false religion.

The statement that it has nothing whatever to do with politics is equally false, for it is the boast of Freemasons that they are helped by it to gain political preferment. Another of the toasts says, "Its ties are not weakened by political controversy, by collisions of creeds, or by civil war." Rob Morris, one of the oldest living Masonic writers, says of the covenant, "No law of the land can affect it, no anathema of the church can weaken it. It is irrevocable."

No apology can be made for Freemasonry on the score of charity, for its record does not justify it. In the District of Columbia there are twenty-one lodges, with a membership in 1882 of 2,876. In that year the subordinate lodges collected $19,218.39. They expended for so-called charity $2,043.76. This, of course, was only spent to aid "worthy brothers." The figures will be a revelation to those who have supposed these lodges were devoted solely to charity. Less than one-tenth of the receipts were devoted to charity, and the average per member was only 75 cents. It may be interesting to compare this record with that of one of the churches of this city. The Congregational year book for 1883 says that Dr. Rankin's church in this city, with a membership of 661, contributed for benevolence that year the sum of $2,514—more than all the lodges put together. The members of the lodge paid on an average for benevolence 75 cents per member; the members of the church paid $3.80 per member. The members of the lodge were all men, above twenty-one years of age; the members of the church were men, women and children. The members of the lodge gave theirs as "dues;" the members of the church made free-will offerings. The business of the lodges in Washington is not charity, but politics.

We are compelled to oppose these lodges for the following reasons:

1st. The secret lodges must, in the nature of the case, hinder civil service reform, for the nature and purpose of their compact is to show favoritism to members of the fraternity.

2d. The lodge must hinder the progress of equal civil rights, because it is construeted on the caste-principle, by which those in the lower degrees are inferior in privileges to those of the higher degrees.

3d. Race prejudice must be fostered because the white lodges by constitution exclude the colored race.

4th. The cause of prohibition is hindered and defeated because the liquor dealers, who are generally Freemasons, are able to use the sworn ties of the lodge to influence legislation, control nominations and defeat justice in the courts; and because also the well known conviviality of most lodges encourages the drinking habit.

5th. The lodges must, in the nature of the case, delay impartial suffrage for it forever excludes women from its privileges for no other reason than because they are women.

6th. Fair, honest, open elections cannot be obtained so long as the ballot-box is controlled by men with whom secret, underhanded methods have become a life study.

7th. Every reform advocated is endangered by reason of the fact that men seek to control it who are in secret alliance with the enemies of the reform. Like a lawyer who takes fees from both sides, the lodges seek to be in favor with all parties that they may use all.

For these and other reasons the American party refuses to commit the reforms which it advocates to men who confess themselves in secret, sworn alliance with a system of secret lodges which avoid public scrutiny by hiding from sight. We hold no spite against Freemasons, but so long as the lodge is in a position to say who shall and who shall not be in office, what laws may pass and what may not, who may be punished for crime and who may not; so long, in short, as these lodges have a controlling influence in politics, we despair of the success of any important reform. But when the schemes of secret plotters are exposed, when the uninitiated learn to see the secret hand in the caucus and the court, then the power of rings, monopolies, and saloons will be broken.

We invite all prohibitionists to join our movement, because the success of the American party is the shortest road to the success of the cause.

We invite the colored people to join us, because the power of the Ku-Klux-Klan is in its secrecy and their civil rights will never be fully attained till the lodges are destroyed.

We invite the women to join our movement, because the secret lodges impede their progress toward the equal rights and privileges which are their due.

We invite the members of the churches to join us, because the principles they love are the principles we advocate. No political party ever enunciated sounder principles or advocated more important reforms.

We invite the laboring classes to join us, for the saloon and the lodges are robbing them of the honest earnings by which they ought to adorn and beautify their homes.

We invite the saloon-keeper, the secrecy lovers, the monopolists and the secret rings to oppose us with might and main until they come to repentance and forsake their evil ways.

A GOOD BEGINNING

has been made by the friends of the anti-lodge reform in self-denying, personal efforts for their paper. Seldom, if ever, have the responses been so numerous and hearty. Nobody will deny that this is a good work that should be kept up as much as possible throughout the year; but especially at this season are efforts for the list of the Cynosure successful, and they should be continued with zeal and determination as long as possible. Remember that our cause—that every good cause—prevails only by steady, PERSISTENT, PERSONAL EFFORT.

—Paudita Ramabai, the Brahman woman who has been lecturing on reforms among her own people in India, with such remarkable power, has been baptized in the Christian church. This conversion has caused much excitement among her Hindu friends, and, being a very gifted woman, with a great reputation for learning and oratorical power, she seems destined to exert a wide influence over her people.

—"Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn," but the trouble is, some oxen do not tread out much corn, and they need not be surprised if they are poorly fed. Keep treading out the corn, and see that it is good corn, and there will be something for him who treads it out. But stingy, begging ministers make stingy and covetous churches; and the Lord who "loveth a cheerful giver," abhors them both.—The Christian.

THE HOME.

THE GATHERING PLACE.

Life changes all our thoughts of heaven
  At first we think of streets of gold,
Of walls as white as snow, wind driven,
  Of lofty arches grandly cold,
Of gates of pearl and dazzling light,
Of shining wings and robes of white,
And things all strange to mortal sight.

But in the afterward of years
  It is a more familiar place;
A home unhurt by sighs and tears;
  Where waiteth many a well known face;
Where little children play and sing,
And maidens and the old men bring
Their tributes to the gracious King.

With passing months it comes more near,
  It grows more real day by day;
Not strange or cold, but very dear.
  The glad homeland not far away!
Where no sea toucheth, making moan,
Where none are poor, or sick, or lone,
The place where we shall find our own!

And as we think of all we knew,
  Who there have met and part no more,
Our longing hearts desire home too,
  With all the strife and trouble o'er,
So poor the world, now they have gone,
We scarcely dare to think upon
The years before our rest is won.

And yet our Father knoweth best
  The lot of sadness that we need,
The time when we might take our rest,
  And be from sin and sorrow freed,
So we will wait with patient grace,
Till in that blessed gathering place
We meet our friends and see his face.

—Sel.

THE THREEFOLD GROWTH.

God never demands growth of us except on the ground of an already existing faith. It is those who have been planted together with Christ who are required "to grow up in all things unto Him." It is those who have received the Lord Jesus who are required to walk in him—that is, to continue and complete the life already begun in him.

This continuance is considered under three heads: rooting, up-building and abounding.

I. The Christian's downward growth—"Rooted in him." All of strength and fruitfulness in us depends on the depth with which we strike down into the life and love of God. When the apostle summons us to the vast endeavor of measuring and grasping the love of God, he begins with a downward growth. We can only reach loftily upward and broadly outward as we strike deeply downward. Much depends on being rooted in Christ.

1. Our fruitfulness. A fruitfulness that continues in spite of surrounding drought and barrenness and death. Trials and hardships, etc., compel us to go down, to burrow in the darkness of solitary communion, to take hold on the secret resources of the Almighty. "He shall be like a tree planted by the rivers, etc."

2. Our strength. See the oak smitten by the whirlwind, its branches shattered, and yet itself is standing unmoved in its rooted strength. A godless man cannot be steadfast in affliction. He has no hidden hold on God by faith and prayer. Props cannot take the place of roots.

3. Our purity. "Consider the lilies how they grow"—in the midst often of decaying rubbish and black mud, yet themselves as white as an angel's wing. So ought a Christian to be in this world—pure amid surrounding impurity. But how can he be? He must reach down into God and feed on him. God can sanctify wholly.

II. The Christian's upward growth—"Built up in Him." The tree builds itself from the heart, and so must the Christian from within—from the root and principle of the divine life he gets when he is grafted in Christ—every part is developed out of the central source of life. Abiding in Christ this growth goes on day and night. By fastening our creeping affections on Christ who is in heaven he will lift us up. If the question is, what shall I do to grow in grace? we point to Jesus on the throne and say, "seek to come unto the measure of the stature of the perfect man."

III. The Christian's outward growth—"Abounding therein with thanksgiving." This is the branching out into all service and fruitfulness and praise. God's gifts are bestowed in exceeding abundance, that that abundance may flow out in abounding blessings to others. The great end of our faith and obedience is not to get our own souls saved merely, but to fit up for saving other souls. We get life for personal salvation and abundant life for the blessing and enrichment of others. The whole comprehensive secret of the blessed life is contained in the words, "Abide in me," and this can be effected by the diligent, humble, prayerful study of the Word of God. The heart in the word and the word in the heart. Christ in us and we in Christ. Such is the secret of communion of growth and fruitfulness.—Pulpit Treasury.

LAURA BRIDGEMAN'S PUZZLE.

BY REV. J. G. HALL, D. D.

One of the many touchingly interesting questions of this sorely-afflicted child to her teachers, was the following: "Why cannot God let wrong people go to heaven, and live with him, and be happy?"

To such questions a brief but all-adequate answer undoubtedly lies in this one emphatic word, right. It would not be right, morally right, for God to indiscriminately save the wicked with the righteous. Even here on earth it is not right for a person to be "generous before he is just." And far more, in the world to come, must the law of moral proprieties prevail. It would not be right for God, both in respect to his own nature, and the high interests of his vast spiritual realm, so to mix up and confound things as to suffer holiness and sin, loyalty and rebellion, darkness and light, to sit side by side in the heavenly seats. It would not be right for him to gloriously and joyously enthrone the murderer Cain along with the martyr Abel; nor the traitorous Judas with the faithful John. God himself must needs be just before he is generous. This is right. The opposite would be wrong. And to deliver us from these transfixing horns of our dilemma was the grand device of the Atonement; viz., "that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." It is Jesus who comes to the rescue of "wrong people," if they will but accept him. This, Laura Bridgeman herself at last saw; and, believing, was baptized in his name.—Am. Messenger.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

"He might have been President," said men of a statesman who had failed to trim his sails to catch the popular breeze.

"But," said the statesman, "I would rather be right than be President."

"He might have been a bishop," said one, when speaking of a man whose life had been filled with toil, privation, and reproach.

But a good conscience is worth more than a bishopric; and it were better to be poor as Lazarus, with the blessing of God, and a conscience void of offense, than to have honors, wealth, and titles, and lack the peace which God bestows on those who do his will.

Paul might have been set at liberty; but would he then have preached the Gospel in Cæsar's palace in Rome? Bunyan might have been set free from Bedford jail, if he would have promised not to preach; but would he ever have written "Pilgrim's Progress," and thus have scattered light and blessing through all lands and ages?

God has his own plan for every man. "He maketh the wrath of man to praise him;" and those things which seem to be adverse yet fall out for the furtherance of the Gospel. The best place for every man is the right place; the best work is the right work; and when a man does God's will, he may safely rest the results with him. He can make all things right. Earth has no honors which can compare with those that come from God only. And though a man's earthly heritage may be shame and reproach, unrelieved by the applause which men bestow, yet God can raise the beggar from the dunghill to sit among princes, and bestow upon the sharers of his reproach a crown of glory that fadeth not away!

Let those who love and fear the Lord rejoice that they are counted worthy to suffer shame for his name; remembering that they therefore both labor and suffer reproach, because they trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of those that believe.—Sel.

NEITHER BRANDY NOR MORPHINE.

When the converts on the day of Pentecost began to tell what God had done for them, certain cavilers present at the meeting sneered, and said it was "new wine" that ailed them. There are people enough now who will admit no better explanation of spiritual favor and high religious sensibility. A Southern surgeon, in the late war, was candid enough, however, though an infidel, to see something more than artificial exhilaration in a Christian's dying triumph.

One day, during the fighting around New Hope Church, three mortally wounded Mississippi soldiers were brought into the hospital together, who, by a strange coincidence belonged to the same church at home, and the same regiment in the field. What the surgeon could do for them was soon done, and they were left to the attention of the chaplain.

He went from one to the other, and found them all rejoicing in the sustaining love of Christ. Their happy frame of mind and dying utterances were so striking that he called the surgeon back to look and listen.

"How do you account for that, doctor?" he asked, as they stood near the cot of one of the men.

"Oh, that's the effect of the dose of spirits I gave him." replied the doctor.

They went to the second soldier, who lay with a smile on his face, whispering the sweet promises of God.

"What is that?" asked the chaplain.

"That's morphine. I gave him some an hour ago."

Then the chaplain took him to the third. This soldier had been a man of marked piety, and his joy as he met death was nothing less than a devout ecstasy. There was a foretaste of heaven on his face, and his last words were hymns of victory. This time the unbelieving surgeon had no reason of his own to give; he gazed long at the helpless but happy patient, and shook his head.

"Well chaplain," said he, "I must say this time that I don't understand it. That man puzzles me. I couldn't make him take morphine or spirits. He said he wanted to die in his right mind. I tell you chaplain," he continued with tears in his eyes, "I have no faith in your religion, but when my time comes, I'd give all I'm worth to be able to die like that."

That was about what Balaam said more than thirty-three hundred years ago. It is the involuntary prayer of all who despise the Gospel, but covet its last blessing.

It is said of Sir Isaac Newton's nephew, who was a clergyman, that he always refused a marriage fee, saying in a tone of pleasantry: "Go your way, my children, I have done you mischief enough already, without taking your money."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

WHY MOTHER IS PROUD.

Look in his face, look in his eyes,
Roguish and blue and terribly wise—
Roguish and blue, but quickest to see
When mother comes in as tired as can be;
Quickest to find her the nicest old chair;
Quickest to get to top of the stair,
Quickest to see that a kiss on her cheek
Would help her far more than to chatter, to speak,
Look in his face and guess, if you can,
Why mother is proud of her little man.

The mother is proud—I will tell you this;
You can see it yourself in her tender kiss.
But why? Well, of all her dears
There is scarcely one who ever hears
The moment she speaks, and jumps to see
What her want or her wish might be—
Scarcely one. They all forget,
Or are not in the notion to go quite yet;
But this she knows, if her boy is near,
There is somebody certain to want to hear.

Mother is proud, and she holds him fast,
And kisses him first, and kisses him last;
And he holds her hand, and looks in her face,
And hunts for her spool, which is out of its place,
And proves that he loves her, whenever he can—
This is why she is proud of her little man.

—Independent.

OPEN YOUR BIBLES.

LADDER. Read Gen. 28: 10–22.

And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven. Gen. 28: 12.

1. We use a ladder to climb to a high place. John 1: 51.

2. A ladder must be firmly placed. 2 Sam. 23: 5.

3. It must be strong enough to bear our whole weight. Ps. 89: 19.

4. We ascend a ladder step by step. Ps. 84: 7.

5. A ladder often the only way of escape from danger. Heb. 6: 18; 2: 3.

6. A ladder may be removed. Rev. 2: 5; 2 Cor. 6: 2.—Notes for Bible Study.

WHAT BOBBY FOUND.

Tom stood by the window, with his pug nose and freckled face pressed close against the not very clear glass, watching the cold, drizzling rain outside. Around the uneven hearth, before the still more uneven fire, were gathered Meg, Tifkins and Bobby trying to dry their dilapidated, rain-soaked shoes—or at least Meg and Tifkins were so employed—Bobby had none to dry.

The prospect from Tom's window was not very cheerful on the brightest of days, and it was doubly dreary on one like this, with the fog and dampness clinging to every old pile of refuse and lumber in the great mill yard, and the smoke from the tall chimneys baffled and choked in its efforts to rise, and constantly beaten back to the earth. It was like the lives of many of the people about it, but Tom did not think of that. He was used to the mill and all its surroundings. There were many families crowded into this long, many-roomed old house, and nearly all the grown people worked in the mill, and the children went there, too, as soon as they were old enough or could find a place. The troop of younger ones, always tumbling about in the old tenement or playing in the mill yard, were all expected to follow in the same course. Tom had been familiar with it all his life.

So he only felt the dullness a little without thinking about it, as he joined occasionally in the conversation of the three around the fire. They had settled the important question of whether they would "rather have the measles or whoopin'-cough"—with no great desire for either—and had discussed without settling the equally momentous point of whether they would "rather be a dog or a donkey;" that query was suggested by two unpromising specimens that had just passed along the muddy road, the one dragging a heavy-loaded dray, and the other trotting forlornly after it.

"Donkey," voted Meg gravely, "'cause if ye do get licked an' pounded all day, ye have a place to stay at night, an' supper reg'lar."

"Dunno;" Tifkins shook his head sagely, "dog, I b'lieve; 'cause they don't have to work an' they can mostly steal enough to eat—'taint wicked for dogs."

Then they dropped upon a topic that was always fresh and interesting. Suppose they had a hundred dollars—what would they do with it? This was their idea of wealth, and suggested such gorgeous possibilities—such grave ponderings of whether the better plan would be to "start a candy store or go to Californy"—that it required a long time to debate it thoroughly. One thing they all agreed upon, whoever had the money, Granny should have that new shawl. Granny was the one bright gleam of sunshine about the place. She lived in one of the poorest but also one of the cleanest rooms in the house. She was too old to work in the mill as her daughter did, but she kept the room, attended to their simple housekeeping, and earned what she could by knitting.

But Granny always seemed to have time to comfort the children who fell down stairs, and to find rags to tie up the cut fingers, and clean as her floor was she did not forbid the entrance of little wet feet when the days were cold and fires few. Besides, she had an old Bible with pictures in it, and she was ready to show it and tell its stories to all the children who would gather about her on Sabbath—a day when all her need could not induce her to knit, though many of the women spent its hours in doing up the sewing, ironing and other work that they neglected all the week for their labor in the mill. And now, when Granny had saved enough to buy the shawl she so needed, some one had stolen the money. "It was the meanest kind of stealing," the children all declared, for there was little probability that Granny could get so much together again all winter.

"And we haven't got any hundred dollars, nor any cents either," concluded Meg disconsolately.

Tom espied a bit of newspaper which the wind had just whirled from some unknown quarter, until it fluttered against the window. He drew it in, wrinkled and a trifle damp, and smoothed it out upon the table.

"Now there'd be some chance for your gettin' it if you could find this 'ere," he observed, slowly spelling out a notice. "Large agate, lost from a ring. Liberal reward to anybody that will return it to 508 Reed street."

"What's that?" inquired Bobby eagerly.

"Why some big gentleman has lost his agate, an' he'll give a lot of money to whoever'll bring it back."

"What place be they to take it to?" pursued Bobby eagerly.

"508 Reed street. Now Bobby's a goin'. right off to find it, he is," said Tom, facetiously. "I wouldn't wait to warm my feet, Bobby. I'd run right along."

Bobby did not answer. His little brown hand clenched tightly over something in the pocket of his ragged pants, and he repeated to himself the street and number until he was sure that he should remember it. He was the smallest of the group—a little thin-faced fellow with great, eager eyes, and now he had a secret that made them larger and brighter still. He waited until he was alone before he drew out to examine once more the treasure he had found the day before. He knew it was a treasure to him when he first picked it up on the street, but he had not supposed it was such a treasure to any one else until Tom read that notice in the paper.

"It's the prettiest agate I ever seen, but I didn't know as grown folks would care so much about it," mused Bobby, rolling the smooth, mottled ball from hand to hand. " 'Lost it from the ring,' Tom said; I suppose they shot it too far. I didn't know as men played that way. Likely they don't 'less they have real awful nice agates that cost ever so much. Any way I'm glad they did this time, 'cause I'll take it back and get the reward. Mebby it'll be lots of money, and won't I buy Granny the shall? I won't tell nobody. I'll s'prise 'em—Tom and Meg and everybody."

It was late, too late to go that day, and he controlled his impatience as best he could, wrapped his agate in a bit of paper, and kept his hand in his pocket so that he could assure himself every minute or two, by actual grasp, that the treasure was still in his possession. The next morning was bright and he started early, for it was a long way up town to the broad, handsome street which the paper had named; but the bare feet hastened forward cheerily, for he was full of bright hopes and plans. But when he found the number he sought he hesitated. It was a fine, large office, with "Attorney-at-Law" in gilt letters on the sign, and he passed and repassed before he could gather courage to enter.

"But I've got something he wants awful bad, so I needn't be afraid to go in," he whispered to himself at last, and in another minute he found himself standing in a handsome room where a number of gentlemen were laughing and talking. At first no one seemed to notice him, then a kindly face looked up from the pile of books and papers on the table and a pleasant voice asked:

"Well, my little fellow, what do you want?"

Bobby advanced timidly.

"Please, sir, I've brought home your agate," he said.

There was a general exclamation—"The agate!"

"Well, Judge, you are fortunate! I expected you would never see that again."

"How did you come by it?" inquired the one whom they called "Judge," while Bobby was thrusting his eagerly trembling hand into his pocket.

"Found it on the street day afore yesterday, but I didn't know whose it was or that anybody wanted it till Tom read that piece out of the paper."

"Well, you made a lucky find, my little man," said one of the gentlemen.

"Yes, sir," answered Bobby, joyously. "We lives down by the mill, an' we was all settin' round an' wishin' we had some money to buy shoes an' things, an' that new shawl for poor Granny, when Tom he read that piece, an' then I knew I'd got it. I didn't say nothin' 'cause I wanted to s'prise 'em, but I knew I'd got it."

He was busy unfolding the numerous wrappings of paper, and as he spoke he reached the last and triumphantly laid upon the table a large mottled marble. There was an instant of bewildered silence, and then followed a shout of laughter. The gentlemen remembered their own boyhood days well enough to understand how the mistake had occurred.

"Sure enough, we did use to call them agates! but that is hardly what you are in pursuit of, Judge."

Poor Bobby did not understand, but saw that there had been some miserable blunder, and he drew back abashed and almost heart-broken. He would have slipped out of the office a minute later, but the kind-hearted Judge called him.

"It wasn't what you little fellows call an agate," he explained, "but a precious stone lost from a ring on my finger."

Then he questioned a little further. The child's simple story and disappointed face had touched him, and as he looked again at the little bare feet he drew out his pocketbook and placed a bill in Bobby's hand.

"You did your part just as well as if it had been the stone I wanted," he said. "This will buy some shoes, and the shawl too."

But when the happy little boy had gone, the Judge looked around upon the circle in his office thoughtfully.

"My friends, I don't know what you think of this, but I mean to see more of that boy, and learn of some way to benefit those mill people. It has occurred to me if I can afford to offer so freely for the restoration of a gem of my own, I can spare something in searching for the jewels of my Master."—Selected.

WHAT OUR GOOD BOYS MUST LEARN.

To cultivate a cheerful temper.

To choose their friends among good boys.

To learn to sew on their own buttons.

Not to tease boys or girls smaller than themselves.

To take pride in being a little gentleman at home.

To be polite and helpful to their own sisters as they are to other boys' sisters.

To treat their mother as politely as if she were a strange lady, who did not spend her life in their service.

To feel a noble pride in making their mother and sisters their best friends.

When their play is over for the day, to wash faces and hands, brush the hair, and spend the evening in the house.

If they do anything wrong, to take their mothers into their confidence, and above all, never to lie about anything they have done.

Not to take the easiest chair in the room, and put it directly in front of the fire, and to forget to offer it to their mother when she comes in to sit down.

Not to grumble or refuse when asked to do some errand which must be done, and which otherwise will take the time of some one who has more to do than themselves.

To make up their minds not to learn to smoke, to chew, to drink, remembering that these things cannot be unlearned, and that they are terrible drawbacks to good men, and necessities to bad ones.

TEMPERANCE.

The communities in the United States which use the most whisky will be found to be those that use the most lager beer, ale and wine. The Anglo-Saxon parents who teach their boys to use lager beer, ale and wine as a beverage, will sooner or later find their boys have passed beyond the instructions.

An old negro at Weldon, North Carolina, at a recent lecture said: "When I sees a man going home with a gallon of whisky and half a pound of meat, dat's temperance lecture enuff for me, and I sees it ebery day! I knows that ebery ting is his home is on de same scale—gallon of misery to ebery half pound of comfort."

People are not generally aware that the egg product of the United States stands second in value only to corn and wheat, and very often surpasses the latter. During the last fiscal year, for instance, the corn crop was worth $480,643,400, the wheat crop $484,675,779, and the egg crop $475,682,889. The hen, in her relation to our domestic economy, is thus entitled to more respect than has commonly been paid to her.

General Sir F. Williams (the hero of Kars), says: "I am indebted to a gracious Providence for preservation in very unhealthy climates; but I am satisfied that a resolution, early formed and steadily persevered in, never to take spirituous liquors, has been a means of my escaping diseases by which multitudes have fallen around me.

Boston cast 13,526 votes in favor of no-license at the election held December 11; last year the vote was but 9,325, an increase of nearly fifty per cent. License carried, however, the affirmative vote being 23,050. The total vote for Mayor was 53,537; on license, only 36,576. Had the full vote been cast on the license question, it is believed "no-license" would have had a majority.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

Mr. D. R. Locke, who has been looking into prohibition in Maine, dives into history back to the time when Portland had a population of 30,000 and 400 saloons, and Neal Dow was mayor. He had made a fortune as a tanner, and was bent on ridding Maine of the rule of rum. He went to Augusta and fought through his famous Maine liquor law. Then, as Mayor of Portland, he published his proclamation. The liquor dealers laughed at him. A law so sweeping in its provisions could never be enforced in Maine, and they did not propose to pay any attention to it. They went right along buying and selling just the same as if there had been no law passed and no Neal Dow to see to its enforcement.

The date fixed for the removal of the liquor arrived, and found the business in the same condition as when the proclamation was issued. They did not believe that he dared to attempt the execution of the law. They did not know the man. Promptly at the time he moved, not upon the obscure doggeries, but upon the largest and most influential concern of the city, a vast wholesale grocery and liquor house. It must be understood that at that time groceries and liquor were inseparable. The wholesale grocery houses were also liquor houses, and 90 per cent of their trade, and by far the most profitable end of it, was liquor. He deliberately seized the entire stock of liquors, and, under the law, burst in the heads of the barrels and emptied them all into the gutter. That gutter never carried away so costly a flood, or one that wrought more good for the people. It was never before so useful a gutter. It had been built to carry to the great purifier, the sea, the filth of the city. It carried more death to the harbor that morning than it had ever before. It was a good one for Portland and a very bad one for the fish.

The trade was astonished at this bold action. Another and another of the great houses were attacked, and, in all cases, with the same result. And, when the leviathans were exhausted, the minnows were gobbled up. He moved upon the small bars and the small groceries just as he had upon the great ones, and in a week he had shown the liquor dealers that there was vitality in the law and that it could be executed.—Chicago News.

LOCAL OPTION.

There is something in the air. The people are becoming more and more in earnest in the matter of restricting the sale and use of liquor. We see it mentioned as a news item that eighty-nine counties in Georgia (it has 133 counties) have already adopted local option, which provides that the people of a town or larger district may by vote prohibit the sale of liquors in their limits. Maryland is also making a noble record for herself in this matter. In 1874 the legislature granted the right of prohibition to the election districts in five counties. Now it mostly prevails in thirteen of the twenty-three counties, and to some extent in others. The New York Independent says that the result has been so satisfactory in lessening crime and taxes, that wherever a re-vote has been tried, the majority has greatly increased. And then here in South Carolina, the temperance cause is gaining substantial victories. A tremendous but quiet victory was registered in Barnwell county for prohibition, within her county limits last week. The vote stood ten to one against license. The tidal wave rolls, and all good men will thank God for it; yes, thank God and take courage. —Southern C. Advocate.

PROHIBITION LAWS IN CANADA.

A striking result of the prohibition of the importation and sale of intoxicating drinks in the northwest territories of Canada has recently been brought to light, as the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway has been pushed westward across the prairies to the Rocky Mountains. In marked contrast with the anarchy and drunkenness that arose in the frontier towns along the lines, when under construction, of the Union Pacific, Central Pacific, Denver and Rio Grande, Northern Pacific, and the other great lines in the United States, peace and order have invariably accompanied the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway owing to the absence of the great incentives to violence and crime—drinking saloons and gambling dens. The remarkable rapidity of construction, reaching at times three or four miles per day, may in some degree be attributed to the entire prohibition of intoxicating drink to the workmen

LITERARY.

TEA AND COFFEE: Their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects on the Human System. By Dr. Alcott, with notes and additions by Nelson Sizer. 16mo., 118 pages; paper, price 25 cents. Fowler & Wells, Publishers, 753 Broadway, New York.

Dr. Alcott's work on the use of Tea and Coffee, first published many years ago, has done much to call attention to the effects of the use of these articles. In the new edition Mr. Sizer has presented in the form of notes many additional facts brought out by the increased knowledge of the subject.

Part First opens with the history of tea, showing its exhilarating properties, when it was introduced, the amount consumed, and its increase. It is shown to be a medicinal substance, and to have the effect of a powerful drug, also that it is a poison and produces a tendency to disease. The origin of the use of coffee is also given, with its effect both on the body and the mind. It is shown that some suffer more from the use of it than others. It is the opinion of eminent authority, that even a moderate use of these articles produces diseased conditions; and we would recommend those who are using either of the above articles with the thought that they are not harmed, and also those who have not acquired the habit, to procure this little work and read what is said on the subject. The publishers will send it on receipt of price, 25 cents, in postage stamps.

"Is our Civilization Perishable?" The question is asked in the North American Review for March, by Judge J. A. Jameson, who considers the several agencies by which the overthrow of the existing civilization might be effected. In the same number of the Review there is an article of extraordinary interest on "Agricultural Politics in England," by William E. Bear, editor of the Mark Lane Express. "A Defenseless Sea-board," by Gen. H. A. Smalley, is a description of the unprotected condition of the harbors and coast cities of the United States; and is an argument to rouse the people into the folly of expending millions in the preparation for war—a business which peaceable and Christian people have no need of. "Neither Genius nor Martyr," is the judgment pronounced upon the wife of Carlyle by Alice Hyneman Rhine, whose contribution to the Carlyle controversy is characterized by much force. In "The Story of a Nomination," W. O. Stoddard recounts the hitherto unpublished history of the means by which the nomination of Abraham Lincoln for a second Presidential term was brought about. Other articles are "Literary Resurrectionists," by Charles T. Congdon; "How to Improve the Mississippi," by Robert S. Taylor; and "The Constitutionality of Repudiation," by D. H. Chamberlain and John S. Wise. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York.

The March Century presents a fine portrait of Von Moltke the German commander-in-chief, accompanied by a well-written sketch of his life. The time will come when war heroes will be less popular than now, and there will be less attention to their exploits and to the education of the nation in the customs of war. "A New Washington" is a finely illustrated sketch of the origin, survey, ground plan and final improvement under "Boss" Shepherd of our national capital. The article has much that will interest our readers since the National Association has now a footing in the city and a building dedicated to the reform. Wayne MacVeagh's article on "The Next Presidency" has much interest as representing the ideas of the independent voter. "Old Public Buildings in America," by Richard Grant White, is full of tradition and history and good illustrations. Other illustrated articles are a second part of "The Cruise of the Alice May," and "Notes on the Exile of Dante." "The Suppression of Pauperism," by D. T. Means, "The Independent Voter in the next Campaign" by the editor and a discussion of the Temperance Question by three writers, one of whom is Mrs. Willard, editor of the Union-Signal, are articles which must attract some attention from reading and thinking people.

St. Nicholas gives its youthful readers some good opening articles on the mustangs of the Western plains, and the freaks of birds far out at sea both filled with striking and amusing illustrations. A continuation of Captain Mayne Reid's story of Patagonian adventure and natural history is continued and there is a second number on "Historic Boys." The magazine improves with years and evidently saves no expense for the amusement of young people.

The Memoir of Thurlow Weed by his grandson, Thurlow Weed Barnes, is just issued by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. The book is reviewed by the New York Tribune in an article covering nearly a page, and is criticized in that it represents the views of the great journalist and politician upon men and affairs as they appeared to him while under their immediate influence and before calmer thoughts had modified the judgment of perhaps an impulsive moment. In connection with the Autobiography, published last year, this volume makes a very complete history of Mr. Weed's life and public services.

—The real character of beer is being carefully considered in many quarters. In the latest issue of the American Reformer, published in New York city, there appeared a highly significant article, by a leading German lawyer of Rochester, for several years one of a large brewing company, declaring beer a deadly beverage, and giving his personal experience. The Reformer proposes to get at and to make public the bottom facts on this question, and invites all interested to contribute information, whether it helps the beer interest or hurts it. We shall look to our fearless contemporaries for good honest work.

THE CHURCHES.

—Bro. T. K. Ford, of Sullivan, Gerald county, Dakota, writes that a protracted meeting held at his house was owned of God in the conversion of a number of souls. Most of the friends in the vicinity are opposed to the lodge, tobacco and whisky.

—Elder W. R. Pruett, of Weston, Oregon, writes to the Rescue that he has found in the minutes of the Palouse Baptist Association, which convened at Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, June 5th, 1883, which contains the following resolution which was introduced by Bro. L. H. Collins, of Moscow-Baptist church:

"WHEREAS, many wise and good men, both in the church and out of it, believe that oath-bound secret societies are a deception and detrimental to the domestic, civil and religious duties and interests of our land, therefore,

"Resolved, That we recommend the churches and individual members of this association to examine the subject for themselves in the light of its own history and revelation."

—A brother residing in Amelia, Va., writes to the Cynosure his determination to change his church relation and wishes to communicate with the United Brethren as he wishes to take his stand with opposers of secret societies. These he believes to be working the ruin of the churches and the nation.

—Bellefontaine, O., is now the scene of one of the largest religious revivals ever held in that State. People from thirty miles around flock to the meetings.

—In 170 colleges of this country there are 35,000 students. Of this number 14,000 are church-members, 1,500 having professed conversion during the past college year.

—Rev. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, has been preaching to the students at Princeton, N. J. He was invited by the faculties of the college and seminary to spend several days in evangelistic work. The services were well attended.

—A dispatch published in secular papers announced that the buildings of the American Mission in Canton, China, have been destroyed by a Chinese mob. No lives were lost, and the missionaries are safe.

—It is announced positively by the Advance that Moody and Sankey have made an engagement to visit East Saginaw early in May, and hold extended services there. Their services in England are very successful.

—The revival at the Worthen street Methodist church, Lowell, Mass., which began a year ago, still continues. Of the converts, 146 have been received into fellowship, and about 160 on probation. Of late the interest has become more marked.

—The Second Congregational church, Denver, Rev. W. D. Westervelt, pastor, feels the effect of a series of revival meetings, and quite a number have been hopefully converted. At last accounts the pastor was ill, but the good work was going on.

—The wealth of Roman Catholic religious orders in France increased in the last thirty-five years from $8,600,000 to $142,507,200.

—At the February communion, the first since the installation of Rev. W. F. Crafts as pastor of the First Union Presbyterian church of this city, fifty-two persons were received into membership, of whom twenty-five were on confession of faith. Though no special meetings are held, conversions are occurring every week.

—An extensive work of grace has just been manifested at Linnville, Jasper Co., Iowa, in the direct benefits of which some three hundred persons have shared, either as converts or as greatly quickened in spiritual life. Among them is one man of intelligence and extensive influence, who has been well known, far and near, as one of the most pronounced and bitter opposers of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ.

—At the recent Baptist Missionary Conference in India it was resolved that all missionary agents, and all members of the churches, should discontinue and discourage the use of all intoxicants. Only three dissentients voted against the resolution. "Ten years ago," says the Indian Baptist, "probably half the members would have voted against it; but the total abstinence tide is rising among Christian men in India, as it is at home."

—At the January meeting of the Congregational Club of Minnesota, "Religious Progress Among the Scandinavians" was the subject of a very interesting discussion. These people from the north of Europe abound in Minneapolis, and in the State at large. They outnumber the immigrants of any other nationality. Their churches are largely Lutheran and they are a church-going people. Among them are many who favor a freer church polity, and a church life and an evangelizing activity more in accord with the spirit and enterprise of our own evangelical churches.

—From Millville, N. Y., a correspondent writes: "A meeting of Friends has been established in this village, as a result of revival work begun on 11th mo., 18th. It begins with thirty-nine members, where three months ago only three members of the society lived. Elizabeth G. Underhill and family have removed here, and she assumes pastoral care of the little flock. The Lamb and his followers have indeed had the victory in this community. Praise the Lord!"

—February 3d proved to be a day of unusual interest in the Hanson Place M. E. Church of Brooklyn. Over one hundred persons were admitted to the church on probation, several of them being men prominently identified with the affairs of the city. In the ceremonies of admission Dr. Peck, the pastor, emphasized the temperance clause of the rules of admission by saying that total abstinence was one of the unconditional rules of the church.

GAELIC SERVICES IN ELMIRA, ILL.

In a late notice of the opening of a public service in Gaelic in this city, it was remarked that Divine worship had been conducted in that language for years in the Scotch church in Elmira. This calls out a pleasant note from the pastor of that church. One of the editors of the Cynosure was reared in the vicinity and well remembers the sturdy Scotch youth who attended school in his village, several of whom, as the Turnbulls, have an honored place among the ministers of the United Presbyterian church:

Editor Christian Cynosure; DEAR SIR:—I find in your issue of January 31, reference made to this Scotch settlement. About thirty years ago a large number of Highlanders settled in the township of Elmira, county of Stark, in Illinois, and were very prosperous as farmers. They purposed to have the Gospel preached to them in their own tongue and succeeded. We have here a real Scotch Sabbath; no labor is attempted unnecessarily; no intoxicating liquor sold in the settlement. Young Highlanders of steady, sober character, will receive good wages and kind treatment from the farmers here, where they hire largely every year. Services in Knox church, Elmira, are as follows: Sabbath, 11 A. M., English; 1 P. M., Gaelic. Weekly prayer meeting every Wednesday at 7 P. M. Gaelic prayer meeting first Monday of every month at 2 P. M. NEIL MCDIARMID, Pastor.

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	2
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	3

THE

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

A NEATLY PRINTED SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY JOURNAL, UNSECTARIAN AND OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE POLE STAR OF REFORM.

EVERY Christian, every Prohibitionist and every Patriot should read it for the following among other reasons:

1. Because it meets the wants of the general public by giving in brief the latest reliable information on all questions of Reform, having the special object of exposing and opposing organized secrecy. Besides able editorial, contributed and selected articles upon this topic, which is of more than national importance, it has interesting sketches of progress and incidents from the reform lecturers in all parts of the country, reform news and notes, letters from the Old World, etc., etc. It is the especial organ of this movement in America—a movement which is sustained by the utterances of some of the ablest statesmen and divines whom the country has produced. Every person interested in either the family, government, or religion—the most sacred interests of humanity—is directly affected by secret societies, and needs to keep posted in this movement.

2. Because it is uncompromising on ALL questions of the day. On temperance, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, Mormonism, the Southern and Indian questions, civil-service reform, monopolies, the rights of labor, and every other question, its only aim is to be RIGHT, and advocate the TRUTH. It is hence FEARLESS and OUTSPOKEN.

2. Because it emphasizes the fact that political action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD and SPIRIT of God and that Christ must be acknowledged KING of NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

4. Because, in addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

It is now owned and published by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

at its office, NO. 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL., on Thursday of each week

TERMS: $2. per year. In clubs of five $8.75. In clubs of ten $15.

Sample copies sent free on application.

Address CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

FARM AND GARDEN.

ONIONS FOR FOWLS.

Give the young chickens a weekly feed of chopped onions. It helps to keep them healthy. A medium sized onion minced very fine is enough for a brood. If you have been enterprising enough to get early chickens, don't let them die for want of a little extra care. Give them one feed daily of rice and another of oatmeal. You can get cheap qualities of both. Let the other meals be any sort of kitchen scraps, occasionally a little cracked corn. Twice a week give some raw meat cut very small. At the first sign of gapes, treat the patient to a bread pill thickly coated with red pepper or a small lump of camphor. It may be necessary to repeat the dose. We have never known a second dose to fail of effecting a sure cure.—Toronto Globe.

THE DESTRUCTION OF OUR FORESTS.

Of a desolation which is recorded in history far back of the days of Roman or even of Grecian glory, we read that "a man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees." In the days when American forests were considered practieally limitless, our fathers were far too famous for lifting up axes upon the thick trees, and the resultant destruction is even now upon us, like the Philistines upon Sampson. This destruction comes upon us in many forms, most of which are, in fact, rapidly and terribly cumulative. Here is a beautiful stream of water, for example, which was a great element of wealth to the region through which it flowed. It might not only have continued to be so, but to have gained in usefulness instead of being either dead or swiftly passing away. The numberless little hollows on the hills where were the springs which grew into rivulets to feed it have been stripped of the moisture-economizing verdure with which the Creator clothed them, and so the springs are dry, and the rills no longer murmur their once glad songs of labor as they hastened down the valleys to turn the mill-wheels of mechanical industry.

THE CHIEF CROP OF THE COUNTRY.

What May is for grass and July for corn, these winter months are for the invaluable growing crop of boys and girls; and upon the care and attention given to this crop the future of the country, the lights and shadows of our own coming years, and the success of the boys and girls themselves, largely depend. The stock breeder looks carefully after the development and training of his animals, especially if thoroughbreds. Should not we with more solicitude try to make thoroughbreds of our children? Which do you visit most frequently and examine with most diligent interest, the developing animals, the grain fields, the fruit trees or the olive plants in the school-room? Do you personally know the trainer there—his manner and methods? What morning and evening attention do your children get, save to know that the chores are well attended to? Do you father, and you mother, personally know where they are in the evening hours, who are their associates, what outside influences are molding their characters? Do you know that they are developing as strongly, as symmetrically, as rapidly as they might?

It is not essential that young men and women be positively bad or obtrusively disagreeable, to fall short of what they should or might be. If we plant a tree or vine of the best variety, and allow it to grow without special attention and training, we know well what we shall find after a lapse of years. It may overspread a wide area of soil, with a useless mass of wood and foliage, yielding a few defective apples or ragged clusters of grapes, that are not poisonous, but such fruit is not in demand in the world's market, nor desirable for the home table. So the boy or girl merely left to grow, develops much as the neglected vine. They may never become vicious, and may even be spoken of as good at heart, like the half-barren apple tree, but are scarcely worth the room they take up in the world. —E. P. Roe, in American Agriculturalist for January.

EVERY FARMER MAY KEEP SHEEP.

Every farmer, however few the acres, may profitably keep a certain number of sheep, for not only in summer, but also in winter, will sheep consume fodder otherwise wasted. Many persons suppose that it is not feasible to keep sheep with other stock in the same pasture or feeding yard. It is not safe to keep sheep in the same pasture with young horses. Both animals feed on short grasses and also weeds, and playful young horses sometimes injure sheep by racing them. With cattle the horns are the only danger, and sheep seem to keep out of the way of them. While it is better that sheep should be kept by themselves, especially in winter, and in the case of large flocks decidedly so, yet when few sheep are kept they may safely be allowed to run with cattle in the pastures, and also in the feeding-yards in the winter. Indeed, sheep soon follow the cattle rather closely, especially in regions where predatory dogs are common, and instinctively so for protection. It is a fact that dogs seldom attack sheep kept with cattle, unless in the case of some old rogue, and then only when the sheep are found at a considerable distance, for the instinct of cattle is to attack animals found chasing or worrying other stock near them.

Seven years ago Charles Dodge, of New Brunswick, N. J., killed a horse through cruelty, and on the 19th of December, the anniversary of the accident, Mr. Dodge is haunted by the uneasy ghost of his dead horse, and for hours he hears the snorting of the animal and the clatter of hoofs upon the cobblestones.—Chicago Daily Herald.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multidude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

NEVER FAILS.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

A SPECIFIC FOR Epilepsy, Spasms, Convulsions, Falling Sickness, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Syphillis, Scrofula, Kings Evil, Ugly Blood Diseases, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Sick Headache, Rheumatism, Nervous Weakness, Brain Worry, Blood Sores, Biliousness, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Kidney Troubles and Irregularities. $1.50.

Sample Testimonials.

"Samaritan Nervine is doing wonders." Dr. J. O. McLemoin, Alexander City, Ala.

"I feel it my duty to recommend it." Dr. D. F. Laughlin, Clyde, Kansas.

"It cured where physicians failed." Rev. J. A. Edie, Beaver, Pa.

☞ Correspondence freely answered. ☜

For testimonials and circulars send stamp.

The Dr. S. A. Richmond Med. Co., St. Joseph, Mo.

Sold by all Druggists. (17)

DO YOU WANT A Cheap, Clean-faced, Radical, Religious Paper, fearless and outspoken upon all moral issues?

Send for the

VANGUARD,

A paper that is for God and nothing else.

A world-wide range of correspondence. Neutral in nothing.

Only 75 cents a year.

Address C. W. SHERMAN, Editor, 305 N. 3rd Street, St. Louis, Mo.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and ACUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,

BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

☞ The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 831 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

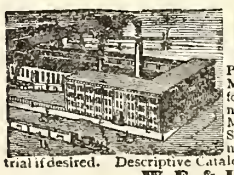
THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.

C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

WM. W. FARWELL

Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.



76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD

Attorney and Counselor at Law

79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

IT PAYS to sell our Hand Rubber Stamps. Samples free. FOLIAMBE & CO., Cleveland, Ohio.

BARNES'

Patent Foot and Steam Power Machinery. Complete outfits for Actual Work-shop Business. Lathes for Wood or Metal, Circular Saws, Scroll Saws, Formers, Mortisers, Tenoners, etc., etc. Machines on trial if desired. Descriptive Catalogue and Price List Free.

W. F. & JOHN BARNES,

No. 127 Ruby Street, Rockford, Ill.

Sabbath Bells FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

SOCIAL MEETINGS, ETC.

'84 LATEST BOOK OUT '84

All we ask of parties wishing new books for their Sunday Schools, is that they send for a sample copy of SABBATH BELLS before adopting any other. IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF. What people say who have the book:

"Is unusually bright in stirring and joyful songs."
"Is a very superior book."
"A grand Work."
"Its songs are Golden."
"In my judgement, I have never examined a better book"
"The quality of songs together with its new and convenient arrangement make it a most desirable work."
"An examination proves to anyone its superior merit."

Single copy 35 cents; per dozen $3.60. One sample copy will be sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents. Is printed in both round and character notes.

Address FIRESIDE FRIEND PUB. CO.
Springfield, Ohio

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE.
R. S. & A. P. LACEY,
Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.

Send description of your Invention. L. BINGHAM. Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY. Proprietor, Wheaton Ill.

General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best. STRAW, BLACK CAP, GOOSE BERRIES, RASP GRAPES. and other Small Fruits.

Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

T. HUDSON J. L. STRATTON

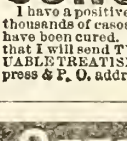
—Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of—

HARDWOOD LUMBER.

Have on hand a large amount of Dry Ash, Red and White Oak, Hickory, and Basswood.

Prompt attention given to orders and satisfaction guaranteed. KALAMAZOO, MICH.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS, WHEATON COLLEGE.



Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.

MRS. S. H. NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in the schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address

MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

McShane Bell Foundry

Manufacture those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogues sent free. Address

H. MCSHANE & CO., Baltimore, Md.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK

Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Peter Henderson & Co's SEEDS AND PLANTS

COLLECTION OF

embraces every desirable Novelty of the season, as well as all standard kinds. A special feature for 1884 is, that you can for $5.00 select Seeds or Plants to that value from their Catalogue, and have included, without charge, a copy of Peter Henderson's New Book, "Garden and Farm Topics," a work of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a steel portrait of the author. The price of the book alone is $1.50. Catalogue of "Everything for the Garden," giving details, free on application.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

IN BRIEF.

A Parisian lady called on her milliner the other day, regarding the character of a servant. The respectable appearance of the latter was beyond questioning. "But is she honest?" asked the lady. "I am not so certain about that," replied the milliner. "I have sent her to you with a bill a dozen times, and she has never given me the money."

Lawyer: "You say you made an examination of the premises. What did you find?" Witness: "Oh, nothing of consequence; a beggarly account of empty boxes, as Shakespeare says." Lawyer: "Never mind what Shakespeare says. He will be summoned and testify for himself if he knows anything about the case."

A granite obelisk, twelve feet eleven inches high, with a pedestal making the structure eighteen feet high, has been placed on the grave of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello in compliance with a resolution of Congress. The inscription, composed by Mr. Jefferson and placed according to his directions, is: "Here was buried—Thomas Jefferson—Author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the Statute of Virginia—for—religious freedom—and further of the University of Virginia." Upon the die are the words, "Born April 2, 1743, O. S.—Died July 4, 1826." The cost was $8,352, or $1,648 less than the appropriation.

A clergyman who owns a farm found his ploughman sitting on his plough resting his horses. Quoth the clergyman: "John, wouldn't it be a good plan for you to have a scythe here and be cutting a few bushes along the fences while the horses are resting a short time?" "Yes, sir," said John; "and wadn't it be weel for you tae hae a tub o' tatties in the poopit, and, when the folks were singin' to peel them awhile to be ready for the pat?"

AN ABSURD APOLOGY FOR SELFISHNESS.—The Rev. Phillips Brooke says: "Some of you are saying in your hearts, 'There are heathen enough at home. Let us convert them before we go to China.' That plea we all certainly know, and I think that it sounds more cheap and more shameful every year. What can be more shameful than to make the imperfection of our Christianity at home an excuse for not doing our work abroad? It is as shameless as it is shameful. It pleads for exemption and indulgence on the ground of its own neglect and sin. It is like the murderer of his father asking the judge to have pity on his orphanhood. Even those who make such a plea feel, I think, how unheroic it is."

SING A SONG OF SIXPENCE.—You all know this rhyme; but have you ever read what it is meant for? The four-and-twenty blackbirds represent the twenty-four hours. The bottom of the pie is the world, while the top crust is the sky that over-arches it. The opening of the pie is day-dawn, when the birds begin to sing, and surely such a sight is fit for a king. The king who is represented as sitting in his parlor counting out his money, is the sun, while the gold pieces that slip through his fingers as he counts them are the golden sunshine. The queen who sits in the dark kitchen is the moon, and the honey with which she regales herself is the moonlight. The industrious maid, who is in the garden at work before the king—the sun—has risen, is day-dawn, and the clothes she hangs out are the clouds, while the bird who so tragically ends the song "nipping off her nose," is the hour of sunset. So we have the whole day, if not in a nutshell, in a pie.—Toronto Globe.

A dispatch from Quincy, Ill., says: Mark Hogge, a farmer, while hunting across the river in Missouri, was wounded by the bursting of his gun. The breech-pin, together with the screw, one and one-quarter inches long, which held it to the stock, were imbedded in his brain. The breech-pin weighs one and seven-eighths ounces, troy, is two and one-half inches long, and measures one and one-eighth inches across the widest part. Dr. Hatch, the attending physician, said that the breech-pin and screw pierced through the frontal bone, on the horizontal portion of the left side of which it was found. The patient lost six ounces of brain. After being wounded Hogge walked half a mile, mounted a horse, rode home a mile distant, and gave some directions about household chores. In about ten hours he became unconscious, and remained so until the missle was removed from his brain Sunday morning. This evening, forty hours after the accident, he talks rationally. The pulse, temperature, and all functions are normal, and he is apparently in a fair way of recovery.

A HUNTER'S STORY.

HOW HE WAS OVERCOME AND THE WAY BY WHICH HE WAS FINALLY SAVED.

(Correspondence Spirit of the Times.)

An unusual adventure which recently occurred to your correspondent while hunting at Brookmere in this State is so timely and contains so much that can be made valuable to all readers, that I venture to reproduce it entire:

The day was a most inclement one, and the snow quite deep. Rabbit tracks were plentiful, but they principally led in the direction of a large swamp, in which rabbits could run without difficulty, but where the hunter constantly broke through the thin ice, sinking into the half-frozen mire to his knees. Notwithstanding these difficulties, the writer had persevered, although a very small bag of game was the result. While tramping about through a particularly malarial portion of the swamp, a middle-aged man suddenly came into view, carrying a muzzle-loading shotgun and completely loaded down with game of the finest description. Natural curiosity, aside from the involuntary envy that instinctively arose, prompted the writer to enter into conversation with the man, with the following result:

"You've had fine success, where did you get all that game?"

"Right here in the swamp."

"It's pretty rough hunting in these parts, especially when a man goes up to his waist every other step."

"Yes, it's not very pleasant, but I am used to it and don't mind it."

"How long have you hunted hereabouts?"

"Why, bless you, I have lived here most of my life, and hunted up to ten years ago every year."

"How does it happen you omitted the last ten years?"

"Because I was scarcely able to move, much less hunt."

"I don't understand you?"

"Well, you see about ten years ago, after I had been tramping around all day in this same swamp, I felt quite a pain in my ankle. I didn't mind it very much, but it kept troubling me for a day or two, and I could see that it kept increasing. The next thing I knew I felt the same kind of a pain in my shoulder, and I found it pained me to move my arm. This thing kept going on and increasing, and though I tried to shake off the feeling and make myself think it was only a little temporary trouble, I found that it did not go. Shortly after this my joints began to ache at the knees, and I finally became so bad that I had to remain in the house most of the time."

"And did you trace all this to the fact that you had hunted so much in this swamp?"

"No, I didn't know what to lay it to, but I knew that I was in misery. My joints swelled until it seemed as though all the flesh I had left was bunched at the joints; my fingers crooked in every way and some of them became double-jointed. In fact, every joint in my body seemed to vie with the others to see which could become the largest and cause me the greatest suffering. In this way several years passed on, during which time I was pretty nearly helpless. I became so nervous and sensitive that I would sit bolstered up in the chair and call to people that entered the room not to come near me, or even touch my chair. While all this was going on I felt an awful burning heat and fever, with occasional chills running all over my body, but especially along my back and through my shoulders Then again my blood seemed to be boiling and my brain to be on fire."

"Didn't you try to prevent all this agony?"

"Try; I should think I did try. I tried every doctor that came within my reach, and all the proprietary medicines I could hear of. I used washes and liniments enough to last me for all time, but the only relief I received was by injections of morphine."

"Well, you talk in a very strange manner for a man who has tramped around on a day like this and in a swamp like this. How in the world do you dare to do it?"

"Because I am completely well and as sound as a dollar. It may seem strange, but it is true that I was entirely cured; the rheumatism all driven out of my blood; my joints reduced to their natural size, and my strength made as great as ever before, by means of that great and simple remedy, Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure, which I believe saved my life."

"And so you now have no fear of rheumatism?"

"Why, no. Even if it should come on I can easily get rid of it by using the same remedy."

The writer turned to leave as it was growing dark, but before I had reached the city precisely the same symptoms I had just heard described came upon me with great violence. Impressed with the hunter's story, I tried the same remedy, and within twenty-four hours all pain and inflammation had disappeared. If any reader is suffering from any manner of rheumatic or neuralgic troubles and desires relief, let him by all means try this same great remedy. And if any readers doubt the truth of the above incident or its statements, let them write to A. A. Coates, Brookmere, N. Y., who was the man with whom the writer conversed, and convince themselves of its truth or falsity. J. R. C.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A complete Catalogue sent free on Application.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev. A. W. Gcselin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degrees of Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Odd-fellowship (old work), by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen, $7.50

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages: cloth $1.

Anti-Masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, Williams, M'Nary, Dow and Sarver; the two addresses of Pres't Blanchard, the addresses of Pres't H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion" and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages: cloth $1.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated," "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defense," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 333 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 50
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	25
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.

EZRA A. COOK, Publisher, 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE.

311,000 references. The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's a child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2 50; half Russia $3. Postage, 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY, 10 books, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Teaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now issued. The whole lot for $11.48. Single copy, postpaid, 10c, 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.

Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil-
11 Newlyn House. [dren.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Susette.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May.
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
20 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwei.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bernie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Miss'n, Lit. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Haylands.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
52 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Failure.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer. [Marched.
57 Hugalda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I.
61 Tempest Tost'd.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hope.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself.
72 Lyman.
73 Kenneth.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl.
77 Margery Kramsr's School-
78 The Quartette. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Luin Preston's Trials and Triumphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror.
85 Joe and Harry.
86 Fred, the Backwood Boy.
87 Bloomfield Rock.
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 No Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Saunders.
93 Pey of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit;
Frank Spencer's Rule of
109 The Harker Family. [Life.
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Tim's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
119 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Poll and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Fearndale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium.
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; John Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Telfourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle
Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Banyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Louis' School Days.
151 Blossom and Blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Busy.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips.
156 Digging a Grave with a
Wine-glass. Little blind
Mary.
157 The Manor House Mystery.
May's Sixpence.
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Job Lufton's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.
163 Little Faith. The Diver's
Daughter.
164 Dora's boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe.
166 Danesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear
168 Drift. [ful bondage.
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list. Nos 96, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109, 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141, 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168, are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4, any 12 copies for $1, 10c each.

Address EZRA A. COOK,

13 WABASH AVE., Chicago, Ill.

Reform Note Paper & Envelopes

This is good heavy paper, 5⅜x8¼ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scripture and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with an "ad" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100.

Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.

Price, postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches.

Published by EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering. All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order, Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter. Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

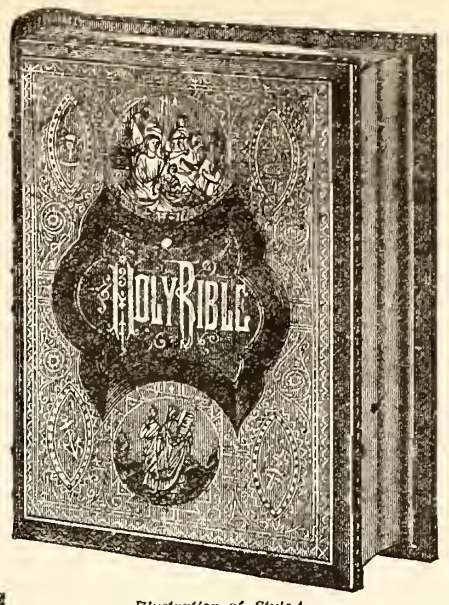

Illustration of Style 4.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10½x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and Family Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible. Harmony of the Gospels. Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 1.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4, with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill

ANTI-LODGE PUBLICATIONS.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Oddfellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

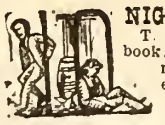
Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.



The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2 00.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is, Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N Y Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $8 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 5c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,
13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

—The House committee on public lands has agreed to report in favor of the absolute forfeiture of $40,000,000 acres granted to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad company, leaving 5,000,000 acres as earned by the laying of track between Albuquerque and the Colorado river.

—The Democratic national committee met Friday noon in Washington. Speeches were made in support of the claims of Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville, St. Louis, and Saratoga as the place to hold the convention. On the third ballot Chicago gained the majority. The committee fixed July 8 as the date of the convention. Each State will have delegates equal to twice the number of its Representatives and Senators in Congress.

—Senator Plumb reported Wednesday from the Committee on Agriculture a bill to provide for the erection of the Department of Agriculture into an executive department, for making the chief officer of that department a Cabinet officer, with the title of Secretary of Agriculture, and the same salary as other heads of departments. It also provides for an Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, with the same salary now paid the Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

COUNTRY.

—The Supreme Court having declared the Harper law constitutional, making the license rate $500, the Chicago council voted to make this sum the fee for whisky saloons, but those selling wine and beer only $150. The Liquor Dealers' Protective Association met and decided to take out only the $150 licenses, under which they would sell distilled liquors. Steps were taken to test the constitutionality of the Harper law in the Supreme Court of the United States.

—The Iowa Senate Tuesday passed the Donnan bill prohibiting the manufaeture of ale, wine, beer, and all intoxieating liquors whatever by a vote of 35 to 13.

—Before the Senate investigating committee on the Copiah county outrages in New Orleans Thursday, one witness testified to the deliberate murder of Mathews at the polls; another had been taken out of his house at midnight and threatened with hanging unless he voted the Democratic ticket, and a third was warned that he was going to be "cleaned out," and swore that Wheeler in a speech said, touching the pending election, "We will clean out the leaders and fix the niggers." The taking of evidence on the Democratic side was begun.

—The monument to General Lee—the figure being 16 feet in height, standing upon a white marble column 66 feet high, resting on a base of Georgia granite 12 feet high—was unveiled at New Orleans Friday. A violent storm of wind and rain broke up the assembly, and the formalities were concluded in a hall.

—Seven thousand Indians on Poplar River are starving, and have been subsisting for some time on their dogs and ponies. There are fears that the agents and post-traders will be massacred. The snow in the region is unprecedentedly deep.

—It is believed that the three bodies of colored people of Avondale, Ohio, found in a medical college at Cincinnati Thursday night, were murdered for the dissecting table, and that their house had been fired with the intention of concealing the crime.

—An explosion in the West Leisenring coal shaft in the Connellsville (Pa.) region, Wednesday morning, caused the death by injury or suffocation of nineteen men. Twelve were rescued badly wounded. Heartrending scenes were enacted in the miner's homes after the recovery of the bodies.

—Salmi Morse, of New York who became notorious through his efforts to establish the "Passion play" in that city, flung himself into the Hudson river, whence his corpse was taken Friday.

—The remains of Commander De Long of the lost Jeannette expedition and his comrades were recently taken in procession through the streets of New York and across Brooklyn bridge to the navy-yard. In the carriages were Secretary Lincoln, General Haucock, Secretary Chandler, the Russian minister, and Postmaster General Gresham. The corpse of Collins will be sent to Ireland for interment.

—Reuben Hart and wife (eolored), residing near Crocket, Texas, went to church and left six children at home asleep. Hart locked the door and took the key with him. At 10 o'clock the house was discovered afire, and it burned so quickly that it was impossible to save it or the children, everyone of whom were roasted to death. The eldest was a boy of 13 years.

STORM AND FLOOD.

—A heavy rainstorm wrecked the dam at Los Angeles, Cal., Sunday evening, Feb. 17th, flooding the town and washing away forty buildings. Hundreds of families were compelled to move. Miles of the Southern Pacific and California Southern Railroads were washed away, and travel in all directions is suspended. The greatest floods ever known are reported in the lower section of the St. Joaquin Valley.

—A snow-slide near the Ontario mine, Park City, Utah, destroyed the house of William Rich, killing his three children and wounded his wife. The slide struck the house of John Harris, killing his wife and wounding him.

—A fieree blizzard raged in Northern Dakota and Minnesota Monday night. The wind blew a hurricane, and the snow drifted into immense banks. Four Dakota stage coaches were next day missing, and it is feared the passengers, drivers and horses perished in the blizzard. Sections of Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa were visited by the northern terror Tuesday, creating heavy snow drifts and retarding travel.

—The same storm wrecked hundreds of submerged houses in the distriet around Evansville, Ind., and Shawneetown, Ill., besides drowning numbers of hogs and eattle. An immense amount of corn was also lost. Many persons were taken from trees and hills where they had taken refuge, by the relief boats, some of whom were badly frozen.

—A hurricane at Coshocton, Ohio, Tuesday night, demolished the steel works and destroyed other buildings and trees. The damage in the surrounding seetion is expected to be heavy.

—One of the most awfully destrnctive tornadocs of modern times swept through the Southern States last week Tuesday. The storm seemed to come from the Gulf, and dividing passed in two seetions northeast through Alabama and northern Georgia. It seems to have been turned east by the mountains and then swept with terrible and fatal force through central North and South Carolina. An Atlanta, Ga., dispatch on Friday says: "As details are received of the disasters attendant upon the wind-storm which passed over sections of Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Kentueky, and Tennessee, Tuesday, the 12th inst., the extent of the awful visitation can be realized. The first reports were not at all exaggerated, but rather understated the loss of life aud property. Within a radius of ten miles of Roek Run, Alabama, sixty persons are known to have been killed. In the section of this State near Talladega, 210 persons lost their lives. In Georgia the fatalities are estimated at 200, while many are mortally wounded. In South Carolina 25 were killed. In North Carolina it is said that 75 victims are enumerated. These figures show the aggregate loss of life to have been nearly 600. This will be largely increased as news is received from sections with which communication is difficult. The loss of property is immense. Whole villages have been swept entirely away and plantations and farms denuded of everything valuable. Live stock in great numbers were slaughtered or maimed so that it will have to be killed. Much valuable timber was also blown down and splintered to the extent that it will be worthless. In Georgia the pecuniary loss is estimated at $2,000,000, and in one portion of Alabama it is said that $3,000,000 will uot cover the damage.

FOREIGN.

—In the House of Commons Wednesday John O'Connor Power, Home-ruler, in the debate on Parnell's amendment, in reply to the Queen's speech, severely attacked the policy of Parnell and his followers. Power's speech caused a great sensation and on resuming his seat was tremendously cheered.

On General Gordon's arrival at Khartoum thousands crowded to kiss his hands and feet, calling him "Sultan of the Soudan." Addressing the people, General Gordon said: "I come without soldiers, but with God on my side to redress evils. I will not fight with any weapons, but will mete out justice. There shall be no more Bashi Bazouks." The populace say General Gordon is giving them more than El Mahdi could give. General Gordon is sending copies of his proclamation in all directions.

—The Tokar garrison made a sortie Tuesday, killing many of the rebels. They also captured many cattle and camels. But on Thursday surrendered to the Egyptian rebels. There are thirty-two thousand British troops at Trinkitat and twelve hundred at Suakim. General Gordon telegraphed Admiral Hewett to call a conference of sheiks to arrange terms of peace, and to ask Osman Digma to meet him at Khartoum.

—A dispatch from the British Consul at Suakim to Lord Granville states that only those of the garrison who had wives surrendered, and that the rest of the troops were endeavoring to reach Suakim.

—A letter from El Obeid says the Mahdi is in great fear of assassination. Visitors are permitted to approach him only on all fours and must remain at a eonsiderable distance. The condition of the Christian missionaries is most deplorable. They live in straw huts outside the town, and are destitute of food, clothing and money. The negro novices have been enrolled in the army or sold into slavery. One priest became a Mussulman.

BUSINESS.

CYNOSURE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Received for the week ending Feb. 23, from the following parties:

R P Brorup, J H Redifer, Dan'l Whitmore, Mrs M Spaulding, Nelson Rudy, Geo Pallister, T C Kirkwood, Joel M Oxley, E R Worrell, E H Porter, W B Stoddard, H Thompson, J F Helin, Robt Loggan, S H Davidson, Allan Wright, J R Denison, A C Eno, A Fletcher, Mrs J T Padelford, W N Waldo, J Blanchard, O F Lumry, R W Laughlin, Jesse Ward, J W Zike, Jno Horley, Dan'l Leggett, G W Holstead, Miss Jane Stitt, Jas Cation, Jno W Plummer, H H Shepard, L D Brown, Geo W Holmes, T M Weeks, R J Williams, P Baldwin, N G Northup, S Y Orr. Dr J N Norris, J L Woodworth, C M Strickler, T Hudson, E R Atwood, Jacob Van Halteren, Wm H Morrill, J W Cole, Stephen Waite, P Baeon, Reuben Cole, M L Woreester, Jno Carrington, J S Hiekman, Florence I Hill, Mrs C E Eno, Riley Wilder, A C Pratt, Benj Hutchens, James W Law, J T Rock, Mrs R W Denning, Thos Chapple, Rev J S Turnbull, Bryaut Dowd & Co., Jacob Ring, I Bliss, W E Dickey.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		92½
No. 3	80	83
Winter No 2	90	@1 01¼
Corn—No. 2	52¾	@53¾
Oats—No. 2		@32
Rye—No. 2		58
Bran per ton		15 00
Flour	2 25	@6 25
Hay—Timothy	6 50	@10 00
Mess pork per hhl		18 30
Butter, medium to best	14	@30
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	1 50	@2 76
Eggs		24
Potatoes per hus	27	33
Seeds—Timothy	1 20	@1 32
Flax	1 50	1 60
Broom corn	02	@ 08
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	16	@37
Cattle—Extra	6 50	@7 00
Common to good	4 60	@5 80
Hogs	6 00	@7 75
Sheep	3 50	@6 00

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 80	@6 50
Wheat—Winter	1 04	@1 14
Spring		1 07½
Corn	57	@63
Oats	41	@46
Mess Pork		18 00
Eggs		23
Butter		@39½
Wool	10	@45

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	4 80	@5 75
Hogs	6 30	@7 10
Sheep	3 00	@3 60

CLARK'S NEW REFORM SONG BOOK.

Full of soul-stirring songs. Words and music. Humane, Reformatory and Progressive; National and Patriotic, Social and Domestic, Anti-seerecy, Temperance, Prohibition, etc., etc. Two hundred and sixty pieces, nicely bound and in elear, bright type. Should be in every family and in possession of every singer.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE

by the dozen, for elubs, or single copy.

PRESS COMMENTS:

"Mr. Clark has a national reputation as an author of music and as a solo singer. His music, like himself, has in it the soul of freedom and the life of love. He has made a unique and splendid book. It strikes directly and powerfully in the direction of the several questions of reform to which it is devoted, and also contains many of those old melodies so essential to the circle of song."—[Religious Telescope, Dayton, O.

"I most heartily thank and congratulate you on its timely appearance and excellent contents."—[Sandy Lake News, Pa.

"If you want to sing a variety of songs on a variety of topics, all of them good and many of them beautiful, send for this cheap volume. It contains a rich variety of songs, hymns and tunes—grave and gay."—[Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

"Geo. W. Clark is the author of the 'Liberty Minstrel,' 'Harp of Freedom,' etc., etc., and the great performer of songs which had their influence in ushering in the great day of emancipation which we so long labored and prayed for, and which has given five millions of the down-trodden nominal freedom, and which I trust will soon be to them REAL freedom."—[A. F. Williams, Esq., Farmington, Conn.

"This is one of the most complete books of its class that has ever come under our observation."—[Sabbath Recorder, Alfred Center, N. Y.

"My brother aged 19, had fits from his infancy, Samaritan Nervine cured him." A. W Curtis, Osakis, Minn. $1.50 at Druggists.

A Suffocating Cough.

In a letter from Mrs. Charlotte Lisle, of Chicago, a lady well known as a contributor to the Western press, she ascribes the cure of a dangerous cough, accompanied hy bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My cough," she says, "threatened to suffocate me * * * * but the Honey of Horehound and Tar has removed every trace of it." The letter was to a lady friend in this city, who has placed it at the disposal of C. N. CRITTENTON, 115 Fulton street, N. Y.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

Scalps Tormented with Dandruff or Scald Head are made healthy with Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Of all druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, black or hrown, fifty cents.

Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic.

For adults travelling, a wineglassful may be taken three times a day with great advantage. Its tonic and nutritive qualities are sufficient to sustain the hody without the addition of solid food. It is now recommended by the faculty as the best remedy for consumption, debility, loss of appetite, weakness, indigestion, dyspepsia, fever, ague, malaria, and all female and children's maladies.

CAUTION—See that the signature of T. COLDEN is on each bottle, as imitations are on the market.

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures Nose, Throat, Lungs; full idea; 36p. route, cost free.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary, the formula of a simple vegetahle remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail hy addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Scud stamps for NEW LAWS. COL. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

PATENTS NO PATENT NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent FREE

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

KNABE PIANOFORTES.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
WILLIAM KNABE & CO.
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 24. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1884. WHOLE No. 723.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.
J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Convention Notes..... 1
The Cynosure and the Washington Paper..... 8
Editorial Correspondence 8
THE WASHINGTON CONVENTIONS:
Address of Hon. Fred. Douglass..... 3
Address of Mrs. Lockwood 3
Proceedings of the American Convention..... 4
Proceedings of the N. C. A. Convention..... 9
CONTRIBUTED:
Is there Need for the American Party?..... 1
What Ails the Churches? 2
Trajan's Column..... 2
Discern the Signs of the Times..... 2
The Query of the Lodgeville Church—Chap. II. 9
CORRESPONDENCE:
He Said no More; Burke, Burking, Burked; Bro. Foote's Answer; Pith and Point..... 6
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
Good Words..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 11
AMERICAN POLITICS:
No Lodgery in it..... 12
THE CHURCHES:
A Work of Grace..... 12
OBITUARY:
O. B. Worth; A. Hadley 13
FARM AND GARDEN..... 14
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 13
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

THE CONVENTION.

The addresses of Hon. Frederick Douglass and Mrs. Belva Lockwood, appearing in this number of the Cynosure; and the fact that the editor of the Cynosure has agreed to speak in the National Woman's Suffrage convention in Washington on Wednesday of this week, and that Mrs. Anthony has promised a resolution of thanks for the recognition of their movement by the American convention, are very significant of the popular interest excited in the capital. From more than one source we hear that it is a much discussed topic in the influential circles of Washington. Our reports of the proceedings are of necessity condensed, but are believed to be complete. We hope in our next to publish two or three other addresses, especially those of Dr. A. A. Miner and Rev. B. T. Roberts. A large extra edition of this number of the Cynosure is printed, but nearly all engaged as we go to press. The Convention has made a tidal wave, which every worker for the reform should improve with the utmost diligence. Let special and unremitting effort be made to enlarge the circulation of the Cynosure during the month of March.

CONVENTION ITEMS.

ABDIELS AMONG SATAN'S WORSHIPERS.—There were two colored preachers in the convention, Rev. P. H. A. Braxton of Baltimore, and Rev. J. Brooks of Germantown, Pa., one of our secretaries, who worked well and bravely. There were many besides but these two were pre-eminent.

Mr. Brooks preached pointedly against the secret lodges before he heard of the Cynosure. Twenty-five members of his church quit him in a body, and his congregation was depleted. But he is, through God, conquering success.

THE TERRORISM of the lodge here was signally conspicuous in the absence of the colored people from our meetings. Only a relatively small number attended, while their love of such meetings and to mingle with whites on equal terms, as they did, should have crowded the great hall with them. But the old mother serpent has only to open her mouth and utter a quiet hiss and all the little ones will run into her belly and hide. So Masonry through the 190 little lodge-leaders kept the negroes away from us.

A BRAVE GIRL.—Miss Mary E. Jones of Boston, who attended the Washington Convention, was walking toward her lodgings near a street car, when an extra horse which was to be hitched to the car, frightened, maddened, or both, was rearing and plunging at a furious rate, the harness off and around his legs. The driver was about to give the animal a savage blow with the whiffletree, when Miss Jones sprang from her mother's side, seized the crazed animal by the bridle, and cried, "Stop! Don't strike this horse!" She then patted the animal on the cheek and spoke kindly to him, while the astonished driver hitched him to the cars and the crowd looked on with amazement.

ALL DAY SATURDAY was devoted to consultation. There was but one word heard on all sides concerning the convention, and that is joy and gratitude to God. Rev. Mr. Moore of Oberlin, now a pastor here, says, "The Convention is a great event, and we are too near it to take in the reach of its effects."

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL is here in the city, but comes not near nor cares for the struggle with the lodge. He treats the discussion now as he did slavery while Abolitionism was unpopular. He said to a lady who asked him if he was a Mason, "No, I would as soon join a grave-yard." Of course he knows it to be the ruin of the country, but he cannot make a thousand dollars a night by denouncing it. Will he curse ministers by-and-by for doing as he does?

DR. RANKIN'S TESTIMONY.—On the Sabbath following the Convention Dr. Rankin of the Congregational church in Washington, preached from the text, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." In speaking of the different social relations and the laws or customs by which they are governed, he said boldly to his large congregation that secret societies have their relations and regulations which are demoralizing and un-Christian.

THE WASHINGTON PRESS in all its notices of our Convention, has not uttered or published a single sneer.

PROF. BAILEY is giving absolute and universal satisfaction in his management of the very important duties of his post, and except a single vote or two against woman suffrage all our votes have been unanimous.

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION, we learn from those present, has been the theme of earnest conversation in the Department here from the Cabinet down.

SECRETARY STODDARD'S purchasing and completing the payment of the note, and clearing the title to the Washington building has produced a greater effect for our cause than a thousand good speeches. We need another "headquarters" now in Boston, and soon, another in San Francisco.

SENATOR POMEROY and the Cynosure editor have promised Secretary Stoddard to be at the Northampton meeting. A call will soon be out.

THANKS.—While our readers are opening this Cynosure, the Woman Suffrage Association will be in session in Washington. Miss Anthony has promised a vote of thanks to our Convention for our vote for the impartial ballot.

AN INCIDENT in Mrs. Lockwood's address was not given in our report of it. In relating the circumstances attending the recent application of Mrs. Mary Miller of New Orleans for a steamboat captain's license, and the opinion given thereon by Mr. Raynor, the law officer of the Treasury, Mrs. Lockwood used considerable sarcasm in referring to Mr. Raynor, and was inclined not to spare the Secretary of the Treasury for having deemed it necessary to refer such an application to his law officer.

"What did the Secretary do?" asked Chairman Pomeroy."

"The Secretary," said Mrs. Lockwood, "wisely and well said, 'If a woman has been placed by God upon his footstool, and is able to earn her living, let her do it. If she is able to pass the examination, give her her commission.' Mary Miller," continued Mrs. Lockwood, "passed her examination, and four days ago, I am happy to say, received her commission."

IS THERE NEED FOR THE AMERICAN PARTY?

BY A. THOMPSON.

It was not of a Christian, but of a heathen government that these words were spoken: "The powers that be are ordained of God." Civil government is as much a heaven-ordained organization as the church or the family, and no more preposterous assertion was ever made through the perverse ingenuity of men, than that politics is not a lawful field for Christian ambition and enterprise. If it be a meritorious act to turn one sinner from the error of his way, what must it be to arrest a nation in its downward course, drive corruption from the high places of the land, and build upon the fair foundations of truth and righteousness, a people whose God is the Lord. Is there need of such a work to-day?

Of the two great parties struggling for supremacy in our nation, it cannot be said that either of them is disposed to heed the voice of the people calling loudly for reform. No man could distinguish between an ordinary Republican and Democratic platform did he not know by what party it was framed. They both talk civil service reform which neither of them mean, certainly not the Republicans, who have had abundant opportunities to carry this measure into effect. Our Chicago Times says, "It is astonishing to consider the verdancy of a certain class of citizens, who continue to believe that the spoils system has been overthrown."

Neither of these parties will lift by a hair's breadth, from the shoulders of the groaning people, the enormous burden of intemperance, which presses from above, and still less will they disturb the Secret Empire, which like the neither mill-stone presses from below. While that man is either sadly misinformed or willfully blind, who does not see that unless these powers are checked in their mighty corrupting influence, it is only a question of time when we shall see in this country mighty convulsions and popular upheavals, or a passive submission to a destiny of despair.

Why does such a paper as the Chicago Tribune characterize our National Senate as the American House of Lords—a body fast becoming a clique of millionaires? Acute, unscrupulous men they must be, otherwise it would be quite impossible to accumulate in so brief a time sums so enormous; heads of ambitious corporations, or partizans they have lifted into power, men out of sympathy with the masses of the people and who care no more for reform than the devil does for a prayer-meeting. Did many of them stand for a popular vote, bad as is the condition of the general conscience, they would be rejected as surely as Colfax was rejected, when he could no longer hold up clean hands before the people.

It is impossible to buy up a whole people, but it may not be impossible to buy up a legislature. It appears from the Huntington letters, that twenty-five thousand was considered sufficient to buy up Colorado, and two hundred thousand was deemed all that was required to corrupt the heart of the nation at Washington.

Where then do we stand to-day? The people elect corrupt legislatures, and they elect corrupt Senators, while the whole political system of both parties has degenerated into a fierce struggle for wealth, place, and power. With monopolies, intemperance, and the Secret Empire, that unholy trinity of power, they will do nothing. For their support they require honest men's votes and pay us with empty twaddle about civil service, threatened irruptions upon Mormondom, that are never made; and while they are ready enough to vote twenty millions of the people's money for a River and Harbor Bill, to satisfy the greedy shark who feeds upon the national treasury, or to influence elections, they leave our great seaports undefended, our navy in such an unseaworthy condition, that neither a crew nor officers can be found to take one of the best vessels round Cape Horn.

Brethren, citizens, patriots, is there cause for action?

Few consider that enjoyment must have its moment o rest as well as labor.

WHAT AILS THE CHURCHES?

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

That Gospel churches are of momentous importance makes this a grave question. This problem seems to be reverberating through the pulpit and the religious press. It is one sign of good that some see that the church is out of health. The diagnosis is easy to make, as that upon paralysis. To diagnose upon bodily disease requires a man sound in body and mind; so to see what ails the church requires spiritual health. (Gal. 6: 1). "They that are sick" need a physician, and a well one. Men of the pew, pulpit and press, who are "struck with the death" of moral palsy, cannot treat the sick, for they do not even see the situation. A sick doctor (D. D.) needs the physician as much as any other man; specially if he is "out of his head." If the doctors are struck with moral contagion they must away to the hospital, and God must send us some Elijah or Ezekiel, who is able to see what ails the churches, and is not afraid to tell the dying patient, be he a doctor or not, what is the matter. Such as will "cry aloud and spare not and so show the house of Israel her sins" and send the people anxiously crying to the great Physician.

"What ails the churches," echoes mournfully through the land. What ailed Zion's sons in Babylon? There the heathen tauntingly required of them a song "saying, sing for us one of the songs of Zion." Why did the flower of Israel have to go to Babylon? Plainly for the idolatry of Israel. Providence ordered the best to Babylon for the good of the heathen there, and left the worst element in Jerusalem to culminate in apostasy and final overthrow.

What was the matter with the church at Jerusalem? Read carefully Ezekiel 8th and 9th chapters and see. Did the church at Jerusalem know its own plague? Perhaps Ezekiel murmured at God's way with his people. So God took the prophet "by a lock of his head," in vision, and looked over the situation, turning their ancient and honorable secret worship inside out. Now, Ezekiel, your business is to investigate and know what these "good men are doing in the "chambers of their imagery." See that "image of jealousy," symbol of sun-worship, in the main gateway! Now advance to the second scene where you will see a still greater abomination. By digging he finds a door, enters in, and behold! seventy men of the ancients of the House of Israel "worshiping" every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the House of Israel, portrayed round about. In the midst stood Jaazaniah (the priest) with every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.

Now, asks Ezekiel, what can be the matter of this Jerusalem church? Go on, Ezekiel, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do. Here we find women in the secret worship. Female Masonry? "Women weeping for Tammuz," a deified mortal, answering to the Adonis of the Greeks. Idolatrous and lewd ceremonies! "Son of man, hast thou seen this?" Yes, quoth the prophet, I have seen too much here in the Holy City, in the "holy place." Take me back to Babylon into better surroundings. No, "Turn thee yet again and thou shalt see greater abominations than these." I want you to see what ails the Jerusalem church. We will now go into the "inner court" and see what these "good men" will do in the "holy of holies."

"And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and behold at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the East; and they worshiped the sun toward the East." Enough, enough, cries the prophet. I now see what ails our dear Zion! SECRET IDOLATRY.

Secret sun-worship was the moral, spiritual and national curse of the Israelites. This the holy God abhored, and went "far off from his sanctuary," v. 6 in ch. 8. Now if in the ritual twilight of Christianity, under the "shadow of good things to come," God was driven "far off from his santuary" by the mixed worships of his chosen people, what shall we say of the secret sun-worship of the nineteenth century, which honey-combs church and state with millions of poisonous cells? Right in the face of the Sun of Righteousness.—"Son of the Father"—after more than eighteen centuries of Gospel light in our world, half, more or less, of the clergy, "ancients of the house of one spiritual Israel," engaged, substantially, in the same pagan worships in heathen temples, devoted to idolatry. And more than half of the remainder countenancing by silence, if not by sympathy, the secret cabals!

What is the matter, when half or more of the churches co-operate, worship with, and pay their money to lodges which antagonize the Gospel in every grand feature. "Such horrible incongruities as are seen in this display of the emblems of the cross over saloons and bagnios, were never seen before in this country." So speaks the Interior of Chicago, Aug. 19th, on the Knight Templar Conclave which met in that city in Aug. 1880.

Further on the same paper adds, "There is a jeer and a sneer in it that could only be equalled by the devil reading the Sermon on the Mount to a convocation of Belials, Molechs and Beelzebubs." This is none to strongly put, as any one will conclude on reading the account of that conclave. This was Masonry in its "intensely Christian" character. At a Knight Templar conclave in Philadelphia some fourteen years ago, Wm. H. Allen, then president of Girard College, in a grand Knight Templar speech, spoke substantially as follows. After dilating upon the order as "social, beneficial and charitable," he adds, "Ours is not only a moral order but a Christian order; not only a Christian order, but the defender of Christianity, etc."

This Christian (?) order which in its grand conclave in three days spent a round "million of dollars" for "crusade beverages" would surely make a valiant defence of the faith, judging it by its capacity to consume strong beverages. When the church can fellowship organized infidelity at the Lord's table, and that in the name of Christianity—adding hypocrisy to infidelity, and insult to hypocrisy, it is time not to ask what ails the churches but to proceed to divorce them from the lodge. Such conduct as that of the Christian Knights at Chicago would disgrace a dance house or a theatre, to say nothing of the "temple of the Holy Ghost."

Ask what ails the churches with lodgery, theatres, gambling clubs and other vile practices whose "name is legion?"

In view of such facts can any one wonder that "God should go far off from his sanctuary?" Are there enough who "sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst of our Zion to save it from the doom of apostacy?" "Ah, Lord God! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?"

Unless the watchman awake right soon and "cry aloud and spare not," and "show his people their iniquities," a terrible ordeal is just ahead. The only hope of reformation and redemption now visible, is that some do sigh and cry in view of the abominations cherished in the churches of our land.

Thompson, Pa.

TROJAN'S COLUMN.

On the exceedingly dark back-grouud presented by the reign of the monster Nero, the character of Trojan stands forth with peculiar brightness. He was as much beloved and honored by the Roman people as Nero had been hated and feared by them. In consequence, the monument erected to his glory was one upon which no art, no wealth, no care was spared. It still stands at the present day, and is nearly as perfect as on the day it was completed.

It is a lofty column, made up or covered with plates of bronze, upon which are depicted in bas-relief the more glorious achievements of Trojan's life. These pictured plates of bronze wind up the column in a spiral, as we remember, to the top, which was originally crowned with a statue of the hero whose glories it commemorates.

Our recollections of the monument may not be wholly correct, since it is long ago that we saw it, but they will do for illustrating the suggestion that we are about to make. We have observed that it is proposed to raise a monument to Wendell Phillips. The idea occurs to us to devise something like the column dedicated to Trojan. On the bronze plates there would be properly represented some of the contests through which the hero has gone. One of these plates should show how he was treated to a storm of rotten eggs, which he endured in the early days of the rebellion, in Cincinnati, that city which is now going through another kind of storm itself, accompanied by a flood of over seventy feet of water, occasioning much suffering and call for aid. Another plate might portray Mr. Garrison, the friend and co-laborer of Mr. Phillips, with a halter around his neck, being dragged through the Masonic streets of Boston as a victim to that Minotaur, the slave-power. Still another scene might exhibit the two friends assailed by a roaring mob and treated with every possible indignity. And finally, after many such scenes, on the top of all, there might be appropriately put the statue of Gen. Robert Lee, or of some other distinguished advocate of slavery!

How many Roman citizens were there who suffered more under Nero than Messrs. Phillips and Garrison have suffered under the reign of the lodge in Massachusetts? How can a monument glorify Wendell Phillips without at the same time disgracing the community in which he has been outraged?

Reader! do these ideas seem distorted to you? Nay, are they not the proper suggestions of facts? It is said that the Pope has put a statue of St. Paul or St. Peter upon Trojan's column; and would it not be equally proper for the lodge to place the statue of some devotee of slavery upon a monument to Phillips? Far stranger and more chaotic incongruities than these will occur in a community that builds churches to Christ and at the same time worships at the Masonic lodge.

AMERICAN.

DISCERN THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

BY REV. A. M. MILLIGAN, D. D.

[Notes of a sermon preached Feb. 3, 1884, the Sabbath before the Flood, published in the United Presbyterian.]

Ezekiel 33:7. "So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel. Therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me."

I have no disposition to assume the role of a prophet or a sensationalist, but believing as I do, that it is the province of the Gospel ministry to watch the providences of God, whether those "coming events that cast their shadows before," or those that leave their lessons behind, I feel called upon today to sound a note of warning, and call your attention to

I. SIGNS OF DANGER.

1. Violations of God's law. Jer. 5: 9: "Shall I not visit for these things, shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?" I do not propose to speak of individual sins, either those of God's own children or of the wicked, except as they become national. As, for instance, the crime of murder, if it be properly punished, does not become a national sin; but if it be not properly punished, it rests upon the government, and God will hold the nation responsible. Num. 35: 33. "For blood it defileth the land, and the land cannot be cleansed of the blood that is shed therein but by the blood of him that shed it," so that individual wickedness that is not restrained and punished becomes a part of a nation's guilt.

Who that takes any account of what is passing in our land is not aware that there are crimes of the most flagrant character committed almost daily, and against which law affords no sufficient protection, until personal assassinations, lynchings and vigilantes are taking the place of the proper administration of justice? These unexpiated crimes are gathering like a black cloud over the nation and threaten danger. But there are violations of divine law that are strictly national sins, committed by the nation itself as a moral person, a responsible party. Such as the running of the U. S. mail on the Lord's day, and the sittings of Congress on the Sabbath; the licensing of the liquor traffic, and the annual murder of 60,000 of citizens; the unjust divorce laws, whereby the divine institution of the family is undermined and destroyed, while Mormon polygamy has been allowed to grow up into a power that threatens the gravest consequences. These open and gross violations of the divine law culminate in a setting aside of the divine authority in the Constitution of the government and claiming for the people the divine prerogative of irresponsible power.

But the question returns, Will God puuish a nation for these sins? God himself asks this question by the mouth of his prophet Jeremiah (5: 9, and 29, and 9:9), and he asks it in a way that admits of but oue answer: "Shall I not visit for these things, shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?" As much as to say, Shall I cease to be God?

2. Premonitory judgments. Matt. 24: 8: "All these are the beginning of sorrows." All the nine judgments that fell upon Egypt were premonitory of and preparatory for the tenth and fatal catastrophe—the death of the first-born and the whelming of the army in the depths of the sea.

God sends judgments of a lesser kind in mercy, as a reproof and warning, to call to repentance, and afford an opportunity to avert the greater by a timely reform. If they are not heeded he will send "seven times more"—heavier and more numerous till they reform or his patience is exhausted. These often "begin at the house of God," and "if these things take place in the green tree what will become of the dry? If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?"

But are these calamities, such as cities consumed, states eaten up by locusts, great valleys swept by desolating floods, commercial disasters decimating a nation's wealth—are these divine judgments? To deny this is atheism. If God does not control the elements, what does he control? And if God sends these calamities it must be either in justice or cruelty, and who will dare intimate the latter? "Is there evil in the city and the Lord hath not done it?" "He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men." That these warnings are prevalent even the most stolid are forced to acknowledge. "Lord, when thy hand is lifted up they will not see, but they shall see" (Isa. 24:11).

3. There are singular phenomena. Luke 21:11–25. "And the great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and fearful sights and great signs shall there be in the heavens." "There shall be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars, and upon the earth, distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring." We have had for considerable time past a remarkable frequency of comets, those strange heavenly visitants that have been considered the precursors of evil. There have been great spots on the sun and a singular conjunction of the planets, to which have been attributed the singular atmospheric convulsions, cyclones and storms. While all these may be accounted for on philosophical principles, they may nevertheless be the signs by which God indicates to his people coming events. The rainbow in the cloud on the day of rain is a natural and philosophical phenomenon, and yet it is God's witness that there shall never be another deluge. We have also had earthquakes in divers places, in one of which the whole island of Ischia was depopulated. These science has not yet wrested from the hand of Omnipotence. And what mean those ruddy hues that, evening and morning, gild the sky with radiant glory? When last night the whole heaven was illumined with celestial brightness, and the very earth clothed in purple robes, who could forbear the thought that surely God is near?

II. THE DUTY OF THE MINISTRY REGARDING THESE SIGNS.

1. To learn their meaning—"hear the word at my mouth." The canon of divine revelation is closed, but communications from God have not ceased. The fulfillment of prophecy is giving a continued and living power to the inspired page; and the uniform consisteney of God's dealings with his past providences and with his known character sheds a blaze of light on events as they transpire. Reasoning from the past to the future, from the page of inspiration to the page of providenee, and applying the unalterable principles of the divine government, it is not impossible to forecast the future and presage coming events that cast their shadows before. Matt. 16:3: "In the morning you say it will be foul weather to-day, for the sky is red and lowering. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" The ministry who pass lightly by the heavenly monitors, who stop their ears to the voice of God and cry peace, peace, when there is no peace, incur a fearful responsibility.

2. To warn men of the danger—warn them from God. "Son of man, I have set thee a watchman to the house of Israel, therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth and warn them from me." The sentinel that sleeps at his post and permits the enemy to enter, the watchman who fails to guard the city, the guard who allows the rushing train, laden with its precious freight of human life, to leap into the open chasm, is held responsible for the destruction which his inattention has allowed. What, then, shall be the responsibility of that watchman who permits a nation to go heedlessly on to destruction and to glide silently to an endless perdition, with no signal of danger, no voice of warning? "If thou dost not warn the wicked they shall die in their iniquity, but their blood will I require at thy hand." I well know the disposition of communities in this regard. They say, speak to us smoother things, prophesy deceits. "The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means, and my people love to have it so." But whether in this regard we should obey men rather than God, judge ye.

III. CONSEQUENCES.

1. National reformation and salvation. Jer. 18:7, 8: "If a nation against whom I have pronounced turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them." Jonah's preaching saved Nineveh. Moses's direction to the children of Israel to place paschal blood on the door-posts saved them from the calamity that befel Egypt. Christ's warning heeded by the Christians induced their escape to Pella and saved them from the fearful destruction of Jerusalem.

A timely attention to the warning given this nation would have saved it from the fearful destruction of property and life in the late slave-holders' rebellion. And if the nation will take timely warning of its sin and danger it may avert still more dire calamities.

2. Neglect of the warning and destruction. If God visited the nation with such dire calamities for the wrong done the slave, what will not be the penalty for the dishonor done to his Son and his holy law? "The nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish." "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry and ye perish when his wrath is kindled but a little." These fires and floods and cyclones are not the judgment; they are only the warnings. Witness the fate of Egypt, which refused the warning of Moses and paid the fearful penalty. Witness Babylon, that heeded not the warning of Daniel and the three children of the captivity, and Jerusalem's fearful fate, that heeded not the tearful warning of Jesus, "O Jerusalem, hadst thou known even thou, at least in this thy day, the things that belong to thy peace, but now are they hid from thine eyes."

This destruction will come suddenly. It will be too late to escape it after it has commenced. It was too late to enter the ark after the waters began to rise—too late to escape the fate of Jerusalem after the Roman armies had closed around it. These are our warnings; now is the time to act. "He that, being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy."

Pittsburg.

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

ADDRESS OF HON. FREDERICK DOUGLASS ON "CIVIL RIGHTS."

Mr. Douglass, on being introduced, was received with great applause, and spoke substantially as follows:

I have no apology to offer for appearing on this platform and in the presence of this convention. I am in perfect harmony with at least two objects which you are met to promote: The first is Free Inquiry and free discussion of those questions which are deemed of importance to the welfare of mankind. The second is Civil Rights.

As to the first, I believe that toleration of what may be error is not dangerous so long as truth is left free to combat it. Innocence and truth seek the light and rush to embrace it; they court investigation and welcome the honest inquirer. But guilt cries out in horror and in shame, rocks and mountains on us fall to hide us from the face of the Omniscient Judge. Whoever has any habit or association or business which he refuses to have examined, I advise him to examine it himself and abandon it.

Turning to George W. Clark, whose age has not robbed a wonderful voice of its power to thrill the heart and rouse the conscience for the truth, Mr. Douglass referred in a few touching words to their former acquaintance and their meetings with William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, and many others whose fame shall last while truth shall stand with the "eternal years of God." His affection for the old "Liberty Singer" was as touching as sincere as he said, contrasting the present with the former days, "But your voice never sounded sweeter to me than it does to-night. Those men who stood for human freedom were among those who held that, however few they were in number, so long as their principles were right their cause was secure. I have always held that one with God was a majority. The relations existing between the white and colored people of the United States is to-day the great and all-commanding problem for the American people to solve. We have got rid of slavery. It is gone, gone, gone, never to return. [A voice, 'amen!'] But its long, black shadow stretches across our entire continent; the spirit of bondage is yet in our land. You sometimes ask when this negro question will cease. I will tell you when it will cease. It will cease when every colored man shall enjoy equal rights with every other man. [Applause.] It will cease when we have one country, one citizenship, one liberty, one equality for all people of the United States, and not until then."

Mr. Douglass then referred to the history of the black man in this country as being curious to contemplate. The old prophecy that the negroes would die out had failed. Its answer was found in the fact that where there were four and a half millions of negroes then there are now seven millions. "There is no getting rid of us, my friends. We are here. Some have proposed to send us away, to colonize us, and others propose to kill us off. Neither of these plans will or can succeed. We are not going away to Liberia or Africa. Never! We have adopted the sentiment that we used to sing in class-meeting many years ago, over on the Eastern Shore: 'Bred'ren, we has been wid yo', we still is wid yo', and we mean to be wid yo' until de end!' [Laughter and applause.] People talk as if we were going to disappear like the Indian. The Indian is represented by his blanket and moccasin. He is removed from one place to another. The negro has had a taste of civilization, likes it, likes to be where it has achieved its greatest triumphs. He don't want a blanket; he wants a coat of the latest Parisian cut. He wants to follow the fashions; he does not reject your civilization; he likes it, imitates it, and is quite a factor in American civilization."

Mr. Douglass devoted some time to the Supreme Court decision: "My criticism on the recent decision of the Supreme Court is this, that before emancipation of the slave the Supreme court held to one method of interpretation of the Constitution, and since the abolition of slavery to another. Formerly the words 'we the people' in the Constitution were construed as meaning white men. It was a white man's Government in those days. It is no longer a white man's Government, it is a Government made up of all the people of this conntry. We are your brothers, if you please, your kinsmen and clansmen. The fact is that a part of us may almost claim kin to you. If we are not quite as black as you would have us it is not our fault. [Laughter and applause.] But I won't press that point. I leave something to the imagination.

"The Constitution declared that persons held to servitude in any State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another State, shall not by any law or regulation be released from such service, but shall be delivered up to the persons to whom such service is due.

"Now this, like the 14th Amendment, is a plain prohibition on the States and not of individual action. But the Supreme Court held that the intention was to return slaves, and hence the Fugitive Slave Act was valid law. But the Civil Rights law was declared void, notwithstanding the known intention of the legislature to secure personal liberty. Intentions favorable to slavery were to be carried out, but if favorable to freedom they were of no value.

"Previous to the war and since, the Constitution has been interpreted so as to exclude the negro from those rights which are accorded to the white man. We may sing peace, but unless we blot out the Declaration of Independence; blot out the Bible and all pretense to Christianity, there will be no peace on this negro question until equal and exact justice be established for all. Compromises were enacted into law, and the two leading political parties resolved that discussions of the negro question would not be tolerated. But the discussion did not stop. There is no peace that is not founded on purity.

"It is strange how things happen in this world. The war began in the interests of slavery on both sides, but ended in favor of liberty on both sides.

"The negro has claims upon this government to civil rights. When our limping soldiers fled from Southern prisons, the black face was their hope for shelter, food and safety. When our country was in the greatest straits, and European governments were saying, 'Aha! aha! The great Republican bubble has burst,' then was the call made upon the negroes, and 200,000 answered it, and proved their courage and MANHOOD!

"This nation owes to the colored man civil rights. Talk about having done enough for us. Why, if you should plant a church in every valley and a school-house on every hill, and supply a minister in one and a teacher in the other for the next fifty years, you could not atone for what you have done against the black man."

Mr. Douglass referred twice to his recent marriage. He had been, he said, a great deal tempest tossed of late, and was disposed to keep dark, but had consented to speak. The real obstacle in the way of the colored man is prejudice, color madness, or color-phobia, the best cure for which was to do something to help the colored man. He illustrated this by relating an incident in his life which occurred about forty years ago in Pittsfield, Mass. Then, even Northerners would not affiliate with the negro, and the wife of a white man to whose house he was invited was the only one who showed him consideration. "Women," said he, "are always more sensible than the men about such things," the point of which remark was instantly perceived.

Mr. Douglass concluded with an eloquent appeal for respect for the negroes, as the best way in which his usefulness and finer characteristics could be brought out. "If you want a man to keep out of the mud," said he, "polish his boots." The negro who had watered the soil with his tears and enriched it with his blood, only asked to be treated as well as those who had fought against the country.

ADDRESS OF MRS. BELVA A. LOCKWOOD.

MR. PRESIDENT, GENTLEMEN AND LADIES:—This organization calls itself "American," and as I am advised, advocates prohibition of the liquor traffic; the citizenship, with all that the name implies, of all persons born in, naturalized, or entitled to be naturalized in, this country; with the right of woman to vote, and the full enjoyment of our free institutions of government. Am I right?

Perhaps never before in the history of our beloved country was there so conspicuous a time for temperance work, or so great a need of united and determined effort on the part of moralists and philanthropists as the present. The animosities engendered by the late civil war are dying out and yielding to the better, sober, second thought of the American people. We are at peace with ourselves and the world. No great political question is agitating the public mind. The 47th Congress settled the Tariff Bill and the Bonded Whiskey Bill, the present Congress the Fitz John Porter Bill, and to-day we have in our government a sound financial policy that it seems every way probable will carry us safely over the breakers of financial distress or national bankruptcy and lead us on safely to wealth and national prosperity. The Civil Service Reform Bill with its competent Commission, has largely abated the greed and the unwholesome scramble for office; especially when election and promotion mean merit and ability, and these symbolize intelligent and pains-taking labor. We have a public school system established, a free school system throughout the North, the South, the East and the West that is open to every color, sex, nationality and condition, so that the ignorance of any young man or woman in the future shall be his or her own condemnation.

But three questions are to-day looming up on the moral horizon that are assuming a political aspect, that must be met and solved,—the labor question, the woman question that grows out of it, and the temperance question. All of these are to-day more or less affected by legislation, and in the near future will become, if they are not to-day, great political problems which must be met and settled by the ballot,—questions of moral force that must call forth the best thought, the most pains-taking policy; and the active co-peration of the best, the truest and the most loyal men and women of this country. We have arrived at a period when mental and physical culture, the cultivation of mechanics, and of the arts and the sciences should take the lead and become the absorbing thoughts of our people. In a word, we are coming up out of the barbarism, the heathenism, and superstition of the past into the light of a Christian civilization that demands the fullest and highest development of the individual. Had we to-day arrived at that point, then we had no need of organizations, no need of being banded together for moral reform which we contemplate, but every man would be a law unto himself.

But unfortunately we are weak; badly born, with morbid appetites, inherited tendencies and temptations to sin on every corner of our beautiful city, which should be the paradise of the world, in the shape of restaurants and liquor saloons. Our young men and our young women are falling by the wayside and our old men and our old women are not exempt, unfitting themselves for all of the responsible and useful avocations of life, growing old before their time, wasting health, fortune, opportunity, promotion, character, and going down to a premature death. We cannot stand by and say these are not our loved ones, these are not the elect, for the moral contagion threatens to engulf us. We are fast becoming a nation of drunkards, and the disease is assuming every insiduous form. Wine, whiskey, rum, brandy, beer, champagne, opium, morphine, quinine, chloral and everything which the imagination of evil genius can invent, disguised with every sophistry of harmlessness, introduced under the name of tonics, strengthening bitters and blood purifiers, with their insiduous poisons and nerve-destroying influences, are placarded everywhere and introduced everywhere, to deceive the unwary. Our young people should learn that the only blood purifier requisite nature has compounded and consists of pure air, and that the method of taking it is by wholesome out-of-door exercise. That the only tonic necessary is a healthy ambition to do something and to be something more than a mere drone in society, living only for sensual indulgence, and dying unhonored and unmourned; that the only genuine beautifier of the complexion, and one that will wash, is compounded of amiability of temper, intellectual, cultivated thought, enervated by well oxygenized blood, and a healthful plan of life work mapped out that will make the world better while the individual lives, and bless the yet unborn when he is moldering in his grave.

Fourteen years ago the president of this Convention presented for me to the United States Senate a petition signed by 800 temperance people of this District, asking for a prohibitory law in the District of Columbia. It hardly made a ripple on the surface of public opinion; but to-day a committee of temperance people can command the attention of the committees of Congress, and they are willing to reason and confer with us on the best means of staying the flood tide of intemperance that has been sweeping over us and threatening to undermine the foundation stones of our social fabric.

We do not yet hope for prohibition, but practically expect to get local option in the localities where liquors are sold, and to reduce the number of liquor saloons from 1,000 to 100.

To-morrow at 10 o'clock A. M. we meet the Senate Committee to discuss this question.

But why do I ask that women should vote? and are you willing to meet the question squarely?

Women should vote because our fathers enunciated as one of the corner-stones of this government, that taxation without representation is tyranny. That tyranny has continued to exist from the close of the revolution until this day. What does representation in this country mean, and when have we had a test of the will of the people? The infant republic, born of tyranny, now the formidable American nation commanding the respect of the world; the asylum for the oppressed of the monarchies of Europe, according to the census returns of 1880, numbers 50,000,000 of people. Out of this vast population we secured at the last Presidential election 9,000,000. These 9,000,000 of votes are represented by 372 electors, known as the electoral college, in whose hands are placed the power of electing the President and Vice-President of this nation. This electoral aristocracy may decide, as it has done, on four different occasions, that the minority of this 9,000,000 of votes has elected a President! Where then is our popular sovereignty? Where the expressed voice and will of the people? The electoral college itself had its remote origin in papacy; later, in the title of those German Princes who had the right or privilege of electing the Emperor of Germany, the electors coming from each of the seven German states.

But if the 9,000,000 of voters are not fairly represented, what have we to say of the 41,000,000 of other persons whose voices are dumb as to who shall rule over us, how we shall be taxed, and what the laws shall be that govern us, while the remotest one of them is taxed without representation! In the days of slavery the Southern States were allowed a representation for their slave population. Is it not about time that the women in this country rose to the dignity of chattels?

We have become a gigantic aristocracy, in which the sovereign power is vested in a privileged class, viz.: the male voter over twenty-one years. Neither brain, nor money, nor culture, nor tact, have yet been able to overcome the inherited disabilities of sex, of the mothers, and wives, and sisters, and daughters of this great and magnanimous American commonwealth. We are to day proud of our country, with the patriotic blood of our revolutionary fathers coursing through our veins, but humiliated by the shackles which chain us hand to hand with felons, idiots and paupers, with the voice which says to us, women are intuitive and logical; unfitted for government, incapable of choice; we will represent you, we will say who shall rule over you and how you shall be ruled.

A pure democracy is a state in which the people at large possess the whole sovereighty. The names, Democrats and Republicans, are misnomers, for neither party seek nor wish a government purely for the people. Woman suffrage is to either of them a bugbear which they cannot meet with argument, and which they seek to avoid by making it odious with ridicule. They evade the inevitable instead of asserting the manhood of which they boast so much, and taking hold of the question of woman suffrage on its merits, fairly and squarely meeting the issue.

Woman should vote as a matter of absolute equity between man and man. Under our present system a male adult having a wife, a mother, three maiden sisters and thirteen children, every one of whom are taxed to support the government and who may represent millions of dollars, has a single vote, which may be offset by the vote of an irresponsible, portionless bachelor next door, who does not represent nor maintain so much as a female domestic. Our popular vote and our free republic is a fallacy. Abolish the electoral college we say; count the votes of the people, and let the word people mean MEN and WOMEN. Insist upon an educational qualification from the rising generation and every newly-fledged voter; do away with the twaddle that women do not want to vote and compel every educated, qualified voter to perform his or her duty at the polls. It is as much the duty of intelligent citizens, men or women, to look after the machinery of government and vote pure and upright men into office, as it is to pay taxes or observe the moral law. Suppose there is a class of women or of men who do not wish to vote; what does it argue? Has there not been in all of the ages past a class of persons who desired to shirk responsibility, and the more onerous the responsibility the greater the desire to be rid of it? The women of this country have had a hundred years of instruction on a false basis. They have been taught to believe that they were represented, supported and protected by men, instead of having been taught to represent, support and protect themselves.

There are two things in the way of securing the vote for women, viz.: the ignorance of the masses, and money to control them. It was ex-Gov. Sprague who said, when in the United States Senate, "I know of but one thing more tyrannical than a million of dollars, and that is a million and a half." This country is becoming, or has become, a monied aristocracy.

But, Mr. President, this Convention claims to be Christian! As a nation, and in the attitude which we stand to-day before the civilized world, I assert and challenge contradiction, that we are heathen, not only in our treatment of the women of the land, but of the Indian, the Mormon and the Chinaman.

Who are the heathen in the Chinese Act? An incident was enacted at the Court-house of the District of Columbia on the 8th of February last. Chang Woo Tsang, born at Loo Chow, China, came to this country fifteen years ago under the provisions of the treaty secured by the successful diplomacy of Anson Burlingame, which not only granted the free interchange of commercial relations between China and the United States, but accorded the privilege to the residents of either country to transact business, settle in, or become citizens of the other. The success attending Burlingame's mission was heralded with delight throughout this country because it favored commerce, and also that it threw open the ports of China to our teachers and missionaries which had heretofore to a great extent been closed to them, and which would assuredly in time enable us to convert the Celestials not only to our civilization and to our institutions of government, but to our religion. The civilized world rejoiced that friendly and amicable relations had been established between this country and a heathen nation whose population numbered one-tenth of the people of the habitable globe, or about 400,000,000 of souls.

For nearly a century, or since our successful revolution it had been our boast that ours was "the land of the free, and the home of the brave—the asylum for the oppressed of all nations." Not only our ports, but our schools and churches were free, and the broad, productive acres of the West invited the immigration of the Chinaman, as well as the Irishman, the German, the Swede, the Norwegian, or any of the over-populated and under-productive countries of the Old World. For many years the home productions of China have not been sufficient to provide for the wants of, and the consumption of her people, while the exports of articles of diet in our country have largely exceeded the imports.

Naturally enough Chang Woo Tsang, lured by the inducements held out, came with others of his countrymen to this land of liberty, and from long associations imbibed the spirit of our institutions, took up his home in Connecticut, the "Land of Steady Habits," graduated in the high school, united with an orthodox church and finally emigrated to the proud capital of this great and growing nation. He too began to take pride in the country that had received him so hospitably, and had become so thoroughly Americanized that he desired to throw off his allegiance to his native land and no longer remain a disciple of Confucius, but a liberty-loving, free American; qualified to hold, buy and sell real estate, sue and be sued, and become capable of transmitting to his posterity the estate which his industry, prudence and frugality were certain to accumulate.

Fortified with this purpose and sustained by two good, reliable witnesses to his probity and integrity and his fifteen years of residence in this country, he proceeded to the City Hall and asked leave of the clerk to make his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the home of his adoption—the great and glorious United States. The clerk, as was his wont, filled up and caused to be signed the usual form for applicants for citizenship, but found that under the Chinese Act of 1882, restricting the emigration of Chinese to this country, that Chang Woo Tsang could not be naturalized; and he was compelled to erase the record.

The friends of liberty and humanity did not fail to note on the passage of this act its many objectionable features, and to regret the enactment of a statute that was so discordant to the spirit of our institutions of government. It is directly opposed to the stipulations embodied in the Burlingame Treaty which reads as follows, viz.:

ARTICLE V.—"The United States of America and the Emperor of China cordially recognize the inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance, and also the mutual advantage of the free immigration and emigration of their citizens and subjects respectively from the one country to the other for the purposes of curiosity, of trade, or as permanent residents." Signed July 28th, 1868, at Washington, D. C.

But a little more than a decade had passed away before this Christian nation, which is our pride and boast, had forgotten the solemn compact which it had made with a nation which we are pleased to call heathen, and had assumed to enact a law depriving Chinamen of the "inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance," and to acquire either temporary or permanent residence in this country.

Its provisions are anti-Christian and uneonstitutional. It does not treat the citizens of China as we desire and expect that all nations in peaceable relations with our government shall treat the citizens of this country. Article 4, of Section 8, of the Constitution, says: "Congress shall have power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization." Article 14, Section 1: "Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

What do these words mean? Do we not deny protection to person and property, and especially equal protection of the laws, when we refuse to naturalize a person under our naturalization laws who has complied with its conditions? Do we not withhold from him the shelter of the "old flag," while we grant it to the Irishman, the German, the Italian, the Russian, the negro, the Indian and the Esquimaux? Has nature drawn any dividing lines between the nationalities of the world? Do we not stand to-day towards China in the same heathen position that she stood towards us twenty years ago, with our ports closed and our institutions shut to her people and her commerce? Would it not be consistent in the light of this experience to withdraw our missionaries from China, and let that country, whose civilization is older than the Greeks, with whom the art of priuting was invented and practiced 202 years B. C.; whose people invented the mariner's compass, gunpowder, the manufacture of porcelain, paper, and silk fabrics; who inaugurated and successfully carried out civil service reform many years ago—should they not send missionaries to us? Are not the tables turned, and do we not to-day, with this unjust law on our statute books, appear to the peoples of the Old World more in the light of heathens than Christians? Are we true to the liberties won by our fathers?

One of the strongest arguments made against the admission of the Chinese to this country was that they would not become citizens and adapt themselves to the laws and customs of our country, but only come to make money. That they are a peaceable, frugal and industrious people has not been denied.

Will Chang Woo Tsang test the constitutionality of his admission to citizenship in the United States Supreme Court? Will the passage of the bill now before the Senate to enforce the provisions of the Act of 1882 shed any lustre upon that body, or redound to the glory of our government?

THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE AMERICAN CONVENTION.

The commodious Lincoln Hall, the finest in the capital city, was opened Wednesday evening, February 20th, 1884, for the first session of the American Prohibition Convention.

A devotional meeting of half an hour led by Elder Barlow of Connecticut, preceded the opening of the convention, which was maintained with spirit during the brief time allotted.

At 8 o'clock the convention was called to order in the presence of a fine audience.

Rev. S. Collins, D. D., of Ohio, led in the opening prayer and was followed by an appropriate song by Geo. W. Clark, the "Liberty Singer."

Permanent organization was immediately taken up and the nomination of the following officers was concurred in unanimously:

PRESIDENT, Hon. S. C. Pomeroy of Washington, D. C.

VICE PRESIDENTS:

J. S. Rice, North Pownell, Maine.
Benj. M. Mason, Moultonboro, N. H.
J. W. Phelps, Brattleboro, Vt.
S. A. Pratt, Worcester, Mass.
A. M. Paull, Providence, R. I.
J. L. Barlow, Willimantic, Ct.
Donald Kirkpatrick, Syracuse, N. Y.
B. T. Roberts, N. Chili, N. Y.
A. L. Post, Montrose, Pa.
N. W. Pierson, Alexandria, Va.
Capt. J. M. Scott, Alexandria, O.
Hon. Ferdinand Schumacher, Akron, O.
Milton Wright, Richmond, Ind.
Peter Howe, Winona, Ill.
M. Veenboer, Grand Rapids, Mich.
John Phillips, Hudson, Mich.
Wm. Wilson, Menomonee, Wis.
Dr. J. N. Norris, Birmingham, Ia.
M. L. Holt, Neligh, Neb.
E. G. Paine, Wasioja, Minn.
John Dorcas, Burdette, Dak.

W. H. Pruett, Weston, Or.
James Kennedy, San Jose, Cal.
E. F. Sox, Seattle, Washington Ter.
John G. Fee, Berea, Ky.
G. W. Needles, Albany, Mo.
Jesse Ward, Partridge, Ala.
Harvey Johnson, Baltimore, Md.
Francis M. Allen, Knoxville, Tenn.

SECRETARIES:
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
W. I. Phillips, Chicago.
J. D. Brooks, Philadelphia.

The following committees were also chosen:

On Platform and Resolutions: S. C. Pomeroy, J. P. Stoddard, J. L. Barlow, S. A. George, Ferdinand Schumacher, Jtmes D. Brooks, F. W. Capwell.

On Nominations: E. D. Bailey, M. R. Britten, Harvey Johnson, William Jackson, John G. Fee.

On Business: M. R. Britten, John Dorcas, F. W. Capwell.

On Finance: J. P. Stoddard, Milton Ford, F. W. Capwell, Wm. Wilson, W. I. Phillips.

On Enrollment: O. C. Bailey. A. H. Springstein.

The first speaker of the evening was Rev. E. D. Bailey, well known as the late New England agent and secretary for the anti-lodge reform. His address upon the principles and necessity of the American party appeared last week. It was well reeeived as a most able exposition of the platform of that party. This address was followed, after a song by Mr. Clark, by the introduction of Hon. Frederick Douglass, who spoke with great applause on Civil Rights. The Convention then adjourned till next day.

THURSDAY.

The opening devotional meeting was led by Pres. J. Blanchard, and on the opening of the convention vice-president J. L. Barlow was called to the chair.

The committee on the American Publishing Company reported, also the committee on Finances. The expenses of the convention were, so far as could be computed, $220.97, and contributions amounting to $61 were received. The recommendations of the committee, that, the definite statement of expenses being made, the payment be shared equally by the National Christian Association and the American Publishing Company, and that private solicitation and a general collection at some meeting of the convention be taken, were voted.

The Business committee reported the following examination of the property purchased by the N. C. A. Board:

J. P. Stoddard bought of Vice Admiral S. C. Rowan on Jan. 1, 1883, No. 215, 4½ street, N. W. Washington, for the National Christian Association.

Cost of the Washington property	$6,875
Repairs, fixtures, taxes, etc	1,424.91
Total cost	$8,299.91
Received for the purchase of said property	4,910.80
Amount unpaid	3,389.11
	$8,299.91

The above sum remaining unpaid, Feb. 20th, 1884, was paid from funds of the National Christian Association, so that the property now stands free of all debt or incumbrance whatever, and insured for $3,000 until Jan. 10th, 1887.

Your committee have examined said property and find it in good repair and well worth the cost and more. After careful inquiry we find the property can be sold (as property is usually sold in the city) for $10,000.

M. R. Britten,
F. W. Capwell,
John Dorcas.

The Business committee was authorized to invite Mr. Colcman, agent of the National Reform Association, to address the Convention in the evening.

Pres. J. Blanchard addressed the Convention, resigning the nomination as Presidential candidate made at Galesburg, Ill., in 1881. The resignation was referred to the committee on Nominations, as was also the proposition to hold a National Convention at Chicago, and the reorganization of the National Central Committee.

Mr. Crossman, of Washington, who was present, rose and asked whether this was a religious or political organization, and whether one must be what is commonly known as an evangelical Christian in order to belong to the party; and, if not, whether they must support every article in the platform. He said he was in favor of some of the articles, but opposed to others.

Pres. Blanchard stated the history of the National Christian Association and the American party which had grown out of it. The American party, he said, believed that God has established two institutions on this earth—a church and a state. Every man who would vote against the accursed lodge system that is crushing the church and state, he should welcome.

Mr. Crossman said he agreed with the platform as to human rights and in its opposition to secret societies. He did not know what the Convention came here for, except to make an impression in favor of suffrage in the District. The negroes had been enfranchised here, and immediately the white men had been disenfranchised. "All the compensation we have had for that," said Mr. Crossman, "is a kind of negro aristocracy, made by appointing a few cunning, tempest-tossed negroes to the best positions. They hunted through the country and brought here men from other places to rule over the citizens. It seems to me that it is un-American. I would like to have a plank in the platform favoring suffrage in the District of Columbia."

Dr. E. W. Kirby, of Philadelphia, made a few remarks, saying: "I have sworn eternal hatred to wrong and to Masonry. I have been all through Masonry. I know all about it, and pronounce it one of the most disastrous things the country has to do with."

In the afternoon president S. C. Pomeroy called to order. Several resolutions having been presented and referred, George W. Clark sang "Where there's a Will there's a Way."

Addresses were made during the afternoon by Rev. B. T. Roberts of Rochester, N. Y., on Prohibition; by Gen. J. W. Phelps of Brattleboro, Vt., on the evils of Freemasonry; and by Rev. P. H. A. Braxton of Baltimore, on the civil rights of the colored race, and on Freemasonry.

The committee on Nominations reported, and their report thus finally adopted:

To the American Party Convention:—The committee to whom was referred the resignation of Pres. J. Blanchard as nominee of the party for President of the United States, would recommend the aceepting of the same and the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That recognizing the entire fitness of President J. Blanchard for the position to which he was nominated, we regret to have him withdraw, while at the same time we realize the spirit of great magnanimity in planning for the success of the eause. His great executive ability, his culture of mind and his perfect integrity of character mark his eminent qualifications for the highest position in the gift of the people, and we only consent to the resignation at his own urgent request.

We also recommend the nomination of Hon. S. C. Pomeroy for President of the United States, subject to ratification or rejection at the National Convention next June in Chieago.

We also endorse the previous nomination of Hon. J. A. Conant of Connecticut for Vice President, subject also to ratification or rejection at the Chieago Convention.

We recommend the holding of a National Convention of the American party in Chicago on or about June 25th, and that the final nomination of candidates and revision of platform be submitted to that Convention.

We recommend that each State be entitled to a number of delegates equal to the number of Congressional Districts in the State and two delegates at large. In States where there are American party organizations, the delegates shall be appointed by such organizations and credentials given by the chairman or by the member of the National Committee for that State. In States where there is no organization it shall be proper for any number of citizens in sympathy with the American party to organize and appoint delegates in the usual manner of such appointments. In States where it is not practicable to effect an organization individuals may, in the discretion of the Convention, be admitted to full membership, or if they be sent by other bodies than party organizations as delegates, it shall be discretionary with the Convention to admit them either as full members or as honoray members with the power of speaking, but not of voting.

We recommend that the Executive Committee be authorized to make all necessary arrangements for the Convention.

We recommend the election of the following National Committee:

F. W. Capwell, Dale, N. Y., Chairman.
E. D. Bailey, Washington, D. C. } Secretaries.
J. P. Stoddard, Chicago, Ill. }

J. S. Rice, Me.; B. M. Mason, N. H.; J. W. Phelps, Vt.; S. A. Pratt, Mass.; A. M. Paull, R. I.; Geo. Buck, Conn.; Dr. E. W. Kirby, Penn.; J. M. Scott, Ohio; M. Wright, Ind.; H. A. Day, Mich.; Wm. Wilson, Wis.; J. Norris, Iowa; J. M. Snyder, Neb.; Prof. E. S. Paine, Minn.; John Dorcas, Dak.; John G. Fee, Ky.; G. W. Needels, Mo.; Jesse Ward, Ala.; P. H. A. Braxton, Md.; F. M. Allen, Tenn.; P. S. Feemster, Kan.

We recommend that the chairman and secretaries of the National Committee, together with the nominees of the party, be an Executive Committee to consult with the National Committee by correspondence or otherwise and in the interim of meetings further the interests of the party.

In the evening after brief remarks by J. P. Stoddard upon the work of the National Christian Association, whose building was to be dedicated the next morning, he recalled the circumstances of the alleged abduction and drowning of Captain William Morgan of Batavia, N. Y. Subsequently he said it was suggested that Morgan as a pioneer in the movement of exposing secret lodges, who had sacrificed his life in the work, was entitled to a monument. The speaker described the monument which has been erected at a cost of about $3,000, over Morgan's grave at Batavia, observing that the money was raised by the voluntary contributions of over 2,000 people. He referred to the efforts to establish headquarters in this city, and said that he had declared when the idea was first suggested that if reform was to remain in Washington, the first thing they should have was a graveyard; that they ought to have real estate enough to bury at least 100 anti-masons, and then 100 Anti-masons might remain here. By that he said he meant that if they attempted to rent property here as in other cities timid property holders would drive them out of the city. Consequently they had purchased their property on 4½ street from Vice Admiral Rowan, and the last payment had been made upon it.

The address of the evening was made by Dr. A. A. Miner of Boston on "Driftwood in Politics." The eloquent address was received with enthusiasm by the Convention, which adjourned till Friday afternoon, the morning hours being filled with the N. C. A. meeting at the new building on 4½ street.

FRIDAY.

The president called to order on Friday afternoon, and after prayer by Rev. Mr. Kallock of Illinois, the chairman of the committee on Resolutions presented their report, action upon it being deferred until evening. Gen. J. W. Phelps also presented a resolution which provoked some discussion and was laid on the table. The resolution read thus:

Whereas, The two parties now in the ascendency have been long addicted to the use of secret organizations for the accomplishment of their ends, and they are in consequence mere conspiracies against Republican government, whose vitality they destroy. Their objects are plunder and power rather than the preservation of Republican institutions. They have become too much compromised with fraud, corruption, and partisan strife to be able to serve these institutions or to maintain their original character in any way. Under their long course of misrule the Republic has ceased to be a government for the people and by the people, but is a government of the people by the lodge and for the lodge; therefore

Resolved, That the agency of the American party has become a necessity for the preservation of the Republic; and we appeal to the people to appoint delegates to our Convention to assemble in September next for nominating candidates for President and Vice President of the United States, under whose administration it may be possible to join together again the disbursed portions of the Union, restore peace and law to the country, and secure the ancient American character of our institutions.

The afternoon programme provided for addresses—from Pres. S. F. Scovel, D. D., of Wooster University, Ohio, on "Observance of the Sabbath;" and from Pres. J. Blanchard on "Freemasonry and Free Government." These addresses were heard with profound interest, and copies requested for publication.

The report of the committee on Nominations was taken up again and the adoption completed as appears above.

The following was also adopted:

Resolved, That the capital of no nation eau be safe located in a disfranchised community, mid 1,000 grog shops, and 196 nests of secret societies.

Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the American party be requested to continue correspondence with our brethren of the National Prohibition and Home Protection party though their committees appointed or to be appointed with a view to harmonious and united political actiou.

Resolved, That we request the address of Pres. J. Blanchard for publication as a campaign doctrine, considering it a clear and powerful arraignment of the secret lodge system, and we also request a copy of the admirable address of Rev. S. F. Scovel, D. D., for publication.

Resolved, That we tender sincere and hearty thanks to Hon. S. C. Pomeroy for presiding ably over the Convention, to all the speakers for their addresses and to the citizens of Washington who have kindly and hospitably entertained delegates, and to the city press for fair treatment.

And after a song from Mr. Clark the afternoon closed.

An experience and devotional meeting led by J. P. Stoddard opened the evening exercises. After which, proceeding to business, the Convention adopted the preamble and resolutions offered by the committee in the afternoon, and in addition the following:

Whereas, With sincere gratitude to Almighty God, we recognize with humility that guiding Providence, which, after the contests of a century over the question of the limitation of power as established by the Constitution of the United States between State and National authority, culminating finally in the contest of arms, has established Supreme National authority over every foot of the National domain, and placed citizenship above the power of State Legislatures, or State executives, while the right of the ballot is made inviueible by National law in the hands of all men, without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude; therefore

Resolved, 1st, That we demand that protection of the civil rights of all men and their vindication by National law, which is demanded by the Amended Constitution of the United States, and which form the basis of the demand for loyalty and obedience, exacted from being in the enjoyment of American citizenship.

We demand this as the first duty to its citizens in every State of the Union, and wheresoever the jurisdiction of the United States extends. This we hold to be a paramount obligation before and above the protection of any species of property at home or abroad.

And lastly, we demand in most unmistakable terms the protection of Home and Firesides, for father and son, for mother and daughter, against that use and traffic in intoxicating liquors, which has become the greatest crime of our age and nation.

Resolved, 2nd, We are of those men who pursue their purposes and plans in an open and public manner, inviting investigation and criticism into all our efforts and all our plans. Hence it is that we especially deprecate the existence of all secret combinations and lodges where concealment is by oath made the highest obligation, and the very existence of such combinations in all governments has been found to be a standing menace to civil liberty and the rights of citizens. And we especially disavow all connection with such hidden and gigantic monopolies, exerting as they do a controlling and dangerous influence, whether that power be civil or political, whether seen in the church or the state, controlling the press or the pulpit.

And again, we deprecate all monopolies which disregard the rights of the laborer, or detract from the honor and dignity of honest toil and its just compensation.

And yet we oppose all secret combinations of the capitalist with his millions, or of the laborer in his poverty, which culminate only in strikes and distress, so inimical to individual welfare and the general good.

Resolved, 3d, That as this government rests upon the consent of the governed, and that support and consent is only obtained by the unrestricted use of the ballot, we demand that ballot upon equal terms by every American citizen of these United States, with only such restrictions as shall apply equally to all citizens, whether native or adopted, and this without respect to nationality, sex, or creed. And we deem this to be in harmony with the fundamental American policy, which allies taxation with representation and the equality of all citizens before the law.

Resolved, 4th, That we deem it the duty of the government to furnish the people with a uniform national currency under the Constitutional authority given "to coin money and regulate the value thereof." Thus delivering the people from the necessity of again resorting to State banks of doubtful authority and of suspicious soundness.

We favor also the safe and remunerative deposits of the people in a post-office savings bank, accessible to all, and beyond the danger of loss or depreciation.

Resolved, 5th, And lastly, as this is a Christian and not a heathen nation, we demand the recognition of the Bible in public schools, and the Sabbath as a day for religious worship and for rest.

Resolved, That we commend this declaration of our principles to our friends in all the States of this Union for them to examine and scrutinize, with a view of making a more full and complete declaratiou at a grand National Couvention to be held in Chicago on the 25th and 26th days of June next.

SUPPLEMENTARY RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, At a large public meeting of brewers and liquor-dealers held in this city of Washington on the 19th day of February, 1884, it was resolved to form and organize a Protective League; and that whenever the question of prohibition shall be made a party issue, they would vote as a unit in opposition thereto; and

Whereas, Protective Liquor Leagues have been formed in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky and several of the whisky-producing States, with the avowed purpose of controlling by their money, influence and votes, the State and National elections; therefore

Resolved, That we accept that issue thus tendered—"for to that complection it must come at last—" and in opposition to such leagues, secret or open, we offer to oppose them with the combined influences of morality and religion, not only, but with a united opposition ballot also, from this day onward until the avenues of intoxication and death are forever closed.

Delegates to the Prohibition National Convention in Pittsburgh May 21, were appointed as follows: Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, Pres. J. Blanchard, Geo. W. Clark, E. D. Bailey, J. P. Stoddard.

It was also resolved that the National Committee shall act until the Chicago Convention may appoint another.

The addresses of the evening were by Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood of Washington (which appears on another page), by Gen. Wm. Birney and by Rev. John G. Fee, of Berea, Kentucky. Gen. Birney having taken occasion to criticize some of the old Abolitionists, Geo. W. Clark made a brief defense and sang a telling song.

With these addresses the Convention closed, successful beyond the hope of most, if not all, who participated in it.

HE SAID NO MORE.

TROY, Ill.

Rev. J. D. Gehring in the Cynosure of Feb. 7th, says: "Writing for the Cynosure implies publicity as an enemy of secretism, and Masonry in particular." If that be so I want to write a little for it, for I want to be known as an enemy of lodgery in general and Masonry in particular.

Twenty-nine years ago when starting out in the ministry, I became acquainted with a man who had been a traveling preacher in the M. E. church, but was now located and practicing medicine. He was also a Mason. He lived one-half mile from where he held his membership, and nine miles from where the lodge met. He never pretended to go to prayer or class meeting, only one-half mile, but he never failed to attend all the meetings of the lodge, though nine miles away. He seemed to be, and I believe was a fast friend of mine, and one day as we were walking alone he said, "Bro. L., don't you think you ought to join the Masons?"

I answered "I have been thinking about it."

He then went on to praise Masonry. It was the thing for a young preacher going from place to place among strangers, etc. I answered, it must be far ahead of religion. At this he seemed to be greatly astonished, and asked me why I thought so, and I told him I knew a man who was a Christian minister—a man of good sense—that he was also a Mason and had tried both, and ought to know which was best, and said I, he goes nine miles regularly to attend the lodge and never attends prayer or class meeting, which would only require him to go one-half mile, and the Saviour says: "By their fruits ye shall know them." Now if that rule is true that man who ought to know, for he has tried them both, certainly thinks Masonry is better than religion, and as I do not personally know anything about Masonry I get my exalted views of it from such men.

That man never mentioned Masonry to me again.

R. W. LAUGHLIN.

BURKE, BURKING, BURKED!

The infamous Burke who was hanged in Edinburgh, in Scotland, over half a century ago, bequeathed a word to our language. The murder of three colored people at Cincinnati for the dissecting-room shows that the horror exists in our own favored land.

I was in Edinburgh when Burke was hanged, and have almost regretted since that I did not, as tens of thousands did, go to see that demon in human form dangle at the rope's end.

His last or nearly last victim was a great favorite with the people of Edinburgh—a harmless, kindly, half-witted man, known as "Daft Jamie." I have enjoyed, in common with the crowd around him, his ready apropos poetry on any topic suggested, which generally evoked much merriment and laughter. It was Jamie's disappearance which caused the enquiry which led to the apprehension of Burke and Hare (both Irishmen, I believe). Hare turned State's evidence and saved his unworthy neck, and was sent abroad to unknown parts. Kindly tailors had dressed Jamie in a coat of many colors, red and yellow striped, and not a boy could be supposed in Edinburgh who was not a friend of poor, good-natured "Daft Jamie."

It was dangerous for Dr. Knox to appear in public on account of the intense excitement at the time against him, for the people supposed he must have known that the subjects were murdered. The able doctor was not so regarded by his students, who, on his first reappearance before them, seemed to fear their censure. A student told me that never could he forget the emotion and gratitude of Dr. Knox when the students welcomed him by their cheers; and quite overwhelmed he assured them of his absolute life devotion to their service. T. H.

BRO. C. C. FOOTE'S ANSWER.

In the last Cynosure (Feb. 21) M. P. N. wishes to know "In what sense Jesus is the light of the world and how he is the light of heaven?" My life as a reformer has been too much of an out-door laborer to place me among the "able Christian writers" of whom our brother speaks. But I think I know enough to answer his question.

1st. "In what sense is Jesus the light of the world?" Sin necessarily beclouds and blinds its voluntary victims, whereby they become so ignorant of God that they "think he is altogether such an one as themselves." Can there be ignorance more astounding, or darkness more profound?" Now "whatever doth make manifest is light." Hence, knowledge is light. The coming of Jesus was to give men the knowledge of God and so put away this moral darkness, the opposite of which is spiritual light, the great want of the world. This want Christ alone can meet. To all men he gives the knowledge of right and wrong through conscience "so that they are without excuse." In the above sense Jesus is the light of the world.

2nd. "How is he the light of heaven?" The context shows that as the sun is the natural light of the world, so Jesus is the essential or natural light of heaven. That is, as light is a natural and necessary quality of our sun, so essential light is the necessary quality in the nature of the Son of God. This is illustrated in Matt. 17: 2: "And his face did shine as the sun." Acts 26: 13: "I saw in the way a light from heaven above the brightness of the sun." Such was the revelation of Jesus to Paul.

To this it may be added that from the few revelations we have of heavenly intelligences it would appear that light is an attribute of their nature. "When he [Christ] shall appear, we shall be like him." "He that hath this hope purifieth himself even as he is pure."

C. C. FOOTE.

PITH AND POINT.

COULD NOT DIE IN PEACE.

A man living in this place yet unconverted, said if he ever joined any church he would not join one that tolerated secret societies. He said when he was in the army, in the late war, he with other soldiers was detailed to guard a dying comrade on a Southern plantation. The dying man was a Mason, and could not die in peace until he revealed its secrets and exposed its sins. Masons in the neighborhood came to the house and were intent on taking him out and shooting him. but the soldiers protected him and allowed him to die in peace, after the secrets had been revealed and recorded to send to his children to warn them against the evils of Masonry. Light is breaking in from the East day by day, and the power of the enemy is waning. The Lord be praised for his power.—H. HULL, Elgin, Iowa.

THE CONTEMNER OF ISRAEL.

The greatest possible need of such information as you print in paper, tracts and books has developed right here in the midst of our holiness work, and we have come to feel that this secretism is the Goliath that is athwart the path of progress and is defying Israel.—Mrs. F. E. Irvine, Chesapeake, Mo.

THE CURSE OF FASHION.

I have been a reader of your paper for a number of years, and wish to express my heartiest approbation of the way it handles all manner of sin, more especially secret societies and intemperance. But there is one more great moral evil, scarcely less in its hurtful influence than either secret societies or intemperance. I mean extravagance of fashion among women, not only among the unconverted but among church members of all classes. As the lodge and intemperance enslave men, fashion enslaves women, and just because it has become popular, as drinking whisky was popular fifty years ago. Could you not devote a little corner in your paper to bringing this great evil before the notice of the public, which according to statistics costs more than rum or tobacco? Let us fight the enemy all along the line. G.

A TRUE CHURCH.

I am very much interested in the work of the N. C. A.; and have all my life long advocated the principles the Cynosure is battling for. Not being much of a debater, I have not made much stir about it, but have longed for, and in my feeble way labored for the advancement and final triumph of those principles. May the Lord hasten the day. The little church of which I am pastor is wholly anti-secret, admitting no one to membership who belongs to any secret organization. Our position touching that matter was when we organized here (in the summer of 1880) much criticized; and for some time it seemed to all human appearances we were not likely to prosper, but the Lord has helped us, and our church has grown from 13 to 30 during the last year. Having no money wherewith to assist in the good work, I can only pray, and use what little influence I have in that direction.—R. M. D. FEEMSTER, Fulton, Kans.

MADE A HALT.

Some weeks since I obtained from you one copy of the Ritual of the G. A. R., and by placing it in the hands of some persons who were contemplating forming a Post of the G. A. R. I think it was the means of leading them to abandon the project. I then sold it to a young man doing business in Indiana, the county seat of Indiana Co., Pa., where I hope it will do further service; so I want another copy for myself, and one for another man to whom I was speaking of it.—T. P. PATTERSON.

GOOD-BYE GRIPS.

Quite a number of Masons have left the lodge here. One Royal Arch Mason left the order and told me that no man could be a good Christian and be a Mason.—W. A. HYLE, Greensboro, Ind.

JESUS THE LIGHT.

In last Cynosure is a question asked, "In what sense is Jesus Christ the light of this world; and how is he the light of heaven?" In an old book called "Scenes beyond the Grave," in which is written the experience of Marietta Davis while lying nine days in a trance, I find a satisfactory answer to the above question. Every spiritually-minded person ought to read this wonderful book.—L. D. BROWN, Montmorenci, Ind.

ST. JOHNS, MICH., A PLACE TO AVOID.

St. Johns is the hot-bed of Knight Templarism. It was to this place that the trial of N. C. Hall of Davisburgh, Oakland Co., was transferred after the Supreme Court of the State had revoked the decision of the court or jury that condemned him to State's prison, and granted him a new trial. Since learning the fact that there are in this small town of St. Johns (a place of about 2,500 inhabitants), a lodge of 150 Knight Templars, to say nothing of Blue Lodge Masons, it is all clear to our minds why the Masonic wife murderer was brought here for another farce of a trial. You may remember the result, the jury could not agree. We were told by one who was present through the whole trial that a number of the ladies who were present, when they learned the result of the trial, offered him their congratulations! Were they the wives of some of these Knight Templars? We lately visited the mother of the murdered woman and she took us into her parlor and showed us the portrait of her beautiful daughter, Mrs. Anna Hall, and during the conversation she sadly remarked, "The death (i. e. murder) of my daughter ought to be a disgrace to the Masons. J. L. A.

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON XI.—March 16, 1884.—The Coming of the Lord. 1 Thess. 4: 13-18; 5: 1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT.—For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. 1 Thess. 4: 14.

DAILY READINGS.

The Coming of the Lord. 1 Thess. 4: 13-18; 5: 1-8.
An Assured Hope. 2 Cor. 5: 1-9.
The Hope of Nature. Rom. 8: 18-25.
The Resurrection. 1 Cor. 15: 51-58.
The Judgment. Matt. 25: 31-46.
The Time Unknown. Matt. 24: 36-51.
Watchfulness Rejoined. Matt. 25: 1-13.

THE COMING OF THE LORD.

Nearly nineteen hundred years ago the Son of God came into the world to save his people from their sins; by-and-by he is coming again "without sin unto salvation." To this second coming of the Lord Paul is directing the attention of those to whom he is writing. The early Christians expected that Jesus would very soon return; they thought that those saints who died before his return would be deprived of a great privilege and miss a great joy; and when their friends died they were filled with excessive sorrow. To correct their false views and to comfort them in their sorrow, Paul tells them that the living saints would have no advantage over the dead at the time of the Lord's second coming; that the latter would be raised from their graves, and that they and the living would be caught up together to meet their Lord.

1. The certainty of the Lord's coming. This second coming is purely a matter of revelation; all we can know about it must be gathered from the Scriptures. In the Old Testament it is mentioned as an undoubted fact. Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied, saying, "Behold, the Lord cometh, with ten thousand of his saints." Job says, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." The Psalmist sings again and again of the coming of his Lord to judge the world. Daniel spake of the Ancient of Days, who, at his coming, would receive an everlasting kingdom. Haggai and Zechariah speak in the same strain. But it is in the New Testament that this coming is revealed with special clearness. Jesus himself, in the days of his flesh, referred to it often. "The Son of man shall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him." "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." "I will come and receive you to myself." On the day of his ascension the angels testified to his future return; and from that day the Apostles took up the same line of testimony. Paul says, "Unto them that look for him will he appear the second time"; "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout." Peter says, "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." The Apocalypse, from the first chapter, in which it is said, "Behold, he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him," to the last chapter, in which it is said, "Surely I come quickly," is filled with revelations of his second appearing. These passages which refer to the Lord's coming as an unquestioned fact might be greatly multiplied. If we believe the Scriptures, we must believe that Jesus is coming again.

2. The manner of the Lord's coming. From the divine Word we learn that the Lord's second coming will be a glorious one. It will not be like his first coming. Then he came as a servant; hereafter he is to come as a King. Then he came as a man; hereafter he is to come as God. Then he came to be judged; hereafter he is to come to judge. Then he came in humiliation; hereafter he is to come in glory. Then his coming was unnoticed; hereafter it will shine from the east to the west, and every eye shall see him. Then he came alone; hereafter he is to be attended by all the retinue of heaven's monarch.

Jesus has never yet visited the world in glory. He visited it in mercy when he came to save; he has visited it again and again in wrath, when he came in terrible judgments to punish his foes and to remove the candlesticks of his unfaithful churches out of their places; but the time is coming when he will visit the earth in the full measure of his eternal glory. In one respect all his comings are alike; they are unexpected. So it was when he came in the deluge; so it was when he came to save; and so it will be when he comes to judge. The inhabitants of the earth will not be expecting him; he will come as a thief, or as a flash of lightning from an unclouded sky. The hour before the last will see nothing unusual, and men will be saying, "All things continue as they were since the beginning of the creation." On one half of the world the sun will be shining as brightly as it did on the Garden of Eden, and the inhabitants of the world will be eating and drinking and marrying and giving in marriage. The stores will be thronged with merchants and their customers; the work-shops will echo with the din of toil; the fields will be filled with busy laborers. In the cemetery the mourners will stand around the open tomb, and the grave-digger will wait with his spade in his hand to cover the dust with its kindred dust. On the other half of the world darkness will rest, and men will be wrapped in slumber, the miser dreaming of to-morrow's gains, the voluptuary of to-morrow's pleasures, and the politician of to-morrow's honors. Here and there, in his solitary chamber, the student will be pouring over his books, or writing at his desk; here and there some sick one and his watchers will be waiting for the morning light; here and there, in some banquet hall, there will be glittering lights and inviting feasts and sounds of music, dancing and laughter. Just then, without a note of warning, the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout. A terror greater than that which filled Belshazzar's palace will stop the dance and silence the song. The sick and his watchers will be astonished by a light brighter than that of the morning. The startled student will drop his books and his pen. The sleepers will waken to sleep and dream no more. The merchant will forget to praise his goods; the mechanic will throw down his lifted hammer; the reaper will forget his gathered sheaves; the work of burial will cease, and the grave-digger and the mourners will see a strange commotion in the tombs. "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be"; "In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh."

3. The object of the Lord's coming. It is to judge the world, to judge all the world, to judge us. The dead will be there. The pyramids of Egypt will be overturned, and the long line of Pharaohs will come forth. The stones will be rolled away from the sepulchres of the holy land, and kings, priests, and prophets will walk into the light of the day. The catacombs of Rome will swarm with living Christians and pagans, whose bones have laid side by side for centuries. The coral groves of the ocean will be startled as shipwrecked mariner and passenger awake from their long sleep. The graveyards of Christendom will be thronged with their forgotten dead. The battlefields of earth will see once more their heroes, who were buried where they fell. Those whom we have carried with our own hands to the city of the dead will be there.

And the living will be there, for there will be living ones on the earth at that day. Kings and their subjects, pastors and their people, parents and their children, teachers and their scholars, will have to obey the summons. The farmer will leave his plow in the furrow; the carpenter will leave his board half planed; the engineer will leave the throttle valve open; the sailor will leave the sail unfurled; the orator will leave the sentence half spoken; the minister will leave his sermon half written; for the summons to the judgment is one which cannot be disobeyed or deferred. We will be there. It will be a universal gathering. Then, for the first and only time, all men will stand before the same throne, in the same congregation. But when this multitude is assembled there will be a separation. That separation will be made on the line of faith in the Lord Jesus. Let us not deceive ourselves; those who believe will be saved; those who believe not will be condemned. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous unto life eternal." And what then? How will it be with us? Will we be on the left hand, while father, mother, wife, children, will be on the right? God grant that this agony may not be our portion. And it need not be. There is time enough yet. We are not yet summoned into the presence of the Judge; the trumpet of God has not yet sounded; proclaim it throughout the world, whosoever will can be saved.—Rev. W. J. Reid, D. D., in the U. P. Bible Teacher.

NOTES BY E. E. FLAGG.

THE LODGE AND THE SALOON WILL NOT BEAR THE LIGHT OF GOD'S GREAT DAY.

1. It is only the faithful servant who is prepared for his Lord's coming. Vs. 2–4. The slothful, negligent Christian is as ill-prepared to meet his Lord as the men of the world. It is probable from ch. 4: 11-12, that many of these Thessalonian Christians were expecting Christ's immediate coming and so neglected their ordinary daily business. In the year 1000 there was such a general expectancy. Many did not sow their fields, or seek to provide for future necessities. The result was a scarcity of food so great as to cause a general famine in whose train followed the terrible "black death," ravaging all Europe. If that day finds us engaged in the faithful, conscientious performance of the daily duties God gives us to do, it will find us prepared. A thief can not surprise a household whose inmates are up and about their ordinary tasks.

2. The child of light will not practice works of darkness. V. 5. Secrecy belongs to the night. Criminal acts are almost always done under cover of the darkness. So when a company of men meet at night in a guarded lodge-room with solemn oaths or promises to keep their proceedings forever secret from the world outside we have reason to believe that their actions will not bear investigation. A Christian who joins these secret associations allies himself with the children of darkness, on whom the day of Christ's coming will fall with such sudden surprise and terror. If he is ashamed to have his family and neighbors know what is done in these secret conclaves, much more will he be "ashamed before the Lord at his coming."

3. The children of light are constantly watching. V. 6. Some have tried to foretell from Revelations and the book of Daniel the exact time of Christ's appearing. Such attempts are wrong and foolish. Says Bengel, "Those who watch do not need to be told when he will come for they are always ready." They will not be found sleeping while so much wrong and evil are in the world.

4. The saloon a work of darkness. Vs. 7, 8. When the blinds are opened on a bright summer day the flies gather at the window. This is because they are the children of the day and the sunlight; and if they would always keep in the light they would not become the prey of the spider who weaves his web in dark or shaded corners. This is the way the rumseller does, for he is a child of darkness; but the children of light have no business in his haunts. Said a converted rumseller, "When a young man urged by his companions entered my saloon I was satisfied though he refused to take anything stronger than a glass of lemonade. I knew it was the first step. My best customers were some that began with a glass of lemonade or soda water. The only safe place is outside a saloon." But children of the day are also soldiers. They must not only shun all these evils, they must fight them bravely, steadily, persistently, and at the last they shall receive the crown of victory.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

If we knew the Judgment day would come to-morrow should it make any difference with the performance of our daily duties? Luke 19: 13; Rom. 12: 11. How does the Bible describe the grips and signs of the lodge? Prov. 6: 12, 13. Do evil men always prefer the night? Job 24: 14, 17. What counsel will save the young from the snares of the lodge and the saloon? Prov. 4: 14, 15.

ANTI-MASONIC LECTURERS.

GENERAL AGENT AND LECTURER, J. P. Stoddard, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

STATE AGENTS.

Conn., J. L. Barlow of Willimantic.
Indiana, S. L. Cook of Albion.
Kansas, P. S. Feemster, Pearlette.
Missouri, M. N. Butler of Albany.
Minn. R. J. Williams, Winnebago City
Michigan, H. A. Day, Parma.
New York, W. B. Stoddard, Dale.
Vermont, O. C. Bailey.
Wisconsin, Isaac Bancroft, Monroc

DEGREE WORKERS.—[Seceders.]

S. E. Starry, Clarence, Iowa.
Jas. Furguson, " "
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
N. Callender, Thompson, Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
J. H. Baird, Templeton, Pa.
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Promise City, Mich.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Baker, Mo.
A. D. Freeman, Downers Grove, Ill.
E. Mathews, Spring Arbor, Mich.
Wm. Fenton, St Paul, Minn.
E. I. Grinnell, Blairsburg, Iowa.
Warren Taylor, South Salem, O.
J. S. Perrry, Thompson, Conn.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
J. T. Michael, New Wilmington, Pa.
Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Elder L. H. Bufkins, Scranton, Iowa.
S. G. Barton, Breckinridge, Mo.
Joel H. Austin, Goshen, Ind.
D. B. Turney, Bird Station, Ill.
J. F. Browne, Berea, Ky.
E. Barnetson, Jackson Valley, Pa.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
Geo. T. Dissette, Sabetha, Kans
D. A Richards Clarkville Mich

SPECIAL.—To those who may have had their paper stopped much to their surprise, we wish to say that at this season of the year when there are many subscriptions received for renewal, and there are a number of changes to make on our mail list, there is danger of clerical errors, and if any of our subscribers should not receive the Cynosure as they expect, we would be grateful if they would send us a postal card notifying us that they wish their subscription continued, and we will be pleased to make the correction at once.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Cedar Grove Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

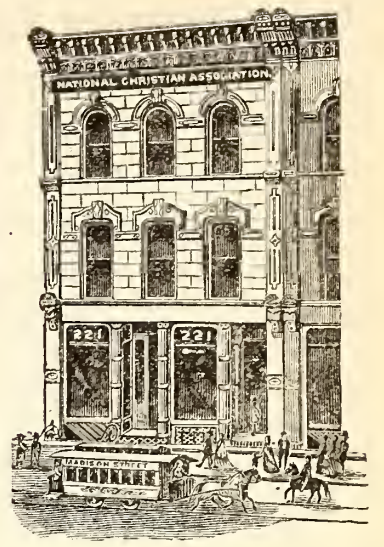
adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Meuomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Tonica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.; Solsbury, Iud.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentuckv.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS



Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Berea, Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Andros, Greece.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

☞NOTICE.☜

Persons write occasionally, saying, "I sent a remittance so and so, but the tag on my paper it not changed." Such inquiries are proper, and the explanation is this: when a subscription is received it is entered at once on the book and the letter filed for future reference if needed, but the printed mailing list is not changed until a sufficient number are received to require the printing of a new list. If but few subscriptions are received, the change may be delayed for a month or more, but when the list fills up rapidly it requires frequent revision. If the date on your paper is not changed within four weeks after you remit it is the safest way to drop a card to this office

N. C. A. BUILDING AND OFFICE OF THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

PRESIDENT.—F. W. Capwell, Dale, N.Y.
VICE-PRES.—Jos. Travis, Chicago.
REC. SEC.—John D. Nutting, Oberlin.
COR. SEC. and GEN. AGENT.—J. P. Stoddard, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
TREASURER.—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.
DIRECTORS.—Joseph Travis, J. M. Wallace, O. F. Lumry, M. R. Britten, T. H. Gault, John Gardner, L. N. Stratton. W. T. Meloy, Alexander Thomson, Thos. Hodge, J. B. Blank.

The object of this Association is:

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

FORM OF BEQUEST.—I give and bequeath to the National Christian Association, incorporated and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, the sum of ——— dollars for the purposes of said Association, and for which the receipt of its Treasurer for the time being shall be sufficient discharge.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

PRESIDENT.—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.,
SECRETARIES.—H. L. Kellogg, W. H. Ross and M. N. Butler.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

ALABAMA.—Pres., W. A. McAlpine; Sec., G. M. Elliott; Treas., E. Fishel, all of Selma.
CALIFORNIA.—Pres., L. B. Lathrop, Hollister; Cor. Sec., Mrs. U. P. Merrill, Woodland; Treas., C. Ruddock, Woodland.
CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., Geo. Smith, Willimantic; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.
ILLINOIS.—Pres., J. C. Elliott, Swanwick; Sec., H. L. Kellogg; Treas., W. I. Phillips, Cynosure office.
INDIANA.—Pres., I. W. Lowman, Auburn; Sec., S. Y. Miller, College Corners; Treas., Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake.
IOWA.—Pres., Henry Avery, College Springs; Rec. Sec., A. W. Hall, College Springs; Co.; Sec., C. D. Trumbull, Morning Sun; Treas., J A. Laird, Wayne.
KANSAS.—Pres.. B. F. Worrell, Olathe; Sec., W. W. McMillen, Olathe; Treas., H. Curtis, Olathe.
MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Sec., Mrs. E. D. Bailey; Treas., David Manning, Sr.; all of Worcester.
MICHIGAN.—Pres., J. L. Bush, Muskegon; Rec. Sec'y, A H Springstein, Pontiac; Cor. Sec'y, H. A. Day, Parma; Treas., Geo. Swanson, Jr., Jackson.
MINNESOTA.—Pres., E. G. Paine, Wasioja; Cor. Sec., W. H. McChesney, Fairmont; Rec. Sec'y, Thos. Hartley, Richland; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.
MISSOURI.—Pres., C. J. Kephart, Avalon; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., M. N. Butler, Albany.
NEBRASKA.—Pres., S. Austin, Fairmount; Cor. Sec., W. S. Spooner, Kearney; Treas., J. C. Fye.
NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Elder J. G. Smith, New Hampton; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., E. Smith, Center Stafford.
NEW YORK.—Pres., F. W. Capwell, Dale; Sec'y, John Wallace, Syracuse; Treas., M. Merrick, Syracuse.
OHIO.—Pres., Wm. Dillon, Dayton; Cor. Sec., J. P. Lytle, Sago; Treas., J. M. Scott. Alexandria.
PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., A. L. Post, Montrose; Cor. Sec., N. Callender, Thompson; Treas., W. B. Bertels, Wilkesbarre.
VERMONT.—Pres., W. R. Laird; Sec., C. W. Potter.
WISCONSIN.—Pres., Enos Collins, Coloma; Cor. Sec., W. W. Warner, Oakfield; Treas., M. R. Britten, Vienna.
WEST VIRGINIA.—Pres., D. B. Turney; Sec. John Bosley, Grafton; Treas., H. B. Higgins. Petroleum.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1884.

THE CYNOSURE AND THE WASHINGTON PAPER.

These two papers must stand by each other to the death of the lodge.

Some have proposed to take the Cynosure to Washington, and so have but one. The objections are these:

1. The Washington paper, while no less true to God and the country than the Cynosure, must be more or less influenced by the fact that it is the organ of the American party; and must not needlessly drive off votes. Civil government is "not founded in GRACE but in NATURE," say the old Scotch divines. It follows that the children of this world must not be disfranchised, but admitted to citizenship on equal terms with the children of God.

But it is one thing to belong to civil government, under equal protection by its laws, and another thing to belong to the American party, which is to reform our civil government, and bring it back to where we started, as "a Christian and not a heathen nation."

For illustration, "We would not vote for a man who bastardizes the Son of God, and impugns the virtue of his mother, by denying miracles." But we would employ him to carry a mail or build a breakwater, if he was an honest man, and could best do that work. Civil government is to keep men from choking society with its own blood, till the grace of God changes their hearts and fits them for heaven.

Now we need two classes of papers; both standing on the American platform, the one primarily representing the civil, the other the religious aspects of our work. The Washington paper, and the new papers all over the Union, which will soon be with us, will naturally lean to the first class. They will be American party papers; but if the Cynosure goes down, the Pole-Star falls from our political heavens; if the Cynosure is what its name imports, viz., a true reflector of Bible light. The intent of this writing is, not to slacken any one's zeal for the new paper (The American), in zeal for which we yield not to the foremost; but to put the simple fact before our readers, that hundreds, for a time, will take the American, where few will the Cynosure, on the principle that "the new broom sweeps clean;" and if the Cynosure should go out, or be withdrawn from the Carpenter building, we may endanger our title to our headquarters in the city which nominates, and will hereafter nominate our Presidents. We must not take down our light-house on the Lakes! And, for the last few weeks, Cynosure receipts show that the "Old Guard" are on duty with their weapons burnished, and their armor scoured.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Alexandria—Slave Pens—Howard University—Politics—Prohibition—The Zouave—Transformation.

215, 4½ Street, N. W.,
WASHINGTON, Feb. 27, 1884.

I spent last night in the old town of Alexandria, six or seven miles below Washington on the west side of the Potomac. It is a time-battered, slavery-battered and war-battered town of ten thousand people. It has not gained in population for ten years. The farms surrounding the city for miles back are the lands of which Tom. Corwin said, "The soil turns pale whenever the slave sets down his black foot." I asked a bright young Alexandrian on the boat this morning, "What could those farms be bought for an acre?" "Oh, almost nothing," said he, laughing.

On landing yesterday late in the afternoon we went direct to the old Episcopal church, built in 1773 of brick shipped from England. We went in and sat in the seat, on the very plank on which George Washington sat. His name of course is kept on the pew. All the other pews are changed to slips. Washington's pew is square, with seats all around, of course one with back to the pulpit, to leave it as it was. Mt. Vernon, Washington's house, is seven miles down the river-side. In the old grave-yard we deciphered one slab to date 1771; three years before the church was built. An Episcopal congregation worships there still, and the name "Robt. E. Lee" is on a modern slip opposite Washington's pew. Thence we walked to licensed by our Congress to Franklin and Armfield; afterward to old Mr. Bruin, who died some two years ago near by. "A colored woman," said the young Alexandrian on the boat, "took charge of the slave-prison for him, went with him wherever he went, and was with him all the time." The house stands still just as when Armfield lived in it, but the large, long, prison-yard walls are torn down, and a row of brick houses built on the site. One should think the tenants would fear ghosts!

THE SLAVE PENS

In the first tenement of this new brick row, lives a nice gentlemanly man named Pauli (pronounced Paulee). He took us into a narrow passage so we could see the cellar windows, grated with iron, which were the prisons proper, where dangerous or distrusted slaves were kept nights. There are several apartments, quite underground, separated by iron doors. I asked my young Alexandrian if he remembered when the slaves were here?

"O yes! I was quite a boy. I was often in the yard."

"Did they put the men and women together?"

"O, no! They had separate yards."

"Did any of them cry?"

"O, yes, the women cried most. Some of the men sat silent; but others hurrahed and did not seem to care."

This Mr. Pauli said, "I ran a train on the railroad here. The slaves were shipped South on my trains."

"Didn't they often cry and take on badly when starting?"

"Yes, often. I have seen them take little babes from their mother's arms, and put the mother aboard."

"A good many were shipped during the war?"

"Yes, a great many."

"O dear!" I exclaimed. "Are you not glad you were whipped?"

"O, no," laughing; "I haven't come that far."

"But are you not glad we have one country and one flag?"

"O yes," he replied.

I asked the young Alexandrian on the boat,—"How many do you think there are in Alexandria who wish slavery back?"

"I don't believe there is one," he replied.

"Then you love the cure, but hate the physician who cured you?"

"Yes," said he laughing; "pretty much so."

VIRGINIA POLITICS.

Last night after tea, I called on a merchant born in Katskill, N. Y., and who knew Thurlow Weed and Croswell, the rival Albany editors. He went to Alexandria twelve years before the war (1848), but "skedaddled" when it became too hot. He was councilman and judge in Richmond under martial law. He said, "Virginia is virtually governed by Mahone. He is a rough, swearing man, but smart as a steel-trap. He was an original Democrat and rebel. And now he hates both the Bourbons and the Republicans alike. The negroes take to him more than to the Republicans, because he does so much for them, giving them schools, offices, etc. But the Bourbons put two colored men on the school-board in Richmond, and the Republicans would help the negroes, too, if they could get control." He was disappointed when I told him the Republicans had no chance the next election.

PROHIBITION.

"Have you any prohibitionists here in Alexandria?"

"O Yes, but they won't vote a prohibition ticket. We tried it for mayor, but he got almost no votes."

"Have you heard of an American Prohibition Convention in Washington, lately?"

"O yes; and I once knew J. A. Conant of Connecticut whom they have nominated for Vice President."

HOWARD UNIVERSITY.

On the boat were some fifteen or sixteen young colored students of both sexes, students of Howard University. They had their books and were getting their lessons on the boat. They were bright, well-behaved young people; but did not know how many of the students were professed Christians, and knew nothing of secret societies. Secretary Stoddard asked President Patton's leave to lecture to the students, the other day. His reply was, "We had a lecture here a little while ago." Mr. Hinman had given the students a talk a year and a half ago. There are 400 young men, and seventy girls there. If they could be properly instructed on the subject, in a few years they will enlighten the whole South.

THE MURDERED ZOUAVE.

We came by "the Jackson House," a fine building on a corner, where the rebel flag was flying after our troops had taken possession of the town in 1861. Col Ellsworth of Chicago went up with a squad of men, took the flag and coming down, met Jackson, the proprietor, and, said pleasantly, "I have your flag, sir." Jackson, with a horrible oath, drew up a heavy loaded gun and shot him. One of Ellsworth's men instantly shot Jackson and pinned him to the floor with his bayonet. The dying man writhed and twisted on the weapon and died with oaths and threats on his lips!

The streets of Alexandria, all named while under a monarchy, are "King," "Queen," "Duke," "Prince," "Princess," etc., which mark their British origin. But a far greater change was that from slavery to freedom. Young men remember when no colored person could be out after night without a "pass." Now the streets are free and without fear. A judge of election last November told us that the blacks voted freely with the whites, and all was tranquil and pleasant. The flocks of children in the streets seem hale, happy and contented, a new energy and earnestness fills all faces. There are no loafing masters or idle slaves, and Rev. Mr. Lee, a Northern man and Free Methodist, is gaining the good opinion of the people; and a single night in that pleasant old town compensates one for years of proscription and persecution once meeted out to Abolitionists. J. B.

THE NEW ENGLAND CONVENTION.—Secretary Stoddard visits Northampton to prepare for the N. E. convention. It is hoped Mrs. J. Blanchard will see Mrs. J. P. and Mrs. Lyman Williston with Miss Billings, Mrs. Rev. I. Clark and other ladies the week before the meeting comes off. If Dr. Tarbox does not attend, he will give in the papers an endorsement of the convention. Dr. A. A. Miner of Boston, has given a contingent promise to attend the Chicago June Convention, and no persuasion will be spared to have him and President Seelye at the Northampton meeting. It is very significant that Carl Schurz and President Seelye have lately spoken together in Brooklyn for a new clean party, very. It is to be hoped that the pastors, in and around Northampton, will move their people to pray for Senator Poneroy and the convention. I hope, God willing, to attend and speak. J. B.

—By the time this paper reaches its readers the editor will be on his way from Washington to the West.

—Prof. L. N. Stratton of Wheaton Theological Seminary will address the Chicago Christian Association in Carpenter Hall on Tuesday evening, March 11, on "The Religion of Freemasonry." There should be a full attendance of friends in the city to welcome the eloquent speaker. There is some call for the publication of this series of addresses in pamphlet form.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard, New York State agent, spoke last week in Greigsville and York in the Free Methodist and United Presbyterian churches. These places are in Livingston county. At York are strong Covenanter and United Presbyterian churches, which are in hearty sympathy with the reform. From these places and vicinity Bro. Stoddard sends sixteen names for our list.

—The suffering of the homeless along the Ohio river, especially between Evansville, Ind., and Cairo, Ill., is almost beyond description. Many, without other shelter than government tents, have contracted diseases that will be fatal during the very cold weather of last week. From the storm-smitten regions of the South we hear little, because by far the greatest sufferers are the poor blacks. In one district in South Carolina where it was reported that one person was killed, private information assures us that this person was a white man, while there were numerous fatalities among the blacks, which were not considered worth reporting. The ladies of the College church, Wheaton, having lately sent two barrels of supplies to Chester, S. C., get reply that the suffering among the injured black people is awful, and with scarce any mitigation from sympathy or foreign aid. God will remember those who pity these poor.

THE ILLUSTRATOR, the excellent monthly devoted to the exposition of the Sabbath-school lessons will be sent to every yearly subscriber to the Cynosure, old or new, for $2.30 for both papers. Present subscribers can take advantage of this offer. The Illustrator will be found to be the best of the cheaper Sabbath school helps and at the very low rate we have secured for our subscribers, no teacher among them can afford to do without it.

NOTE.—Trajan, not Trojan, was the name of the Roman emperor mentioned on the second page of this number.

NO WHISKEY for the babies is and always has been the Cynosure's rule, which allows only an exception for rare external application. The evil advice of two weeks since is utterly repudiated.

Such vexatious errors as the above we are at much expense to avoid, but sometimes they slip by three or four sharp eyes.

THE CONVENTION PROCEEDINGS.

THE N. C. A. CONVENTION.

THE DEDICATION OF THE NEW BUILDING TO THE ANTI-LODGE REFORM.

Friday forenoon, February 22d, was devoted to the special interests of the National Christian Association, and the convention was held in the fine new building purchased by the Association at No. 215 Four-and-a-half street, near Pennsylvania avenue, about half way between the Capitol and the Executive Mansion. The assembly-room of the building was well filled with delegates when, in the absence of Rev. Dr. Collins, the president, F. W. Capwell, vice-president from New York, called to order. The convention united in singing, "Nearer my God to Thee." Rev. E. D. Bailey read an appropriate selection from the Scriptures and Rev. D. C. Martin of Princeton, Indiana, offered prayer, dedicating the building to Christian reform. The veteran reform singer, George W. Clark, sang a stirring hymn of encouragement for those who labor amid trials and hardship. Rev. S. A. George of Mansfield, Ohio, was chosen temporary secretary.

The Secretary and General Agent, J. P. Stoddard, reported the work of the National Association and the State auxiliaries since the Monument Convention in Batavia, New York. The opening of the work in Washington and the neighboring cities of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Chambersburg under the labors of Rev. H. H. Hinman, Pres. J. Blanchard and others; the desire of the friends in Washington that a center of influence for the reform be made at the capital of the nation; the transfer of the New England agent, E. D. Bailey; the selection, purchase and refitting of the handsome and commodious building in which the convention was assembled as an apparent necessity to a permanent and satisfactory work in Washington; and the political turn which the movement took on necessarily, in the midst of the nation's legislative, executive and judicial departments—these features of the progress of the reform were reviewed. The fine building was now paid for, the deed to the National Association perfect, clear, and without the drawback of a mortgage, and he now had the pleasure of formally completing his task as General Agent of the Association in beginning a movement in Washington which must influence and control every hamlet of the land if we continue to maintain our integrity and glory as a nation, by delivering to the president of the corporate National Christian Association, F. W. Capwell, the deed of the building No. 215, 4½ street, Washington, D. C.

The deed was found to be in due form and was accepted by Mr. Capwell, in the name of the National Christian Association, who also expressed his thanks to all the friends whose liberality and faith and courage had secured so valuable and convenient a property in the capital city for the use of the reform.

The convention also on motion of Elder J. L. Barlow adopted the following:

Resolved, That in accepting the deed of the property 215, 4½ St., N. W., Washington, D. C., our profoundest gratitude is due Almighty God, who has so wonderfully smiled upon and blessed the efforts of those who have labored for this consummation; and that the thanks of this body are hereby tendered to Senator S. C. Pomeroy, Milton Ford, P. H. Gresham, H. H. Hinman, and other friends in Washington, with all who have donated the necessary funds, and especially to Rev. J. P. Stoddard, for his untiring efforts to bring about the end this hour has reached.

The convention then proceeded to elect permanent officers with the following result:

PRESIDENT:—Rev. S. Collins, D. D.
SECRETARIES:—Henry L. Kellogg, Chicago.
M. N. Butler, Albany, Mo.
Rev. S. A. George, Mansfield, O.
VICE PRESIDENTS:
Alabama, Rev. Benjamin Burke, Mobile.
Arkansas, Rev. C. T. Overmyer, Little Rock.
California, T. K. Bufkin, Pasadena.
Connecticut, Rev. J. L. Barlow, Willimantic.
Colorado, Rev. Edward Hildreth, Colorado Springs.
Florida, Jos. F. Galloway, Okahumpka.
Georgia, Rev. Jos. E. Roy, D. D., Atlanta.
Illinois, Rev. D. S. Faris, Sparta.
Indiana, Dr. S. L. Cook, Albion.
Iowa, Rev. Wm. Johnston, College Springs.
Kansas, H. Curtis, Olathe.
Kentucky, Rev. John G. Fee, Berea.
Louisiana. Rev. Christopher Hunt, New Orleans.
Maine, E. Mitchell, Pittston.
Massachusetts, S. A. Pratt, Worcester.
Michigan, Dr. L. J. Wicker, Holly.
Minnesota, Prof. E. G. Paine, Wasioja.
Missouri, J. B. Bonner.
Nebraska, Rev. J. M. Snyder, Loup City.
New Hampshire, J. Smith, Centre Strafford.
New York, F. W. Capwell, Dale.
Ohio, Prof. Lewis Davis. D. D., Dayton.
Pennsylvania, Dr. J. O. Miles, Dalton.
W. Virginia, J. W. Moss, Cameron.
Wisconsin, J. W. Wood, Baraboo.
Tennessee, Pres. J. S. McCulloch, D. D., Knoxville.
Vermont, Gen. J. W. Phelps, Brattleboro.
Dakota, Rev. D. F. Shepherdson.

Brief addresses were made by Senator Pomeroy, Pres. J. Blanchard, E. D. Bailey and J. P. Stoddard in harmony with the spirit of the hour. The country is in sore need of a party maintaining the principles of the American platform and standing by them until they prevail at the polls, in the courts, in the legislatures, in Congress and in the executive and judicial departments of the government. The building in which the convention was then meeting was excellently adapted for a headquarters of such a political movement and the advice was unanimous that the National Association should allow the American Publishing Company to use the building for this purpose.

Before the friends had left the building some $2,000 additional stock had been taken in the Publishing Company.

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE S. HARDIE.

CHAPTER. II. Which describes the Thursday evening prayermeeting at Lodgeville.

"Come girls, you will go to prayer-meeting, won't you?"

This question was asked by Mrs. Thompson on the evening following the one on which the ball took place, so it was no wonder that Carrie, who had been cross and sleepy all day, answered snappishly "I am not. Who wants to hear the same rig-ma-role every Thursday night for a dozen years? Nobody'll be there but Mr. and Mrs. Hornely, Mr. Trowley and Mr. Gillman and Uncle Job Dee, seeing he's back—for who ever knew him to miss a prayer-meeting—and you and pa and the minister. He'll get up and read a long, dry chapter and preach from it half an hour. Then you'll sing 'I would not live alway,' and pa'll lead in prayer. Mr. Gillman will enumerate the many mighty deeds done in Old Testament times and tell the Lord they are types by which the present generation may be profited. Then the rest will take their turns in praying and telling their experiences, all beginning with the stereotyped 'Brothers and Sisters' and closing up with 'I ask an interest in your your prayers.' Finally you'll all sing 'How tedious and tasteless the hours,' and be dismissed. No I know all their experiences and prayers by heart—I don't want to go."

Carrie's description was in one respect at least truthful. Mr. Thompson glanced over the vacant pews and noted that those only whom she had mentioned were present, excepting indeed Debbie and Tom. Later Daniel Thompson came in and sat with half-shut eyes in the farthest corner.

Mrs. Thompson was unusually cheerful this evening, which was something of a puzzle to Tom Rees and Debbie. Truth to tell, the dance of the previous night had been voted by each of them "a failure," and the several times repeated assertion of Debbie to her sister, "It was mean of us to go when we knew how mother would feel bad about it," showed a heart ill at ease; and as she noted the happy manner of her mother while chatting with Mrs. Hornely, she whispered to her companion, "I'm so glad mother don't mind it much, I was afraid she wouldn't get over feeling bad about it for a week."

But Debbie was quite mistaken as to the secret of her mother's cheerfulness. All the previous night she had lain awake, thinking, praying. Hour after hour sped on. She heard Debbie's hand on the latch, her light footstep on her chamber floor, and some hours later Carrie's more weary home-coming. She heard the chanticleer's loud call in the barnyard, the rattling of stove-covers and kindling-wood as Daniel built the morning fire, and still sleep had not visited her eyelids. As the night passed so did the day. Like one in a dream, she performed her household duties, till, late in the afternoon she came from her closet with that air of calm. The burden of her prayer had been, "O, that this tide of wickedness might be stayed," but now her rested heart whispered, "It shall be done."

The meeting began quite after Carrie's description. Elder Kemp read a portion of Scripture, a verse was sung, Mr. Thompson led in prayer, followed by Mr. Gillman and Mr. Trowley, then Mrs. Thompson arose. It was not the time yet for speaking. In fact (as Carrie would have said) it was Mr. Hornely's turn to pray. Mrs. Thompson's voice betrayed intense earnestness as she said:

"Brothers and sisters, we have often asked each other the question, 'What is the cause of our failure to secure a revival of religion among us?' Is not our God as mighty as ever? Are not his promises as sure? The cause must be with us. Let us talk about it to-night, friends. I feel my own dear ones—the children of many prayers—to be sliding down the death-road. I can't help being aroused. O let us find and remove the cause."

"A m e n!" came in a voice of thunder from Uncle Job Dee, who arose to speak but quickly gave way to the leader of the meeting, who was also upon his feet.

Elder Kemp said, "Brethren, this question has troubled me very much, but I am glad to say it is settled now since I have left it with God. We have just closed a series of meetings. What they were you all know. We had the best talent within our reach. We spared no pains in striving to gain a hearing before the masses, but we failed. Could we have done more?"

"Yes sir, we could, 'cordin' to my way o' thinking," was the reply of Uncle Job as he sprang to his feet. "'Cleanse your hands, ye sinners, and purify your hearts, ye double minded.' I think that 'ere Scriptur' fits us to a T. We'll go till Gabriel's trump sounds without a revival if we don't cut loose from them 'ere 'bominations"—indicating the direction of the saloon, over which was the Masonic hall. "Brother Hornely, what's that bit o' Scriptur' that says there's no use in our prayin' as long as we hold to any o' the devils doin's? As long as we bow and scrape to the devil's best man that's a batchin' it over that 'ere saloon we might 'bout as well stop prayin'. That's common sense 'cordin' to my way o' thinkin'. You draw a line right here and call out every man who stan's up straight for God with his back to that 'ere saloon and billiard hall and den of Hiramites an' let them go to prayin' an' you'll see!"

Uncle Job sat down. The profound silence that followed was broken by a low, musical voice which said, "Let us pray." It was Mrs. Hornely. That such a separation might take place, that their eyes might be opened to see those monsters of iniquity in all their hideousness, that each of those present might be entirely loyal to the Master—this was her prayer, the substance also of her husband's petition, and then came a short pause that was ended by the minister's, "Let us rise and be dismissed."

But the meeting was not "closed." Though the Thompsons and Hornelys betook themselves to their several places of abode, the "meeting" did not come to an end till nearly morning, when Mr. Gillman, already separated on his homeward way some twenty rods from Uncle Job, was heard to shout to that individual, "Mind you this isn't the end."

And the other shouted back, "You're right. It isn't."

(To be continued.)

GOOD WORDS.

I do not like to be without your paper; it leaves a vacancy in our reading matter that we cannot fill with any of our Canadian papers.—Wm. Parson, Otterville, Ont.

I think it to be one of the best religious papers published.—C. C. Burt, Mallet Creek, Ohio.

I like it very much and hope that its subscription list may swell to thousands more than the present number.—Sarah A. Proctor, Gibson City, Ill.

I cannot do without the Cynosure, which I regard as the best of the several papers which I receive.—Rev. A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.

You may consider me a life subscriber to the Cynosure. I have four boys and they all read it. I take other papers, but the Cynosure is the first read.—H. S. Taylor, Sparta, Mich.

I must say that I think more of your paper than ever. I told our M. E. preacher the other day that this is the only real honest paper that I have found yet.—John F. Icke, Waukesha, Wisconsin.

It is not my intention to be without your most excellent paper, neither can I afford to lose its weekly visits. I want to keep posted in this great reform in which I have enlisted till the end of the war, just as I did early in the Abolition movement, which I never regretted although then as now all had to contend with bitter persecution and misrepresentations in the church and out of the church alike. I am trying to do what I can in the way of circulating "anti" tracts and books.—Wm. D. Johnston, Lexington, Ill.

This makes the fourth subscription I have sent you within a short time. I am working in a quiet way. Wherever the Cynosures goes light and truth go also, and light is what the mases of the people need.—G. Bolander, Dennis, Kans.

A GOOD BEGINNING

has been made by the friends of the anti-lodge reform in self-denying, personal efforts for their paper. Seldom, if ever, have the responses been so numerous and hearty. Nobody will deny that this is a good work that should be kept up as much as possible throughout the year; but especially at this season are efforts for the list of the Cynosure successful, and they should be continued with zeal and determination as long as possible. Remember that our cause—that every good cause—prevails only by steady, PERSISTENT, PERSONAL EFFORT.

The man who read the paper carefully found the following among the news items: There were nine murders, one of them very brutal, four persons being killed in one house. There was an account of an old farmer, with a wife and family, who had seduced two sisters, young women under 20. A gambler had brought a young girl of good English family all the way to Chicago. There were five shocking deaths by accident. A steamship was lost with thirty-seven on board. There were cyclones in Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee and Illinois to hear from. There were two attempts to abduct children. Certainly this list cannot be mistaken for a chapter of Mr. Matthew Arnold's "Sweetness and Light," and the question arises, Why is this thus? Is the world given over wholly to evil? Are the sun-spots particularly active, or to what untoward influence must we attribute this extraordinary concentration of evil? Is Saturn regnant in the house of Mars, or has anything gone out of gear in any of the spiritual "speres?" Here are conundrums worth while. Is there a Daniel to solve them? —Chicago News.

The Home.

WE'VE ALWAYS BEEN PROVIDED FOR.

"Good wife, what are you singing for? you know we've lost the hay;
And what we'll do with horse and cow, is more than I can say;
While like as not, with storm and rain, we'll lose both corn and wheat."
She looked up with a pleasant face, and answered low and sweet:
"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

He turned around with sudden gloom. She said, "Love, be at rest;
You cut the grass, worked soon and late, you did your very best,
That was your work; you've naught at all to do with wind and rain,
And do not doubt but you will reap rich fields of golden grain;
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

"That's like a woman's reasoning; we must because we must."
She softly said, "I reason not; I only work and trust,
The harvest may redeem the hay, keep heart, whate'er betide;
When one door shuts, I've always seen another open wide.
There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

He kissed the calm and trustful face; gone was his restless pain.
She heard him with a cheerful step go whistling down the lane,
And went about her household tasks full of a glad content,
Singing to time her busy hands, as to and fro she went;
"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

Days come and go, 'twas New Year's time, and the great fire burned clear,
The farmer said, "Dear wife, it's been a good and happy year;
The fruit was gain, the surplus corn has brought the hay, you know."
She lifted then a smiling face, and said "I told you so,
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

—Selected.

DOING BUSINESS WITH THE LORD.

Mr. Zearing called on Mr. Edmunds. Mr. Edmunds was a farmer, a very nice man, and a member of the Baptist church. Mr. Zearing was also a member, and was the solicitor, that is, he was chosen by the rest to collect the money needed for the work of the church. That is why he had called.

"I suppose you've some amount set down in your mind, that you think I ought to give," said Mr. Edmunds.

"Yes," said Mr. Zearing, and he pointed to a line in his memorandum book like this:

"Bro. Edmunds..... .....$12.00."

"Well," continued Bro. Edmunds, "if all the church would give as you have marked them we'd get along. There'd be plenty of money for this cause and for every other."

"And why shouldn't they?"

"Well, take me for example. I am not able. This year my hogs died, my corn partly failed, and I am in debt. I hardly know how I'll get money to pay my taxes."

"But you'll pay them?"

"Because I have to. The Lord is not a tax collector, is he?"

"'Bring ye the tithes into the storehouse,'" suggested Bro. Zearing.

"But that's the Old Testament."

"It's Bible, Bro. Edmunds. Shall we give less for our real salvation than the Jew did for his typical one? Shall God get less through grace than he could have collected by law? If he charged the Jew ten per cent. of his income for Moses, should we not be ashamed to give but five per cent. for Jesus?"

"Would you have me sell my property, Bro. Zearing?"

"Why not, if you have more than you need for your support, and it brings in no return to the Lord? 'Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags that wax not old.' Hear the Saviour's commendation. 'She cast in all that she had, even all her living.'"

"I confess I do not know how to explain those passages," replied Mr. Edmunds, "but I do know that when one has nothing he can give nothing."

"But, my brother," returned the unconquerable Zearing, "you bought a span of mules this spring."

"Yes, but that was business. I had to have them to carry on my work."

"Exactly, but are you not as able to buy a span of mules for the Lord as for yourself?" Mr. Edmunds looked woefully puzzled for a moment, but he got out with the exclamation, "Business ain't benevolence, though."

"That's the trouble," answered the other. "Bro. Edmunds, I have age on my side, and may claim a little liberty of speech. We do not do business with the Lord. We do business with one another, we debit and credit the farm, and open accounts with our stock, but our Lord Jesus is treated as a poor relation to whom we give what we can spare. Or we give as a sort of homage to the memory of a dead Christ. Brother Edmunds! the Lord owns you and me, and all we have. We are his slaves, paid for with his own life! He has not failed, nor has he retired from business, but is transacting his business through us. We are not giving to a dead Christ, but doing business with a living one. The FIRST FRUITS of all our time and of all our money are the Lord's, and certainly if he does not have the first place as our lover, he should as our owner and creditor. Bro. Edmunds, let me ask you to study with me this passage, 'Moreover, it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful,' and six months from to-day let us compare notes, and see what we get out of it."

After Mr. Zearing had taken his leave:

"What is a steward, pa?" said Freddie, Mr. Edmunds' little boy, eight years old. Freddie was interested, for he, too, was a Christian, and was baptized that winter.

"A steward," replied Mr. Edmunds, "is a man who has charge of another's property. God's steward is one who reckons all that he has as belonging to God, and uses it as God wants."

"Are you a steward, pa?"

"We are all stewards, if we are God's."

"Do you like to be a steward, pa?"

"How you talk! Freddie. I suppose I do, of course."

"But, pa, why don't we give everything to the Lord, if it's all his?"

"Because, you know, we have to live on a part. We are like men on rented farms; what we give to God is his rent, and the rest we use for expenses, and our support."

"What rent do farmers give, pa?"

"Different rents, and sometimes a share of the crop; one-third, maybe."

"But how do they know what is a third, pa?" persisted the little boy.

"Why they measure it, Freddie, and keep account."

"Do you keep account, pa?"

"I try to," replied the father.

And now a new idea had come into Freddie's head. If he was a steward he was resolved to be faithful. The tiny seed of truth had fallen into fresh soil.

The six months had nearly passed, and Mr. Edmunds said to himself, one day:

"Suppose brother Zearing asks me about that 'steward' text, what shall I say? It means, in that place, the Word, the Gospel, which was given to Paul in trust, for others, but I admit that the principle covers property also. 'Freely ye have received, freely give,' that's the principle. 'That ye may have to give to him that has need.' 'Give,' 'lend,' 'help,' 'preach,' these are our gospel words. Our goods and our gospel held in trust for others! Why I never saw it so before! Praise God! It is better. Why this is one of Freddie's scratch books," and he picked up a soiled and dogs-eared five-cent memorandum book. "What a boy he is for figures. Well!"

It was his "Acount with the Lord," and the first three pages were as follows:

1

This is my place.
Ime Gods stuard and Ime going to give God his share and Ime going to keep acount.
Uncle gave me 1 cent. 1
Now 1 third belongs to the Lord and I must take out 1 cent when I get 3 cents.
Ma gave me 1 cent for Sunday school but she said that was the Lords already and so I wont count it.
Pa gave me 5 cents for watching cattle. 5
Now the Lord has got 2 cents.
Mr Nusam promised me 3 cents for standing by his team but I aint got it yet.

3

Pa gave me 25 cents for the Fourth and I thought first I would not put it down. 25
I sold my big alley to George for 2 cents. 2
Joe gave me 1 cent for going to Mr Browns instead of him. 1
I got this leaf dirty so Ile begin on a new one.

2

This is Gods place.
Got 1 cent but I cant take out Gods share till I get 2 more.
Got 5 cents and 2 cents of it in my bank. 2
Gave of my own cents to Sunday school. 1
The Lord got 8 cents on the Fourth. 8
This is one of the cents for my alley. 1
Mr Hammond preached and I gave 2 cents to missionaries.
Gave 5 cents from my bank to buy some crutches for Johny Slater. 5
Go over to 5, where it says Gods Acount.

Mr. Edmunds clasped his hands behind him, in a deep study. At last he exclaimed, to himself:

"I will! I'll keep the Lord's account as faithfully as I do my own. I will do business with the Lord."

And he did. He saw it was the Bible way, and the honest way, and it proved the most delightful way; by regular method; "every man ACCORDING AS HE PURPOSES IN HIS HEART.—Sandwich Visitor.

HOW MOZART DIED.

Wolfgang Mozart, the great composer, died in Vienna, in the year 1791. There is something very touching in the circumstances of his death. His sweetest song was the last he sang—the "Requiem." He had been employed on this exquisite piece for several weeks, his soul filled with inspirations of the richest melody, and already claiming kindred with immortality. After giving it its last touch, and breathing into that undying spirit of song which was to consecrate it through all time, as his "Circean strain," he fell into a gentle and quiet slumber.

At length the light footsteps of his daughter awoke him. "Come hither," said he, "my Emilie. My task is done—the 'Requiem'—my 'Requiem' is finished." "Say not so, dear father," said the gentle girl, interrupting him, with tears in her eyes: "you must be better—you look better, for even now your cheek has a glow on it. I am sure we shall nurse you well again—let me bring you something refreshing." "Do not deceive yourself, my love," said the dying father, "this wasted form can never be restored by human aid. From heaven's merey alone do I look for help in this my dying hour. You spoke of refreshment, my Emilie—take these my last notes—sit down to my piano here—sing with them the hymn of your sainted mother—let me once more hear those tones which have been so long my solace and delight."

Emilie obeyed, and with a voice enriched by the tenderest emotion, sang the following stanzas:

"Spirit! thy labor is o'er,
Thy term of probation is run,
Thy steps are now bound for the untrodden shore,
And the race of immortals begun.

Spirit! look not on the strife
Or the pleasures of earth with regret-
Pause not at the threshold of limitless life,
To mourn for the day that is set.

Spirit! no fetters can bind,
No wicked have power to molest;
There the weary, like Thee—the wretched shall find
A haven, a mansion of rest.

Spirit! how bright is the road
For which thou art now on the wing,
Thy home, it will be, with thy Saviour and God,
Their loud hallelujah to sing."

As she concluded, she dwelt for a moment upon the low melancholy notes of the piece, and then, turning from the instrument, looked in silence for the approving smile of her father. It was the still and passionless smile which the rapt and joyous spirit left—with the seal of death—upon those features.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

OPEN YOUR BIBLES.

LAMBS. Read John 21.

He shall feed His flock like a shepherd; He shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom. Isa. 40: 11.

1. Lambs are the young of the flock. John 21: 15.
2. The shepherd treats the lambs with special tenderness. Mark 10: 13–16; Prov. 8: 17.
3. Lambs specially exposed to danger. 1 Sam. 17: 34, 35.
4. Lambs need the shelter of the fold. John 10: 9.
5. The shepherd seeks the strayed lambs. Matt. 18: 10–14.
6. Special food provided for the lambs. Isa 28: 9, 10; Heb. 5: 12.—Notes for Bible Study.

PAPER-MAKING.

When the prudent housekeeper gathers the family rags and puts them in her rag-bag to exchange for tin, or sell to the "rag-man," she little thinks what a great subject that of rags has become. There are a great many other materials used for paper-making, but "rags are yet king," and are essential in the manufacturing of all our best grades of paper. In the Smithsonian Institute there is a book published by Christian Shaffer, of Germany, in 1772, containing sixty specimens of paper made of different materials, the results of his experiments. Among them hornets' nests, sawdust, moss, cabbage stumps, thistle, burdock, wheat, straw, corn, etc., but none of them are equal to rags in the making of fine paper. The word paper is derived from the Greek word papyrus, an Egyptian plant, which for a long time served as a material for writing among the ancients. It was superseded in the fifth century of our era by the cotton paper called "earter bombyeina." The great libraries of Europe, almost all of them, possess works of the eleventh and twelfth century written on bombycinan paper. In 1762 a prize was ordered for the oldest manuscript written upon rag paper. The different minutes of the proceedings of the competition, printed at the Hague in 1767, unite in admitting that paper of this kind was used before the year 1300.

There is much difference of opinion as to what nation the important discovery was due. Hoffman, in his treatise on the manufacture of paper, says that the credit of having been the first who formed from fibres the web which constitutes the paper of our time belongs to the Chinese. The knowledge of the art seems to have been communicated by the Chinese to the Hindoos and Arabs, brought by the latter into Spain during their occupation of that country, and from their it found its way to all parts of Europe. The first idea of making paper by machinery is due to France. In 1778 Robert, a workman attached to the paper mill at Essone, took out the first patent for manufacturing paper by machinery.

Taking the elevator at the South Lee paper mill, we ascended to the fifth story, which is designated as the "rag loft." Here we found a large number of women and children sorting and cutting rags. Many of these women had reached the evening of life—the mother and the grandmother—independent souls who would not be a burden upon their friends even after age had come with its infirmities. They knew "the gear that is given is never as sweet as the gear that is won." The rag-cutters have knives fastened in the floor just in front of where they are sitting; they cut each rag into from two to five-inch pieces, according to the quality of the fabric. There are castes among rags as well as among folks, and have to be arranged accordingly, the best ones being used for the finest letter paper. There are as many tricks in the rag trade and as much adulteration as in the baking powder and sugar manufacturing. The man who buys the rags must be sharp enough to look them through, as the outside of the bale is not always a type of the inside. It is the cutter's business to see that all the hems and seams are ripped open, and that every button, pin, hook and eye is cut off. A woman inspects the rags after they are cut, and for every one of those forbidden things found she receives a cent. The rag-cutters are paid by the pound, the most expert, of course, getting the best wages. After cutting, the rags are put into a cyliuder and the dust beaten out. Then they are put into large vats and washed, a stream of clear water is constantly running into the washes and the dirty water running out. They are then put into boilers and boiled from ten to twenty hours. They are then reduced to a pulp and are put into bleaching tubs. The bleaching powders are made of chlorine gas introduced into slacked lime. This, however, does not make the pulp white enough, and as the laundress blues her clothes, so the paper manufacturer blues the pulp. There is quite an interesting incident connected with blueing of paper. Mr. Richard Herring, in his work on paper-making, says: "In the year 1746, at a paper-mill belonging to Mr. Ballenshaw, whose wife was superintending the washing of some fine linen, this incident occurred. While blueing some clothes she accidentally let the blueing bag fall into some pulp in a forward state of preservation. Great was her fear that some mischief had been done, but when the blue amalgamated with the pulp her husband was astonished to see how much improved the paper was. He received four shillings advance per bundle for the improved make in the London market. He immediately purchased a costly scarlet cloak (it is to be hoped that it was more congenial to the taste than it would be now), which he conveyed home and presented with much satisfaction to his wife."

After blueing, the pulp is put into drainers and drained, then it is drawn out by rollers and stretched on white felt, and carried through the presses. The paper then passes through a process called sizing; it is dipped into a solution made of gelatine and glue, which gives the paper the finishing gloss. It is then cut into sheets, ruled, folded and stamped. It is dried in the drying-room before being packed for market. These mills make 8,000 lbs. of paper a day. They employ 180 employes, 115 of them are women and girls.

The paper for the money issued by the Government is manufactured at the Glens Mills, near West Chester, Pennsylvania. Short pieces of red silk are mixed with the pulp in the engine, and the finished stuff is conducted to the wire without passing through any screens which might retain the silk thread. By an arrangement above the wire cloth, a shower of short pieces of fine blue silk thread is dropped in streaks on the paper while it is being formed. The mill is guarded by officials day and night, to prevent the abstraction of any paper. Only the best of white linen, and especially cuttings of white, pure flaxen threads, imported from Scotland and Ireland, are used.

All fibrous vegetable matter is suitable for paper of one kind or another, but some kinds are inferior and much more expensive to prepare than others. Bleached linens or cottons require the least expense to prepare, and make the best paper. It is, however, thought by some oculists that white paper is too trying for the eyes of those who have to read or write much, and that some slight tinge of the colors which nature chiefly uses in earth, water and sky, would be a good substitute. In this view the paper-maker who introduces slightly tinted paper for newspapers at little or no additional expense will be a benefactor of his race. All know how trying white sand is to the eyes, and to look at white paper all day must have somewhat similar effects.

A considerable part of the "stock" used in making paper consists of newspapers, old books, account-books, letters, etc. Newspapers are worth very little to work over, as the fibre is so much broken up that a great deal of it washes out with the water which has to pass through the pulp.

There is another ingredient in cheap papers which adds to the beauty and weight, but not to the strength. We refer to white clay, great quantities of which come from South Carolina, for paper and candy manufacturers. This is incorporated with the pulp in certain proportions, and of course reduces the price at which the paper can be sold.—Selected.

LOST AND FOUND.

Fifteen years ago a poor old lady in Philadelphia, in her destitution, begged on the streets to avoid starvation. As she stood on a corner asking alms, a good looking sailor glanced at her, and pulled out a handful of gold and silver, saying: "There good mother you may as well have it as the land-sharks. The last cruise I had out of New York found me with $4,000 dollars on hand, but as the neighbors told me my mother was dead, I got on a spree with the money and I spent it all inside of a week, and then I shipped again." "O, good sir, you are too kind to an old body like me. For your sake I will take it. O, you remind me of my poor son, George White, who was lost at sea." "George White! Why, that is my name. Why, you are my mother." He embraced her as the tears rolled down his bronzed checks. The poor old lady was at first speechless from strong feeling. Those who witnessed the scene could not but weep. "The dead was alive, the lost found." Hailing a carriage he drove off with his mother to establish once more a home.—Sel.

A bright girl was sent to get some eggs, and on her way back stumbled and fell, making sad havoc with the contents of her basket. "Won't you catch it when you get home, though!" exclaimed her companion. "No, indeed I won't," she answered, "I've got a grandmother."

Tommy asked his mother if the school teacher's ferule was a piece of the board of education.

TEMPERANCE.

PROHIBITION ON SINAI.

(Ex. 20; Hab. 2: 12-15.)

On Sinai's lofty height
Our God in dreadful might
Said: "Thou shalt not;"
Thou shalt not steal, nor kill,
Nor do thy neighbor ill.
Nor base desires fulfil—
Thou, thou shalt not.

The trumpet blast was heard!
"No license" was the word,
A wrong to do;
Thou shalt thy neighbor love,
Goodness and truth approve,
And give to God above
The honor due.

"Tempt not thy neighbor's lip,
The cup of death to sip;
Thy woe 'twill be.
Build not thy house with blood,
Lest thou shalt feel the rod
Which the Almighty God
Will lay on thee."

—Standard.

THE W. C. T. U. IN CALIFORNIA.

The people of San Jose have enjoyed a rare treat during the past week in attending the semi-annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which assembled in the First M. E. church, Feb. 8th. There were over fifty delegates present from various parts of the State; and many visitors who came to enjoy the exercises. Seldom, if ever, has San Jose been favored before with the presence of so many talented lady speakers at one time.

Mrs. M. C. Leavitt, of Boston, Mass., pleased and edified large audiences with her clear, forcible addresses on "Young Woman's Work;" "Prohibition in Politics and Out;" and "The Ballot for Woman: just, expedient and Scriptural." Mrs. Leavitt's quiet, unassuming manner and earnest delivery interest all, and her wise thoughts on the purification of the home and the government have lodged in some hearts and filled them with a deep purpose. We hope that the day is not far distant when this purpose shall be accomplished, and when our State, which is unrivalled for the beauty and utility of its physical features, shall be first, too, in the moral purity of its institutions and government.

In addition to the pleasing efforts of Mrs. Leavitt, the convention was agreeably entertained by addresses from Mrs. H. A. Hobart, President of the W. C. T. U. of Minnesota; and Mrs. M. Hampson of Liverpool, Eng. Mrs. Hobart spoke ably on the "Goliath of the Liquor Traffic;" and Mrs. Hampson thrilled her audience by her graphic accounts of the misery in Liverpool and other parts of England, as well as in Australia and New Zealand, caused by the use of strong drink, and gave interesting accounts of woman's work there. Mrs. Hampson is a magnetic speaker, and has rare qualities of voice.

Reports of the work throughout the State were very encouraging, thirteen auxiliary societies having been organized during the last six months. Many other interestiug and instructive features of the convention must pass unnoticed, as to do them justice will make this report too long. C. S. R.

THE HEAVIEST CLOG ON PROGRESS.

Many people who pride themselves on their practicality are wont to sneer at the opponents of the liquor traffic as mere "sentimentalists." No doubt there is much sentiment in that opposition, but it is sentiment based upon the hardest of facts. The truth is that if all the other evils that afflict society are put together they will not nearly equal in weight and sinister effects the one enormous and universal mischief of intemperance. Mr. Matthew Arnold holds that Philistinism, as he calls it, is rampant in England and the United States; but the truly humiliating fact in regard to these English speaking people is their profuse expenditures upon intoxicants, and the place which the business of selling and making intoxicants occupies in their national life. Americans spend $300,000,000 a year in this way, and Englishmen even more in proportion. Yet all legislative bodies in both countries, and all journals, and hundreds of societies and associations, are constantly engaged in discussing remedies for evils not only of minor importance, but many if not most of them the direct or indirect results of this frightful waste of capital upon degrading and demoralizing agents.

Here in New York, as the speakers at Cooper Institute the other evening one and all admitted, we have actually arrived at a local government based upon the worst and most pernicious emanations of the liquor interest. We have come to be ruled in accordance with the views of men who derive all their power from their success in rum-selling, and whose following largely consists of those whose intelligence is habitually clouded by the same poison. And because the passion for rum is so strong among a large proportion of the masses, every effort to shake off this corrupt and shameful despotism has hitherto failed, and drunkenness and dishonesty go hand in hand, and laugh to scorn every reform movement.

Of what use is it to talk about poverty, destitution, squalor, misery here and there, when it is notorious that tens of thousands are so enslaved by a vicious appetite as to be incapable of helping themselves, indifferent to the nature of their surroundings, dead to every progressive aspiration. How can we reasonably complain of any minor evils while this gigantic one continues to hamper the nation's advance at every step; while this vast drain continues to carry off a capital, one year's application of which would solve every social problem that perplexes us? If this is not a practical question, then there is no such thing as practicality. It is the one overshadowing evil whose existence of necessity prevents the success of reform efforts in all other directions. It is said that the condition of the working classes is unsatisfactory, that they do not prosper as they might; the answer must be that they can never utilize their opportunities until they are freed from the curse of rum. If it is said that our politics are corrupt, trivial, mean, it must be assumed that our politics are too deeply entangled with the liquor traffic to be other than what they are. If sanitary questions are concerned, rum still stands in the way of improvement. If religious progress is discussed the fact remains that the saloons empty the churches. If education is considered, it is notorious that the same degrading agency seduces thousands of our youth.

Wherever we turn, in short, we encounter this subtle and sinister agency. It is a blight which lies heavy upon our civilization, and which will have to be cleared away before that civilization can become an object of just pride and satisfaction. And the question at issue really is, whether this great evil shall be dealt with summarily, or shall be approached by slow degrees. All sensible men are agreed as to the necessity for getting rid of it, but opinions differ as to the best method. Meantime, it proceeds without the least misgiving or compunction, never checking itself, giving full play to all its myriad influences, and opposing to reform a solid and brazen front. Its safety thus far has consisted in the want of harmony among its opponents. This has given it time to establish itself and grow strong. But sooner or later it will be necessary for the intelligent and progressive elements of society to drop all lesser enterprises and combine in one determined assault upon that vice which is to-day the heaviest clog upon progress, and the deepest disgrace of the nineteenth century.—N. Y. Tribune.

Francis Murphy has already received 1,200 temperance pledges in Boston, and proposes to labor there until the number reaches 60,000.

Ex-Congressman Murch, the Maine Greenbacker, who opened a liquor saloon in Boston and shortly afterward failed, is now in Washington seeking a clerkship or a messenger's place in the gift of the House.

Klein induced McCue to drink three pints of whisky on a wager, at San Antonio, Tex. The feat proved fatal. McCue's widow sued Klein for damages and got a verdict of $3,000. On appeal the supreme court confirms the jury's conclusion. The ruling was that, as the drinker was so intoxicated as to be incapable of consent at the time of swallowing the third and killing pint, the man who made him do it was responsible.

About a year ago it will be remembered that Henry Mandler, Chief of Police of Lafayette, Ind., cut a great figure as the defendant in the Gougar slander case. He was then sustained and defended by the city administration. Lately he was suspended by Mayor McGinley, who in his official announcement, stated that rumors of a convincing character had reached him that Mandler was unable, on account of intoxication, to perform his duties. Thus is Mandler condemned by the men who stood by him last year, while Mrs. Gougar has widened her circle of friends in every direction.—Inter Ocean.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

SAMUEL C. POMEROY,

OF KANSAS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,

OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultiv[illegible]intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

NO LODGERY IN IT.

BARABOO, WIS.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have been greatly troubled of late over the proposed fusion of the Prohibition and American parties. To me it seems a giving up, on the part of anti-secretists, for the reasou that Prohibition is run in the interest of secretism. This fact appeared very plain in the political struggle one year ago last fall in this State. Then, almost all the uominees of the Prohibition party were secretists; the nominee for Governor, I am told, being a Mason and a defamer of J. F. Browne, against whom he warned the people when he spoke here to the Good Templars, it being about the time Elder Browne was here.

I worked and voted at that time for Prohibition with the exception of cutting off the Masonic head of the ticket. I would have voted the American ticket had there been one in the field.

Now I hope God in his goodness will prevent that fusion, giving us instead a pure American platform to stand on, with the addition of one more plank (woman's suffrage). If that fusion is made, I hope a good share of the goods will not be delivered; at least that under the control of WALLACE PORTER.

NOTE.—The above note is printed, since it may represent the views of a number of friends who have not clearly understood that the proposed union with prohibitionists meant a union on the basis of opposition to the secret orders from first to last. The best men who stand by prohibition are in favor of this union and will join it in time. What Bro. Porter will have in the new movement will be prohibition without any Masonic head to be cut off. The record of the American convention in this number should quiet such fears.—ED.

THE CHURCHES.

—Bro. C. W. Hiatt, whose labors in Gustavus, O., were so wonderfully blessed of God, has returned to his home in Wheaton for a season of rest, the exhausting efforts of nearly two months revival work having impaired his health. There were seventy or more conversions during this time, nearly all being adults. Scoffers, Catholics and infidels were among those happily converted. The whole country about was moved, people coming for miles and crowding the church.

—A revival of similar power and interest has been experienced by the old Providence church in Bureau county, Ill. This is one of the oldest Congregational churches in northern Illinois, and has always been a "country" church maintained largely by farmers, and thus having a membership scattered for miles in either direction. The revival this winter has taken hold far and wide, and many remarkable cases of conversion have occurred.

—Dr. Geo. F. Pentecost of Brooklyn has been sent for by Mr. Moody to help him in his London work. Mr. Stebbins the singer will go with him. Moody and Sankey continue to meet with wonderful success in England. They are now laboring in Stratford and have, according to the Christian World, obtained a mighty hold on the working classes. The Bible-readings grow in interest. No church or hall is large enough to accommodate the thousands who attend these meetings, and the number of conversions is unusually large.

—Two Jewish brothers in Georgia named Magath have been sent into the field among the Hebrews as Methodist missionaries, and have roused deep indignation among their race. In Athens they were rudely treated by Hebrews, a prominent Jew making a public announcement that they were willing to listen to respectable Gentiles, whereupou the Rev. Mr. Davis (Methodist) offered to act. He was replied to in the affirmative by Rabbi Levi, on condition that Christians should in turn listen to himself, and that in neither case was the name of the Saviour to be mentioned.

—At the close of a three weeks' meeting the Presbyterian church at Akron, O., received to its communion thirty-one members, all of them on confession of faith—thus doubling the membership of the church.

—The committee in charge of the Cooper Institute Sunday night free Gospel Services have re-engaged the large hall and Annex Hall, 14 and 16 Fourth avenue, for the present year. The meetings will continne to be under the care of C. W. Sawyer. A free cooking school has been added, to be held for women in Annex Hall, on Thursday evenings.

—The Rev. A. C. Dill, who recently went to Deadwood, Dakota, as general missionary in the Black Hills, of the American Home Missionary Society, has in addition to his regular duties, accepted the call of the Congregational church in Deadwood. He writes to a friend in reference to his work there: "The congregation numbers now one hundred and fifty to two hundred and is increasing every Sabbath. We have held special meetings every evening since January 1, and souls are being saved."

—The annual festival given by the teachers in the Chinese Sunday-school in Boston took place recently. There were present about 300 persons, including 150 Chinamen. Although the number of Chinamen in Boston and vicinity (about 400) has not increased, the school has grown from a small beginning, until now an average attendance of eighty-seven has been maintained for the past year. On Sunday 124 pupils were present. They were appreciative, quick and intelligent. So great is the interest taken in the work that there is no lack of money, teachers, or assistance of any kind.

—One of the most interesting services in connection with the anniversary of the Marathi Mission of the American Board in India, is the communion. At the last annual meeting, a great congregation gathered around the table of the Lord Sunday afternoon. "There were about 700 communicants, most of whom were members of the churches connected with the American Mission; but a goodly number were from other misssons. Such a gathering of native Christians, says a correspondent, is probably to be seen nowhere else in Western India. Let those who will, he adds, declaim about the 'failure of missions;' but the sight of such a company as this, of intelligent, joyous Christian men and women, who were but lately gathered from the darkness and hopelessness of heathenism, is sufficient proof that the Word of the Lord has not lost its power, but that it 'shall stand forever.'"

Uvea is a small island some 60 miles east of New Caledonia, with a population of some 2,000. Eighteen years ago a Protestant mission was begun among them, and a majority of the tribe and people became protestants. But French priests came a year later than the protestant missionaries and one tribe became papist. Instigated by the Romish priests, this tribe has persecuted the protestants with great cruelty. Missionary Gill (Rev. W. Wyatt) tells of their burning to death an old chief and a child, and a copy of Matthew's Gospel with the corner cut off by a blow of an ax which split open the head of the man who owned and read the Gospel.

The communicants on this island are 155, and their contributions the past year average three shillings to every protestant man, woman and child on the island; and this in addition to gratuitous work on the mission premises and church. Besides which they support two other members as missionaries in New Caledonia.

In 1854 Dr. Rufus Anderson, Secretary of the American Board, solemnly declared to the missionaries of that Board in Western India that said Board would send no more unmarried women to its foreign missions; and yet to-day it reports 100 unmarried women, and 140 wives, besides those on the Hawaiian Islands, and publishes a pressing call for eight more unmarried women.

Rev. James Coles (S. P. G.) writes from Tamatave, Madagascar: "Our position is just the same as it was three months ago. Neither the Malagasy nor the French have done anything, but remain entrenched almost within sight of each other." Two messengers had come from the Hova camp, but their errand to the French officials had not become known. Later dates affirm that the Hovas resolutely refuse a French protectorate, and we are glad to see that Mr. Graves, the English Consul-General, is gathering facts and evidences of all losses of British lives and property by the French military movements. And surely French resources will be better expended in making good such losses, as far as possible, than in destroying more lives and property either in Madagascar or Tonquin. The new Queen, Ranavalona III., at her recent coronation, declared her firm determination not to surrender an inch of territory to the French.

The point of special interest in case of the Pongas mission is that it originated in the West Indies, an outgrowth of the missions planted there by European Christians. The two principal stations are Farringia and Fallangia. Two European workers seem to be in charge of the mission, though most of the workers from the first have been descendants of the slaves who were first torn from their homes in Africa and sold into bondage in the West Indies; and there having been brought to the knowledge of Christ and the Gospel, they so trained their children, that with the help and advice of their missionary teachers, some of them went back to plant this mission and carry the Gospel to the land and people from among whom their ancestors had been so cruelly carried into slavery. In speaking of the death of John D'lon the oldest church member of the mission, Rev. S. Hughes refers to some of the debasing superstitions of the people, and awakens a wish to know more of the progress and church membership of the mission.

The Scotch Free Church missionaries in South Africa are about to begin a new mission at Quombu, 120 miles north of Cunningham. The local authorities have offered them 3,000 acres of land on condition a European missionary be stationed there, and the mission is to be established without delay.

The Livingstone Inland Missionaries report the people along the Congo as eager listeners. Mr. White, after visiting many villages, writes: "I think these people are more ready to receive the Gospel than any I have yet seen."

Anti-secrecy Tracts

Published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Orders filled at the rate of 50 cents per 1,000 pages at the office, or 75 cents per 1,000 pages by Mail.

Contributions are solicited to the TRACT FUND for the free distribution of tracts.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Chancellor Howard Crosby, D. L. Moody, and others.

NO.		NO. PAGES.
1	Historical Sketch of the N. C. A., by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
2	Voice of the Empire State in Condemnation of Masonry	4
3	Address to American Pastors on the Secret Lodge	4
4	Freemasonry in the Family, by J. P. Stoddard	4
5	Pres. Finney on the Duty of Christians toward the Lodge	2
6	Warning against Masonry (For Colored People), Illustrated	2
7	To the Boys who Hope to be Men, Illustrated	2
8	Freemasonry Modern Heathenism	4
9	Ministers at Rival Altars	4
10	A Pastor's Confession	4
11	Knight Templar Masonry	4
12	Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodges	4
13	"The Secret Empire," by J. P. Stoddard	4
14	True and False Templarism	4
15	Secrecy and Sin, from the "Christian" 47 Cornhill, Boston	4
16	Selling Dead Horses, by "Bostonian"	4
17	History of Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	4
18	Despotic Character of Freemasonry	4
19	Freemasonry a Christ-excluding Religion	5
21	Grand, Great Grand, by Philo Carpenter	2
22	Masonic Oaths and Penalties sworn to by the Grand Lodge of R. I.	4
23	Letters of J. Q. Adams and J. Madison on Freemasonry	4
24	Satan's Cable Tow	4
26	Address of the Niagara Association on the Murder of Morgan	4
27	Judge Whitney and Masonry—Masonry Defends a Murderer	8
28	Nathaniel Colver and Howard Crosby on Secret Societies	2
29	Grand Lodge Masonry, by Pres. J. Blanchard	16
30	Masonic Oaths Null and Void, by Rev. I. A. Hart	4
31	Hon. Seth M. Gates on Freemasonry	4
33	Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies	2
34	What Great Men say about Freemasonry	2
36	Masonic Chastity, by Emma A. Wallace	4
37	German Tract: Why a Christian should not be a Freemason	4
38	Masonic Oaths and Penalties, by Rev. A. M. Milligan	4
39	Should Freemasons be admitted to Christian Fellowship?	4
40	The Object of the American (Anti-masonic) Party	2
41	Freemasonry a Religion (shown by its own authors)	8
42	Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Masonry	4
44	D. L. Moody on Secret Societies	4
45	Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?	4
48	Tract in Hollandish: On Knowing and Opposing Masonry	4
49	John Quincy Adams on the Duty of American Voters	4
50	Swedish Tract: To Boys who Hope to be Men	2

THE

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

A NEATLY PRINTED SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY JOURNAL, UNSECTARIAN AND OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE POLE STAR OF REFORM.

EVERY Christian, every Prohibitionist and every Patriot should read it for the following among other reasons:

1. Because it meets the wants of the general public by giving in brief the latest reliable information on all questions of Reform, having the special object of exposing and opposing organized secrecy. Besides able editorial, contributed and selected articles upon this topic, which is of more than national importance, it has interesting sketches of progress and incidents from the reform lecturers in all parts of the country, reform news and notes, letters from the Old World, etc., etc. It is the especial organ of this movement in America—a movement which is sustained by the utterances of some of the ablest statesmen and divines whom the country has produced. Every person interested in either the family, government, or religion—the most sacred interests of humanity—is directly affected by secret societies, and needs to keep posted in this movement.

2. Because it is uncompromising on ALL questions of the day. On temperance, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, Mormonism, the Southern and Indian questions, civil-service reform, monopolies, the rights of labor, and every other question, its only aim is to be RIGHT, and advocate the TRUTH. It is hence FEARLESS and OUTSPOKEN.

2. Because it emphasizes the fact that political action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD and SPIRIT of God and that Christ must be acknowledged KING of NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

4. Because, in addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

It is now owned and published by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

at its office, NO. 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL., on Thursday of each week

TERMS: $2. per year. In clubs of five $8.75. In clubs of ten $15.

Sample copies sent free on application.

Address CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

A WORK OF GRACE.

A remarkable awakening is now in progress in Cambridgeport. This is a part of Cambridge, a city of 50,000 people, the seat of Harvard University and in an atmosphere not most favorable, one might think, to revivals. It is in the Pilgrim Church, Rev. George R. Leavitt pastor the last thirteen years. A few years since, from a similar awakening there were gathered into the church more than 200 members, and the church numbers over 500.

The work commenced with apparent suddenness. On a Sabbath, a few weeks ago, the people appeared very indifferent; the pastor thought he had never seen so many sleepy hearers. Soon after, at the preparatory lecture, he took for his text, Matt. 18: 19: "Again I say unto you, If any two of you," etc. He urged the duty and privilege of a literal application of this Scripture. He felt deeply. His own soul had had been moved. The work, it would seem, really began there with renewed zeal for souls and new faith in the power of prayer. The discourse went to the hearts of his people, quickening their religious life, and their faith in prayer and personal effort. They began to pray together, and to work two and two, and with marked results upon their own souls and the souls of others. It is believed that, at least, there are already 150 converted. The pastor, in giving this relation before the Suffolk North Association, spoke of the preaching. He had planned a series of sermons on Romans, but laid them aside. After the interest began he preached one of those sermons with such effect that the whole congregation seemed moved; and he thought if a prayer and inquiry meeting had been held immediately after, few could have gone out without surrendering their hearts to the truth. The week before he had met a company of above seventy-five young converts and inquirers, and the present week he expected a larger number. But so quiet has been his work that it was hardly known out of that city. This result, and the method of it may be suggestive to other pastors.—Golden Rule.

OBITUARY.

OBED B. WORTH died at his home in Rush county, Indiana, Feb. 7th, 1884, aged nearly 73 years. He was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, in 1811 and moved here in 1832, and was married to Maria Barnett in 1837, with whom he lived in happy union over forty-seven years. Uniting with the Wesleyan Methodist society, he was ever a firm believer in Christianity, and was marked for ability and intelligence and a disposition free and generous. He was a stalwart opposer of slavery in its day, and a strong temperance man, ever advocating any movement for good. For years he had taken a deep interest in the perusal of the Christian Cynosure, and opposed all secret societies and their works of darkness, believing that our works should not be in darkness, but in the light and after the life of Christ. Though death came as a thief in the night we believe it found him ready for the message, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." A. M.

ABIAL HADLEY, one of the oldest and most esteemed citizens of Wheaton, Ill., departed this life Sunday, Feb. 24, at the age of 81 years.

Father Hadley was a native of the State of Vermont. In early life he became a sincere Christian, and joined the Methodist church. On account of his sympathy with the enslaved he was one of the first to become identified with the Wesleyan Methodist connection. He was in hearty accord with the anti-secrecy reform and an uncompromising temperance man.

The subject of this notice was a man of deep religious experience. His exemplary life was an argument in favor of Christianity that none could gainsay. While his health was sufficient he was active in religious work. He was twice married. A companion and two sons survive him.

The funeral services were conducted by Pres. Stratton of the Theological Department of Wheaton College. The text, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace," seemed strikingly appropriate for the occasion. A large congregation of relatives, friends and citizens testified the respect they entertained for the departed.

M. C. B.

THE CYNOSURE CLUBBING LIST.

Every subscriber to this paper who wishes to take other standard journals will do well to look over our list, and notice how he can expend his money with most economy. The Cynosure at two dollars per year will be sent together with either of the publications below, for the price in cash named in the second column. The price in the first column is what you would have to pay for the two by sending direct to the publisher of the paper named. These prices are for new or old subscribers to the Cynosure, but new only for the other papers.

THE CYNOSURE and—
The Christian	$3.00	$2.50
The Missionary Review	3.50	3.00
Christian Herald	3.50	3.00
The Truth (St. Louis)	3.00	2.80
Illustrated Christian Weekly	4.50	3.90
New York Witness	3.00	2.90
The Union Signal	3.75	3.40
Christian Statesman	4.00	3.50
The Interior	4.50	3.75
The Independent	5.00	4.50
The Illustrator (S. S. Monthly)	2.60	2.30
The S. S. Times	4.00	3.75
Gospel in all Lands	4.00	3.65
The Nation	5.00	4.80
N. Y. Tribune, weekly	4.00	2.90
Chicago Tribune, weekly	3.00	2.85
Chicago Inter Ocean, weekly	3.00	2.90
N. Y. Evening Post, semi-weekly	5.00	4.00
Harper's Magazine	6.00	5.10
" Weekly	6.00	5.30
" Young People	3.50	3.20
Dio Lewis's Monthly	4.50	4.00
North American Review	7.00	6.10
The Century	6.00	5.50
Scientific American	5.20	4.50
Mastery	5.00	4.00
Pansy	2.75	2.60
Youth's Companion	3.75	3.50
Am. Agriculturist	3.50	3.00
Rural New Yorker	4.00	3.75
Prairie Farmer	4.00	3.7
Western Rural*	3.65	3.50
Vick's Magazine	3.50	2.75
Poultry World	3.25	2.75
Am. Poultry Yard	3.50	3.00
Country Gentleman	4.50	3.90

*$1.00 worth of seeds to new subscribers.

The only condition for obtaining the great reduction above is, that whoever orders shall subscribe for the Cynosure. After receiving the first copy of any periodical any necessary complaints should be sent to the office where it is published. If several of the above papers are wanted, write for special rates to

THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE,
Chicago, Ill.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N. Y.

DO YOU WANT A Cheap, Clean-faced, Radical, Religious Paper, fearless and outspoken upon all moral issues?
Send for the

VANGUARD,

A paper that is for God and nothing else.

A world-wide range of correspondence. Neutral in nothing.

Only 75 cents a year.

Address C. W. SHERMAN, Editor, 305 N. 3rd Street, St. Louis, Mo.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

KNIGHT TEMPLARISM ILLUSTRATED.

A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50c; $4.00 per dozen. Furnished in any quantities at

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

An Exposition of the First Seven Degrees of Freemasonry. Legally Attested by

Jacob O. Doesburg

PAST MASTER UNITY LODGE, NO. 191 HOLLAND, MICH., AND OTHERS.

Lodge and Chapter degrees seperate or bound together. Seven degrees in cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00; in paper, 75c; per dozen $5.50.

Three degrees, in cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.00; in paper, 40c; per dozen $4.00.

Each degree is profusely illustrated. A critical analysis of each degree is given by Pres. J. Blanchard, to which is added numerous extracts from standard Masonic authors, making the most complete thing in print. For sale by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express & P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Sabbath Bells FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

SOCIAL MEETINGS, ETC.

'84 LATEST BOOK OUT '84

All we ask of parties wishing new books for their Sunday Schools, is that they send for a sample copy of SABBATH BELLS before adopting any other. IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF. What people say who have the book:

"Is unusually bright in stirring and joyful songs."
"Is a very superior book."
"A grand Work."
"Its songs are Golden."
"In my judgement, I have never examined a better book"
"The quality of songs together with its new and convenient arrangement make it a most desirable work."
"An examination proves to anyone its superior merit."

Single copy 35 cents; per dozen $3.60. One sample copy will be sent to any address upon receipt of 25 cents. Is printed in both round and character notes.

Address FIRESIDE FRIEND PUB. CO.
Springfield, Ohio

PATENTS Hand-Book FREE.

R. S. & A. P. LACEY.
Patent Att'ys, Washington, D. C.

TRADE-MARKS, PRINTS, LABELS, PATENTS. COPY-RIGHTS, DESIGNS, RE-ISSUES.

Send description of your invention. L. BINGHAM.
Patent Lawyer and Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

WHEATON NURSERY.

O. F. LUMRY, Proprietor, Wheaton Ill.
General Stock, Specialties. All the newest and best.
STRAW BLACK GOOSE RASP BERRIES, GRAPES, and other Small Fruits.
Price list free. Orders sent by mail, express or freight

T. HUDSON J. L. STRATTON
— Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of—
HARDWOOD LUMBER.
Have on hand a large amount of Dry Ash, Red and White Oak, Hickory, and Basswood.
Prompt attention given to orders and satisfaction guaranteed. KALAMAZOO, MICH.

DEPARTMENT OF FINE ARTS,
WHEATON COLLEGE.
Free-hand drawing in Pencil, Ink and Crayon, Painting in Oil and Water colors.
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, resident instructor for 12 years; also instructor for years in Vermont State Normal school. Special instruction to teachers, how to make practical use of the art in their schools. Terms about one third less than ordinary. Diplomas given. Address
MRS. S. H. NUTTING, WHEATON, ILL.

HAVE YOU EXAMINED

The list of Books and Tracts for sale by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. Look it over carefully and see if there is not something you want for yourself or for your friend. Send for full catalogue to 221 W. MADISON STREET, CHICAGO.

McShane Bell Foundry
Manufacture those celebrated Bells and Chimes for Churches, Tower Clocks, &c., &c. Prices and catalogues sent free. Address
H. MCSHANE & CO., Baltimore, Md.

COMPOUND OXYGEN

(Not a Drug.) Inhaled cures all Lung, Nervous, and Chronic diseases. Office and "Home Treatment" by A. H. HIATT, M. D., 40 Central Music Hall, Chicago. Send for circular.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCURDY & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

BARNES'

Patent Foot and Steam Power Machinery. Complete outfits for Actual Work-shop Business. Lathes for Wood or Metal. Circular Saws, Scroll Saws, Formers, Mortisers, Tenoners, etc., etc. Machines on trial if desired. Descriptive Catalogue and Price List Free.
W. F. & JOHN BARNES.
No. 127 Ruby Street. Rockford, Ill.

Peter Henderson & Co's COLLECTION OF SEEDS AND PLANTS

embraces every desirable Novelty of the season, as well as all standard kinds. A special feature for 1884 is, that you can for $5.00 select Seeds or Plants to that value from their Catalogue, and have included, without charge, a copy of Peter Henderson's New Book, "Garden and Farm Topics," a work of 250 pages, handsomely bound in cloth, and containing a steel portrait of the author. The price of the book alone is $1.50. Catalogue of "Everything for the Garden," giving details, free on application.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. SEEDSMEN & FLORISTS, 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing is possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

FARM AND GARDEN.

WORK FOR MARCH.

Engage the farm hands now for the year, and have steady employment for them. Do not let men be exposed in hard, cold rains, at the risk of a long sickness in the busiest time of the year.

Remove the surface water from the fields by trenches, before the ground is deeply thawed, and avoid wasteful washing of gullies. See that the outlets of all drains are clear and working properly.

Get all the seeds ready, and purchase any implements that will be needed later in the season. Have all the machinery of the farm in prime working order, and be abreast of the rush of work as it comes.

Horses feet need constant care during the cold, muddy spring weather. A daily cleaning of the parts exposed is essential to health.

Cows neglected through the winter now need careful attention. A warm bran slop, with a little ginger, should be fed daily. Calves may be freed from vermin by a mixture of lard and sulphur rubbed along the back and sides.

Sheep losing wool, may be relieved of the irritation by a mixture of equal parts of sulphur and cream of tartar, given in half-ounce doses. Push early lambs forward rapidly, with a little milk from a fresh cow. They quickly learn to feed from a dish.

Breeding sows should be in separate pens, and given warm beds of cut straw for their young.

Clean the poultry house and sprinkle with ashes or plaster. If lice abound, apply kerosene in small amounts to the perches, from which it will spread to the birds in effective quantities.—American Agriculturist.

BARN-YARD ECONOMY.

A dark stream, often of golden color, always of golden value, flows to waste from many an American barn-yard. This liquid fertility often enters the side ditch of the farm lane, sometimes of the highway, and empties into a brook, which removes it beyond the reach of plants that would greatly profit by it. Mice may gnaw a hole into the granary and daily abstract a small quantity of grain, or the skunks may reduce the profits of the poultry yards, but these leaks are small in comparison with that from the poorly constructed and ill-kept barn yard. The most valuable part of manure is that which is very soluble, and unless it is retained by some absorbent, or kept from the drenching rains, it will be quickly out of reach. Manure is a manufactured produet, and the success of all farm operations in the older States depends upon the quantity and quality of this product. Other things being equal, the farmer who comes out in the spring with the largest amount of the best quality of manure, will be the one who finds farming pays the best. A barn-yard, whether on a hillside or on a level, with all the rains free to fall upon the manure heap, should be so arranged as to lose none of the drainage. Sidehill barn-yards are common because the barns thus located furnish a convenient cellar. A barricr of earth on the lower side of the yard ean be quickly thrown up with a team and road-scraper, which will eatch and hold the drenchings of the yard above, and the eoarse, newly made manure will absorb the liquid and be benefited by it. It would be better to have the manure made and kept under cover, always well protected from rains and melting snows. Only enough moisture should be present to keep it from fermenting too rapidly. An old farmer who let his manure take care of itself, once kept some of his sheep under cover and was greatly surprised at the increased value of the manure thus made. In fact, it was so "stroug" that when scattered as thickly as the leached dung of the yard, it made a distinct belt of better grain in the field. The testimony was so much in favor of the stall-made manure, that this farmer is now keeping all his live stock under cover, and the farm is yielding larger crops and growing richer year by year. If it pays to stop any leak in the granary, it is all the more important to look well to the manure that furnishes the food, that feeds the plants, that grow the grain, that fills the grain bin. At this seasou the living mills are all grinding the hay and grain, and yielding the by-products of the manure heap. Much may be saved in spring work by letting this heap be as small as out-door yard feeding and the winds and rains can make it, but such saving is like that of the economic sportsman who went out with the idea of using as little powder and lead as possible. In farming, grow the largest possible crops, even though it takes a week or more of steady hard work to get the rich, heavy, well-prepared manure upon the fields. More than this, enrich the land by throwing every stream of fertility back upon the aeres which have yielded it. Watch the manure heap as you would a mine of gold.—American Agriculturist.

CITY AND VILLAGE GARDENS.

For the past ten years there seems to have been a disposition among our suburban and village residents to depend on the grocerymen, rather than their gardener, for their supply of fruits and vegetables. They could buy them, they said, cheaper than they could raise them. Such may have been the case. I presume it is also true that they can buy milk for less money than they can keep a Jersey cow. They can board cheaper than they can keep house. They can hire a carriage for less money than they can keep a horse. But what is the good of living in the country if you cannot have fresh air, and fresh flowers, and fresh fruits and fresh vegetables. I do not think it is true that you can buy them cheaper than you can raise them, but even if it were so, it is certain that you cannot get them as fresh and good as those which you can grow in your own garden, and you will not be likely to use them in such profusion. Is there no pleasure in seeing them growing? No pleasure in picking a bouquet of flowers or gathering a dish of strawberries fresh from the vines? I am happy to believe that our professional and business men are paying more attention to their gardens. It will pay them well, and their children at any rate will be happier and healthier, and I think more interesting and intelligent.—From Jos. Harris' Moreton Farm Catalogue.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

Decided Benefit.

Dr. John P. Wheeler, Hudson, N. Y., says: "I have given it with decided benefit in a case of innutrition of the brain, from abuse of alcohol."

"I am the Last of Six."

One rainy forenoon, something less than a year ago, a pale, cadaverous youth walked into the store of C. N. Crittenton, New York, and in weak, husky tones, interrupted frequently by a dry hacking cough, stated that he wanted a couple of bottles of Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "I am the last of six," he said; "the others all died of consumption, and I am going fast. I will try this new remedy, but I have no hope." He did try it, and to some purpose. He took in all twelve bottles, and is to-day in perfect health—lungs sound, cough gone, not a sign of pulmonary disease remaining. Sold by druggists.

Pike's Toothache Drops eure in one minute.

It is better to Remove than to hide complexional blemishes. Use Glenn's Sulphur Soap, not cosmetics. Sold by druggists.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, blaek or brown, fifty eents.

Opinion of Eminent Dr. R. S. Stewart, President Maryland Hospital, Baltimore: "* * * * I have used Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic for more than a year, and recommend it as one of the most efficient preparations I have ever met with. It combines the virtues of food and tonic in a remarkable way, and I am satisfied has saved life when no other medieine could do so." (Remember the name, Colden's —take no other.) Of druggists generally.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

NEVER FAILS.

IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURING Epileptic Fits, Spasm, Falling Sickness, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Seminal Weakness, Impoteney, Syphilis, Serofula, and all

Nervous and Blood Diseases.

☞To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all whose sedentary employment causes Nervous Prostration, Irregularities of the blood, stomaeh, bowels or kidneys, or who require a nerve tonie, appetizer or stimulent, Samaritan Nervine is invaluable.

☞Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50, at Druggists.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR.

The DR. S. A. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.

For testimonials and circulars send stamp. (18)

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FOR THE CURE OF

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

DR. JOHN BULL,

Manufacturer and Vender of

SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,

The Popular Remedies of the Day.

Principal Office, 831 Main St., LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Master's Carpet.

BY

F. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 638 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 429 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

Address

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in Batavia, N. Y., September, 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

READ ABOUT THIS GREAT HISTORICAL MEETING.

A handsome pamphlet. Price, 25 cents, postpaid. Send to the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper covers, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

Five Dollar LIBRARY.

"The Broken Seal."
"The Master's Carpet."
"In the Coils, or The Coming Conflict."
"The Character, Claims and Practical Workings of Freemasonry," by Pres. C. G. Finney.
"Revised Odd-fellowship;" the secrets, together with a diseussion of the eharacter of the order.
"Freemasonry Illustrated;" the secrets of first seven degrees, together with a disecussion of their eharacter.
"Sermons and Addresses on Secret Societies;" a valuable collection of the best arguments against secret orders from Revs. Cross, Williams, McNary, Dow, Sarver, Drury, Prof. J. G. Carson, and Prests. George and Blanchard.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

IN THE COILS;

—OR—

THE COMING CONFLICT.

A NEW AND RAPIDLY SELLING BOOK IN OPPOSITION TO FREE-MASONRY.

We desire to call your attention to this useful work, and ask you to help us in its circulation. We want Agents to canvass every community.

By selling this book one can do much good. It is by such literature that we must expect to awaken a popular sentiment against secret societies, and overthrow them. By selling this book one can make money. Liberal terms will be allowed, and any energetic Agent can sell many copies. Masons will buy it from mere curiosity. Anti-Masons will buy it for the facts and arguments presented. Many will buy it to send to their neighbors. Those on the fence will buy it that they may learn the truth on the subject. Those not interested in the discussion, and young people especially, will buy it for the story.

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"It is an attack on Freemasonry with a sprinkle of Slavery thrown in to make it go down well."—A. R. Presbyterian, (S. C.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of the best class of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D., in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia, Pa.)

"A charming work fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ill.)

The book is neatly and plainly printed, handsomely bound, 352 pages, thick paper. A specimen copy sent to any one contemplating accepting an agency for $1.10.

Single copy $1.50; Per Dozen. $15.00.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc. of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen.

For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

A NEW

Anti-masonic Scrap-book.

A neat pamphlet, comprising forty-three tracts against secret orders, published by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. It contains some of the MOST POWERFUL ARGUMENTS put in brief form, written by men of distinguished ability, showing the evil nature and dangerous tendency of secret societies. Those who circulate tracts need the book to make their selections wisely.

Send for a copy to Anti-masonic headquarters, the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago. Price, 25 cents.

FINNEY ON MASONRY.

The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75c; per dozen $7.50. Paper cover 35c; per dozen, $3.50.

No Christian's library is complete without it. Send for a copy in cloth and get a catalogue of books and tracts sold by the NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ILLUSTRATED.

By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00. Address the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

STANDARD ILLUSTRATED RITUALS!

Complete WORK and "SECRETS"!

Revised Oddfellowship,	cloth $1., paper 50
Freemasonry—first Seven Degrees,	" 1., " 75
Knight Templarism—Eighth to Fourteenth Deg's,	" 1., " 50
Adoptive Masonry,	20	Temple of Honor,	25
Knights of Pythias,	25	United Sons of Industry,	10
Good Templarism,	25	Grand Army of the Republic,	10

Also other valuable works. Catalogue in last Trade List Annual and sent free. Books sent post-paid on receipt of price.

EZRA A. COOK, Publisher. 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

YOUNG'S GREAT BIBLE CONCORDANCE

311,000 references. The complete work. Spurgeon says: Cruden's a child's play compared with it." Bound in cloth, $2.50; half Russia, $3. Postage 40c

TEACHERS' LIBRARY, including Bible Dictionary, Commentary, Compendium of Teaching, etc., etc.; small, but very readable print; wire-sewed, in postal card covers. Contents similar to books which, in ordinary form, cost 75c. to $1.50 each. The ten books for $1.50, postpaid.

$100 Library for $6.75.

$6.75 buys a library of 100 volumes of choicest $1 to $1.50 Sunday-school books, sent postpaid. 50 books for $3.50. Books all catalogued and numbered, put up in pamphlet form, wire stitched, light and flexible—will outlast most expensive. Over three million already sold. One hundred and seventy books now issued. The whole lot for $11.18. Single copy, postpaid, 10c, 12 copies, $1.

TITLES OF BOOKS.

Please Order by the Nos.

1 Jessica's First Prayer.
2 The King's Servants.
3 Dairyman's Daughter.
4 Whiter than Snow; Little
5 Alone in London. [Dot.
6 Children of Cloverly.
7 Little Bessie; French Bessie.
8 The Giant-Killer.
9 Ursula's Girlhood.
10 Lost Gip; Little Meg's Chil
11 Newlyn House. [dren.
12 Tom Gillies.
13 What is her Name?
14 Willie's Money-Box.
15 Fern Glen.
16 Sunbeam Susette.
17 Rose, Robin and Little May.
18 Apron Strings.
19 Children of the Great King.
2 Nellie's Dark Days.
21 On the Way.
22 A Double Story.
23 Gutta Percha Willie.
24 My Brother and I.
25 Madie Grant.
26 Coming to the Light.
27 Deepdale End.
28 Winifred Bertram.
29 Life's Struggles.
30 Work and Wages.
31 Time Will Tell.
32 Adventures of Kwel.
33 Ethel Linton.
34 Rescued from Egypt.
35 Through the Needle's Eye.
36 Peter the Apprentice.
37 The Wood Carvers.
38 Mrs. Dobbs' Dull Boy.
39 Bernie's White Chicken;
40 Sheer Off. [Eda May.
41 Silver Keys.
42 Truth is Always Best.
43 Ministering Children, Part I.
44 Ministering Children, Part II.
45 Nettie's Miss'n, Lit. Margery.
46 Margery's City Home.
47 The Poor Clerk.
48 Pilgrim Street.
49 Silver Sands.
50 King Jack of Hayfands.
51 Little Brown Girl. [Letter.
52 Tom Green; The Tinker's
53 Mr. Henderson's Failure.
54 General Peg and Her Staff.
55 How the Buttoned Boots
56 Sadie's Summer. [Marched.
57 Hugalda's Trials and Tri-
58 Joyce Harley. [umphs.
59 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
60 Childhood of Jesus. [Part I.
61 Tempest Tost'd.
62 Erna's Mission.
63 Glimpses of Two Lives.
64 From Wrong to Right.
65 Ten Days' Happenings.
66 Two Sisters of Little Hope.
67 Jimmy Beverly's Journal.
68 Alice Erwin.
69 Fireside Talks on Genesis.
70 Right is Right. [Part II.
71 Frank for Himself.
72 Lyman.
73 Kenneth.
74 Florence.
75 Willing Workers.
76 A Commonplace Girl.
77 Margery Kramer's School-
78 The Quartette. [days.
79 Robbie's Vacation.
80 Lulu Preston's Trials and Trimmphs.
81 Sadie's School Life.
82 Playing at Living.
83 Kenneth and His Friends.
84 Memoirs of a Mirror
85 Joe and Harry
86 Fred, the Backwood Boy.
87 Bloomfield's Rock.
88 Father's Lost Will.
89 No Fiction.
90 Barebacks.
91 Margery Kramer in the City.
92 Tom Saunders.
93 Pet of the Royal Guard.
94 Girl Life at Willowville.
95 Fred and His Friends.
96 The Young Housekeeper.
97 At Elim.
98 Clear the Way.
99 Faith Christie's Experiments.
100 Margery in the South.
101 Burden-Bearing.
102 A Rough Voyage.
103 Glimpses of the Edingtons.
104 Tom, Dick and Harry.
105 More than Conquerors.
106 Sought and Saved.
107 Lionel Franklin's Victory.
108 History of a Threepenny Bit; Frank Spencer's Rule of 109 The Harker Family. [Life,
110 Christie's Old Organ.
111 Frank Oldfield.
112 Tim's Troubles.
113 True to His Colors.
114 The Distiller's Daughter.
115 Greyledge.
119 Rachel Noble's Experience.
117 Doing and Dreaming.
118 Mother Herring's Chicken.
119 Brought Home.
120 Our Poll and other stories.
121 Rachel and the S. C.
122 Cobwebs and Cables.
123 Fearndale.
124 David's Little Lad.
125 Alec Green.
126 Buy your Own Cherries.
127 Grandmother Dear.
128 Jennie's Geranium.
129 The Brewer's Family.
130 Sidney Gray.
131 Froggie's Little Brother.
132 Jessie's Struggles.
133 Dot and Her Treasures.
134 Jessie Dyson; John Worth.
135 Faith Hayne.
136 Scamp and I.
137 Caleb Deane's Clock, and other stories.
138 Black Bob. Scrub, the Workhouse boy.
139 Millerton People.
140 Duties and Duties.
141 The Curse of Tellourd.
142 The Scathed and Saved.
143 Castle Williams; or, the Children's War on Bottle Jack.
144 Ruth and Her Friends.
145 Old Bill's Good Angel.
146 Mabel's Experience.
147 The Cousins.
148 Under the Curse of the Cup.
149 Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.
150 Louis' School Days
151 Blossom and blight.
152 A Candle Lighted by the Lord.
153 Bruey.
154 History of a Shilling, Toil and Trust.
155 Wee Donald, Chips.
156 Digging a Grave with a Wine-glass. Little blind May.
157 The Manor House Mystery. May's Sixpence,
158 Owen's Hobby.
159 Gathered Temperance Tales.
160 Job Lufton's Rest.
161 Brought to Light.
162 Nothing Like Example.
163 Little Faith. The Diver's Daughter.
164 Dora's boy.
165 The Hermit of Holcombe.
166 Danesbury House.
167 War on the Weed. A Fear
168 Drift. [ful bondage.
169 Merton Lodge.
170 Zoe.

52 books in the above list, Nos. 96, 98, 101, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109 111, 112, 113, 114, 116, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 126, 128, 129, 131, 132, 134, 135, 137, 138, 139, 141 142, 143, 145, 147, 148, 151, 152, 154 to 164, 166, 167 and 168 are also published in another form (ordinary, small book page) and comprise the "FIRESIDE TEMPERANCE LIBRARY," which is sent, postpaid, for $4, any 12 copies for $1, 10c each.

Address EZRA A. COOK,

13 WABASH AVE., Chicago, Ill.

Reform Note Paper & Envelopes

This is good heavy paper, 5⅜x8⅜ inches, with pungent quotations on Secretism from Scripture and from Finney, Moody, Colver and others, with a "head" of the Cynosure and N. C. A.; all arranged in a neat heading at top of first page, and ruled both sides. $3.00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 40 cents per 100 sheets. ENVELOPES, of good quality to match, white or colored, with equally good but different quotations on back and face, @ $4 00 per 1,000; or post paid @ 60 cents per 100

Handsome Marriage Certificates.

Lithographed in black and gold, with a place on each for two photographs.

Price postpaid, $2.25 per dozen; by express, charges not paid, $14.00 per 100. Sample sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents. Size, 12 by 18 inches.

Published by EZRA A. COOK, 13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Family, Oxford and Gift Bibles at Half Price.

TERMS.—Cash with order; if by express, charges not paid; if by mail, postage extra as quoted and safe delivery guaranteed ONLY when 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering All Family Bibles are furnished in strong paste-board box and are carefully wrapped for Express or Mail. Remit by P. O. or Express Order. Draft on Chicago or New York, or by Registered Letter Postage stamps taken for less than $1.00.

Choice Illustrated Family Bibles at about Half the Usual Prices.

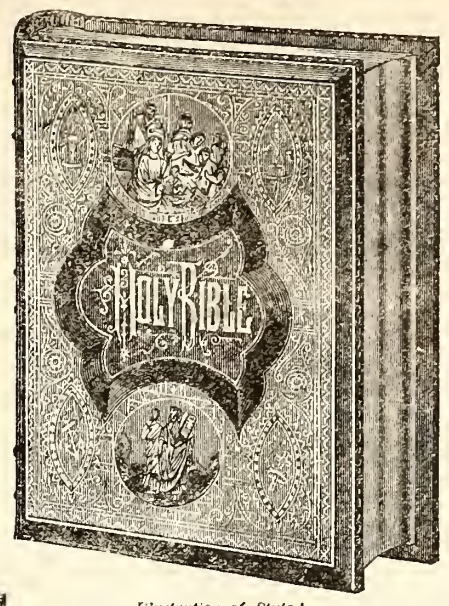

Illustration of Style 4.

$3.20. STYLE 1. Full size Family Bible (10½x12½ inches.) Old and New Testaments, including the Apocrypha, also Psalms in meter. Ten elegant full-page steel, 12 full-page Dore engravings, and 36 nearly full-page illustrations splendid illuminated presentation plate; also, illuminated plates of the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments with PHOTOGRAPH ALBUM and Family Record, and Encyclopedia of Bible knowledge, containing the following subject matter: A Comprehensive and Critical History of the Books of the Bible, History of the Translation of the English Bible. Harmony of the Gospels, Table of Contemporaneous History, Chronology of Old and New Testaments, Weights, measures, time money, etc., prophecies, parables, prayers, etc., arranged in tables. A very complete and accurate Concordance, also, a very valuable Chronological Index and in addition, Dr. W. M. Smith's immense $12.00 Bible Dictionary, carefully abridged. Over 400 illustrations. Postage, 94cts.

Illustration of Style 1.

STYLE 2. The same Bible as Style 1, with handsome clasp. Price, $3.70 Postage, $1.02.

$5.60. STYLE 4. Same contents as Styles 1 and 2. Bound in American morocco, elegant new design, raised panels, beautifully ornamented, gilt sides and back, gilt edges. Equal to any $10 family Bible. Postage, $1.16.

STYLE 5. Same Bible as Style 4, with handsome double clasp. Price, $6.60. Postage, $1.22.

$7.90. STYLE 6. Complete with all the instructive features of the most expensive family Bible, with nearly two thousand illustrations. Copious steel and Dore engravings, etc. Bound in French morocco, raised panel sides. A superb design, beveled boards, gilt edges, equal to Bibles sold at $12.50 to $18. Postage, $1.22.

STYLE 7. The same Bible, with extra fine double clasp, $8.90. Postage, $1.30.

$9.10. STYLE 8. All the features of the others. 64 full-page steel and Dore engravings. Most complete Family Bible extant. Contains everything to be found in the most complete $25 Family Bible and much that no other contains. Bound in extra fine French morocco, super-raised panels, full gilt edges, sides and back, worked silk head bands, super-extra finish, inside edges of cover rolled in gold—entirely new design of cover. Price, $9.10. Will match any $25 subscription Bible in the market. Postage, 1.30.

STYLE 9. The same Bible as Style 8, with extra fine double clasp. Price, $10.10. Postage, $1.40.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

Address Ezra A. Cook, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill

ANTI-LODGE PUBLICATIONS.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Oddfellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought; the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25c. each, per doz. $1.50.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Discussion on Secret Societies. By Elder M. S. Newcomer and Elder G. W. Wilson, a Royal Arch Mason. This discussion was first published in a series of articles in the Church Advocate. 25 cents each; per doz $2.00.

Stearns' Review of Two Masonic Addresses. In this scathing review the lying pretensions of the order are clearly shown. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Female Masonry. Manual of the Order of the Eastern Star. Containing the ritual, symbols, lectures, etc., of the five degrees of "Adoptive Masonry," Jephthah's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound. Price, $1.50.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50 Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 90 cents each; per dozen $2 00

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Stearns' Letters on Masonry. Showing the antagonism between Freemasonry and the Christian religion. Paper cover, 30 cents each; per dozen, $2.50.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,

13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S. Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by Eli Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac similies of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest hits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

Address—

EZRA A. COOK,

13 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

—The Senate Committee decided to report favorably on the admission of the Southern portion of Dakota as a State. While leaving the Northern portion its Territorial rights, they have not yet decided what name it shall bear, but are unalterably opposed to the title North Dakota.

—At the investigation of the Danville riot Tuesday, it was sworn that in two stores on the day before the fight, white men were engaged in loading a large number of guns; and that in one instance, while the shooting was in progress, a white man entered a certain store, threw down his empty weapon, and carried off one which was loaded. Warrich Read, a mulatto, who owns valuable property in Danville, reluctantly testified that he overheard the proceedings of a Democratic conference committee to the effect that the election must be carried by fair or foul methods.

—The House of Representatives Thursday, by a vote of 155 yeas to 127 nays, passed the pleuro-pneumonia bill. It provides for the creation of a government bureau of animal industry.

—The bill to repeal the test oath which passed the Senate some time ago, passed the House Wednesday.

—The Senate Committee investigating the Copiah County (Mississippi) election outrages at New Orleans, adjourned Tuesday sine die, after examining 152 witnesses.

—At the annual meeting of the Washington Monument Society at Washington Friday, a committee was appointed to arrange a programme for the celebration of the completion of the monument, which is expected to take place in December. A stone for the pile, sent by the King of Siam was thankfully received.

COUNTRY.

—The contributions to date for the benefit of the Ohio flood sufferers in Chicago amount to $21,704.62.

—Interviews with architects Smith, of Washington, Myers of Detroit, and Richardson of Springfield, bring out some very damaging statements relative to the Custom House and Postoffice of Chicago. Methods of averting danger to the building are suggested.

—Paul Schmidt, a lad of 18 years, much given to reading dime novels, hung himself in a Chicago barn, and the Coroner's jury called the act suicide.

—Near Fulton, Mo., Tuesday night Farmer Craighead, a prominent citizen, was called from his house presumably to aid in extricating a loaded wagon from a rut, when he was shot and shockingly mutilated by parties unknown.

—Near Omaha Wednesday four boys exploded a powder house containing 500 kegs of powder, and the lads were blown to pieces. The detonation leveled all the trees in the vicinity, and the windows and doors of a house half a mile away were splintered.

—The late defendants in the Emma Bond trial are ostracised in their homes in Christian county. Merchants and business men decline to have anything to do with them.

—The Red river is higher in Louisiana than it has been since 1849, flooding the country for a hundred miles. Boats arriving at Shreveport are bringing people and stock from the submerged region.

—Cornelius Van Riper and his three children were burned to death in their house, at New York, last Thursday morning, and Mrs. Van Riper, who was enceinte, was killed by jumping from a third-story window.

—Judge Hilton has purchased from Mrs. A. T. Stewart the "Stewart Building," at Broadway and Chambers street, New York, for $2,100,000.

—Gold has been discovered near Erin, Tenn., and hundreds of miners and others are flocking to that place. The discoverer has $5,000 worth of nuggets on exhibition.

—A dispatch from Shreveport says the water is on the stand. Nearly all the river plantations for 100 miles above the city are under water. Below the city the flooded district extends ninety miles on the west side, and all except a few elevated places are covered. The east side banks being higher, the country is not so badly overflowed, though several plantations are under water. It is impossible to approximate the loss to planters in houses, fences and stock. The water is spread out like a sea to the swamps and high lands. There is much suffering among the colored people.

—The law was suspended at Hot Springs, Ark., last week, and the committee of fourteen, some of whom are under indictment for crimes in other States, control the city. Twenty persons were driven out at the point of the bayonet Wednesday, and it is alleged that an editor, Harris, must also move. The people expelled are generally witnesses against the accomplices in a recent assassination.

—By the burning of Powers & Wrightman's chemical works and other fires at Philadelphia, Thursday night, the loss will reach $1,150,000. Hundreds of people quitted their homes, anticipating an explosion of chemicals; and burning oil flowed in all directions through the streets, citizens being called on to extricate the fire engines and hose. Every fire company in the city, save one, was on duty. New York dealers advanced the price of quinine, owing to the large amount of that article destroyed in Powers & Wrightman's establishment.

—A panic occurred in St. Patrick's church, St. Louis. While the services were in progress a pipe attached to one of the steam coils burst, filling the church with steam, and so startled the congregation that all jumped to their feet and made for the doorways. Several persons were trampled on and badly hurt. Mary McLaughlin was fatally injured.

—A New London dispatch notes the death by drowning or starvation of seven men of the crew of the schooner Sarah W. Hunt, while searching for seals near Campbell Island, in the Pacific Ocean. The commander of the brigantine, with the aid of a boy, kept his vessel on her course for a month. The captain and steward of the schooner alone sailed the vessel 630 miles to New Zealand after losing the crew.

—Professor R. T. Greener, of Howard University, one of the most learned and eloquent colored men in the country, has been invited to deliver the address at the fifteenth amendment celebration at Chicago on the 31st of March. Professor Greener is a graduate of Harvard College, and was a great favorite with Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips, Emerson, Whittier, and other famous men.

FOREIGN.

—Advices from Madagascar state that the natives have succeeded in landing a number of Krupp cannon and other munitions of war. An English colonel has obtained command of the Malagasy army and will soon attack the French.

—A battle between the British and the rebels under Osman Digma was expected to take place Friday three miles northeast of Trinkitat. Khartoum is tranquil, but the condition of affairs at Suakim is reported as critical.

—Russia and the Pope have come to an understanding, and a Russian minister to the Vatican will be appointed.

—The Czar of Russia has decided to convene the Superior Council March 10, for the purpose of considering the Nihilist question.

—In the House of Commons Thursday the Home Secretary stated that another infernal machine had been discovered in the Paddington Railway Station. The police discovered a large quantity of explosives underneath the Charing Cross Railway Station.

—John Lowe, Secretary of the Canadian Department of Agriculture, was examined by a special Parliamentary committee at Ottawa, Thursday, and swore that the statistics issued from Washington as to the immigration to the United States from Canada were incorrect, and that American customs officers had been instructed to fraudulently augment the number of persons leaving the Dominion.

—With a clause prohibiting amalgamation with the Grand Trunk, the bill granting $22,500,000 to the Canadian Pacific Road was read a third time in the Dominion Parliament Thursday night.

—Great failures are reported from provincial cities of France. The liabilities sum up about $2,000,000. A broker hanged himself. A bank involved in the crash had 3,500,000 francs of deposits, mostly peasants' earnings.

—A royal commission will inquire into the condition of the dwellings of the poor in the United Kingdom. The commission includes Cardinal Manning, several delegates from the workingmen's association, and a number of Irish and Scotch Members of Parliament.

—The German commission investigating the origin of Asiatic cholera found in a water-tank in a suburb of Calcutta the same microscopic organism discovered in the intestines of cholera victims in Egypt.

—A Paris dispatch says that many Christians have been murdered in Anam since the beginning of January. The Anamite Minister of War is implicated. The Chinese Viceroy, prior to the capture of Sontay, ordered the Black Flags to murder every Christian in the city.

BUSINESS.

CYNOSURE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Received for the week ending March 1st, 1884:

A Lindsay, A Mayn, L Heaton, J F Rock, Jas. Davenport, Wm. Hollowell, J McClary, W C Stewart, W B Stoddard, S C Hart, H Hawkins, F Byver, Wm. D Johnson, J W Baldridge, J S Rice, W A Hyle, H S Taylor, D Dayton, S L Fay, S B Patterson, J W Te Winkel, W N Lovell, Wm. H Garlock, W H Ross, A I J Jackson, G Bolander, T B Galloway, Mrs C B Keys, O C M Bates, J H Frazee, Geo. Haskins, P Bacon, J R Denison, W H Peabody, H H Robinson, J O Doesburg, I Townsend, M L Worcester, S A Pratt, C D Hoyt, Sr., Lamer Clark, Adna Lull, C Coleman, Samuel Wilson, John Hoobler, M A Gault, E D Slayton, Henry Woolf, Joel T Buckley, A Muzzy, Philo Gates, J A Richards, A F Worden, Ezra A Cook, Rev. Wm. Jackson, L M Bixler, James Craig.

FOLLY.

It's all folly to pay $50 or a $100 for seven degrees in Freemasonry in the Lodge and Chapter when you can send a dollar to the National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, and get the whole thing by return mail, without being hoodwinked and haltered or having to "put up refreshments" after tedious "initiations."

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED."

Paper cover, price 75 cents.

The former price was 60 cents. We cannot send this book hereafter except upon receipt of 75 cents.

The finest alterative and anti-bilious medicine on earth, is Samaritan Nervine. $1.50.

"The doctors said my child must die with spasms, Samaritan Nervine cured him." Wm. E. Tanner, Dayton, Ohio. At Druggists.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—No. 2		92½
No. 3	82	@87
Winter No 2	99	@1 01
Corn—No. 2	52¾	@53½
Oats—No. 2	33½	@35
Rye—No. 2		58
Bran per ton		15 25
Flour	2 25	@6 25
Hay—Timothy	6 50	@10 00
Mess pork per bbl		17 85
Butter, medium to best	14	@30
Cheese	03	@12½
Beans	1 50	@2 76
Eggs		23
Potatoes per bus	27	33
Seeds—Timothy	1 27	@1 30
Flax	1 50	1 60
Broom corn	02	@ 08
Hides—Green to dry flint	6	@14½
Lumber—Common	11 00	@18 00
Wool	16	@37
Cattle—Extra	6 40	@7 10
Common to good	4 40	@5 95
Hogs	6 00	@7 40
Sheep	3 75	@5 50

NEW YORK.

Flour	2 80	@6 25
Wheat—Winter	1 04	@1 20
Spring		1 08½
Corn	57	@63
Oats	40	@47
Mess Pork		18 00
Eggs		23
Butter		@37
Wool	14	@45

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	4 60	@6 30
Hogs	6 25	@6 85
Sheep	3 00	@3 50

CLARK'S NEW REFORM SONG BOOK.

Full of soul-stirring songs. Words and music. Humane, Reformatory and Progressive; National and Patriotic, Social and Domestic, Anti secrecy, Temperance, Prohibition, etc., etc. Two hundred and sixty pieces, nicely bound and in clear, bright type. Should be in every family and in possession of every singer.

FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE

by the dozen, for clubs, or single copy.

PRESS COMMENTS:

"Mr. Clark has a national reputation as an author of music and as a solo singer. His music, like himself, has in it the soul of freedom and the life of love. He has made a unique and splendid book. It strikes directly and powerfully in the direction of the several questions of reform to which it is devoted, and also contains many of those old melodies so essential to the circle of song."—[Religious Telescope, Dayton, O.

"I most heartily thank and congratulate you on its timely appearance and excellent contents."—[Sandy Lake News, Pa.

"If you want to sing a variety of songs on a variety of topics, all of them good and many of them beautiful, send for this cheap volume. It contains a rich variety of songs, hymns and tunes—grave and gay."—[Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

"Geo. W. Clark is the author of the 'Liberty Minstrel,' 'Harp of Freedom,' etc., etc., and the great performer of songs which had their influence in ushering in the great day of emancipation which we so long labored and prayed for, and which has given five millions of the down-trodden nominal freedom, and which I trust will soon be to them REAL freedom."—[A. F. Williams, Esq., Farmington, Conn.

"This is one of the most complete books of its class that has ever come under our observation."—[Sabbath Recorder, Alfred Center, N. Y.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

CLASSICAL, SCIENTIFIC, BUSINESS AND NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF FINE ART.

Expense $175. per year. Persons desiring rooms in College building should apply at once. Students are received into classes at all times.

THE USE OF INTOXICATING BEVERAGES AND TOBACCO AND ATTENDANCE ON SECRET SOCIETIES ARE PROHIBITED

Winter Term Begins Dec. 11th, 1883.

C. A. BLANCHARD, President.

WM. W. FARWELL

Attorney at Law and Solicitor in CHANCERY.

76 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO.

CYRUS L. BLANCHARD

Attorney and Counselor at Law

79 Dearborn Street, Room 59, CHICAGO.

PENSIONS for any disability; also to Heirs. Send stamps for New Laws. Col. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C

PATENTS NO PATENT! NO PAY. R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent FREE

KNABE PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y

POOR people have become rich working for us We offer a business easy to learn—paying large sums of money in profits Every one willing to work can get rich Men, women and even boys and girls, are making fortunes No capital required We will start you in business You run no risk whatever You need not be away from home Full particulars free W. V. R. POWIS, 89 Randolph St, Chicago, Ill

How to rear and manage poultry. Send a ten-cent piece to H. H. Stoddard, Hartford, Ct., for a copy of the Poultry World, and it will tell you.

GET A MODEL PRESS.

Price, complete with Type, &c., $5 to $10 and up. Prints Cards, Circulars, Labels, Tracts, everything for Business, Schools, Churches, &c. It is very durable and rapid, and so simple that any boy can work it and earn hundreds of dollars a year. 12,000 sold. Send 2 cent stamp for 40 Page Catalogue, with gorgeous floral card and other work done on a Model Press. J. W. Daughaday & Co. Mfrs. 721 Chestnut St. Philadelphia

MODEL IMPROVED.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address Dr. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

Christian Cynosure.

'IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XVI., No. 25. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1884. WHOLE NO. 724.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

J. P. STODDARD,.....GENERAL AGENT

TERMS: .....$2.00 per year in advance.
CLUBS OF FIVE.....$8.75 CLUBS OF TEN.....$15.00

Address all business letters and make all drafts and money-orders payable to W. I. PHILLIPS, TREAS., 221 West Madison Street, Chicago. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address, always give the former address.

Address all letters for publication to Editor Christian Cynosure, Chicago. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Post-office at Chicago, Ill., as Second Class matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments..... 1
The Political Situation of Reform... 8
The Political Panorama... 8
No Place Like Home..... 8
CONTRIBUTED:
Secretism Going to Seed.. 1
A Temperance Song..... 2
Short Sermon..... 2
Lying Vanities..... 2
The Query of the Lodgeville Church—Chap. III. 3
SELECTED:
The Lodge and Christ Different Masters..... 3
THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION:
Address of Dr. A. A. Miner..... 4
BIBLE LESSONS..... 6
OBITUARY..... 7
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Woman's Suffrage Convention; On Christian Union; An Open Letter; A Child's Deception; Pith and Point.....5,6
LITERARY..... 9
AMERICAN POLITICS..... 9
The National American..... 9
THE HOME..... 10
TEMPERANCE..... 12
THE CHURCHES..... 13
FARM NOTES..... 14
IN BRIEF..... 15
THE N. C. A..... 7
CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.... 7
CLUBBING LIST..... 7
LECTURE LIST..... 13
NEWS OF THE WEEK..... 16
BUSINESS..... 16
MARKETS..... 16

THE WASHINGTON ADDRESS

Of A. A. Miner, D.D., justly celebrated as one of the ablest advocates of temperance and National Reform, is given in the present issue and will be eagerly read. Next week we shall have the addresses of Rev. B. T. Roberts of Rochester, N. Y., and of Pres. J. Blanchard. This will nearly complete the convention report.

The large number of extra papers called for gives us great confidence in the efforts of the friends of the Cynosure for a large increase of the subscription list. Let nothing be left undone to secure new readers and the continuance of old ones.

If each one will add to his effort for a good cause the name of a new subscriber, enclosing $4.00 for both, the sender may have also his choice of the following valuable pamphlets:

1. The Batavia Convention pamphlet, with the great speeches on that occasion, illustrations of the Morgan Monument, etc.; or

2. Egypt in History and Prophecy; or, Pharaoh Proclaiming God, by the celebrated Robert Patterson, from Hasting's Anti-infidel Library; or

3. The Anti-masonic Scrap Book, a new and enlarged edition now in press, containing all the tracts published by the N. C. A.; or

4. The Island of Madagascar; the excellent history written by Gen. J. W. Phelps and noticed in a late Cynosure.

5. Copies of any of the pamphlets sold by the N. C. A , to the amount of 25 cents.

The Haekensack Cemetery Company of New Jersey lately refused to bury a colored man in ground consecrated to Caucasian bones. But Governor Abbett is opposed to such contemptible snobbery in New Jersey and, as the Cemetery Company is an incorporate body, has addressed a special message to the legislature recommending the passage of a law which shall make such a refusal hereafter a criminal offense.

The last great steamship disaster—"the City of Columbus" off Martha's Vineyard, January 18th, has passed official investigation and resulted in the censure of Captain Wright and revoking his license. Back of the criminal carelessness of the captain is the fact that the entire crew had the evening before the disaster been attending a firemen's ball in Boston and, on the evidence of an experienced navigator, none of them were in a fit state for duty. This is not, alas! the first time that the dissipations of the ball-room have led to fatality and loss, both for this life and the next.

The progress of prohibitory legislation in Iowa has received deserved and universal attention. The State Senate passed a short time since a bill prohibiting the sale of wines and spirits, and last week a bill originating in the House was also passed by the Senate and signed by the Governor. The latter bill is strictly prohibitory. The terms "intoxicating liquor" "shall be construed to mean alcohol, ale, wine, beer, spirituous, vinous and malt liquors, and all intoxicating liquors whatever, and no person shall manufacture for sale, or sell, or keep for sale as a beverage any intoxicating liquors whatever, including ale, wine and beer." These are the emphatic and sweeping terms of the new law. The promises made by the Republican State convention are, therefore, in so far carried out honorably, and if the law shall be made effective Iowa will soon be a redeemed State. Prohibition established her sturdy citizens will be ready to call up the next reform to be made an issue at the polls, and then the lodge may well tremble.

The last North American Review has an article upon the second nomination of Abraham Lincoln and the debates that preceded it in the secret councils of the Union League. This article deserves and must have a republication for its lessons of warning against the political management of secret orders. Although at the time one of most excusable of secret societies, because to many it seemed necessary as a war measure, yet the disastrous ends which it might have brought about are strikingly evident. It is not without alarm that Americans should read of a national meeting of the remnant of this league last week in Washington, of which Hon. B. K. Bruce, our colored Registrar of the U. S. Treasury, was one of the vice presidents. An attempt was made in this secret conclave to pass a resolution in favor of Logan for the Presidency but it was ruled out by the chairman.

The last Century has a story very familiarly and closely characterizing the caucus machine as managed by the average Republican or Democratic politician. A district convention is being held and the result of the vote introduces by the following scene: "Upon the announcement of the result a loud shout went up, coupled with cries for a speech from the would-be Congressman, who at last suffered himself to be escorted to the platform. He was a ponderous-looking man, with coarse red hair and beard, and a hawk's eye and nose. He was arrayed in black broadcloth. From his showy watch-chain hung a Masonic emblem, and a large diamond pin spluttered in his shirt-bosom. After a short preface of thanks 'for the honor conferred,' he proceeded to take the bull by the horns in saying that he had reason to believe that there were some who had come to the meeting for the purpose of sowing dissension in the ranks of the Republican party. He looked around the room, as he spoke, with an air of righteous indignation, and cries of 'That's so,' 'Give it to 'em, Hugh,' 'We'll teach 'em what reform means!' The air was blue with tobacco-smoke, and the worst element evidently felt the inspiration of success." The whole description is wonderfully enlivened by the notice of the Masonic sign; it is like the central sun in one of Turner's desert scenes.

Capt. Howgate continues to hide successfully, in spite of the frantic efforts of the government to catch him. In making a transfer of real estate in Washington the other day it was found necessary to have the signature of Howgate to one of the papers. It was taken in hand by one of Howgate's friends, and within twenty-four hours it was returned bearing the captain's signature.—Philadelphia Times.

We heartily commend the above to the attention of our Masonic brethern. The late American and Prohibition convention was calculated to, and did produce an impression on the public mind that was manifestly unfavorable to the character of this "ancient and honorable order." Now comes the opportunity for vindication. Its potency and value (to Capt. Howgate) is as obvious as the lamb-skin aprons that symbolize its purity.

Howgate appropriated $140,000 of the people's money. He is convicted, but hides, and Masonic officials, true to their Masonic covenant, forbear to disturb his peaceful retreat, except for the purpose of asking his aid in a business transaction. Surely he will greatly admire and fondly cherish an institution to which he is so much indebted—and so will all those too who emulate his character and example.

A COLORED NATIONAL CONGRESS has been resolved on by the pastors of the colored congregations of the District, Dr. Crummell of the Episcopal church taking the lead. Rev. Mr. Grimke, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Washington, is one of the strongest minds in the colored pastorate. He is grand-son of Judge Grimke and own nephew of Sarah and Angelina Grimke, being the son of their brother Henry by his slave-woman. Though some of these pastors are Masons, or have been, they now abhor the lodge; and the colored congress which they are about to call will put in the secret lodge system as one of the topics for thorough sifting and discussion in carefully prepared papers.

THE AMERICAN.—Prof. Bailey hopes to complete arrangements and issue this paper in the month of April. He visits New England in its interests and of the Northampton meeting. The Cynosure editor and Mrs. Blanchard hope also to be in Massachusetts a week or two before the New England meeting, where she has many relatives and friends; and she hopes to achieve, with the Prohibition women of New England, a work of prayer and counsel which she had judiciously and ably begun at Washington.

SECRETISM GOING TO SEED.

BY THE REV. J. C. K. MILLIGAN.

In the just government of the Lord Jesus, as shown in all history, sin is made its own punishment, or is in some way associated with other penalties so as to mark its evil and bitter character. The familiar facts as to drinking and drunkenness, the lascivious worship of Venus and venereal poison, are only more marked manifestations of a universal law. "They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind." "God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap; for he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." What is true of individuals, is more true of nations which only in this world receive their measure of retribution. Our nation, in the crime of slavery which it protected by Constitutional shields and exalted to the control of its government for many years, built up a colossal system which scourged it with war, drank the life-blood of thousands of its choicest sons, and brought the nation and government within a hair's breadth of utter destruction. And now the drink curse, licensed and sanctioned by national authority for the sake of its revenue, is attaining a tremendous power and grip and like the fabled serpent which the silly farmer in pity put in his bosom, is striking its cruel fangs into the national vitals.

The nation's sin in the matter of secretism has been more negative than positive, is not in formally sustaining but in passively allowing its stealthy encroachments and secret usurpations of power; but it is no less real than if it were direct. There are no Constitutional enactments in its favor, and no legislative statutes establishing or even giving it sanction; but merely like other organizations, secret orders have a chartered existence, are clothed with corporate rights, and are protected as legal organisms. Like the mole its sphere is underground and in the darkness, and like the devils in the presence of Jesus, it asks only to be let alone. Through its masked but effective combinations in the various orders, its political success is such that a very large proportion of the men whom the nation delights to honor with the highest official stations, are Past Grand Worthy Spoonholders in one or more secret fraternities.

Through these, bound by oaths stronger than any oath of allegiance to church or country, constant preference is given to "brethren" of the lodge in making up the civil service lists, in arranging for inaugural ceremonies, in laying corner stones of public buildings, in preparing the inscriptions and insignia that appear on every hand, and in frequent informal but marked recognitions of the secret orders in every governmental way possible. And to all these the nation assents without a single whisper of dissent from any quarter, except from the few anti-secretists, who are not reckoned as belonging to any healthy political organization, and are thought to have neither rhyme nor reason in their opposition. But worse than all, the ministers and prominent lights of the various churches where the national citizens most do congregate, and from whom the national religion, or rather irreligion, receives its shape and substance and spirit, are men who wear the regalia and give the grips and signs of secret associations. From these men no watchful warnings and rebukes are heard against the national sins, "murder and treason excepted;" it would violate their higher secret obligations. From many of these exeuses and vindications are expeeted and frequently given in behalf of almost every violation of the moral code of Christianity. Through such silence, secret connivance, and horrid oaths "ever to conceal and never reveal," the state of our country is rapidly becoming such as to alarm every Christian philanthropist. "The Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out and blood toucheth blood. Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth in it shall languish."

But as men fight prairie and forest fires with counter fires, so God is arraying secretism against itself. Romanism has its sacred order of Jesuits, corrupt Protestantism has its Free and Accepted Masons, and infidelity has its terrible Nihilism, and each is contending for the mastery; but the house divided against itself cannot stand. Then the masses of all sorts are reasoning thus: If secrecy is a good thing, and a sure passport to the Grand Lodge above; if it gives a controlling place at the right hand of the Grand Architect of the Universe in his government on earth; then the more of it the better, and one secret order will be as good as another, and a little better if it is more secret. So it has come to pass that like the frogs of Egypt, secret societies have multiplied until they come up into the palace of the king and into the kneading trough of the peasant. As they are good for churches and ministers, they must be more necessary and equally saving to thieves and gamblers; yea, the church of the Latter Day Saints must have its Danites and build a temple of secrecy on the shores of Salt Lake, in order to read its title clear to this pre-eminent dignity. The dark lantern and the hidden chambers of imagery are become essential factors in every great movement. The "white men's party" was only a miserable minority even in the South until the Ku-Klux raiders going forth with the benediction of their lodge ministers, elevated them into a solid majority. The Northern tradesmen and laborers, guided by demagogues and secret emissaries, have been organized into unions, and brotherhoods, and orders, until each trade, and class, and race, are not only cajoled into voluntary membership but are forced into these secret guilds under penalty of exclusion from employment and of social ostracism.

The result is that the selfish ends of secrecy are largely defeated, or are no compensation for initiation fees, dues and assessments, or are gained only in the higher degrees. Easily gulled and induced by the assurances of crafty leaders, higher degrees are sought and other orders are tried, until pressed by counter forces, opposing influences and competing masters, the rank and file denounce their boasted liberty, equality and fraternity, and cursed the day they faced the East and saw the light. Now Nihilism, the imperium in imperio of secretism, with its skilled leaders in "ways that are dark," plies its power and catches these disappointed and despairing victims; and, desperate, they readily begin to prey upon society and swear eternal hostility to property, government and social order. There are in this country today over 800,000 of these Nihilists; they control the most if not all the orders and unions among us; never seen, or heard of, they are everywhere felt and steadily are carrying on their plans of hellish cruelty. The fearful prevalence of horrible crimes, the general failure of the ends of justice in government, the bitter strife and jealousy that divide political parties, the quarrels that are becoming epidemic among the secret fraternities themselves, and the increasing evidences on every side that "all the foundations of the earth are out of course," are the fruits and demonstration of this fact. Their hand is against every man, but in their hidden haunts no man's hand can reach them. They aim to paralyze business, to disturb political relations, to antagonize races, to corrupt public morals, and to control all the social forces at their centers. They have made our cities to become a fretting leprosy and burning cancers at the vitals of the nation; they are chief in the constant discords between East and West, North and South, Democratic halls, Republican rings, Prohibitionists temperance folk, and every man and his brother. Even now our beloved land and nation is heaving and groaning from the secret volcanic fires they have kindled, and whose outbreak only King Jesus can restrain. "Oh, my soul, come not thou into their secret; into their assembly mine honor, be not thou united."

New York, Feb. 21, 1884.

A TEMPERANCE SONG.

BY J. L. BARLOW.

The Union is calling her Sons to the fray—
To the conflict now raging, all thro' her loved borders;
For the freedom of home, church and state, from the sway
Of the dram-shops, upheld by the Mystical Orders;
For no longer shall Peace,
In our Nation increase,
Till the woes we now suffer, shall find a surcease.

Cho. Then arm for the conflict, and scorn to be slaves;
While the sky shows a star, or the sea owns her waves.

Unbearable burdens, increasing in weight,
Now are bleeding our hearts, and are draining our purses;
While Law and Good Order, are yielding to Hate—
Which is fostered by License, that mother of curses;
Then away to the field;
Nor a foot ever yield;
Till the Foe is o'erthrown, and the Nation is healed.

Let courage and zeal, take the place of all fear;
For the righteous have God, for a friend and defender—
Who ne'er fails in His time, for the Right to appear—
Leading on to success; when each hardened offender,
Shall submit to the press,
And no more in duress,
Judge and Jury shall move, with the "Sign of Distress."

Come Vet'rans, once more, who broke Slavery's chains—
Lead the rising young braves, 'gainst the powers combining;
The Saloon and the Lodge, holding Government's reins,
And with serpentine folds, all our Freedom entwining.
Yea, once more to the breach,
And those twin Demons teach,
That fair Virtue shall reign, where there's freedom of speech.

In union of hearts, and in union of hands;
And in union with God, shall be made our endeavor—
To break from ourselves, and our children, those bands,
In which Lodge and Saloon, would entwine us forever.
Then each Patriot invite,
Now to join in the fight;
Till the foes of our Union, seek safety in flight.

Willimantic, Conn.

SHORT SERMON.

Text:—Ye build the tombs of the prophets.

My Brethren:—By reading the twenty-third chapter of Matthew, from which our text is taken, you will get a clear idea of what a perverse and crooked condition the Jewish mind was in when under the control and direction of Scribes and Pharisees. What the Scribes and Pharisees were to the Jews, our Freemasons are to the United States of the present day. They teach the most pernicious doctrines, under which good and true men are outraged, while successful knaves are honored. Not until the good man is dead is his name honored; and then the honor that is shown him consists merely in erecting a monument to his memory. When the good man is dead, and can no longer oppose or endanger the interests of corrupters, then these corruptors gain credit to themselves by glorifying his name with a monument!

My friends, the people of the Mason-ridden State of Massachusetts have outraged Phillips, Garrison, and Sumner, and now they talk of garnishing the tombs of these righteous men. At a time when tablets of brass should be set up in our legislative halls and in our churches recording the disgrace of the people for egging Phillips, haltering Garrison, and censuring Sumner, these people are turning the tables against the cause of justice and truth by honoring the memories of men whom they themselves had dishonored. As the thief often seeks to escape his pursuers by shouting Stop thief! so these men seek to escape justice by being foremost in honoring those upon whom they had striven to inflict disgrace.

My friends, it is a very sad thing to have a ring of unprincipled speculators get hold of your fortune, and keep yourselves and your families in a state of doubtful suffering and expectancy for many years, and perhaps forever. But how infinitely worse it is to have a ring of Freemasons take possession of the issues of honor and of dishonor, and show favor to the scoundrels to whom they will show favor, and show disfavor to the good men to whom they will show disfavor. And what could be worse than their hateful hypocrisy of pretending to honor the men whom they have sought to disgrace!

My brethren, why is it that eighteen hundred years of Christian instruction has not taught us better than to stone and outrage the true men that are sent among us? What worse fortune could Phillips, Garrison, Sumner, Lovejoy, Morgan and others have suffered if they had been born and reared under a pagan despot? I do not ask why these men should not all have been made Presidents of the United States. I ask simply why it is that they have been so ill-treated in a pretended Christian community?

My friends, there is a large glass house among you called the Masonic Lodge, the inmates of which are constantly throwing stones at the brightest and purest characters of the land; and it is high time that you should begin to gather up some of these stones and bring their brittle, glittering palace down about their ears. So mote it be!

LYING VANITIES.

BY ELDER J. H. AUSTIN.

The spirit that dictates and controls Freemasonry, is the spirit of falsehood. If this were not the case it would not be true to its real character. It has so construed all its workings as to make it an absolute necessity for the Mason to lie by words or acts, or break his Masonic obligations. And if he does this then he lies unto Masonry. So it is manifest that lying and deceit are fundamental in this institution; and when men will acceed to the demands of such requirements it is a sufficient cause to doubt their truth and veracity, in any matter of interest; for the principles of Masonry blind the mind and stultify conscience. It is not surprising that we find a large class of professed ministers of the Gospel among them, for this only fulfils prophecy. But so long as these ministers, whom the apostle calls wolves in sheep's clothing,—so long as they receive the patronage and support, the God-speed of Christians, so long they will continue to deceive the people. But it takes the courage of the true soldier of Jesus Christ to meet this class of deceivers, and when they appear overcome with the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, delivered by the testimony of his saints. Then comes the doleful, pitying sympathy of "milk and water" professors, or Anti-masons, who are so tender that when a wolf begins to whine and howl, then they begin to pity; and more than once will they turn with the wolf upon him who speaks the word of God in great plainness. Many to-day ask for a ministration of God's Word that will hurt no ones feelings, but will make friends of all. We must deal plainly, so callous and seared are false preacher's hearts that it will take the plainest possible statements of truth to effect them.

Those Masonic ministers and members will not attempt to disprove the statements made against Freemasonry; but act the lie by trying to turn ridicule upon the statements, and often, which if possible were more manly, they will squarely deny the truth of the statements made against Freemasonry. And thoughtless, deceived ones accept the denials of Masons and believe their statements without ever stopping to consider that with Masons it is a great virtue to always conceal, though it takes lying to do it. It is a matter of astonishment to me how intelligent Christian men can listen to the preaching of a man whom they know will and does tell lies about his Masonry; or if they believe the Masons, then they must believe that all Anti-masons are liars, and how can they fellowship them. Which side are the clever fellows on?

Secret Societies and Lodges.—A brother writes enquiring what we think of secret societies and lodges—and thinks it a matter of great importanee that we deelare our convictions. Very well, it is not difficult to do so. We are compelled to regard Freemasonry as anti-Christian in its essential principles, to say nothing of its awful oaths, and humiliating and barbarous performances. No man as we believe, can walk in the holy light of God, and remain in, or approve of Freemasonry. We regard Odd-fellowship and kindred orders as un-Christian, and do not see how any Christian can deliberately enter such fellowship. Other orders for the most part are wholly for selfish ends, hence they are un-Christian. Temperance organizations, by being secret forfeit the right to claim the support of true Christians, and thus defeat the very objects they profess to promote. Amen.—Banner of Holiness.

THE LODGE AND CHRIST DIFFERENT MASTERS.

The Christadelphian, a religious monthly published in Birmingham, England, contained in the May number, 1878, the following interesting statement of lodge experience from W. Gunn of Walkerton, Province of Ontario, Canada:

"I was initiated into Freemasonry in 1843. I have filled the office of Junior and Senior Warden and Master for years in a Blue Lodge. I took the Royal Arch degrees in 1844–45, and held the office of Third Principal in a Chapter at the time. I removed to this county of Bruce—then a forest wilderness—in 1852. Some years afterwards, as settlers became more numerons, I started the first Blue Lodge ever opened in this extreme north-west peninsula of Ontario and gave it its name—'The Northern Light.' I was excessively fond of Freemasonry. I studied its mysteries and antiquities deeply, more so than any ninety-nine out of every hundred I ever met with. I have often consumed the 'midnight oil' over these studies. I spent much time and money on Masonic books, regalia and other matters during my Masonic career. I have seen noble deeds of charity performed through the instrumentality of Masonry, and I have known of strong bonds of friendship having been formed under its influence. I was Master of 'Northen Light' Lodge, in this county, when I was baptized in 1859. Although the matter had often occurred to me before, I then felt constrained to decide upon my course as to Masonry. Living some distance from the village where the lodge met, I was not expected to be present at every meeting, and so had more time to study and consider the matters thoroughly, before I came in contact with the members, and ultimately came to the conclusion clearly and without a shade of doubt, that I must then, and in the new and interesting position and relation in which I stood, let go, give up and renounce for ever all connection with Freemasonry.

"Perhaps there may, at first, have existed, on my part slight and momentary pangs of regret, but when I considered my position as a baptized believer, privileged in the mercy and goodness of God to know so much of his mind and will, his plan and purpose and scheme of salvation, and to grasp by the hand the tangible glorious realities of the age to come; involved in the one hope of the Gospel, what could Freemasonry be or signify to me? I remember well the Sunday I decided on my course in regard to Masonry, walking to meeting in company with a young married sister of great intelligenee and perception in the truth. I explained to her, as far as I could, the difficulty in which I was placed—between the truth on the one hand and Freemasonry on the other. She said: 'Brother ——, if you have the least doubt—if you consider that by remaining in that order you will have to say or do anything inconsistent or at variance with the truth, don't hesitate a moment as to what is your duty. Your duty, clearly, in such a ease is to terminate your connection with the order at once and withdraw from it.' She has long since gone to rest, but her earnestness decided me there and then, and next day I wrote out my letter resigning my position in the lodge, and withdrawing from Freemasonry for ever. And in taking that step I felt that I got rid of a load that had oppressed me for some time previously.

"In Blue Masonry, we have much interesting information and matter relating to the building of Solomon's Temple, so in Royal Arch Masonry, its ritual, lectures, and external mechanism carry us back to much that was interesting in the history and worship of Israel, as well as in reference to to the calamities that befel that people. It carries us back to the burning bush—the deliverance from Egypt—the sojourning in the wilderness—the pillar of cloud and fire—the camp—the tabernacle, with its golden candlestick, table, and shew bread—the sanctuary—the veil—the holy of holies, which had the golden censer—and the ark of the covenant, containing the golden pot that had manna—Aaron's rod that budded—and the tables of the covenant, and over it the cherubim of glory. It guides us to the settlement of the tribes in the land—the selection of the capital city; Jerusalem as a city compactly built together—the establishment of the national worship—the destruction of the first temple, its rebuilding by men of renown, and perhaps light is thrown upon certain incidents of great interest therewith connected. But it leaves us there enveloped in the gloom of thick darkness among the ruins, without a ray of light or a gleam of hope respecting the future, to grope our way as best we may.

"In the mercy and good providence of God we have been taught, through an understanding of the truth, what are the glorious 'good things to come'—the substantialities which center and converge in Jesus-Messiah. Of what possible use to us can the shrivelled husks of Masonry, Blue or Arch, be? And why should we spend valuable time, so much needed in working out our salvation, and in making our calling and election sure—why should we spend one moment upon such vapid, unmeaning mummeries? Because, however interesting the study of Masonry may be to the man who is ignorant of the truth, to the man who knows the truth, and who realizes its true import, its claims, its duties, its privileges, its promises, and its glorious hope, what else than mere mummery can Frermasonry be?

"But besides all this, although to the man ignorant of the truth, there may exist a fancied beauty and an interest in the allegorizing system and teachings of Freemasonry, which itself is said to be 'a beautiful system of morality, veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbols,' yet we who understand the truth know, and have to deplore the dreadful havoc which the allegorizing principle has effeeted upon the Word of God.

"I have only known one man professedly in the truth who persisted in holding on to Masonry, and the result has been fatal to his faith and his standing in the truth. In his discourse, which I heard many years ago, he allegorisedcverything, literal and figurative, in prophecy, precept, and doctrine; and so far as my own knowledge and observation and experience extend, I consider that, were there no other objection to a believer in the truth continuing in Freemasonry than this one objection, it should be quite sufficient for him to withdraw. In short I cannot see how any one, who has come to a knowledge of the truth, and who has put on Christ in baptism, can conscientiously remain a single day in fellowship with Freemasonry; and if not with Freemasonry, then most certainly not in connection with any other secret order, which are only more or less caricatures of Masonry. I am quite sure that any brother in the truth who will calmly consider the whole matter in the light of the obligations and responsibilities under which the truth believed and obeyed plaees us, cannot fail to arrive at the same conclusion. I could say much more, and use stronger language, but surely there can be no need. There was a time when no man could have made me believe that ever I would have given up or withdrawn from Freemasonry. But the power of the truth, and a Scriptural sense of my duty and obligation to that truth, and of its claims and demands upon me, very soon decided my course. And we should do what the truth demands, or yield up what the truth requires, even though it involve the parting with a right hand or a right eye.

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH.

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

CHAPTER III. Which is one illustration of Gal. 5: 9.

One day, not long after the prayer meeting referred to, Mr. Trowley, flushed with rapid walking, entered the Thompson kitchen with the hurried question, "Have you seen this?" at the same time unfolding a copy of the last edition of the Lodgeville Weekly.

Mr. Thompson, to whom the question was addressed, adjusted his spectacles and, glancing at the paragraph indicated, read, first silently, then aloud—

"'Astonishing News! The Lodgeville Weekly prayer-meeting (or part of it) recommends all Christians to separate themselves from the Lodge! Old Get-up-and-get maintains such an action on their part to be the only thing that will insure success to the church, from a religious point of view.

"'Sister Pure-at-heart thinks so, too; so does Sister Look-into-things. Brother Reliable says Amen. Question will probably be determined at the next meeting.'

"This extraordinary communication was found on our door-sill this morning. We give it for what it is worth.—ED."

"Well, Thompson?"

"Oh, pshaw!" returned that individual, laughing; "who do you suppose wrote that?"

"You tell. Uncle Job, maybe."

"Not he. Who in the world"—and another hearty laugh finished the sentence.

"But that's not all. Do you know Job wants to have the church next Friday evening for a lecture on Freemasonry. What do you think of that?"

"No!" exclaimed Mr. Thompson, in disgust.

"Of course he won't get it. I'm sorry Job's got such ideas into his head. He'll make a terrible muss, I'm afraid, and all for nothing. Now I have charity for those who don't look at these things just as I do. That's what I told him when he and Gillman had such a 'set to' after prayer meeting Thursday night, but you ought to have heard how he turned on me. Oh, well, Job's a good man, a real well-meaning man, but a l e e t l e set in his way, and then he's always for digging into things like this. Now I'm not a Mason myself, as you know, but I'm willing other folks should be if they want to. Oh, well," he added, in a tone of resignation, "if he's determined to raise a fuss I don't see as any one can hinder him; but as for the lecture he has in view, I don't suppose he can get out a corporal's guard to that. Beats all, though, what makes Hornely favor it so much. He generally follows after 'those things that make for peace,' as the Bible says, and I'm astonished that he should discuss the question in the way he does. He actually told the Elder it was his firm conviction that no intelligent Mason could be a Christian, and exhorted him to give up the lodge. I didn't hear the whole of the confab, but he closed it up with prayer. Now wa'n't that pretty hard? Of course the Elder defended the lodge, and it was plain to be seen his feelings were considerably stirred up. I'm sorry for him. He said it was dreadful to see his little flock so disturbed all of a sudden. I hope he can depend on me," added the speaker, as he took up his hat to depart.

"He can that," observed Daniel Thompson under his breath—from a corner where he sat shelling corn—"he can that, to be a straddle-the-fence fellow to the last."

"Well, father?" questioned Mrs. Thompson.

The husband sat for some minutes absorbed in deep thought before he replied: "Oh, pshaw!" It won't amount to anything. There's nobody but Dee and Hornely"—

"And—the Lord," suggested his wife.

"You think so, Tilda?"

"I assuredly do, Timothy. I wish you would study up the question. I don't believe you would remain in the lodge a day longer if you comprehended its true inwardness."

"That's complimentary—very," observed her husband dryly. "After a twenty years' membership, I am recommended by my wife to find out what Masonry is."

"Don't get out of patience father," returned the little woman softly. "You know there were five or six years during which you never attended a meeting of the lodge. And then, don't you think it possible for you to have met with them as you did, semi-occasionally, without once even to yourself, questioning the right or wrong of any oath or obligation required of you?"

Mr. Thompson made no reply, but sat with folded arms looking out of the window at the broad acres spread out in the view therefrom. His wife arose and procuring a volume from a well-filled rack in the family sitting-room, she opened it at a selected passage and placed it upon his knee with the request that he would read that.

Mechanically he adjusted his spectacles and glanced at the place indicated, then a look, half of anger, came over his face and he pushed it from him. In a moment, however, he again took it up and read half a page, when he thrust it aside, muttering "fiddlesticks!" The second time he took it up, turned over a few leaves, read the heading of the chapters, scanned the index and a catalogue of Anti-masonic publications, then opening at the first chapter he began to read as one interested.

Over the face of his wife who had watched every movement, came a smile of satisfaction, and laying aside the garment upon which she was at work, repaired to her closet which had become of late an oft-visited place, and offered a psalm of thanksgiving that one wish of her heart was being realized. "I know he will listen," spoke the happy woman. "He will revive his work in this place. He will cast out these 'abominations that work desolation' from his church so he may work through it. Our children will be saved."

Meanwhile Mr. Thompson read on and on. Neither the summons to the evening meal nor afterward the suggestion that the time for retiring had come were heeded by him. The last clause of the last chapter had met his eye when he laid it down, with the remark, "I wonder if she's got any more of them!"

It began to be noised about town that the curious little paragraph in the paper meant something after all,—that the prayer-meeting folks were actually thinking of sending off for an Anti-masonic lecturer to work some of the degrees!

It reached the ears of a group of men lounging about the billiard hall, filled (as always) with the odor of liquor and tobacco. "Let them do it if they dare!" spoke Mr. Vallance, as he threw the stump of a cigar on the floor with unnecessary force. "We'll give them an argument they can't gainsay. Just let them try it!" The others of the party echoed his words, and who shall say that the fiends in hell did not exult over them?

It was heard also in the Rees household where the verdict was, "Masonry must be a good thing or such men as Elder Kemp and Tim Thompson wouldn't have anything to do with it."

In the home of the Thompsons little was said, except on one occasion when Debbie repeated to her sister a rumor communicated to her by Tom to the effect that Mr. Vallance had left behind him a wife and family in the far Eastern town from which he came.

"Don't be mad at me Carrie," she said, "I thought I ought to tell you."

"Nonsense," interrupted the other. "I don't believe a word of it! Isn't Mr. Vallauce a Mason, and isn't that surety that his character is good? Haven't you heard Elder Kemp emphasize an assertion by saying, 'On the word of a Masou and a Christian?' Do you suppose father and Elder Kemp and such men would belong if it wasn't a good institution?"

"I—don't—know," retufned the other. Everybody knows Mr. Hornely is a true Christian, and he is just as anxious as Uncle Job to have it preached against. Of course father is a Mason, but—" and Debbie stopped there unable to reconcile the two ideas.

(To be continued).

THE WASHINGTON CONVENTION.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. A. MINER, D. D., L. L. D., OF BOSTON.

I never come up to our nation's capital without reflecting what a country it is which it represents. The kingdom of Great Britaiu comprises 120,000 square miles; the Republic of France extends its rule over 212,000 square miles of territory; and 240,000 square miles of our globe are under the rule of the Empire of Austria. These three great nations occupying only about 600,000 square miles, have less than one-fifth the territory controlled by the government represented in this national capital. So vast is the expanse, so immense the resources, so diversified the interests which eenter here! The government cannot help modify the religion, morals and character of the people. If good it will lighten every burden, strengthen every movement for the uplifting of the people and repress every turbuleut and immoral faction whose end is distress and ruin; if evil only the contrary can be experienced. In such a country and with such a population as we have we must expect to be opposed by many evils, some avoidable, some uot. One of these evils is the liquor traffic, which is marching an army of 100,000 men to fresh made graves. Yet we as a people are apathetic and blind to the euormity of this crime against humanity, and the government does its best to prevent you from touching it. The parties, Democratic and Republican, join hands to perpetuate this state of things. In twenty-five years the liquors drank in the United States cost two and one-half thousaud million dollars—more than all the cost of the great wars of the same period, including the Franco-German war and our own rebellion. This vicious thing draining our wealth and morals corrupts and vitiates the activity of our legislatures. We are asked to wait before we attack this evil, before we cut loose from the old parties that shelter it; and these parties ignoring this paramount issue have no other business than watching each other to see who will make a mistake so as to let the other into office. Shame! shame upon such baseness! I charge upon these parties the capital crime of neglecting the interests of the country for the interests of supreme selfishness. They are no longer fit for the great work of controlling the politics of this nation, for they have no longer any hold upon priuciple. They are sieves, and sieves can hold no water. They are ghosts in the gravcyards of the dead issues of the past. Patriotism being lost, all's lost. What is patriotism bnt the subordination of private interests to the national good? But these parties say: "Such a course will cost us votes." To he sure, it will risk immediate success; but when did God command a patriot to succeed? His word is to take up the living issues, aud stand by them for the right. When the people understaud their interests they will take care of them with little regard for the parties.

Government is essentially a thing of principles. All that is visible about a government is but its machinery. Its offices, its elections, its fuuctionaries of various grades and duties, are transieut and changeable. The essential government however remains the same through all change. This essential element, invisible and abiding, is moral; it is the element of rectitude, of truth and justice. Penalties, however uecessary and however faithfully inflicted, though a part of the machinery of government, are more especially an indication of the extent to which what is vital in the government has failed.

In the best goverued home the machinery of government has disappeared. The will of the parent finds a welcome in the heart of the child. That will is wisdom which the child has learned to appreciate and love. Penalty is not thought of; truth and duty fill the horizon, and peace blesses the home.

Perhaps our educational institutions make the nearest approach to this of any department of our government. Their strength lies in the natural justice they embody, the lack of which vitiates all governments. The distinguished Cudworth says: "Covenants without natural justice are nothing but mere words and breath, and therefore can have no force to oblige. None can bé obliged in duty to obey but by natural justice. Whatever is iniquitous can never be made lawful by any power on earth."

GOVERNMENT THE HIGHEST FUNCTION OF MAN.

Substantially moral, government thus becomes the highest and diviuest functiou of man—the embodiment of justice and truth. Recognizing the vital relations of the whole people, it aims to give protectiou to every genuine interest. Its pathway lies above the plane of passion, appetite, greed, unholy competitions, and every form of sinister ambition and self-seeking. It stretches out its arms to raise up the fallen; never to cast down others among them. Its power dwells in its righteousness. Truth is at once its life blood, its weapon of aggressiveness and its assured defence.

It is this invisible power that makes Christ a king. He says: "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews." He was delivered, condemned, crucified. All power seemed against him; in fact, all power was with him. What was meant to be, and seemed his utter overthrow, was but the foundation of a triumph that has enthroned his name above every name. What is power in Christ's kingdom would be power in all kingdoms.

Human law is nothing of itself. Its majesty and strength are borrowed. Cicero says: "Law is right reason, congruous to nature, pervading all minds, constant, eternal, which calls to duty by its commands and repels from wrong doing by its prohibitions. * * * This law cannot be annulled, superseded, or over-ruled. No senate, no people can loose us from it; no interpreter can explain it away. It is not one law at Rome, another at Athens; one at present, another at some future time; but one law, perpetual and immutable, includes all nations and all times! Of this law the author and giver is God." Milton says, any statute "repugnant to the will of God and to right reason is null and void." St. Augustine declares that, "In temporal laws uothing is righteous or lawful but what the people have derived to themselves out of the Law Eternal."

Even the divine goverument stands by its rectitude. God's throne—the symbol of his power—dwells in justice and judgment. These are its habitation; while mercy and truth illumine his pathway. Could righteousness and truth forsake his throne, his government would be government no longer. Chaos would reign and all forces become lawless. A wild railway train rushing on in its mad career, with no engineer's hand to guide it, freighted with hundreds of precious lives and untold commercial wealth, spreading destruction on either hand until hurled into some yawnining gulf iu irremediable ruin—would be but a faint illustration of the devastation and woe that would attend the forces of nature when no longer dominated by intelligence and righteousness.

If this would be true of the divine government, how much more of human governments. Over against the lawlessness of natural forces would stand the vagrant ambitions of all who have any part in the functions of government. The visible processes, the ostensible aims, the cunning manipulations of those functions, would still go on; but all that constitutes these functious a government would have departed, leaving a semblance of government operated by a chaos of passious to selfish ends.

ROOTS OF GOVERNMENT.

The roots of government are not arbitrary assumptions. They involve certain absolute and universal principles—principles which fasten upon every man, woman and child; involve their relationship to each other and to the government itself; make the welfare of each the welfare of all, and the defection of each the curse of all—princi ples out of which as the French phrase it, springs the solidarity, not of a city, state, or nation alone, but of the whole human race—which must be recognized and acted upon to secure the highest good of any, and the disregard of which blasts the hopes of all. Such disregard not only voids the moral power of a government, but blackens it with rapacity and usurpation.

Hence the very beginnings of ostensible government go far to determine its character. Citizens, more or less numerous, organize for political ends—presumably for patriotic euds—presumably to grapple with and sternly remove any great evil under which the commonwealth suffers. To reject such work is to emasculate the movement at the outset, and make themselves cumberers of the ground. Manifold social dangers are to be guarded against. The ignorant must be enlightened, the poor fed, causes of disease removed, robbers guarded against, passion controlled, criminal enterprises suppressed, public indecencies prevented, free commerce in all things useful eucouraged, sympathetic relations between employers and employes fostered, liberal expenditures in support of educational and other beneficent institutions and economy in all else practised, inexpensive and prompt execution of the laws guaranteed, and the general welfare promoted. As said an English statesman, "It is the very business of government to make it as easy as possible to do right, and as difficult as possible to do wrong." Presumably this is what any conspicuous political movement means.

But, adopting the aphorism of the old Syrian philosopher: "To-day ought to be the disciple of yesterday," how almost instinctively do we assume degeneracy from our ideal. Not only do we come short of these high ends, but often turn our backs upon them, and not seldom deliberately strengthen the evils we should remove.

THE CORRUPTION SPREADS.

This viciousness of the beginnings tends to corruption in all subsequent stages. The divine prerogatives of the franchise are employed to personal ends. Legislation is shaped, not by the evils to be removed, but by the perpetrators of those evils who resist their removal. Innumerable apologies for the wrongs thus committed are made to solace troubled consciences, and the rougher work is passed over to the less scrupulous co-operators. Innocent maxims misapplied, blind the eye, deafen the ear, and harden the heart. The "half-loaf" adage is made to justify compromises that surreuder the field to evil. The duty of "taking the world as one finds it" is made an excuse for leaving it in the same condition, or even in a worse oue. Voting for righteousness in a minority is assumed to be "the throwing away of one's vote;" while the truth is the compromising of one's conscience, with however great a majority, is the throwing away of the voter.

BRIBERY.

Undoubtedly the corruption of the ballot, politically speaking, is the giant evil of our land. We carefully guard by penalties against bribery by money; but are there no briberies by office, by indirect and incidental gains, by the profits of criminal business, by the promise of legislation for pet measures? Constituted as our government is, are not the very evils, which make government necessary, bribes to the nullifying of its power?

It is stated that at our recent city election, voters in a state of helpless inebriety had ballots thrust into their hands, and were lifted by fellow-voters to the ballot-box, to express their patriotic judgment in favor of license.

But acting with others, it is said, is a necessity under popular governments; and if we refuse co-operation because of the support we should give to criminal enterprises, others will combine to give us a still worse government. It is a matter of grave doubt when we have brought ourselves to vote for criminal measures, whether there is any danger of others doing worse. Should they attempt it, however, they would have our example for a defence. The highest moral service a man can render is not unfrequently to step squarely out aud refuse all participation in current evils. Sinning is not at all a quesstion of garb. The highest and the lowest ranks of society meet together. The one, it may be, in broadcloth; the other in rags; but they drink the same beer. There they are on a level. Disgraceful, shameful, but true!

SANCTION NULLIFIES LIMITATION.

Our theory of sanctioning an evil that we may limit it is but a dream. Those who ask for such laws want the sanction but by no means the limitations. In practice they always resist, and successfully resist the limitations whatever they may be. The vaunted restrictions which we put into law, are not, never were, never will be, were never intended to be, and never can be executed. For ten days in November 1872, independent of all law, the dram-shop business in Boston was closed by the chief of police; besides which period, there probably has not been one hour, night or day, Sundays included, for fifty years, when a citizeu could not somewhere get his dram. In giving our sanction to such evils, we cast away all moral power. Our sanction repudiates the divine law. The violator of our restrictions tramples only on human law, and places himself on our broader repudiation. He stands with us on the same base of evil.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION.

But it is claimed that there are differences of opinion about the evils themselves. I deny it—deliberately, emphatically, solemnly deny it. King and clown, barrister and blackleg, grocer and groom, clergy and laity, cooper and carpenter, physician and fool, all alike know that these evils are simply indescribable. The arguments of the abstainer and the excuses of the drinker, the pleader for suppression and the struggler for toleration, alike show that these woes are known and read of all men. There are, indeed, alleged differences of opinion, growing out of real differences of temptation, in view of which angels weep and broken-hearted mothers die.

It was the same when the curse of slavery was upon us. A few men and women made themselves heard, as with the voice of the clarion, through all the land. The cry of fanaticism was raised against them from one end of the country to the other, and a price was set upon their heads. Meantime fugitive slaves were hunted like wild beasts. Nobody remembered that the black man is a brother. The South professed to believe that slavery was a great missionary institution for the salvation of the black race. The North doubted its original divinity, but because of the compromises of our fathers believed it a duty to maintain it.

We found ourselves slave-catchers, indeed, but it brought us special political and commercial advantages. Even our clergy rose to the dignity of defending slavery from the Bible—adduciug Paul's letter to Philemon to whom he sent back the bond-servant Onesimus—forgettiug, however, Paul's special charge to Philemon, to receive Onesimus as no longer a bond-servant, but as a brother beloved. Now that slavery is removed, not ouly is the judgment of politicians corrected, but there is scarcely a belated priest in all the pulpits of Christendom that dreams of defending it. The simple solution is, temptation is gone.

So when our descendants shall have escaped from the chronic curse of Christeudom, they will look back with unutterable shame upon their lineage. They can then estimate the quality of our intelligence, the shocking immorality of our ethics, the stupidity of our ecouomics, and the hollowness of our religion, in which we celebrate the death of our Lord in a wine as spurious as our patriotism and as hypocritical as our piety.

UNANIMITY IN METHOD.

Nor are there, among earnest people, any grave differences in respect to methods of dealing with our overshadowing woes. A timid, half-hearted, meddling policy has prevailed for centuries. This has worn out the patience of the public, aroused the anger of the vicious, and left the evil to develop itself in its own destructive way. Those wishing to put an end to these woes are substantially agreed in regard to method. With wondrous uuanimity, through all sections of our country, and on both sides of the Atlantic, these demand unqualificd suppression.

DUTIES OF THE STATE.

The State has duties towards all its citizens—not simply to punish criminals after the act; but as far as possible to preveut the crime itself. The State is the lawmaker. Having enaeted wholesome laws, it should have the manliness to see them executed. It is paltry to give a man the privilege of voting a nuisance next door to me, when he would not tolerate it next door to himself. It is paltry for the State to cast off its legislative responsibilities that it may have smoother sailing on the dead sea of politics. It is more than paltry—it is criminal in the State to expose the lives of wives and children to the fury of husbands and fathers sent home dehumanized from our thousands of "regulated" fountains of death. The wife is powerless; the children are powerless; the maddened husband is free till the terrible crime is committed. Then the royal dignity of the law steps in to punish. Whom? The criminal law-maker? The commissioner who so judiciously does the "regulating?" The servant of the State who deals out the potations? None of these! The wretch who was first tempted, then debauched, then infuriated, and finally ground to powder between the upper and nether millstone of the "State-regulated" machinery for supplying victims to the courts, the prisons, and the gallows—he is the culprit. Does punishing him bring back the wife or children? Does it awake the State to a sense of its diabolism? Does it disturb the pious devotions of men who rent their real estate at a hundred per cent advance for purposes of evil and then pray God to put an end to such evils? Moral power in governments!—seemingly so deep is the abyss in which they are sunk that plummet and line cannot fathom it. Publius Syrus says, "The judge is condemned when the guilty is acquitted."

ABANDON THE RUTS.

But you must escape from the ruts. You need not sound a trumpet before you. Your action, however, must be unambiguous and firm. Evil is far from being formidable when it is heroically confronted. The tiger quails when you look him sharply in the eye. Besides, unexpected allies will arise. Many a man is held in the ranks of the foe by the force of his surroundings. Such will welcome deliverance. Many a conscience, long repressed, is ready to assert itself and come to your aid. Many a citizen, apathetic through despair will enter with a bound the resurrection life. Let your good work be pronounced, and the State will draw a deep breath of satisfaction.

MAGNITUDE OF THE PROBLEM.

And what a problem is this! The New York Tribune, since the days of Horace Greeley never suspected of radicalism, under the title of "Size of the Temperance Question," gave a long and serious editorial, Sept. 27, 1882, from which I make the following extracts:

"It does no good for men to sneer at the agitation in regard to the liquor traffic. The subject is too important to be laughed down."

"Aside from the law-defying spirit which it has elicited, aside from all its moral and religious aspects, the question considered purely as one of dollars and cents, in its effect upon the national prosperity and wealth, is one of the most important that can be named."

"Directly and indirectly, this country spends in the liquor traffic every year a sum exceeding half the national debt. The cost of that traffic to the country, direct and indirect, is greater than the profits of all its capital not invested in real estate. It costs every year more than our whole civil service, our army, our navy, our congress, including the river and harbor and the pension bills, our wasteful local governments, and all national, State, county and local debts, besides all the schools in the country. In fact, this nation pays more for liquor than for every function of every kind of government. How is a question of that size to be put aside with a sneer?"

"There is certainly spent for drink more than $800,000,000, and the entire sum raised by taxes of all kinds, national, State, county, city, town and school district, is stated on authority of the Census Bureau to be not more than about $700,000,000."

"But the cost of the liquor drunk is not by any means the whole cost of the liquor traffic. An official report, prepared with much labor by the Bureau of Statistics of Massachusetts, under authority from the legislature, states that 84 per cent of all the crime and criminal expenses in that State comes directly from the abuse of liquor. There are at least one in twenty of the able-bodied men in this country who are rendered idle by their habits or incapacitated for work, and these persons, at the ordinary wages of working men, would earn, if industrious and fairly employed, over $200,000,000 yearly."

"But the time has gone by in this country when a serious discussion of a question that involves such a vast expense to the nation can be prevented by bullying, intolerance, insolence or ridicule. This very practical people, having begun to think about the matter in earnest, perceives that it it is much too important to be put aside at the dictation of saloon-keepers. It is certain that the entire savings of the people and all additions to their wealth are not twice as much as the sum expended for liquor, and because of the abuse of liquor. If any just and reasonable proposition can be made that will add one-half to the savings and the prosperity of the nation, it will not be put down by a sneer, nor defeated by a law-breaking mob"

Consider well these extracts. Why should the enormous burden of the drink tax, $800,000,000 a year, continue to rest upon our country; or $30,000,000 a year on our own Commonwealth? All this, with a like sum to repair the damages, is an utter and absolute waste; though some political economists do not appear to know it. Gather the cereals of a country, convert them into whisky or beer, transport it to tide-water, pour it into the sea—is there any doubt that it would be an utter and shameful waste? Is it any the less a waste if on its way to the sea, in the language of the eloquent Chapin, "it is strained through the human stomach and spoils the strainer?"

HOLOCAUST OF A HUNDRED THOUSAND LIVES.

Out of the holocaust of a hundred thousand lives, annually sacrificed in our country to Bacchus and Gambrinus—we are not heathens; we are a Christian people—four thousand of them fill newly-made graves in Massachusetts soil. Thousands more, enslaved by appetite, are in daily training to follow in their turn. Monday morning, Dec. 17, one hundred and five victims passed through the Central Municipal Court of Boston alone, leaving the South Boston, Charlestown and Highland courts unreported. And this was by no means a "field day." Meantime every hospital, inebriate home and place of confinement is crowded with fruits of the dram-shop.

This shocking sacrifice of life, it may be remarked, does not appear in our records. We tax ourselves liberally to prepare elaborate tables of registration, that the causes of disease and death may be known and the general health promoted; and then falsify those records to keep ourselves in countenance. In multitudes of instances, congestion of the lungs, liver, stomach, kidneys, and the like, is made the agent of death, where undeniably whisky strikes the fatal blow. We have high authority for saying: "Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

OTHER DANGERS.

There are other evils which should not be overlooked. In the aggregate, the woes they inflict are great. But when the drink curse shall have been removed, and the smoke and dust of the conflict shall have cleared away, the greater part of our remaining ills will have disappeared. With a clear eye, a level head, and a steady hand, we shall be able, by accurate, repeated, well-directed blows, to demolish the lesser of the outgrowths of evil springing from other roots.

There are dangers, however, of the most threatening proportions, quite too long neglected, and to which both our civil authorities and the secular and religious press pay altogether undue deference. There are hundreds of thousands of persons annually coming to our shores, untrained in our industries, alien from our thought, and antagonistic to our institutions. Many of these, as well as of others native to the soil, are gathered into houses secluded from the public, whose history and fortunes are never known. Their children by thousands are withdrawn from the public schools, left to roam the streets, or placed in parochial schools, under the specious plea of securing to them moral and religious training, from entering which our school authorities are debarred, leaving them to the exclusive supervision and direction of the Romish priesthood. Here they are educated as a caste, out of sympathy with us as a people, and the ready tools of the most wily foe that has ever assailed the liberties of the world.

It becomes a grave problem how a free country, with popular institutions, tolerating all religions, and respecting in all freedom of conscience, should bear itself towards a confessed foe of its most vital policy. It is a grave problem whether such a country should harbor within its borders, institutions she may not systematically visit and circumstantially inspect by proper officers at any time. It is an equally grave problem whether she should welcome to citizenship anybody acknowledging superior allegiance to any foreign potentate whatsoever. As foreigners and religionists we welcome them, with all the world, as men and brethren; but as depredators upon human liberty, whether civil or religious, we reject them with the utmost intensity of purpose. To tolerate intolerance is to convert our toleration into intolerance. Conserve these principles, and we shall enjoy a higher and diviner civilization than the world has ever yet seen.

FUNDAMENTAL TRUTH.

In all our studies of the problems of social life, there is one fundamental truth which should be our constant inspiration: "God hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell upon the face of all the earth." Every man is the brother of every other man. Not one of all these who fall out by the way, is alien from us. Of whatsoever land, race, or nationality, he is our brother. His interest is our interest—not constructively, or by the cant of pulpit or sect; but in deepest truth; in profoundest reality. When he suffers, we suffer; when he is blest, we are blest. In nature, in rights, in interest, in destiny, one. All substantial advancement must take all men along.

We must beware, therefore, of cliques, and parties, and sectional interests that shall in anywise bar our endeavors to promote the welfare of the entire Commonwealth, and build her fortunes level to the highest possibilities. God delights in the good of all his children.

Prohibition does prohibit in Harvey Co., Kansas. Two saloon-keepers at Halstead were prosecuted before a justice and heavily fined. One went to jail and the other appealed to the court. The court sustained the justice, and fixed the fine at $1,000 and costs. All the saloon-keepers in Newton were indicted at the last term of court. The cases had been thoroughly worked up by the temperance people. Detectives had been employed, who appeared as witnesses, producing "sample" bottles of whisky bought at the various saloons. Three saloons have stood trial and were all convicted. The rest then plead guilty. All were fined (the fines ranging from $100 to $200), paid costs, and gave bond of $1,000 each not to engage in the traffic again for two years. So the work goes on. The temperance people are just getting ready for business and are making the law felt.—The Midland.

In a Roman Catholic fair at Corning, Ohio, a wheel of fortune was used and the priest was subsequently arrested for allowing gambling. On Sunday last he denounced the man who caused his arrest, as a murderer at heart and a villian by instinct and practice. The audience was excited to the highest pitch, and the men went home muttering curses and breathing out vengeance. At night, with the thermometer at zero, the denounced man was assailed by a crowd of the priest's followers, marched a mile west of town, where he was stripped of all his clothing and bidden to leave under penalty of worse treatment. He left, and has not since been heard from. Before he left he was compelled to swear that he would never again show his face in Corning.

That similar or worse outrages by mobs have often been perpetrated, cannot be denied, but we should like to know whether any one believes that the adherents of any Protestant church could be guilty of such barbarity.—Baptist Weekly.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE CONVENTION.

Washington, D. C., March 8, 1884.

The Equal Suffrage convention closed its sessions proper last evening in Lincoln Hall. Each meeting was well attended and the evening sessions were crowded. To-day the ladies have had a hearing before the Judiciary Committee of the lower house, as they had before a special committee yesterday appointed by the Senate. After listening to brief addresses by seven different representative women, and while retiring from the room I overheard a remark by one member of the committee which was, in my judgment, a well-deserved tribute. Said the Honorable Representative, "Those addresses were far above the average of what we are accustomed to hear in Congress."

The inspiration of a great cause and the Spirit of One greater than human governments seemed to fire the hearts and point the words of each speaker as they were led out upon different lines of thought or argument, but which all converged at one point in the inherent right of woman to protect her children, her home, her person and property and our republican institutions by an intelligent use of the ballot.

In future I hope to report more fully than I am at present able to do, as I want, if possible, that this should be in time for the next Cynosure.

I will simply add that it was my privilege to place a copy of our American platform in the hands of most of the leaders in this great movement and from many of them I received words of most hearty approval of our anti-lodge plank, and not one word on the other side was spoken to me or uttered in my hearing.

J. P. Stoddard.

ON CHRISTIAN UNION.

To any friends who read the Cynosure and who are interested in my views on the question of the unity of the church this letter is addressed. I never doubted the substantial unity of the real, invisible church of Christ, as some of my friends seem to think who have written to me since my piece on the "Unity of the Spirit" was published in the Cynosure of Jan. 31st, 1884. While I most fully appreciate the kindness of those brethren who have essayed to enlighten me on the above subject, I do not see things from their standpoint. I do not think the brethren who have written me on this question are more in harmony with each other than with your humble correspondent. Harmony with the truth and with God is to me the paramount question, much as I desire the co-operative union of his people here and now—"that the world may believe" that God did send Christ.

Allowing and highly valuing all these friends say on the oneness of the mystical body of Christ, the substantial, invisible church, I lament and deplore the want of co-operative sympathy and harmony among those who seem to be children of God. We need not concern ourselves about the substantial unity of the invisible body of Christ, the church, any more than we do about the established laws of nature; but with the co-operative harmony of God's blood bought ones we have much to do and pray for. Here we enter into sympathy with the Son of God, who prayed that his people might be one "that the world might believe" that he was the sent of God. I am compelled to distinguish between the already secured and substantial unity of the invisible church, and the social and working harmony of God's chosen ones on earth. "We then as workers together with him beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain."

Such working together with God by all God's people, would do more to convert the world to Jesus than all the logic of all the learned divines in the world. Is not that what Christ prayed for in that memorable prayer? This still is to me a grave and unsolved problem. When and how will this great end be reached? "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." "So come, Lord Jesus."

To my dear Washington, D. C., brother I would say a special word. I am impressed with the thought that he is too denunciatory and severe in his reference to the N. C. A. and its noble agents,—not calling names here. Does not our brother misapprehend the character and purpose of the N. C. A.? I never even thought of its being the church or arrogating to itself the legitimate work of the church. It does not, that I can see, propose to unite all Christian sects, "so-called," or real Christian bodies in one grand sect. Neither do I know of any of its main agents (here not named), teaching this doctrine of N. C. A. and church union. The contrary is implied in the N. C. A. constitution, and its leading men have many times declared the contrary.

The object of the N. C. A., as I understand it, is to combine in a reform movement on all the "living issues" of the land, as many Christians, and all others who sympathize with real reforms, as are willing to co-operate with said body. Though this Association does not demand a profession of religion in order to membership in it (only sound moral character and belief in Christianity), its object is to combine all the Christian forces in the nation and world against all the anti-Christs in the world. This may entitle it to its name N. C. A. Though others besides real Christians may work with it as they do with all professedly Christian bodies in this world, it does not profess to be absolutely and perfectly Christian. No such body exists in visible form. The N. C. A., as such, uses no ordinances as all churches do, and makes no claim to being either sect or church. But it is, in my view of it, a necessity—a temporary combination of reformers, mostly godly men and women, striving together with much self-sacrifice for a "pure Christianity, the world's only hope." The pulpit, the press, and the churches are corrupted and debauched by the lodge, rum, tobacco, Mormonism, and scores more of demonized things, and must be withstood by some organized Christian power. God bless the N. C. A. till its work be finished. Amen. Very truly your brother in Christ, N. Callender.

AN OPEN LETTER

TO THE SECRETARY OF THE Y. M. C. A., GALT, CANADA.

Galt, March 3, 1884.

My Dear Brother:—I attended your rooms yesterday afternoon. At the call of your president, Mr. Woods, I availed myself of the opportunity of addressing a few words to the brethren assembled on the lesson of the day, Acts 17: 16–34.

During the course of my remarks I was interrupted, opposed and silenced by the president, in the interests and for the shelter of the worshipers of demons, in his church, store, community, etc., etc. Himself and another previous speaker had commended the apostle Paul for his courage in attacking every sin. But he assured the audience "that he knew nothing of secret societies or of their demon worship, was not mixed with them in any way at all, and that he would not allow me 'to ride my hobby' in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., as I always did when I could drag the subject into the lesson."

I claim that your president, by applying the rude, vulgar slang phrase of "riding my hobby," has insulted the Saviour and the apostle Paul, whose one life-work it was to oppose the devil and all his works.

Mr. Woods boasts of his shame, that, in the end of the nineteenth century, he should be "ignorant of the devil's devices," and therefore deemed it to be his duty to shut my mouth when speaking of things of which he knew nothing. Not so did the polite Athenians treat Paul when he spoke to them of "the Unknown God whom they ignorantly worshiped."

He stated what was not true when he said "he was in no way mixed up with secret societies or responsible for their demon-worship." He is mixed up with them in his store as a merchant, in the membership of the church, in the Young Men's Christian Association, etc. If they have never done him any harm he gives them offense by his own remarks. A faithful employe of his tells me that "it would be greatly to his employer's advantage in many ways if he would let the Y. M. C. A. alone altogether and mind his own business!"

Yours for Christ, James Donaldson.

Galt, Ont.

A CHILD'S DECEPTION.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—At the close of a Sabbath-school session some Anti-masonic tracts were given to the children. A little girl carried one home. Her father is a Mason, and she thought it "very mean" that such tracts telling such awful things about Freemasonry, were allowed to be given away. Upon arriving at home she gave vent to her indignation against the man who gave her that tract; but upon being assured by a visitor that the tract told the truth about the Freemasons, she appealed to her father who, in the presence of that visitor did not dare to lie about it, and told her they did not tell what they did in the lodge.

Now that father and Freemason is a member of the Baptist church. When that child comes to know, as she inevitably will know, that that tract tells the truth about Freemasons, what will she think of her father? And what but her parental tie can prevent her manifesting the same indignation against him that she then manifested toward that tract and the man who gave it to her? Of course, according to the laws of mind she must feel the same indignation against her father that she did towards the truly awful things said in that tract. What will she think of the religion of her father in that Baptist church, and the intelligence of the pastors and deacons of that church? May it be that that child shall never have any different sentiments from those which she then manifested against the great Masonic conspiracy. And let us hope that that church will not be able so to debauch her mind with lies that she can ever think "charitably" of Masons. The mask that that child's father has been wearing before his daughter is more than half torn off. And if she remains true to truth she may yet see it entirely removed. Confidence in her father can never be restored except by, upon the part of her father, Masonic renunciation and humble penitence. How then is it between that man's soul and God? His own daughter has undesignedly rebuked him. If he would escape the eternal wrath of God he must accept that rebuke. William Fenton.

PITH AND POINT.

BRETHREN STRATTON AND WARDNER, HOW IS THIS?

In the "Cyclopædia of Methodism," published in 1877, Bishop Simpson, the author, in the article upon "Wesleyan Methodist Connection of America" (page 924), says, "The numerical strength of the connection was as great in 1844, only eighteen months after its organization, as in 1875. Two causes may be assigned for this: First, the rule against secret oath-bound societies, which excludes it from access to large masses of the people; and, second, the return of a large number of Wesleyans—nearly a hundred ministers and thousands of communicants—after slavery was destroyed, to the Methodist Episcopal church."

I am curious to know whether the first cause given above is a fact or a mere guess. Doubtless among the many readers of the Cynosure there are Wesleyan brethren whose experience and acquaintance with the history of their church is such as to enable them to speak correctly on this point, and who will favor us with the facts in the case. Having no personal acquaintance with any Wesleyan brethren I am unable to get the information I desire through a direct and personal enquiry. Will some one who knows favor me with a response in columns of Cynosure?—H. R. Antes, Newark, Ill.

THE EMMA BOND CASE.

Perhaps you are taking pains to find out if Montgomery who figured so prominently in the Emma Bond abuse in Christian Co., Ill., is a Mason. If he is then a majority of the jurymen and the prosecuting attorney must have been. If so the whole matter can be understood, and our paper should expose the rascally cable-tow.

Carpenter, the supposed murderer of Zura Burns, in Lincoln last fall, is no doubt a Mason,—and of course will go clear! I guess as much from the talk of a lawyer here who is a Mason. The same man is down on our Kansas Pomeroy.—Henry Hawkins, Granville, Ill.

SOME ANTI-MASONS NOT WORTH MUCH.

I will try and get some subscribers for the Cynosure when I renew. Secretism runs everything here, even our churches. We have some anti-secret men here but they say little. I find that if a man shows his colors in the right way and uses sense in opposing the lodge, the members think more of him than of one who sits on the fence and says nothing. For example, there are two business men in town, one of them a high Mason who reads the Cynosure whenever he can get it. I heard him say that Masonry would go down; that it is no place for a Christian. The other is a United Brethren minister. He keeps a drug store and is a doctor and minister. He will not read the Cynosure nor say a word against the lodge. We need some lectures here to wake up the churches.—G. N. Munger, Antwerp, O.

AN EX-A. Y. M. BROTHER'S GOOD OPINION.

I feel that your paper has done me good and will do any one good who will honestly read it and think for himself. Its earnest, spiritual appeals to the Christian people of all denominations throughout our country cannot fail to do good, as the light of the Gospel has always done good where it has shone. I do earnestly pray for the success of your enterprise and believe it cannot fail ultimately, for the reason that its foundation is the truth. I hope and believe that many Christian and patriotic people are praying for the success of the National Convention now in session at the seat of general government, that its deliberations may be led by the Spirit of God, and that the members may be guided into all truth. A majority of those taking part will no doubt be praying men and true patriots, and not politicians—and filled with the love of country and zeal for the honor and glory of God. The deliberations of such a body of men cannot fail to be of use to our country. I shall pray during those days for their success. I have been a member of an Eastern lodge of A. Y. M., but have no fellowship with the work now, and have not had for years, and have many good reasons to regret that I was ever led to have such fellowship when a younger man. I have tried of late years to say a word as I had opportunity to prevent young men from going into such societies. They all seem to flourish here and are a heavy tax upon our people.—H. Neal, Hollister, Cal.

SERGEANT MASON HAS FRIENDS.

The article in your paper of 14th ult. concerning Sergeant Mason has caused many remarks among your subscribers and others in this vicinity. There is a sentiment of justice in this community that is not easily overturned. The ball that killed President Garfield wounded the feelings of every American citizen. Hence so much sympathy for Sergeant Mason. The author of that article treated Sergeant Mason as if he had attempted to murder an innocent man, which is not the case. President Garfield was shot down in broad daylight before his friends, and that court was more than thirty days proving it. Many people were anxious to know that fiend Guiteau was dead and put off the face of the earth. Another attempt was made to shoot him while on the way from the court room to jail under guard, which caused a response from the people that "they wished he had killed him!" No one has a moral right to attempt to stigmatize the characters of a million American citizens who asked the pardon of Sergeant Mason. Comparing Mason to the adulterer is extreme nonsense.

I suppose you are aware that the people have lost confidence in the courts of this country. The worst criminals get clear. See the Emma Bond case. Another case in your State—O. A. Carpenter indicted for the murder of Zura Burns. The first step for acquittal is to take the trial out of the county, then prove an alibi, which acquits the prisoner. I read in a Chicago paper a short time ago there had been sixty legal executions in six months previous, and seventy by lynching. You are also aware that there is an institution in this country that holds all the offices and controls everything, especially the courts. They can keep criminals out of prison, and take them out of prison.—A. C. Moffatt, Albion, Iowa.

Note.—Those who petitioned in favor of Mason probably allowed the enormity of Guiteau's crime to possess their thoughts until they seemed to forget that Mason was a U. S. soldier under orders, and that Guiteau's body was put in his keeping by law. Should our sheriffs and their deputies attempt to make way with atrocious criminals, people would be justly alarmed; and yet such an act Mason attempted. He has just been exhibiting himself in Chicago in a dime show, and his display has by no means increased his popularity or gained the respect of men.

Bible Lessons.

LESSON XII.—March 23, 1884.—Christian Diligence.—2 Thess. 3: 1–18.

[Take your Bible and read the lesson.]

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Be not weary in well doing." V. 13.

"Brethren, pray for us." V. 1. No one ever gets beyond the need of stated, specific acts of prayer in this life. Our Lord Jesus prayed at every step of his work—at his baptism, when going forth to heal and save, when about to call his disciples, before and after any special work, when about to manifest his heavenly glory, and when about to enter the deep, dark shadow of death. And surely no one can grow less needy of heaven's blessing than was he. Neither should we be selfish in our prayers. The fact that we are so often urged to pray for others, coupled with the bright examples of answers to intercessory prayers, should make us very fervent in our supplication for all God's servants. That the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified. We cannot add anything to the intrinsic excellence of God's truth, no more than we can increase the brightness of the Father's glory. But many are ignorant of its value. A lady in fashionable society said to one who read to her from the Bible when on a sick-bed, "O, I wish I had known before how sweet those messages are!" She had lived all her life in a gospel land, with Bibles all about her; but her mind had been so full of fiction and society plans and enjoyments that she never turned to the volume of life. There are many such all around us. There are millions more without the Bible in heathenism. Pray! pray! pray! work! work! work!

"From wicked and unreasonable men." V. 2. It is not strange that Paul should desire deliverance from wicked men. We can all see at once how they could hinder his work. And yet there are those who claim to be and really are friends of the gospel and of the ministry who throw greater obstacles in the way of the gospel than those who are its open foes. From such the minister expects comfort and assistance, but often he receives only complaints and opposition; and coming from such a source it is far more galling than from the avowed enemies of the cross. Often there are unreasonable demands made on the servants of Jesus in these days—social demands, demands for eloquence rather than earnestness, etc.

"The Lord is faithful." V. 3. A bright contrast from the previous verse—"All men have not faith." Not all men can be trusted as co-workers, not all will receive the gospel offered. But God is faithful even though all men be liars. This is the one rock on which the Christian can always rest.

"And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patience of Christ." Rev. Ver. Having exhorted others to pray for him, and having pointed them to the faithful Hearer of prayer, he sets the example of earnest intercession on their behalf. Much as he longed to see his children abound in all grace, he knew it was only the Holy Spirit that could shed abroad the love of God and the patience of Christ in their hearts.

"Withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly." V. 6. "Evil communications corrupt good manners." Place a sound apple in the midst of decaying ones and it soon becomes infected also. So it is with the morals of a life. But it is for the sake of the disorderly brother as much as for the church and its members that this command is given. If he has any real love for Jesus, his house and his people, he will very keenly feel such separation, and repentance will be the result.

"If any will not work, neither let him eat." V. 10, Rev. Ver. This does not say that those who are unable to work, such as are infirm through age or disease, are to receive no support if they will not work. Emphasis should be laid on the words, "Who will not work." Idleness can never produce a healthy state, either of body or soul. Even in the material world it works destruction. The standing water soon becomes impure. The unused metal soon becomes corroded with rust. The untilled ground is soon overgrown with weeds and briars. So is it with the hearts and lives of men.

"Working not at all, but are busybodies." V. 11. The idle brain is always the devil's workshop. He always finds work for idle hands. If they will not attend to their own business they are sure to meddle with that which is not their own. More than half the complaints and quarrels in the church come from this class of persons. No one knows so well how a thing ought to be done as he who sits idle all the time watching his neighbor at work. Those who are at it in earnest themselves have neither time nor inclination to be querulous. They know from experience that it is easier to find fault than to perform; they have a more humble opinion of their own labors, and therefore a more charitable view of their fellow-workers.—U. P. Bible Teacher.

PRACTICAL SCRIPTURE REFERENCES.

Prayer for friends. Vs. 1–5. Praying always with all prayer for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the Gospel. Eph. 6: 18, 19.

I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers. Phil. 6.

We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet. 2 Thess. 1: 3.

And this I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment. Phil. 1: 9.

CHRISTIAN DILIGENCE.

Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. Rom. 12: 11.

Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue. 2 Peter 1: 5.

Abound in everything; in faith and utterance, and knowledge and in all diligence. 2 Cor. 8: 7.

Peace—Be diligent that ye may be found of Him in peace. 2 Pet. 3: 14.

Great peace have they that love thy law. Ps. 119: 165.

But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ, for he is our peace. Eph. 2: 13, 14.

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee. Isa. 26: 3.

NOTES BY E. E. FLAGG.

RUM, TOBACCO AND THE LODGE ARE FOES TO INDUSTRY.

1. Honest industry is the friend of true religion. Vs. 6–8. Where heathenism, Mohammedanism, or even a corrupt Christianity prevails, there we shall find beggary and idleness. No false religion has any power to change a man's nature—to make him like to work when he before preferred to do nothing.

2. Rum and tobacco foes to industry. Vs. 10: 11. A man who drinks is often unable to work for days together. When he recovers from his debauch it is with a loss of nervous strength as well as ambition which prevents him from doing as much or as good work as he could do if he was temperate. Often he finds it difficult to get work at all. But it is not the drunkard alone who suffers. Rum lays a heavy tax on honest industry. Dr. Hargreaves in "Wasted Resources" shows that on all the boots and shoes that are made labor gets a percentage of 28.5, while rum pays to labor only 8.5—less than any other legitimate industry. If all the saloons were displaced by shops and manufactories more people would get employment, nor would there be much risk of overproduction if nobody drank. The nation spends millions of money every year for rum and millions more to undo rum's work; but if no liquor was sold these immense sums could go into the legitimate channels of trade. The money value of the tobacco raised in the United States last year is reported at $158,915,925. This enormous amount was not simply wasted in smoke. It went to pay for disease, lunacy and premature death. Whatever impairs the bodily or mental vigor of the working man, or which hurts him morally is a foe to labor.

3. The lodge a foe to industry. V. 12. Masonry is a foe to industry in various ways: (1) By its high-sounding titles, which have a tendency to make men despise honest labor. (2) By the tippling habits which many learn in the lodge. (3) By taking their hard earnings and returning no due equivalent. (4) And indirectly through the secret labor unions, which have all a Masonic origin, and are generally officered and controlled by Masons—men too lazy to work for their bread, and who do not wish to see labor's real wrongs righted for that would deprive them of their places of power and profit. To such unprincipled leaders the workingman who joins these unions must surrender his liberty to work where and when he chooses and at his own price. He must obey their commands whether right or wrong. But to achieve noble results labor must be free, and in striking at its liberty the lodge strikes at its heart.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Does labor thrive best when it obeys God's laws? 1 Tim. 4: 8; Matt. 6: 33. Who will certainly come to poverty? Prov. 23: 21. Is honest poverty an evil? Ps. 28: 8; 16: 8; Eccl. 5: 12; 4: 13. What promises are given to the poor? Isa. 69: 33; 34: 6; 9: 18. If working men trusted God would they so often join secret societies, and become the prey of their unscrupulous leaders?

OBITUARY.

